Bruegger's Bagels is celebrating its birthday, giving out free bagels and donating more to the Amherst Survival Center (Story, page 3).

Eclectic music highlights Trax
Weekly music reviews include the modern jazz of Pat Metheny and the punk stylings of Free Kitten, among others (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Partly sunny for most of today with highs near 24. Cloudy with a 40 percent chance of snow tomorrow, highs near 30. Clearing on Wednesday, with temperatures still hovering around 30.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 24 LOW: 10	HIGH: 28 LOW: 15	HIGH: 25 LOW: 12

Campus police investigating racial assault

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Police are continuing their investigation of an assault that took place near Memorial Hall last Thursday.

The victim was allegedly verbally abused with racial remarks and physically assaulted.

Corey John Driscoll, 18, of Roxbury is being charged with larceny of property, assault and battery by a dangerous weapon (a shod foot), civil rights violation by bodily injury and civil rights violation by intimidation.

The victim was struck and kicked several times resulting in injuries to the face, according to police documents.

The victim was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital and later released, police said.

Driscoll allegedly made racial remarks while attacking the victim, according to police documents. The specifics of the remarks are not yet available.

The victim's jacket was allegedly stolen, valued at approximately $250, police said.

The case will go to court early in March. If Driscoll does not appear in court, he will owe the Commonwealth $25,000, according to Phil Cavanaugh, UMass police court officer.

Witnesses to the incident are assisting the police, according to police documents.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Feb. 13

Lecture — "Rescue in the Netherlands." Marion Pritchard, Vermont psychoanalyst, discusses her experiences as rescuer. In conjunction with the exhibition in Mead Art Museum "Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block." Free. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Legitimacy and Consensus: Comments on the Work of JHrgen Habermas," part of Amherst College philosophy lecture series. Free. Amherst College, Octagon Babbott Room, 8 p.m.

Talk — "Women's Experience: A Useful Concept for Feminism?" Five College Women's Studies Research Center. Free and open to the public. Mount Holyoke College, Dickinson House Living Room, 4:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Feb. 14

Film — FBI's War on Black America. Contains footage of the Black Panther Party and others. Has interviews with surviving Panthers and activities. Discussion will be about the legacy of the Panthers. UMass, Campus Center, find room number at information desk, 7 p.m.

Senior class — Voting for where the senior class gift will go. UMass Campus Center Concourse. Information: 545- 5479.

Volunteers — The Mass Transformation campaign needs volunteers to help improve the physical conditions on campus. Volunteers will be painting and cleaning walls, stairs, doors in designated areas of Worcester Dining Commons, Hasbrouck Lab, Bartlett Hall, Herter Hall, Arnold House and the Student Union/Campus Center. Registration will be at Memorial Hall and each of the work areas, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Everyone is invited.

Lecture — "Native American Art: A Northern Plains Beaded Shirt. Amherst College, Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Race Relations on College Campuses." Hugh B. Price, president of the National Urban League in New York City. Free. Amherst College, Johnson Chapel, 7:30 p.m.

Reading — Sam Allen, reading by African American poet. UMass, Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, 7 p.m. Information: 545–5177.

Reading — Connie Congdon, reading from excerpts from her plays, Tales of the Lost Formicans, Casanova, and No Mercy, as well as from a work in progress. Part of Amherst College Creative Writing Center spring reading series. Free. Wootton's Books, 19 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, 8 p.m.

Auditions — The Importance of Being Earnest, by Oscar Wilde. Directed by Richard Trousdell and Virginia Scott. Roles: 5 men, 4 women. Read in pairs from the script. Particularly interested in non–traditional casting; actors of diverse ethnic background are encouraged. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room to be announced.

Audition — The Misanthrope, by Molière. Directed by Ron Spangler. Roles for men and women. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7–10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room 204.

Wednesday, Feb. 15

Rally — Rally and speak–out for people on welfare organized by Arise for Social Justice. At noon, three groups will form, one at the State Street welfare office, one at Liberty Street welfare office and one at the federal building, all in Springfield. These groups will march to the church at Court Square. Information: 734–4948.

Senior class — Voting for where the senior class gift will go. UMass Campus Center Concourse. Information: 545– 5479.

Volunteers — The Mass Transformation campaign needs volunteers to help improve the physical conditions on campus. Volunteers will be painting and cleaning walls, stairs, doors in designated areas of Worcester Dining Commons, Hasbrouck Lab, Bartlett Hall, Herter Hall, Arnold House and the Student Union/Campus Center. Registration will be at Memorial Hall and each of the work areas, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Everyone is invited.

Lecture — Panel regarding the Massachusetts Association of Scholars report, sponsored by the Office of Student Activities, the Social Thought and Polical Economy Deparment, and the Conservative Coalition. Author of the report will be represent. Free. UMass Southside room in Southwest Residential Area, 7 p.m.

Lecture — "The Art of Decorating Ancient Egyptian Temples: Problems and Solutions." Mount Holyoke, Gamble Auditorium, 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — "The Beginnings of the Jewish Critique of Christianity in the Middle Ages." Sponsored by the Program in Jewish Studies. Free. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series "If I Ever Lose My Faith in You: Idols, Saints, Celebrities, Martyrs, Men and Other Disappointments." Free. UMass, Campus Center room 917, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Auditions — The Importance of Being Earnest, by Oscar Wilde. Directed by Richard Trousdell and Virginia Scott. Roles: 5 men, 4 women. Read in pairs from the script. Particularly interested in non–traditional casting; actors of diverse ethnic background are encouraged. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7–10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room to be announced.

Audition — The Misanthrope, by Molière. Directed by Ron Spangler. Roles for men and women. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7–10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room 204.

Film — Europa Europa. In German with English subtitles. Mount Holyoke College, Gamble Auditorium, 7:30 p.m.

Film — The Blue Kite, a Chinese film with English subtitles. Told from the perspective of a young boy, Tietou, it traces the fate of a Beijing family and their neighbors and friends as they experience the political and social upheaval of the 1950s and 60s China. Free. Smith College, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, 7:30 p.m.

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England Newspaper Association's Daily College Newspaper of the Year, 1994
Free Every Day

Lincoln Real Estate
Apartment Rentals
253-7879 25 N. Pleasant St.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

!!THE BEST!!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst • 253-3539
!!Spring Break '95!!

Hey Student Comics

All those who submitted comics, please check the posted schedule to find the days your comic will appear. The schedule is posted behind Kelly Spang's desk.

For those whose name does not appear on the list, there was not enough space to fit all the comics. However, all comics will be kept on file in the instance a space opens.

DIGITAL SEMICONDUCTOR
A DIGITAL EQUIPMENT CORP. BUSINESS

Investigate an opportunity in the field of VLSI Test Engineering

Participate in the development of state-of-the-art custom VLSI ICs
Develop and implement testability strategies
Create test solutions for high performance ALPHA microprocessors
Utilize leading edge Automated Test Equipment and test tools
Perform fault simulation and create manufacturing test patterns
Help to shape the future of VLSI Test Engineering
Be part of a world class IC manufacturing operation

If you are an Electrical and/or Computer Engineering major
VISIT US AT THE INFORMATION SESSION
FEBRUARY 15, 1995
CAMPUS CENTER (ROOM 803)

6:00 - 7:00pm - Overview of DIGITAL SEMICONDUCTOR and VLSI TEST ENGINEERING
7:00 - 9:00pm - Open for discussion of the employment opportunities Bring your RESUME

REFRESHMENTS AND A GIFT RAFFLE

U.S. citizen, permanent resident, asylee, or refugee status
Digital Semiconductor is an equal opportunity employer

digital™ Digital Equipment Corp. 77 Reed Road Hudson, MA 01749
ALPHA GENERATION

ATTENTION ALL UNDERGRADUATE A.L.A.N.A. STUDENTS

Are you providing some service to your UMass or hometown community that demonstrates leadership, caring or initiative?
-OR-
Do you have a special talent, gift or skill?
-AND-
Do your grades reflect positive academic achievement?
IF SO,

You may qualify to receive a one year TALENTED Minority Scholarship

Inquire or pick up an application at:

BCP Wilder Hall
Jose Bou 545-1987

CCEBMS New Africa House
Sid Ferreira & Rene Lopes
545-0031

UALRC Knowlton Dorm
Linda Olf 545-1844

DASS/Enrollment Service
208 Whitmore
Ken Burnham 545-0428

APPLICATION DEADLINE IS MARCH 1, 1995
ONLY COMPLETED APPLICATIONS WILL BE CONSIDERED

Program for GLB Concerns to surf the 'Net

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

People seeking information on gay, lesbian and bisexual issues and resources will have a new option when the Program for GLB Concerns opens its new Internet information service on the UMass gopher.

According to Darrin Shaffer, Program staff in charge of the project, the purpose of the new service is "to make information available to anyone who's on the Internet."

The service will be available through the main menu of the UMass gopher, much like current services offered by academic departments. Shaffer said the Program is still unsure of the specific site on the system, because "it's not really [the Program's] decision as to where it ends up."

LAMDA service as a "jumping off point"

UMass users will have access to a wide variety of GLB resources. Many of these are already available through LAMDA, the Program's 24–hour telephone information line, said Shaffer.

Using the new service, scheduled to come on line in the next two weeks, Internet users will be able to access GLB events listings, advice on safer sex and health, "Straight Talk About Homosexuality," and information on the Program, the UMass GLB Speaker's Bureau, Five College groups, and more.

All information will be "recent and accurate," said Shaffer, and someone from the Program will update it "at least once a week and possibly more often."

Individuals or groups who want to add information, group and events listings, or just comment on the service can send e–mail to the Program at pglbc@stuaf.umass.edu, call, write, or visit the Program office in Crampton House, Southwest.

Although the LAMDA service is similar to the new Internet service, it is only a "jumping off point," said Shaffer.

"There are more things you can do than with the gopher than you can do with the LAMDA service," he said. Shaffer points out that new service will have a capability only the Internet can offer: access to other GLB services across the country.

Access to GLB services nationwide

Internet users who enter the Program's information service will be able to connect to systems at the University of Minnesota, the University of California at Berkeley, Texas A & M University, and the Queer Resources Directory.

Through these systems, users can find out about GLB issues throughout the country, including civil rights battles, conferences, politics, and GLB Internet bulletin boards.

"The University of Minnesota already has a lot of very good information," Shaffer said.

For gays, lesbians and bisexuals, the Internet "has the potential to be the greatest organizing tool that has yet ever existed," he said.

The Internet allows individuals to send information to many people almost instantaneously and retrieve information just as fast, said Shaffer. All these steps can be carried out at the press of a few buttons, and because no telephone or address books are needed, information spreads "extremely quickly," he said.

"Most democratic" form of communication

According to Shaffer, the Internet is one of the "most democratic" forms of communication. Unlike television, radio and other forms of mass media, with the Internet, "there isn't someone who controls the communication," he said. Users design the system themselves, make their own rules, and decide what kind of information gets spread.

Setting up the new system for the Program has been "actually really easy," explains Shaffer. The entire process, from conception to going on line is expected to be complete after only two months of work.

After the Program decided to go on line in late fall 1994, staff got in touch with Peter Munson, Campus Wide Information Service (CWIS) System Administrator.

After getting information on starting a new service, Program staff member Sarah Pease took a class to learn about Internet services.

Once that was over, CWIS and the Program worked together to set up the service in a "test area" for services "under construction," said Shaffer.

Currently this is where the service remains as "glitches" are worked out, but Shaffer expects it to go on line within the next two weeks, at which point it will be ready for "public consumption."

"Low cost" a big plus

Shaffer points out that doing business on the Internet is much cheaper than doing it any other way. For instance, setting up and operating the new service has not and will not cost the Program any more than the hourly pay for its staff, who must enter information and perform regular maintenance.

According to Shaffer, one of the Internet's biggest assets is its relatively "low cost." He contrasts these costs to those of communication by phone or mail, which can cause big problems for organizations with small budgets.

Birthday bagels benefit Amherst Survival Center

By Chris Hassett
Collegian Staff

Brugger's Bagels has devised a way in which their customers can feed themselves and the needy, without spending a cent.

Customers who wish Amherst's Brugger's Bagels a "Happy Birthday" can score three free bagels, and make a donation to a local non–profit organization which collects clothes and food for the needy.

"We hope to give thousands of bagels to the Amherst Survival Center, a non–profit organization, and with the help of the community we will," said Wayne Warwick, general manager of Brugger's.

This Feb. 15th will mark the fifth anniversary of Amherst Center's Brugger's Bagels' annual bagel give–away, Warwick said.

This year Brugger's is giving away even more. For every bagel given away during the celebration, an equal number of bagels will be given to the Amherst Survival Center, said Warwick.

"I think this is a radically innovative move to bolster support for the bagel industry and community, while helping the needy in a conscientious way" said freshman CASIAC major, Jason Gerstein.

Warwick said he expects 2,000 to 2,500 bagels to be given out.

"I think it's very generous of Bruegger's to be donating so much food — it's great for the community," said David Goyea, sophomore computer science major.

According to Evangeline Westcott, director of the Center, much of what the Center receives is day old bread and perishables. Brugger's plans to deliver their bagels fresh.

"We're kind of excited about it the bagels)," she said. "We're getting brand new stuff."

According to Westcott, the bakery contacted the Center with the idea and the current plan is to deliver a few dozen bagels each week instead of all the donated bagels at once.

Warwick said this is his first year as general manager of the Amherst store but in other smaller stores, similar give– aways have resulted in 1,000 to 1,500 bagels being given away.

"That's bonus for everybody," said Erica Sciaildone, a freshman dance major. "Bagels are yummy."

The give–away hours will be 6–10 a.m., Warwick said.

■ protest

continued from page 1

dinner service begins.

There were approximately 150 students at the protest, according to Springer.

Tozloski seemed upset that she had hurt Dottin's feelings, she said.

"I didn't think anything about it until I saw the look on his face," Tozloski said. "I will admit to it. I just cannot believe I said it. I couldn't apologize more."

In an interview, Tozloski referred to African–Americans as "darkies" and "you people." She uses the terms instead of other more culturally–preferred terms, such as Blacks and African–Americans, she said.

Tozloski said that she is unfazed by her nephew and step– niece being married to African–Americans, and that she is not a racist.

Following Wednesday's incident, Dottin began contacting various organizations and friends on campus, including the Black Student Union and Phi Beta Sigma. He informed them of the incident and asked their advice on how to proceed, he said. The demonstration was mobilized by Thursday.

Several food service employees observed the protest from behind plexiglass windows at the top of either ramp. Some activists were unnerved by what they perceived to be a patronizing manner assumed by the onlookers.

"You look around and look at the workers up here," said Toshiba Budden, a sophomore hotel, restaurant and travel administration major. "The Caucasian workers were looking through the glass so of course we're lower than them."

Dottin has requested Tozloski's termination, in addition to mandatory diversity training for all University employees and partial reimbursement of his meal plan.

"I'm not doing this to be some power–hungry monster," Dottin said. "When people walk into the D.C., they should be served food, not bigotry."

■ conference

continued from page 1

the importance of state higher education in their districts," Robitaille said.

"I think it is terrific that students in all institutions of higher education have come together. It is an excellent idea to unite like this," said State Representative Ellen Story (D–Amherst), who is attending the conference by request of students.

When students first joined together for the January conference, everyone was surprised to see things start to get organized, Student Trustee Al Lizana said.

Different schools are fighting for separate budgets, but the students are all in support of more funding for public higher education, Lopes said.

"With such great proposed cuts in public higher education, it is time for all of us to unite," Lopes said.

The press conference will be held from 1–2 p.m. and about 60 students from various community colleges, state colleges and universities will attend, according to Robitaille.

Feeling your community is left out by the University?
Come down and say so!
Write for the Multicultural Affairs desk.
Contact Hernán at 545–1851. Express yourself.

THIS ROLL OF PAPER TOWELS
MADE FROM RECYCLED
NEWSPAPER. BUYING RECYCLED PRODUCTS IS SMART BUSINESS
IT CAN CLEAN UP SPILLS
WITHOUT MAKING A MESS AND WHEN YOU'RE ALL THROUGH WITH EARTH
YOU CAN THROW IT AWAY

Does someone want you as a Valentine?
Check out the special Collegian Valentine's Classifieds

--GETTING THE MOST FROM YOUR COLLEGE EXPERIENCE--

••• ARE YOU INVESTING YOUR TIME WISELY?
••• ARE YOU BEING KIND TO YOURSELF AND ACCOMPLISHING YOUR GOALS?
••• ARE YOU REALLY LISTENING?

CALL THE NUMBER BELOW TO JOIN ONE OF OUR WORKSHOPS TO IMPROVE YOUR SKILLS IN THE FOLLOWING AREAS:

MOTIVATION AND TIME MANAGEMENT - FEBRUARY 15, 28 : 4 - 6 P.M.
CONCENTRATION AND NOTES - FEBRUARY 16, MARCH 1, 9: 4 - 6 P.M.
MEMORY AND TESTS - FEBRUARY 22, MARCH 2, 15: 4 - 6 P. P. M.
RELAXATION AND STRESS MANAGEMENT - FEBRUARY 23, MARCH 8: 4 - 6 P.M.
COMPLETING THE SEMESTER COMPETENTLY - APRIL 19, 20, 26, 27: 4 - 6 P.M.
CHOOSING A MAJOR - APRIL 5, 6, 11: 4 - 6 P.M. APRIL 12 - 7 - 9 P.M.

Center for Counseling & Academic Development
Division of Counseling Psychology Services
123 Berkshire House
545-0333

Always in Bloom
SPECIALS
HUGS & KISSES
Hugs: An adorable 8" white bear holding a red rose and balloon $17.95
Kisses: A cuddly soft 12" white bear with a red rose and balloon $22.50
220 North Pleasant St. • Amherst
253-5545 WE DELIVER ANYWHERE 253-7228

HOW TO HANG ON TO YOUR DOUGH.
(WITHOUT CRAMPING YOUR STYLE)
Separate "needs" from "wants." Hint: A bed is a need. A Mr. Microphone is a want.
Split the bill but only pay your share. Why put in for someone else's swordfish if all you got was soup?
Set aside money for emergencies. Unless you'd rather call your parents for it instead.
Keep your eye on your wallet. Have a Citibank Classic card in case you lose it. The Lost Wallet℠ Service can get you emergency cash,* a new card, usually within 24 hours, and help replacing vital documents.
*Based on available cash line.
WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOU

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

University Barbers
(Campus Center)
549-0123
Hours: Weekdays 8 a.m. - 5:45 p.m. Sat. 8 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. No Appointment Necessary

Spring Break
Cancun ... $399
Jamaica ... $439
Florida ... $129
Carroll Travel @ 256-8931
TRISHA @ 549-8016
SPECTRUM TRAVEL SERVICES
Toll free 1-800-648-4849

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
The New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Henley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gunley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heltner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenstein Distribution Manager
Herman Roremberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Campus gives mixed messages

I don't think most of you would disagree that this is a pretty liberal campus. In four years, even the most dogmatic conservative has exposure to organizations that promote equality for people of all backgrounds and preferences.

We have all heard the rhetoric, we have witnessed or been part of the demonstrations, rallies and takeovers. We get the message: respect one another, fight for equality, and appreciate difference.

Although this message seems natural to me, I have been reminded in the past few weeks that it may not be something that can be taught or learned.

Emily Marino

A few weeks ago I decided to buy new windshield wiper blades for my car. I knew what size wiper blades I needed, and headed to a local auto supply place with a male friend to pick them up.

While searching through the packages of blades a man working in the store approached me and asked if he could help. I replied that I just needed some 13" wiper blades, and that I thought I could handle it.

"Oh, no, you need another measurement," he said. "Which car is it? I'll go out and measure." My friend just gave him a goofy look while the guy trotted outside.

When he came back he informed me of the size I needed and then looked to see if they had it (which was lucky for me since I can't read). When he found the package he turned to the guy I was with and explained how to pull the old blades off and put the new ones on, although he knew it was my car.

Outside in the parking lot, my friend and I embarked on replacing the blades, each of us working on a wiper.

"He must have mistaken me for someone who has that male gene that makes us all knowledgeable about cars," my friend said to me. A couple minutes later I slid the new blade in while my friend struggled to remove his old one.

"Yeah, he must have," I said. "Do you want some help with that?"

An acquaintance of mine who I used to think was fairly open-minded recently taught me another lesson in subtle discrimination. When she hangs out with her other friends, this person adapts certain components from the scene, like new vocabulary words.

When she wants to describe something distasteful or negative, this person has taken to using the word "gay." For example: "That movie was so gay! I can't believe I actually spent money on it!"

The last time I checked, gay was a word that traditionally means "merry" or "lighthearted." Gay can also be used to describe homosexuality. Hmmm, I wonder which one this person was thinking of when she scrunched up her nose and used it in a sentence.

Along the same lines, while viewing John Singleton's Higher Learning, I was appalled by the audience's behavior during a scene in which a female character has sex with a man whose image is alternated with that of a woman who also has sex with this female character at another time. The audience, which had little reaction to the violent beating of an interracial couple, nor to a rape scene, was unruly with gasps of "No! Oh my GOD! Awww, man!"

I personally wanted to stand up and yell, "Oh no — she's exploring her sexuality! How can they stop her like that?" I also had to do a quick reality check to make sure that I was really at the Hampshire Mall in Hadley, I was.

My last bout with discrimination is as a student, as a young person, someone who aspires to do something with her life as soon as four years of partying and television watching are over. The trauma occurred in our own W.E.B. Du Bois library, of all places.

I had to order some documents through the inter-library loan department for an honors thesis. When I went down to explain the situation to the department and forewarn that the material might be difficult to find, the woman behind the desk coldly informed me that if I simply filled out a form, she would worry about how hard it would be to find the documents.

Every time I went back to the inter-library loan department to sign out and use the material, this particular woman, who did not know me from a hole in the wall, was just as cold.

One day I signed out the materials to use them in the library. Around midday I decided to go to the Campus Center to get some coffee. Since I couldn't take the materials out of the library, I left them on the counter in the inter-library loan office while this woman gave me a cool glare watching me leave. When I came back my stuff was still on the counter, so I merely grabbed it, hoping not to disturb her once again.

"Would you mind letting us know when you are going to take those out," she snapped as I tried to tiptoe out. So much for appeasing the ice princess.

Hopefully none of these subtleties has tarnished your idealistic belief that we all really do love and respect each other. These are indications that the fresh air in this town regarding open-mindedness and equality is sometimes a lot more like hot air.

Emily Marino is a Collegian columnist.

Looking for those 'special' privileges

David Anderson

I'm gay and I want special rights. Lots of special rights that heterosexuals don't have — like employment, housing and credit. Oh, yeah, bring them on.

Gays, lesbians and bisexuals regularly lose their jobs for being queer:

"I'm sorry I have to let you go, but you're bad for our image and company morale and, besides, I don't want you spreading AIDS to everyone else. You understand, don't you?"

Housing: "I don't rent to faggots — if I had known you were a queer I wouldn't have rented the place to you in the first place."

"Hey, thanks, buddy, I really enjoy moving."

Credit. People have been denied credit and lost credit for being gay:

"I'm sorry but I really don't think you need that loan and, by the way, cut up your VISA because it isn't good anymore."

Explain to me how having sex with a guy makes me a credit risk? What about someone who is attracted to the same sex but never acts on it — would that make them half straight and therefore entitled to 50 percent of the credit normally extended to a heterosexual?

Another special right that I want is the right to have sex as I see fit. Gays break the law when they have sex in some states because anything but vaginal intercourse between a woman and a man is considered sodomy:

"Honey, I'm afraid that we'll have to move — oral sex is illegal in our state."

More and more lesbians and gay men are having their own children. Some of them have had their own children taken away from them solely on the basis of their sexual orientation:

"I realize that you are very good parents and I love your kids but you two are dykes, right?"

Adoption is even more difficult. So much for traditional family values. Gay people have values too, of course just not those of the religious and political Reich.

I don't have the patience to teach kids, but for those gays and bisexuals who see this as their calling, there should be a special right allowing them to teach without being closeted. Right now some teachers who are out in the classroom get accused of being molesters or trying to recruit the young:

"Hey, Johnny, you should be gay — the benefits are great! You will be hated and discriminated against. You can look forward to being verbally abused and maybe even physically threaten or attacked. If you're lucky you might even get disowned by your family!"

Johnny: "That sounds great Mr. Smith — where do I sign up?"

Let's not forget about all the advantages of marriage. It starts with wedding gifts and the well wishes from both of your families.

Then comes the tax benefits, access to health care for your partner and kids, visitation rights for the hospital and beneficiary rights of your partner's investments and insurance policies if they die (AIDS. Go ahead and think about it — you probably were anyway). I want that special right.

Gays in the military. That is the last special right I want. I have absolutely no desire to join, but the option should be available to everyone if that is something they choose to do:

"Hey, Lieutenant, who's the letter from?"

Lieutenant: "It's from my boy ... I mean girlfriend."

So call me pushy, but I want my special rights now!

David Anderson is a UMass student.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

THIS IS REALLY THE BUDGET, SIR?
JUST A ROUGH DRAFT. WHAT DO YOU THINK?
UH... WELL...
IMPRESSIVE PROFIT MARGIN PER UNIT, NO? "NOTHIN' BUT ORPHANS" COULD BE A REAL MONEY MACHINE!
SIR, I CAN'T HELP NOTICING YOU HAVEN'T BUDGETED A SALARY FOR ME...
YOU DON'T SEE ONE FOR ME, EITHER, DO YOU?
NO, BUT I DO SEE A $2 MILLION GOLDEN PARACHUTE.
WHICH I'LL NEVER USE! KIDS ARE MY LIFE NOW!!

Opinion/Editorial

I'M AFRAID THE LINE ITEM VETO REFERS TO A DIFFERENT KIND OF LINE.
DARN
GOP PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES
TOLES
IT'S FOR EXCESSIVE WASTE.
MY EXCESSIVE WAIST?

UMass under siege from all sides

Like hapless American tourists chained in a basement, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst is being held hostage by a number of external forces that know and care little about the best interests of our campus.

Though few seem to realize it, increasingly we are no longer masters of our own fate, but rather subject to the manipulations and proxy battles of self-serving scoundrels such as the Hooker-Weld duo, the State Legislature, and a new coalition of Jewish organizations.

The manipulations of the Hooker-Weld axis are now clear for all to see: these men are in cahoots pursuing complimentary agendas equally hostile to UMass-Amherst.

Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzacoatl

While UMass has never been a fully autonomous entity, the transfer of power away from campus in recent years has been highly damaging to our interests.

The creation of the system presidency was a severe blow, with the added insult of cursing us with the power-lusting Señor Hooker.

He lost little time in establishing his authority at our expense, for example when he raided millions of dollars from our budget to create his "mission enhancement" slush fund. The "mission" in question was clearly self-promotion, and the slush fund provided him with increased patronage for his corrupt climbing of the greasy pole, all at our expense of course.

Needless to say he has had no difficulty arranging a fat pay raise of $14,000 for himself while programs are shut down and buildings crumble around us.

No doubt his new wife, State Rep. Carmen Buell (D-Greenfield) was helpful in this regard, and we all fondly remember his moving and tasteful inauguration of the $52 William D. Mullins Center for their appropriately modest little wedding reception.

Hooker has made little secret of his plans to privatize the University system, especially our campus. This means pain, suffering and downsizing for almost every program and department at UMass, except perhaps the sacred basketball team, as Hooker advances his much broader political ambitions by riding on our backs.

In this regard he has made common cause with another malevolent meddler, Gov. William Weld.

Weld's hostility to public higher education is now legendary, and Hooker has cynically used this hostility to further his own agenda. For example, recently Hooker slammed the University with a "C+" evaluation, although few in Amherst would argue that his own performance has been any better than an outright "F."

Nonetheless, Weld was able to seize the opportunity to add his own ill informed condemnations, which in turn were used by Hooker to issue his "Re-tooling the University" proposals, the blueprint of his privatization plot. The tool in question would appear to be a sledgehammer.

In short, the two most underworked and overpaid parasites in the Commonwealth are playing at sophisticated political theater with the purpose of wrecking our institution, the emergence of a fully fledged Goondzhraj (thug-rule). Similarly the state legislature has been increasingly interventionist and damaging to UMass-Amherst.

Not only did they create the appalling system presidency, saddling us with the disgraceful Hooker, but continuous threats to cut funding, and other forms of manipulation and blackmail have done immeasurable harm to the campus environment and our genuine educational mission.

Meanwhile, true to form, these State Reps, including the excellent Mrs. Hooker, had no problem ramming through a whopping 55 percent pay raise in only three days ... for themselves.

We can only console ourselves with the knowledge that our beloved and impoverished President Hooker will share in that windfall. Lucky us.

Not to be outdone, a newly formed state-wide coalition of Jewish organizations, we learn, have banded together to put even greater pressure on UMass Amherst to ban certain Black leaders from coming to speak on our campus.

The group, including The Jewish Federation of Springfield, The Massachusetts Association of Federations (whatever that is), the Anti-Defamation League, and our own Hillel,' among others, are calling for UMass to ban certain Black leaders from campus and investigate any groups suspected of wanting to invite them.

According to informed administration sources, requests from Jewish lawyers in Springfield made under the Freedom of Information Act included not only a breakdown of groups which funded Tony Martin's lecture in December, but also membership lists of the organizations and information on the background of students who were involved.

This racist attack on academic freedom bears all the hallmarks of fascist intimidation and constitutes a new and troubling indication of the kind of meddling in campus affairs to which we are increasingly subjected. UMass-Amherst has a demonstrated consensus that freedom of speech on campus is a central pillar of University life.

The fact that many outside groups should bring considerable power and resources to bear in an attempt to damage our freedoms is an appalling demonstration of the manner in which the University is being held hostage by various malevolent outsiders.

Perhaps we should consider the example set in 1979 in Iran, where universities and students did the hostage taking.

Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzacoatl is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Racism pervades campus community

To the editor:

Racism. It's a biting word. Many of us link it with one color physically harming another color. Or, one color being disadvantaged by another color.

Is it wrong to feel racism? Well, we should all have the right to choose our own ideas, no matter how ignorant they are. The problem is when those ideas damage another person's rights.

Wednesday night, students of color experienced the damage of racist comments from a sweet old lady. The two students were in line at the Franklin Dining Hall for dinner. One of the students proceeded to attempt choosing his dinner by saying, "Eenie meenie minie, moe, catch the ..." The line server responded to the old childhood rhyme, but not in the manner that you might expect. She responded with ... "the nigger by the toe." Frightening, isn't it? We don't expect the sweet old ladies behind the counter to ruin any evenings using something besides the food.

The line server went to apologize to the students. Some might say that it was admirable of her to realize her mistake and try to undo the damage. To her credit she did say that that she was sorry.

But to her discredit, she also said, "My sister is married to one of you guys." Learning of this event made me shake with fear. I am terrified that not only do people really feel so separated by color, but they don't realize the damage of the ignorance behind feeling that separation.

Does the University not feel it important to educate each and every one of its employees on the damage of racism? Does the University simply set up one-hour seminars to make themselves feel they have given the campus employees the awareness of diversity?

People without extensive training in the issues of racial and cultural diversity should not be allowed to work here. They involve themselves in student lives every day. We don't come to this school to be reminded of the damages in society. We pay this school to get an education that will further our lives.

I don't see how using the word "nigger" will advance anyone's life. When the University staff make outwardly racist comments, it makes being here almost impossible. Not only do we all have to feel the pain of racism from our peers, but also from the University itself.

I would like to invite every student that has knowledge of other racist incidents from the University staff to direct the incidents to the chancellor. I know what I witnessed was not the only time something like this has happened. I want to know what is UMass going to effectively do about it. I want to know if the nice old line server still has a job "serving" students. If he feels it's important, I would like the chancellor to let us all know what is going to be done to create "real" awareness of diversity on this campus.

Name withheld

Arts & Living

Jazz, rap and metal releases highlight Trax

WE LIVE HERE
Pat Metheny Group
Geffen Records

The most ambiguous style of music is jazz, and you can find a different interpretation in any artist's CD/tape you pick up. From traditional to new age, no other genre can boast about its own diversity.

One of this generation's premier jazz explorers has been the guitar-synth styling of Pat Metheny and his Group's latest release We Live Here continues this tradition.

But not without its faults.

The second track "And Then I Knew" demonstrates a few up and down problems in rhythm and organization encountered on this release. It opens with a skip beat rhythm laid down nicely by drummer Paul Wertico and the left hand bass of pianist Lyle Mays, but breaks off suddenly into space. It seems they intended to keep the listener guessing, but works in the wrong direction. When the opening melody returns, I was left feeling more than a little disconcerted with the way the piece was handled.

But on the majority of the CD, as in the tracks "Here To Stay" and "Episode d'Azur," Metheny is as tasteful as ever in his choices concerning the feeling and flair in his soloing. Jazz musicians are prone to literally jam in as many notes as possible, and both Metheny and Mays straddle that fine line tastefully in their co-writing. Along with Pat's own producing, a smooth work is created.

One thing is for sure, if you want to listen to traditional jazz, pick up Kind Of Blue by Miles Davis, or anything by John Coltrane. If a sample of what the modern day has to say turns your key, Metheny has not come up with the best he has to offer, but more than enough for right now. B (Iorma Kansanen).

NICE ASS
Free Kitten
Kill Rock Stars

Faced with the reality that Sonic Youth has become a household name and punk rock is no longer the least bit threatening, Kim Gordon has joined forces with members of Pavement, The Boredoms and The Action Swingers to form the disenchanted noise-rock outfit Free Kitten. From its sardonic title to its jaded lyrics and fractured melodies, Nice Ass is a harsh condemnation of the outrageous pretensions and sexism of music today.

It is heartening to see that mother hood hasn't taken any of the venom out of Gordon's outlook. On "Rock Of Ages" she pulls no punches when addressing the melodramatic phoniness of Trent Reznor and his ilk. In a thinly veiled attack on the angst-ridden millionaire, Gordon drawls "Quit thinking about the bitch who screwed you/ There's a million who would do you." To their credit, the band does not escape their own sharp scrutiny, as on "Proper Band" where they take a tough-in-cheek look at the stiffness and predictability of stardom.

Trax On, Trax Off

COURTESY EDGE MUNSON
Massive Attack return with a brand new album of trippy dance excursions.

"Revlon Liberation Orchestra" combines a hip-hop beat with dissonant guitars and an incessant trumpet wail for spectacular results and "Call Back" sounds like Beck with an XY chromosome structure. The band also engages in some potent stereotype-bashing with the song "Secret Sex Friend," a furious punk rock barrage that would put most male bands to shame.

While many first-time listeners may find tracks like "What's Fair" and "Kissing Well" to be painfully under- produced and inaccessible, rest assured that Gordon and company know exactly what they're doing. Duc to the challenging nature of their music, Free Kitten may require a good deal of patience to fully appreciate, but in the end Nice Ass proves to be one of the most rewarding listening experiences in recent memory. A (Matthew Justin Faerber)

COURTESY MARK SELIGER
Pat Metheny Group's newest release We Live Here is a good introduction into the world of modern jazz.

PROTECTION
Massive Attack
Virgin Records

Protection, the follow up to 1991's Blue Lines, the definitive post-rave, comedown album and soundtrack to numerous bloodshot-eyes and Alka-Seltzer popping, sees Massive Attack fully tooled-up.

This is trip-hop at its best, stellar bass-lines, blissed-out vocals and whispered rhymes. Having their emblematic fire stolen earlier in the year by former engineer, Geoff's Portishead collective (currently No. 3 on the U.K. album charts) Massive Attack return with a vengeance.

The title track lets you know that Massive Attack haven't lost the blueprint; it's an urban melodrama, where the girl lays down to defend her lover. "Karmacoma" the first single, kicks in with the same kettle-drum as Bjork's "Human Behavior," not surprising really as her producer Nellie Hooper is sprinkling his magic dust on the production decks. "Karmacoma" rumbles along, as 3-D and Bristol-ian homeboy Tricky offer a contemplative, state-of-world address.

Protection doesn't have the plotted diversity of Blue Lines; it works more on a mood, creating the unifying atmosphere of a mixed tape. Massive Attack throw a couple of curve balls on this album, particularly with their choice of collaborators. Having lost the talents of Shara Nelson, they've found an unlikely savior in Tracy Thorn of Everything But The Girl shame. This sounds like a recipe for disaster, but it works; Thorn is cast as housewife chanteuse and is perfect for Massive's ambient kitchen-sink sagas. There's also the obligatory dub-reggae track "Spying glass," courtesy of Massive's Daddy G and Horace Andy.

Where most rappers yell about bitches and bongs, Massive whisper about tea, toast and turmoil. This is a stealth- bomber of an album, packed full of understated cool, sneaking up on you undetected before leaving you standing amongst the flames. A– (Gareth Curtis)

turn to TRAX, page 6

Marilyn Manson show mixes punk & theatrics

By Wayken Shaw
Collegian Staff

MARILYN MANSON
Pearl Street
Feb. 10

NORTHAMPTON — With punk rock revivalists cashing in on three guitar chords, hair dye, and lyrical sarcasm, people tend to forget that the heart of punk rock is attitude. Displaying much more than the aforementioned, Marilyn Manson played a packed house at Pearl Street last Friday night with a fervor and power reminiscent of punk pioneers, the Stooges. Much of this was attributed to their dynamic frontman, Mr. Manson, who proved to be a modern day Iggy Pop.

Although playing to a generation too young to experience, let alone know, Stooges-era Iggy Pop, Mr. Manson and Co. turned in a gut-wrenching performance, really reviving the punk spirit while providing a musically-innovative set of industrial metal.

Coming out in a mist-filled stage that included a clothesline of baby apparel and dolls with exposed genitalia, Marilyn Manson launched into the song "Cyclops" and ignited a whirl-wind frenzy of rebellious youth. Mr. Manson, donned in a dress, lurched onto the stage looking much like a suffered old witch only to grab the mic and intensely spew his twisted spiel.

The band went on to play the majority of their incredible album, Portrait of an American Family, going through songs like "Dope Hat," "Wrapped in Plastic," "Organ Grinder" and "My Monkey." They also played a non-album song foreign only to a few and an eerie version of "Sweet Dreams (are made of these)" by the Eurythmics. No matter what song the band played, most of the crowd were receptive and sang along. Mr. Manson even led in a few chants of "I hate love, I love hate."

All the while, Mr. Manson incited the audience with his on-stage antics. With the dress off and only a black g-string on, Manson spat on people, taunted stage divers, and caused havoc like lighting a lunchbox on fire during "Lunchbox," punching out lights, and mooning the crowd.

As shocking as the performance was, Marilyn Manson established itself as a band with as much substance lyrically, deep within the pessimism, as it does musically. Judging from the audience's almost reverence towards Mr. Manson, Marilyn Manson are seemingly on their way to becoming an important fixture in music as well as further pushing the genre of punk rock into unknown territories.

Canada's own Monster Voodoo Machine opened the show with an intense rap-metal hybrid that appropriately riled the audience for Marilyn Manson. Unfortunately, the band failed to create any sort of impression in their short set.

Want to write for Arts & Living?

If movies, music and other exciting art-related events interest you, then come down to the Collegian, located at 113 Campus Center Basement, and talk to Matt Audette.

Elizabeth Taylor
Kills the adored diva on February 23, 1995 at 8:30 PM
at Cedar Park Texas

If you don't stop your friend from drinking and driving, who will? Do whatever it takes.

Adorable Bouquets florist
~ Daily Delivery to UMass ~
Roses start at $35 a dozen
323-8291
Major Credit Cards Accepted
Jct. Rte 9 & 202, Belchertown

SKI
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS '95
There's only one... "PARTY IN THE SNOW!" SPRING BREAK '95
Sponsored in part by Labatt's & Molson
ONLY $209
MT. ORFORD, CANADA
LAKE ACROSS THE VERMONT BORDER!
5 NIGHTS LODGING, LUXURY LODGES
5 DAY SKI & SNOW BOARD LIFT TICKET
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF INTERCOLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS & ACTIVITIES!
5 BOOTLESS DISCOUNTS
PROFESSIONAL & CONSISTENT WITH THE IDEAS AND TO CONTINUE AS ONE IS Call SKI TRAVEL 1-800-999-SKI-9

You won't regret it!
Over 100 three-credit courses, offered at night.
Gen. eds., languages, education, and a whole lot more!
Register now through February 13.
Classes start January 31.
A quality education at affordable prices.
Division of Continuing Education
615 Goodell Building
UMass/Amherst

You Snooze You Lose
Book Now Snooze Later
NEVER TOO LATE FOR SPRINGBREAK!
413-256-1261
NASSAU from $449
JAMAICA from $479
CANCUN from $449
Includes: RT airfare from Boston, 7 Night Hotel accommodations based onquad occupancy, hotel transfers. Taxes and surcharges are not included. Rates subject to change.
Council Travel
70 So. Pleasant St., Amherst MA 01002

BANANARAMA
fabulous frozen YOGURT
HOT Specials on Smooth Nonfat Frozen Yogurt and LEMON CHILL Soft Frozen Lemonade
"It's Better than Dell's"
LEMON CHILL
Nonfat Colombo Frozen Yogurt — Buy 1, Get 1 FREE — Good for a small cup or cone — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
"Lemon Chill" Frozen Lemonade — Buy 1, Get 1 FREE — Good for a small cup only — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
FREE Nonfat Fudge Packet — With the purchase of a large cup of Frozen Yogurt — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
One Boltwood Walk (thru the Alley next to Antonio's)
Downtown Amherst • 253-2774

Zevon impresses with potent solo performance at Pearl St.

By Matthew Justin Faerber
Collegian Staff

WARREN ZEVON
Pearl Street
Feb. 9

NORTHAMPTON -- It was not the usual college crowd that packed the Pearl Street nightclub wall-to-wall this past Thursday night. In fact much of the audience there to see Warren Zevon looked as if they could have been the parents of those college kids.

On this occasion, however, the younger generation missed out on a truly inspired performance by one of the greatest talents to grace the Valley in quite some time. Without the support of any backing band, the 47-year-old Zevon rocked with more conviction and enthusiasm than most bands half his age.

Alternating between six and twelve string, acoustic and electric guitars as well as piano, Zevon displayed a versatility and depth of emotion which kept the show from ever slowing down.

Early on, the traditionally grim Zevon displayed his surprising sense of humor with a good-natured parody of Neil Young's distinctive twang during one verse of "Things To Do In Denver When You're Dead."

When it comes to songwriting, Zevon has an unparalleled knack for story-telling. This was most evident on "Roland The Headless Thompson Gunner" where his sparse piano and vocals arrangement lent a haunting feel to this crowd- pleasing classic.

A solo during the ironically upbeat "Poor, Poor, Pitiful Me" provided Zevon with an opportunity to showcase his underrated proficiency on blues guitar.

"Excitable Boy," the title track off his highly successful 1978 album, featured the only musical accompaniment of the evening as Zevon engaged in a jazzy piano/saxophone duet with a friend.

Perhaps the most moving song of the evening was the sullen piano ballad "Accidentally Like A Martyr." Despite the fact that the song is almost twenty years old, Zevon sang its lyrics of love and loss like he had written them yesterday.

Zevon capped off the evening with a lively two-song encore. The rollicking, tongue-in-cheek anthem "Mr. Bad Example" had everyone in the audience clapping, dancing and singing along. Finally, the predictable show-stopper "Werewolves Of London" brought the evening to an energetic close during which several fans joined Zevon on stage to dance.

Also performing solo, Ray Mason (of The Ray Mason Band) opened the show with a brief but stirring set which he dedicated to his wife on their third wedding anniversary.

The self-proclaimed, "middle-aged man with a cheap guitar" impressed with his brand of no-frills blues rock, particularly on the title track from his band's Between Blue and Okay album.

Concert mixes music, voices and poetry

By Mark Naegle
Collegian Correspondent

The Five College New Music Festival was held in Pratt Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College on Feb. 10 at 8 p.m. It was an interesting evening of poetry and music with compositions of piano, flutes, violins and clarinets created by people from all of the five colleges in the Valley.

The evening started with a movement called "Chronometrics," which included six different poems, each written by Robert Shaw and set to music. The soprano, Mara Bonde, who lent her talent to the poetry, had an amazing voice; this combined with the mysterious piano compositions invoked an overall sense of beauty and intrigue.

The next piece "Images for Solo Clarinet," used just the one instrument played by Kirk Edwards. The composition combined jazz, contemporary and inventive sounds.

The third movement was the poem "He Was." The mysterious rhythm of the piano, combined with the melancholy tone of soprano Paulina Stark, gave this piece a sense of sadness.

Following it was "Three Songs," which included poems by Frederick Tillis from the University of Massachusetts. These three poems were based on Costa Rica, and involved nature — the ocean, rain forests and wildlife common to this area. The contrasting rhythms in each poem, combined with tenor Jon Humphrey's voice made this a remarkable movement.

"Of Time and Their Places" was an arrangement of five poems written by different poets. The Stark who sang "He Was" accompanied these works. Her voice, with the accompanying undulating, contrasting rhythm of the piano composition, along with the creative verses of the poems, made this a wonderful and thoughtful work.

The final piece, "A Barred Owl," was in my opinion the most wonderful of all movements. Its musical accompaniment included flute, bass clarinet, violin, cello and piano, and Jan Opalach's baritone voice. The mysterious verses of the poem, along with the haunting arrangement, made this piece reminiscent of a child's Halloween. The enigmatic composition, as well as the frighteningly strange lyrics, left the audience with an overall sense of fear and awe. It was an excellent conclusion to a wonderful night of music and poetry.

■ trax

continued from page 5

DEMON KNIGHT SOUNDTRACK
Various Artists
Atlantic Records

The Demon Knight Soundtrack is a collection of some of the biggest names in today's more "high decibel music." And the nicer thing about this soundtrack, compared to others is that it actually has a motif rather than just a random collection of songs.

With tracks titled "Cemetery Gates," "Tonight We Murder" and "1-800 Suicide," there is an abundance of images associated with horror pictures. The album features the likes of Pantera, Ministry, Machine Head, Megadeth and The Rollins Band. What it comes down to is, that if you like adrenaline pumping, ear pounding and high intensity music — this album is for you.

"Cemetery Gates," arguably one of Pantera's best tracks, is an edited version of the song that appeared on their debut, Cowboys From Hell. However, most of the other tracks on the album are either rare material or previously un-released. Ministry, Machine Head and The Melvins, all put in strong and haunting performances. Biohazard continues their success with an aggressive Metal/Rap hybrid. Even the explicit rap group Gravediggaz seem to conceptually fit into the album.

"Fall Guy," performed by the Rollins Band seem to fall short of the other tracks as far as sheer amplitude is concerned. Without anything substantial to make up for it, the track seems left behind.

All in all, the Demon Knight Soundtrack will not leave fans of the metal/industrial genre disappointed.

B (Bryan Schwartzman)

Collegian Graphics
We're Up All Night
putting together New England's oldest daily college newspaper

MENTAL HEALTH GROUPS SPRING 1995

Topic-Focused Groups being offered by the Mental Health Division of UHS this Spring are:

Self-Exploration Group
Tuesdays 3-4:30

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families Process Therapy Group
Tuesdays 3-4:30

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families in Spanish
Wednesdays 3:30-5

Exploring Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Identities
Thursdays 3-4:30

Groups are open to students covered by the health plan and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. Groups begin in early March. Pre-group interviews are required. For information or to sign up for a pre-group interview call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North. We're open M-F 8-5

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS
Etablissement d'enseignement supérieur privé
AUP prepares its students to be a part of an increasingly global society.
Bachelor degree programs in ten disciplines.
Fully-accredited by Middle States.
Traditional Junior-Year Abroad curriculum.
Special Visiting Programs, which include study at the Sorbonne and other French institutions.
Full range of Summer Programs.
Contact our U.S. Office: B.P. 130, 80 E. 11th St., Suite 434, New York, NY 10003-6000
Tel (212) 677-4870 / Fax (212) 475-5205
AUP, The American university in Europe.

Future Lei Dahlson
Killed by a drunk driver on Good Friday, March 29, 1991, at College Park Drive and Hwy 19 North in Meridian, Miss.
If you don't stop your friend from driving drunk, who will? Do whatever it takes FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK.
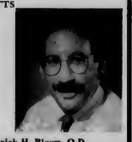
U.S. Department of Transportation

UMass Boston
Exploring the Coastal Environment: A Summer Program in Oceanography and Marine Resources
May 30 – June 29, 1995
This special program includes a seven-day research expedition aboard the schooner Sylvina W. Beal and three days of field study on Nantucket. Students may earn up to six undergraduate credits.
For further information and application materials, contact:
The Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Boulevard
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922

This advertisement appears at no cost to the Commonwealth.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services
Amherst, MA 01003
549-2671


An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of the UHS Eye Care Program, Spring 1995
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Program

My name is Frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the University Health Service Eye Care Program and the high quality of eye care delivered to more than 80,000 individuals over the last 20 years.

I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry and recently co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. In addition, I am credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.

Eye care services include:

- Complete optometry examinations
- Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
- Emergency eye care
- Comprehensive contact lens service

Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS."

uhs EYE CARE PROGRAM
Convenient Hours and Campus Location
CALL 549-2671 EXT 244

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

MMM. SOMEBODY'S HAVING A FIRE. I LOVE THE SMELL OF A FIRE ON A COLD WINTER DAY.
ISN'T IT STRANGE HOW SMELLS ARE SO EVOCATIVE. BUT WE CAN'T DESCRIBE THEM?
OH, I DUNNO. THAT FIRE HAS A SMOKY, BRAMBUSH SMELL.
I SHOULD HAVE KNOWN. ANIMALS WOULD HAVE WORDS FOR SMELLS.
IT'S A LITTLE BRUNKY, BUT THE LOW HUMIDITY AFFECTS THAT.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I'M THINKING OF STARTING MY OWN TALK RADIO SHOW.
I'LL SPOUT SIMPLISTIC OPINIONS FOR HOURS ON END. RIDICULE ANYONE WHO DISAGREES WITH ME. AND GENERALLY FOSTER PASSIVENESS, CYNICISM, AND A LOWER LEVEL OF PUBLIC DIALOG.
IT WOULD SEEM YOU WERE BORN FOR THE JOB.
IMAGINE GETTING PAID TO ACT LIKE A SIX YEAR OLD!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

NOT EVEN PETER PARKER IS IMMUNE FROM A MUGGING...
OKAY, CREEP, LET'S SEE WHAT YA GOT IN HERE!
WHILE INSIDE THE COFFEE SHOP...
PETER'S STRONG -- BUT WHAT CHANCE DOES HE HAVE AGAINST A GUN?

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today I felt like eating a fried egg.
It'd been so long since I had a fried egg that for a second I couldn't think of how to make one.
But it was only for a second.
Once I realized I knew how to do it, I knew it was really easy.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

DONNA, THIS IS MY CAT.
NOPE. DON'T LIKE HER
WHAT'S ITS NAME?
CAT.
SIMPLE, STRANGE... BUT CORRECT I GUESS.
NOPE, DEFINITELY DON'T LIKE HER.
DO YOU HAVE ANY CAT TREATS I CAN GIVE IT?
LIT. CHANGED MY MIND. SHE'S OKAY.

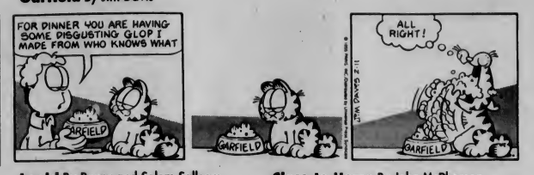
Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

UHHH... WHAT HAPPENED?
WAIT? NOW I REMEMBER. I SAW SOMETHING UNUSUAL IN THE ROAD WHICH CAUSED ME TO SWERVE.
WHAT WAS IT I SAW THAT CAUSED ME TO CRASH?
AH, WELL... IT COULDN'T HAVE BEEN TOO IMPORTANT.
SCHNEIDER BIZ

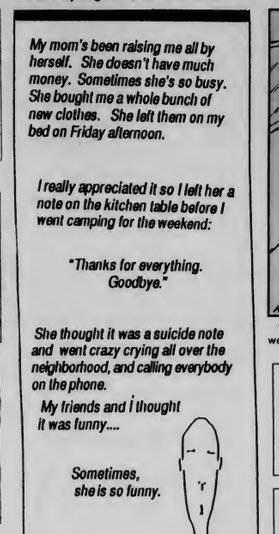
Revolution X By Gleeson

Enjoying the scenery with Dweller from another dimension, we continue our journey...
After many frisbee toss of the west on a giant through the sea terrain...
The only way to head it is to glide!

Garfield By Jim Davis



Loold By Roger and Salem Salloom



My mom's been raising me all by herself. She doesn't have much money. Sometimes she's so busy. She bought me a whole bunch of new clothes. She left them on my bed on Friday afternoon.
I really appreciated it so I left her a note on the kitchen table before I went camping for the weekend:
"Thanks for everything. Goodbye."
She thought it was a suicide note and went crazy crying all over the neighborhood, and calling everybody on the phone.
My friends and I thought it was funny....
Sometimes, she is so funny.

Close to Home By John McPherson

The personnel department at Corner Industries was known for its impersonal interviewing process.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Art Stapleton
Copy Editor.....Marni Heffner
Photo Technician.....Paul Bilodeau
Production Supervisor.....Mark Mitchell
Production.....Candice Flemming, Devin Brown

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Meatball Grinder	Cajun Catfish
Grilled Cheese	Chicken Tenders
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Lentil Chili	Garbanzo Beans
Grilled Cheese	Chicken Tenders

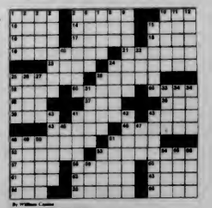
Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Dim
5 Pirate person
10 Soak thoroughly
13 Turner
14 Greet the day
15 Coffee
16 Gamete
17 Claimed
18 Russian river or range
19 Home on the range
21 Give
23 Suit to —
24 Member of the battery
25 Catchword
28 Silverware, now
29 Decline
30 Ontario river
32 London district
36 Everything
37 Miscellany
38 Velo
39 Toy on a string
41 Pure air
42 Catcomb
44 Superior
46 London's Wall —
48 Drank heartily
51 Southwestern landscape feature
52 Excluding
53 Focal point of 19 Across
57 Stationary
58 English physicist/inventor Robert
60 Boost
61 Gymnastic goes
62 British painter William
63 Sicilian peak
64 Cannabis
65 Rendezvous
66 "It is the —, and Juliet..."

DOWN
1 Coalition
2 Volcano product
3 E Pluribus —
4 Wind sprint
5 Like Job
6 Furious
7 Sneaker type
8 Empire
9 Lawmakers
10 Singer Vaughan
11 Eggbe
12 More wan
15 Snowbirds
20 PR stop
22 Giant great ape
24 Role for Arnold
26 Weren't
28 French composer
27 Except that
28 Carreras, for example
33 Burden
34 Screen
35 Beasts of burden
40 Tenders
41 Single chance
42 Pastor
43 Raw recruit
45 Uncertainties
47 Colors of the hike
48 Andean capital
49 Lemmon or Randall role
50 "Home —"
51 Continues
53 Mime
54 Jot
55 Part of rte
56 "I— cast mor."
59 Bruins Bobby

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

W	A	L	T			A	R	M	O	R		P	A	D
I	L	I	A	D		N	O	I	S	E		A	I	L
S	A	W	U	S	A	G	A	W	S			B	I	E
F	R	A	N	C	E			M	A	I	L	L	O	T
				T	A	G		H	E	N	R	Y
M	I	L	O			I	R	E		A	N	S	E	N
A	N	O		O	A	T			T	O	V	E
N	U	N		N	A	N	T	Y		E	V	E
O	R	G	A	N	S		P	A	I	R		B	R	I
A	S	T	I			P	I	P			M	E
		E	R	B	U	S		A	D	S
B	O	L	E	R	O		T	I	R	A	T	O
I	A	L		O	R	W	E		B	E	S	T	E	R
A	T	O		A	N	G	E	R		F	O	I	A	N
S	E	N		L	E	S	B	Y		N	I	L	E



© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Social affairs are highlighted this week, enabling you to mix business with pleasure. Handling financial transactions with extra care will prevent headaches later on.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Clear communication is vital in business and romance. Say what you mean. Cupid's arrow will hit the bull's eye! Rethink a recent business decision. Listen attentively to the feed-back you get from your co-workers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business associates may be difficult. Show a willingness to compromise. Romantic partner may offer some suggestions. Be more nurturing when dealing with people who are young and inexperienced. Actions will speak louder than words.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New employment opportunities open up this week, consider your options carefully. A relationship's future depends on how diplomatically you handle a sensitive matter. An imaginative approach will make your leisure hours much more fulfilling.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An older person could have a sobering influence on your household. Pursue a healthier, more relaxing lifestyle. New plans help you land valuable accounts, share the applause. Others see you in a different light.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A message provides a clue as an old puzzle. Changes of favoritism must be met head-on. Stand up for your rights! A trip leads to profitable new business connections.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A breakthrough occurs in contract negotiations. A conservative approach will sit well with an influential, older individual. A chance meeting could lead to a long-term romantic alliance. Avoid revealing too much too soon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Reckless spending could land you in the soup. Sit down with an expert and work out a realistic budget. Think about ending a dreary relationship; you can do better. A platonic friendship deepens.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Use gentle humor to get along with your work associates. Your job performance is being judged. Be certain you have done your homework before making a presentation. Make kids the focus of the weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take care of paperwork. Performing routine chores will give you time to think. Consider what is best for others. Family pressures can be lightened, thanks to a special support group.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Trust your intuition. A business deal that seems iffy merits further investigation. Be prepared to burn the midnight oil. A request from loved one could convince you to reschedule a trip. Avoid making rash statements.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Smarten up! Realize something that once meant everything to you no longer matters. Move to more relevant goals. If you think that a pricy item is a necessity, juggle your budget.

"Become Part of Something – Something BIG."
ΛΧΑ Spring Rush '95

Date	Event
Monday 2/13	Boxing (Bet on Brothers)
Wednesday 2/15	Lizard Racing
Thursday 2/16	Pool Tournament
Tuesday 2/21	Jeopardy
Wednesday 2/22	Top Dog Night

All Events Begin At 8:00PM EST
374 N. Pleasant St.
For more Info Call Kevin at Lambda Chi Alpha: 549-5885

Be Worldly!
Write for Developing Nations!
Contact Juan Jose Chacon Quiros
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Quote of the Day

"I like long walks, especially when they are taken by people who annoy me.

–Fred Allen"

■ hockey

continued from page 12

A big moment in the game was at 16:27 of the second when both John Jakopin (holding) and Tom Johnson (interference) went off with minor penalties. UMass could muster but three shots on goal in the five-on-three advantage, failing to score.

"In three games against them, we haven't been able to solve Martin Legault, that's been the difference," Mallen said. "We did have some great chances, sometimes it's not the number of shots, just the quality shots which we did have."

Legault made 32 saves, after making 77 in a two-game sweep in Amherst back on Dec. 2-3. Regan, who received starts on back-to-back nights for the first time, made 29 saves for UMass.

"We have five games left, and our goal is to get another conference win in this span. Then we'll have our playoff game," Mallen said.

Notes: Friday's game at the Volpe Complex illustrated why Merrimack has struggled to build a HE program. Recruiting is tough when you have a crowd of 842 and an ice-cold ancient facility ... Since the Maine upset, UMass has five straight losses and has been outscored 28-6.

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Rob Bonneau (18) scored his team-high 12th goal on a power play in Friday night's 6-2 loss at Merrimack.

George Washington 66, Massachusetts 65

At Amherst

GEORGE WASHINGTON (18-4)

Abraham 9-14 2-2 20, Saar 5-14 4-4 15, Williams 5-8 1-2 11, Hemery 4-14 3-5 11, Cermignano 2-5 0-0 6, McCrea 1-1 0-0 3. Totals 26-57 10-13 66.

MASSACHUSETTS (13-7)

Gurile 8-17 5-10 21, Krafi 5-6 1-1 12, Thomas 4-12 3-4 11, Carroll 3-6 2-2 8, Kuzmeski 3-8 0-0 7, Tudman 2-3 0-0 4, Mitchell 1-4 0-0 2. Totals 26-56 11-17 65.

Halftime — George Washington 35, Massachusetts 32. 3-point goals — George Washington 4-9 (Cermignano 2-4, Saar 1-2, McCrea 1-1, Hemery 0-2), Massachusetts 2-8 (Kuzmeski 1-5, Krafi 1-1, Mitchell 0-2). Fouled out — None. Rebounds — George Washington 32 (Abraham 10), Massachusetts 32 (Thomas 7, Gurile 7). Assists — George Washington 19 (Cermignano 5, McCrea 5), Massachusetts 18 (Mitchell 9). Total fouls — George Washington 13, Massachusetts 14. Technicals — George Washington bench, 1. A-2,280.

Player of the Game

Tajarna Abraham – (GW) 20 points, 10 rebounds; Abraham was the force inside for the Colonial Women, especially in the first half when she scored 12 of her team-high 20 points.

Highlights...

The Minutewomen were up 63–57, until the No. 16 Colonial Women went on a 9–0 run to make it 66–63 with 3:37 left. A Gurile layup cut it to within one, but that was as close as they could get. Missed free throws and turnovers killed them at the end, along with GW's play of Tajarna Abraham (20 points, 10 boards) and Darlene Saar (15 points). For Massachusetts, Melissa Gurile led with 21 points and seven boards, and freshman Tez Kraft added nine.

ANNUAL ARMY & NAVY Surplus Sale

Genuine U.S. and Europoean surplus!

Presented by Army Barracks, Inc.

LOCATION:
UMASS Amherst Student Union Ballroom

DATE:
February 13 thru 17

TIME:
9:00am - 6:00pm

WOOL BLANKETS GLOVES HATS SCARVES MUCH, MUCH, MORE!

- ★ Genuine U.S. & European Military & Antique Overcoats $25-$35
- ★ Wool, West German, British, French Pants $10-$25
- ★ Mexican Baja Pullovers & Blankets $12-$15
- ★ Heavy Cotton, 6 Pocket Field Pants: U.S., Dutch, West German $8-$18
- ★ Genuine Issue Camo, Desert, Tiger, Urban Black Six Pocket Pants $26
- ★ World Flags (3'x5') $10/each 2for $18
- ★ Mummy Sleeping Bags (0°-15°) $35-$40
- ★ Wool Hat & Gloves $2-$5
- ★ Flannel Vests, SHiirts and Used Jeans $5-$15
- ★ Grateful Dead Merchandise

Sponsored By Cape Verdean Student Alliance

☐Boston, MA 328 Newbury Street Boston, MA 02115 (617)437-1657 ☐Northampton, MA 257 Main Street Northampton, MA 01060 (413)585-9330 ☐North Conway, MA Route 16 N. Conway, NH 03860 (603) 356-7902 ☐Newport, RI 395 Thames Street Newport, RI 02840 (401) 846-5054 ☐Martha's Vineyard 152 Circuit Avenue Oak Bluffs, MA 02257 (508) 693-6846

M/C - VISA - American Express - Discover Accepted

Anthony's

THE SECRETS OUT... Anthony's has lowered it's prices!!!

FREE BUS SERVICE!!
EVERY MON-THURS
We will pick you up & bring you Back!!
PICKUP AT HAIGIS MALL
8PM &10PM
DROP OFF
10:30 & 12:30

MUST BE 18&OVER WITH VALID ID..NO SCHOOL ID'S

18 & OVER ALWAYS WELCOME
OPEN: MON-WED 4PM-2AM THURS-SAT NOON-2AM

500 NEW LUDLOW RD; SOUTH HADLEY MA
413 536-0502

UConn tops 'Cuse, aims for AP's No. 1

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) - Third-ranked Connecticut set itself up for college basketball history with a 77-70 victory over No. 10 Syracuse yesterday.

The Huskies (19-1, 12-0 Big East) extended their own conference record with 17 consecutive regular-season victories, but they also set themselves for a possible move to No. 1 with losses last week by top-ranked North Carolina and No. 2 Kansas.

If Connecticut, which has never been ranked No. 1, does move to the top of the rankings today, it would be the first time teams from the same school have occupied the No. 1 spot in both polls. The Connecticut women's team (21-0) has been No. 1 since beating Tennessee in mid-January.

No. 1 North Carolina 85,

ATLANTA (AP) - Rasheed Wallace had 27 points, including seven dunks, as top-ranked North Carolina snapped No. 18 Georgia Tech's 15-game home-winning streak 85-81 yesterday.

Wallace scored 10 of his points in the final 5:37 as the Tar Heels (19-2, 9-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) held off the Yellow Jackets (15-8, 6-5) who twice cut the Carolina lead to 1 point. Travis Best led Tech with 20 points.

Carolina ended Tech's run of four consecutive victories over No. 1-ranked teams, three of those coming over the Tar Heels and the other over Duke in a streak that began in 1993. It was Tech's first loss at home since Duke won 66-63 on Feb. 8 last year.

Jerry Stackhouse added 16 points and Dante Calabria and Donald Williams 13 each for Carolina.

Tech got 17 points from Michael Maddox and 16 each from Matt Harping and Drew Barry, who left with a twisted ankle with 3:09 left just after reserve Pearce Landry hit a 3-pointer out of the left corner to give the UNC a 77-73 lead.

No. 5 Kentucky 97, Notre Dame 58,

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) - Walter McCarty scored 20 points — 12 in the first five minutes of the game — as No. 5 Kentucky defeated Notre Dame 97-58 yesterday.

It was the worst loss at home for the Irish (14-9) since 1898, when they lost 64-8 to First Regiment. It also was the fifth win in a row over the Irish for the Wildcats (17-3). Notre Dame (14-9) has not beaten Kentucky since the 1989-90 season.

Indiana 82, No. 25 Purdue 73

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) - Alan Henderson scored 26 points and freshman Charlie Miller had a season-high 21 yesterday as Indiana snapped Purdue's six-game winning streak and beat the No. 25-ranked Boilermakers 82-73.

Massachusetts 94, SW Louisiana 63

At Lafayette, LA

MASSACHUSETTS (18-2)

Dingle 5-7 1-4 11, Bright 7-10 1-2 15, Germain 0-0 0-0 0, Williams 1-5 6-8 8, Padilla 3-8 0-0 8, Kellogg 2-4 0-0 6, Roe 5-11 4-7 14, Travieso 4-11 0-0 11, Meyer 0-0 2-2 2, Weeks 4-8 1-2 9, Cottrell 0-0 0-0 0, Nunez 3-5 0-0 6, Norville 2-4 0-0 4. Totals 36-73 15-25 94.

SW LOUISIANA (5-17)

Price 0-1 0-0 0, Manuel 3-9 0-0 8, Bowman 3-15 3-5 10, Lanier 1-2 0-2 2, Snowden 3-7 0-0 7, Cutright 2-3 0-0 5, Bailey 1-4 2-3 4, Collins 8-16 1-3 17, Poole 5-9 0-1 10. Totals 26-66 6-15 63.

Halftime-Massachusetts 46, SW Louisiana 30. 3-Point goals-Massachusetts 7-20 (Travieso 3-8, Kellogg 2-4, Padilla 2-5, Williams 0-3), SW Louisiana 5-15 (Manuel 2-7, Cutright 1-1, Snowden 1-2, Bowman 1-5). Fouled out-Poole. Rebounds-Massachusetts 51 (Roe 11), SW Louisiana 36 (Collins 13). Assists-Massachusetts 15 (Kellogg 7), SW Louisiana 13 (Bowman 5). Total fouls-Massachusetts 20, SW Louisiana 18. Technical-Williams. A-10,651.

Player of the Mass

Lou Roe – 14 points, 11 rebounds

Highlights...

It was over from the moment Derek Kellogg drained a three–pointer on UMass' first shot of the game. UMass delivered the knockout blow, opening the game with a 16–1 run ... Despite being without Marcus Camby, and having a height disadvantage, UMass dominated the boards throughout the game. Senior forwrad Lou Roe had 11 rebounds to go along with his 14 points ... Tyrone Weeks, who earned his second straight start was strong as well, scoring nine points, Carmelo Travieso added 11 for UMass.

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Self defense and fighting class Easy to learn and effective classes starting now All levels Call Mari 256-1598

AIRLINE TICKETS

Think Spring Break! 2 airline tickets $250 face value, will sell $225 each Call 665-8963

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Learn to bartend with University bartending Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst Free info session Mon Feb 27th, Lord Jeffrey Inn, at 7pm, or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

PVOC Oil Coop Save money and stay warm Join the oil coop (CSHRO, 428 Student Union or call 545-0865.

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice S W 107,300 miles automatic transmission Reliable car and engine Asking $900 or best offer Please contact Fausto @ (413) 549-4809

Toyota Supra Turbo. 1986, 2 door, 5 speed, black, 101,000 miles Just serviced New tire Good condition $4995 or best offer Call David 885-3204

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine Positions available: waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, ropes course, athletics, arts and crafts For applications call 669-424-2755

ENTERTAINMENT

Amherst free band Thermus is ready to play parties and functions Call 546-6738

FOR RENT

1 room for rent in a 2 br apt Located in a Amherst, on bus route 275 + 253-4722 Female preferred

Cape Cod Group summer rentals waterfront houses Falmouth area 508-477-6000

Female wanted to sublease 1 br in large 2 br apt Cat welcomed On bus route 275+ Non-smoker Staying for summer is optional 253-3475

Sunderland, 4 bedroom apartment, pol, laundry, bus route, available March $850 +. 665-2311

FOR SALE

286 & 386 computer systems Monitor, keyboard, cpu Starting at $199 Steve (413) 549-5181

Airline ticket Bradley to Los Angeles a bargain at $100 Call Elaine 413-625-9083

AMP Round-pad chorus $750 Wah pedal $50 Mandolin $100 Couch $50 753-2609

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $599! Call Chris at 800 289-5685

Part time marketing/sales Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers Excellent commissions; good training Will be a great addition to your resume Local, no car necessary Call (401) 785-5490 after 2 p.m.

Revo sunglasses absolute lowest prices Shapes, H20, Classic Traveler Call 1-800-980HAVE5

Smith Corona 5000 word processor $200 Call Chris 253-4913

FOUND

Found 2/7 wristwatch in Marsh building Call with description Maria 5-2735

HELP WANTED

Alaska summer employment- fishing industry Earn up to $3,000 - $6,000+ per month Room and board! Transportation! Male/female No experience necessary! 206-545-4155 ext A50012

Camp Tecumic Prestigious coed Massachusetts camp hiring motivated, team oriented undergrads and grads who love working with kids General counselors and instructors in swimming, water sports, tennis, ropes/camping, arts/crafts, silver jewelry, photography, video, newspaper, musical theatre, dance, science/ rocketry Competitive salaries Rewarding, enjoyable work! 800-767-2820

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp -3 hours from NYC General sports, waterfront, + arts Call 1-800-973-3866 On campus interviews available

Counselors from NYC; general, sports, waterfront, + arts Call 1-800-973-3866 On campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $2000 +/month World travel Seasonal + full time positions No exp necessary For info call 1 206 634 0468 ext C50014

Expanding environmental company needs ambitious self-starters immediately Great opportunity 413-534-6533

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod Call Holly at 349-8292

Live and work in Nantucket for the summer Call Laurie 548-1303

New England's largest college daily is now accepting applications for its award winning advertising department As an account representative you will gain valuable real world experience Freshmen& Sophomores, SOM, Comm. MRTA Call 545-2500 or come down to the Campus Center basement to pick up an application

Wanted: Models for spring semester '95, figure drawing class TR 2-4 :30pm For appointment call Ted Pomas M-R 10-11, Holyoke Community College, Art Dept Tel 538-7000 ext 492

INSTRUCTION

Guitar lessons. Enjoy the semester and earn credit! 25 years experience Beginning/advanced Peter 256-6541

PERSONALS

M. Gomes. Thank you for disproving the notion that a good man is hard to find Love, Angela

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate to share rm in Brandywine Available immediately Call 549-7458

Housemate wanted ASAP! 5 minute walk to Campus Center! Conservative Clinton hating smokers preferred Democrats need not apply! Call Julie 549-9649

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo Florida Spring Break Earn 2 credits Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800-282-0877 Project Deep

SERVICES

International students visitors DV-1 greencard program, by U.S. immigration Legal Services Tel(818) 887-9681 (818) 998-4425 20231 Stagg St., Canoga Park, CA 91306 Monday-Sunday 10am-10pm

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS 256-0085, 19.2 K bps 130 megs online + CD ROM! Registered online games include Link, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski! Spring Break '95 intercollegiate ski weekends are $209 Includes 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging-Luxury condo/5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age !8!) sponsors include Lebetts, Molson and Mt. Orford, Quebec Canada (just across the Vermont border) Group leader discounts Campus and Greek representatives needed Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

THETA CHI

Theta Chi fraternity spring rush '95. See what our brotherhood is all about All are welcome Feb 13-16,20,21 8:00-10:00pm Questions or a ride call Ted Silva 549-4598

TICKETS NEEDED

I need two tickets to UMass vs Dudquesne Thurs Feb 16 Will pay cash Call Max 6-7404

TRAVEL

$139/person. Booking direct! Saves! Sunfest, snfsnemetsc, all beachfront in the heart of spring break! 1-800 868-7423

Spring Break Cheap and reliable! We beat all competitors prices 549-7340

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Typing. Word processing resumes Fast, inexpensive 546-6738

VALENTINE'S FLOWERS

Have a carnation delivered to your Valentine on the fourteenth Table at CC Thurs, Fri, Mon, Tues

WANTED

I need Patient Psych 240 Stats tutor Call Dorine 253-9425

HP Laserjet toner cartridges wanted for recycling $7 cash each Please include packing materials Call 549-4368

Men's swimming is back on track

Minutemen return from 11 day absence, knock off St. John's

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

After an eleven-day respite from competition, the University of Massachusetts men's swimming team returned to Joseph R. Rodgers pool yesterday afternoon, where they knocked off the Red Storm of St. John's 130-110.

Tim Milbert captured the 100-yard breaststroke and the 200-yard individual medley, while Jeff Little took the 1000- yard freestyle and the 500-yard freestyle to pace the way for the Minutemen, who upped their record to 9-4 on the season. The Red Storm fell to 4-5 on their 1994-95 campaign.

"It was good to get back on the winning track because we've been struggling," UMass coach Russ Yarworth said. "They're starting to break out of the doldrums. We swam really well and it was good to see us get in the water and win some races."

The Minutemen opened the meet by losing the 200-medley relay by a fraction of a second. The team of Matt Turner, Milbert, John Kuritkoski and Jeff Wicklund placed second, just .011 of a second behind their competitors from St. John's.

UMass quickly rebounded though, winning four of the next five races. During this span, Milbert, competing in his final dual meet, and his final competition at Rodgers Pool, won the 100-yard breaststroke in a time of 59.11.

"It's good for his senior year to go out like that," Yarworth said. "He had a nice 100-breaststroke against talented competition. It's a good way to finish the last dual meet of your senior year."

After the extended layoff, the team showed few signs of rust, as they came out and swam strong races. Although capturing the diving portion of the competition, the Red Storm was no match for the Minutemen in the pool.

"The start of classes always blows them away," Yarworth said. "They've been in just one routine [over intersession] of going to practice and resting. Now all of a sudden they've got to get up and walk around campus, go to classes and study. It really does change the routine of the athletes.

"It takes a couple of weeks to recover from that and get used to a different routine. Athletes need routine and once it's changed it affects how they feel in the water, on the basketball court or where ever."

Now that the team has regained its early season form, they can look ahead to the New England Invitational this Saturday at the University of Connecticut.

It will start a pivotal series for the Minutemen, as they will then compete in the Atlantic 10 Championships and ECAC Championships in consecutive weekends.

"This will get the confidence up [for those meets], because everyone swam pretty well today," Yarworth said. "It's starting to look like we'll be all right at the end of the year."

Men's track fourth at A–10 championchips

Impressive individual efforts of Minutemen not enough

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts track team went into Saturday's meet in Kingston, R.I., with hopes of stealing the track and field championship from its fellow Atlantic-10 rivals. But despite a few impressive individual efforts from Massachusetts, it was the West Virginia Mountaineers who ran, jumped and threw their way to the prestigious title.

The Minutemen, who finished with 56 total points, did manage fourth place by edging out Temple (44) and St. Joseph's (42.5). But it was clearly West Virginia's day, as their 225 points totaled more than the second and third place finishers combined, as Rutgers and Rhode Island finished with 124 and 93.5 points, respectively.

Senior captain Tom Galligani of UMass won the triple jump with a leap of 47' 11-1/4". This effort, which was UMass' best of the season, qualifies him for the IC4A Championships. Galligani also mustered a fourth place in the long jump with a leap of 21' 5-1/4".

Freshman Scott Price, a solid A-10 Rookie of the Year candidate, placed fifth in the 200-meter dash with a time of 22.65. Price also earned a sixth in the 55-meter dash with 6.64.

Marc Lefebvre also had a fine outing, as the junior placed third in the shot put with a throw of 44' 8-1/4".

Other quality performances came from junior Ethan Nedeau, who placed fourth in the 1000-meters with a time of 2:29.96; junior Bob Dalton, who placed fifth in the 35 lb. weight with a throw of 47' 6-1/2"; junior Ted Towse, who placed fourth in the 5000-meter run with a time of 15:06.38; and sophomore Walter Stock, whose fifth place time in the mile was a mere 4:22.22.

Stock also helped nail a second place in the distance medley relay, as he and his teammates finished with a 10:17.48.

The Minutemen's fourth-place finish was not the only bad news of the day. Senior standout John Johnson pulled his hamstring, and is most likely out for next week's Brown Invitational, and uncertain for the New England Championships on February 24th and 25th.

A whopping seven A-10 Championship records were broken in the meet. They included Mountaineer Rob Jones' 7.47 in the 55-meter hurdles, Mountaineer Richard Wagner's 6.34 in the 55-meter dash and 21.19 in the 200-meter dash, Mountaineer Eric Pearson's 1:53.91 in the 800 meters, URI Ram Balazs Koryani's 2:27.55 in the 1,000 meters, Mountaineer Mark Vilardo's 8:25.98 in the 3,000 meters and West Virginia's distance medley relay time of 10:15.40.

All seven marks were Mackal Field House records, as well.

The Minutemen finished the regular season with a record of 7–3–1. They were comprised of a strong nucleus of youth (Price and Stock, to name a couple), along with sound veteran experience in Johnson, Galligani and Lyonel Benjamin, among others.

Women's gym drops close one

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

The phrase Rage in the Cage is synonymous with the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team for all the success as well as the fan support they had in the Curry Hicks Cage.

That same term can also be attributed to the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team, as it played host to No. 23 nationally-ranked powerhouse West Virginia University at a raucous Curry Hicks Cage Saturday.

Unfortunately for the Minutewomen (7–2), they were narrowly defeated by a very talented Mountaineer squad 191.475-190.850.

Entering the contest, both squads sported an impressive undefeated record in Atlantic 10 play. The contest lived up to its billing as the battle for Atlantic 10 supremacy was waged through four closely-contested periods.

The Minutewomen dropped to second place in the Atlantic 10 behind the Mountaineers, who moved to 6–2 overall.

For the Minutewomen, the 190.850 points were the highest point total in UMass history. Still, the new record was not enough for the young UMass squad to pull off the upset.

Quietly the UMass–West Virginia match-up has become a rivalry, with the Mountaineers owning the all-time series record 16–2 over the Minutewomen.

The last two meets between the teams have been decided by less than a point. The two teams have a growing respect for each other. This respect was exemplified by UMass head coach Dave Kuzara. While West Virginia All–American Kristen Quackenbush approached the vault, Kuzara could be heard cheering on the sophomore sensation.

"I think that's the kind of relationship these two teams have," Kuzara said. "We go there in two weeks and they are going to treat us great."

"There's no hatred between the two teams, because we all want the best," said UMass junior J.J. Tolhurst.

Tolhurst had a great meet, placing third in the all-around with a point total of 38.650. Tolhurst nearly earned an elusive perfect ten on the vault, scoring a 9.9. Placing first in the all-around was Quackenbush, with UMass sophomore Tara Swartz placing second with a 38.800 point total.

Quackenbush, also an All–Conference and All–Academic selection, mesmerized the crowd with her grace and elegance in all four events (vault, uneven bars, balance beam, and the floor exercise).

"Quack is awesome, she's tremendous," Kuzara said. "What a great athlete, I have nothing but great things to say about her."

The one event that the Minutewomen struggled in was the floor exercise. The difficulties in the floor exercise, usually one of UMass' strongest events, was the main reason why the Minutewomen succumbed to the Mountaineers.

"We were not our best on the floor," said Kuzara. "Maybe it was because it was a double dual–meet (men's and women's teams competing at the same time). It's tough when there are so many things going on at the same time."

Even in light of the defeat, the Minutewomen do not see the loss as a setback. UMass, an up–and–coming gymnastics program, has gained experience from the loss at the hands of the nationally–ranked Mountaineers.

"I can't say that we are disappointed at all," Tolhurst said. "We had our highest team score, we broke the school record, and West Virginia is a great team. This proves to us that we can compete with the best in the nation."

The Minutewomen will swing back into action, after a week off, on Feb. 26 when they travel down to West Virginia for a much anticipated rematch with the Mountaineers.

Men's gym inconsistent in Temple loss

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Heading into Saturday's meet, University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics coach Roy Johnson knew that all of his guys had to have great performances against the likes of No. 8 Temple.

Some of his gymnasts did, but not all as the No. 13 Minutemen fell to the Owls, 226.65–220.60 at the Curry Hicks Cage. Their record did the same, as Massachusetts dropped to 4–2. Temple remained unbeaten with the victory, moving to 12–0.

Temple's Danny Ackerman was the top all–around scorer of the meet with a 56.95, and average of almost 9.5 per event. Dave Frank grabbed second with a 55.90, while Massachusetts' Gabe Columbus took third (54.95).

The Minutemen were down just .5 after the floor exercise, led by Ruslan Shupak's 9.55. But the second event was the beginning of the end for the Massachusetts gymnasts, as they were outscored 37.6–35.45. Jay Santos was the lone bright spot for the Minutemen, tying for third with a 9.25.

On the rings, the Minutemen kept it close. Massachusetts, second in the nation in the event as of last week, was led by first–place finisher Kevin Schwartz' near–perfect 9.9. Second place went to Shupak (9.7).

Shupak, who was the top vaulter in the nation as of last week, won the event with a 9.5, and Columbus tied for second (9.4). However, it was not enough in the team totals, as Temple had the cogs to capture the event, 37.1–36.75.

The Owls then swept the parallel bars. Dave Frank won with a 9.75, Danny Ackerman came in second with a 9.6, and Kenny Sykes finished in third.

The last event was all Temple, as it took first and second place. Columbus came in third, scoring a 9.5.

"It was a great competition," Johnson said. "What we needed was to have all guys hit for us. Losing by 2.15 points on the pommel horse after trailing just .5 after the floor exercises didn't help."

This meet will help the young Massachusetts squad in the meets ahead, according to Johnson.

"This kind of meet shows the guys what other teams are doing," Johnson said. "It motivates them for practice, and that's key. We have the guns, we just didn't do it. Most of the team is freshmen and sophomores, and it takes a while to get that consistency."

KATINA'S NIGHTCLUB
RT. 9 HADLEY • 413-586 4463
JOHN VALBY
"DR. DIRTY"
FRIDAY FEB. 17TH
A great night of unique side-splitting comedy!
18+ SHOW

COLLEGE PIZZA
"Quality is our Business"
549-6073 • 549-6098
Pizza, Subs, Calzones, Salads, Pasta

Special #1	Special #2
2 Lg Cheese $9.99 + tax	FREE! Lg Fries w/purchase of 2 Lg Subs
Special #3	Special #4
FREE! Garden Salad w/purchase of 2 Pasta dinners	Sm Calzone $1.00 w/purchase of a Lg Calzone

No Coupon Required • Must Mention Special Number When Ordering One Special/Delivery

Welcome Back From...
INFORMATION DATA BANK
IDB
Your Information Directory
2nd floor Whitmore lobby
Call or Visit IDB 545-1555 Mon-Fri 8:30-6:00

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
QUARTER POUNDERS® OPEN YEAR ROUND
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA

Health Phoneline
Volunteers Needed!!
The Health Education Division is looking for volunteers to work a peer health education phone line.
Training will be offered and will include topics such as sex, alcohol and other drugs, eating disorders, and stress.
Training begins February 15
If interested please contact the Health Education Division at 549-2671 x181.

RETAIL MANAGERS
You're Right On Target With CVS
At CVS we have opportunities that only a leader in the industry can offer. Make your choice CVS.
We currently have opportunities available throughout Massachusetts.
If you have retail career goals, stop by and see us at the University Career Fair on:
Wednesday, Feb. 15 from 10am-3pm in the Campus Center Auditorium, Table #7
If unable to attend, please send/fax resumes to CVS Pharmacy, Bristol Shopping Center, 627 Farmington Ave., Rte. 6, Bristol, CT 06010. Phone: (203) 584-8261. Fax: (203) 589-8102. Attn: Grace Figueredo.
CVS pharmacy
An affirmative action/ equal opportunity employer
A subsidiary of Melville Corp.

What's cheaper than a card? Healthier than candy? Comes in lots of colors? Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone
Campus Center
10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Th 2/9
Mo 2/13
Tu 2/14
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division
University Health Services

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, February 13, 1995

Inside this issue:

•Men and women's gymnastics both fell in a double-duel meet at the Cage on Friday (See story on page 9).

•The men's swimming team knocked the Red Storm of St. John's, 130-110 (See story on page 9).

•The men's track team finished fourth in the Atlantic 10 Championships (See story on page 9).

•Connecticut aims for No. 1 after a 77-70 defeat of Syracuse at the Carrier Dome (See story on page 8).

Women's hoop edged by No. 16 Colonials

Record attendance of 2,280 watches Minutewomen battle A-10's top team

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Sophomore point guard Sabriya Mitchell missed a game-winning layup with four seconds left as the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team lost a heartbreaker, 66-65, to George Washington before a school-record crowd of 2,280 on Saturday in the William D. Mullins Center.

G.W.	66
UMass	65

The Minutewomen inbounded the ball at center court with 15 seconds left in the game, and Mitchell let the clock run down to seven seconds before she drove the lane and missed the tough shot in traffic.

A battle for the missed shot ensued and after a scramble, a jump ball was called with one second left and the possession arrow pointed to the Colonial Women. At the same time, it put an end to any hopes of a last second desperation shot by the Minutewomen.

"We probably should have never been in that situation. We had too many turnovers and too many missed free throws," said Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien, whose team falls to third place, 8–2, behind St. Joseph's at 9–2, in the A–10. "We gave ourselves an opportunity, but we didn't take it."

With the score 60–56 in their favor, a technical foul was called on GW coach Joe McKeown, but Melissa Gurile missed the two free throws and a chance to increase its lead.

Then, they had a six–point lead after a Beth Kuzmeski layup with 7:19 left which tied the biggest lead that they had all game. From there on, however, the Minutewomen could only find the basket one more time, a Gurile layup off a feed from Mitchell with 1:06 left.

With the score in favor of UMass, 63–57, the Colonial Women went on a 9–0 run over the next four minutes to take a three–point lead with 3:37 left. The Minutewomen then cut the lead to one with Gurile's basket to finish out the scoring.

UMass had several chances over the final minute to come up with a go–ahead basket. The Minutewomen took a timeout after Gurile's basket to set up a play. UMass' play never developed as GW stole the ball and took it down the court with a chance to increase its lead. However, the Minutewoman defense anticipated, and the ball was knocked loose.

A mad dash for the ball ensued with about every player on the floor going after the ball. Octavia Thomas came up with it and threw it to Crystal Carroll who passed it up the court to Mitchell. UMass then called a timeout with 29 seconds left.

On the inbounds pass after the timeout, GW had a foul to give and Debbie Hemery committed the quick foul on Mitchell to force another inbounds pass which GW stole.

Mitchell then fouled Hemery to force a one and one. Hemery, GW's All–America candidate and leading scorer, missed the front end, allowing the Minutewomen the chance to take the lead with 15 seconds left.

"We haven't played a game with that much intensity in a long, long time," O'Brien said. "But if you don't win, it doesn't mean anything, to be honest with you."

The Minutewomen were pretty much in control of the first half, until the final three minutes when, with the score 30–25 in favor of UMass, the Colonial Women went on a 10–0 run to take a three–point lead into the locker room.

Gurile, who had her poorest game of the season against GW in Washington D.C., scored a game–high 21 points to go along with seven rebounds and three blocks.

GW's sophomore All–America candidate Tajama Abraham gave UMass' frontcourt problems all day. With Hemery having an off–day shooting, the Colonial Women kept feeding the ball to Abraham, who scored 12 points and grabbed six rebounds in the first half.

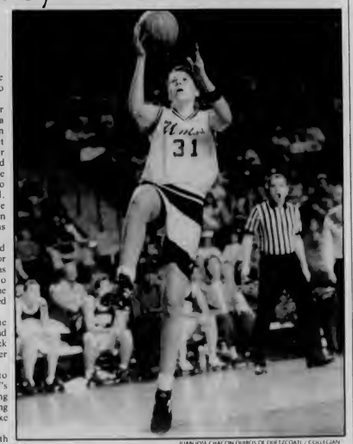
Freshman Tez Kraft, who scored nine points against GW in the earlier meeting, had another strong game, finishing with 12 points (5–6 from the field). In one sequence early in the first half, she scored seven straight points.

Hemery finished with 11 points while Darlene Saar, GW's other senior All–America candidate, finished with 15. Abraham finished with a double–double (20 points, 10 rebounds).

"They [UMass] played really good. They've gotten better and better. They came out very hard and ready to play," Hemery said. "We knew we had to step it up. We knew we really wanted this game."

"It wasn't a make or break game for us," O'Brien said. "We have a long way to go. The season is far from being over. We'll learn from it."

The Minutewomen, now 13–7 overall, will take on St. Joseph's on Feb. 15 in a battle for second place in the A–10.



JUAN JOSE CHACON QUIROS DE QUETZACOATL / COLLEGIAN

Melissa Gurile scored a game–high 21 points to go along with her seven rebounds and three blocks in a losing effort against GW.

Fans' support at Mullins hits all-time high for UM

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

Just over one minute remained in the contest, and the University of Massachusetts trailed the No. 16 Colonial Women of George Washington, 66–63.

Sophomore point guard Sabriya Mitchell drove the length of the floor, into the paint, and dished off to Melissa Gurile. The junior scored the layup to cut the Minutewomen's deficit to one.

The school record crowd of 2,283 rose to their feet as one, and the William D. Mullins Center crowd began to resound with the back and forth chants of "U" and "Mass."

The Mullins Center is well known for its raucous basketball fans. As for this season, it has been almost impossible to find those same fans at a women's hoop game.

"It was a great crowd, a classy crowd, and just a great atmosphere for college basketball," said George Washington coach Joe McKeown, whose squad was able to hang on for the 66–65 victory. "I give UMass credit, they played hard, and with a lot of confidence, I think they made a lot of new fans today."

"The crowd was great," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien agreed. "The fans were really getting into the game. At a couple of points, we were tired, and their intensity got us back into it."

The Minutewomen have struggled to draw many spectators in the past. Last year marked the first time they drew over 1,000 at home, a feat they accomplished three times. The previous record was 1,850 fans, who came out to see the Minutewomen battle then–No. 8 Vanderbilt last season.

Fan support has seemed to grow with O'Brien's program. As the team improved, so has the amount of spectators that came out to watch them. Two years ago, UMass played in front of over 1,000 fans just once, in a game at Rutgers.

Last year, eight of their games (five road match–ups and three home games at Mullins), saw the attendance mark top 1,000.

"This was my first time in this building," said George Washington senior Debbie Hemery. "I've seen it on TV, but playing in it was a lot different. I can still remember my freshman year when we came up here and played in front of about 30 people at the Cage."

No more. UMass, who has never had a winning record in Atlantic 10 play, has seen their program turn around under O'Brien. The Minutewomen stand at 8–2 in league play, and are a definite contender for the conference title.

"They've gotten better and better," said Hemery. "They played really well tonight, and a lot of it is homecourt advantage. They had a great crowd tonight."

"Joanie's done a great job building this program," said McKeown. "You used to come up here and it was a day off, now it's for first place in the league. I think what she has done here is great for women's basketball."

Still, despite the success of the women's basketball team this season (they entered the contest tied for first atop the A–10, and having won 13 of their last 14), the Minutewomen had not been able to draw 1,000 fans to the Mullins Center.

However, when the Colonial Women, a nationally–ranked team and perennial A–10 powerhouse came to town, the fans responded with a record performance.

Despite the fact that UMass dropped a tough one–point decision, the fans saw a hard fought battle.

"The crowd was just awesome," said Gurile. "It was good to see a lot of people in the seats."

"I hope they all come back," said O'Brien.

Minutemen clobber Ragin' Cajuns

Massachusetts bench scores 46 points in the rout of USL

By Mary Foster
Associated Press

LAFAYETTE, La. — A quick 16–1 Massachusetts lead didn't sit well with either coach — but for different reasons.

"Getting ahead 16–1 was the worst feeling in the world because I knew eventually they were going to make a run," said Massachusetts coach John Calipari, whose No. 4 Minutemen went on to clobber Southwestern Louisiana 94–63 on Saturday.

"We've been up and people have made runs at us, and we've made runs at people, so we're used to it. But sometimes, when you're up like that and they cut it down, all of a sudden you panic. It's a crazy game."

UMass	94
SW Louisiana	63

Donta Bright had 15 points, co–captain Lou Roe added 14 with 11 rebounds and Massachusetts (18–2) got 46 points from its bench, using every able–bodied player and staying on top by at least 20 points much of the way.

"We always put our game plan up on our board in the locker room, but getting down 16–1 wasn't exactly the one we put up," Southwestern Louisiana coach Marty Fletcher said.

"I was proud of the way we maintained our composure after the early run, and I thought we did a pretty good job for much of the second half."

see box score, page 8

Massachusetts, toppled from No. 1 by a 78–75 loss last week to George Washington, avoided losing two straight games for the first time since March 1992.

UMass also had an incomplete on its report card, trailing Rutgers 31–29 Tuesday at halftime when that game was suspended because of a midcourt protest by Rutgers students.

Massachusetts shot 49 percent for the game and held Southwestern (5–17) to 39 percent with heavy defensive pressure throughout. The Minutemen out–rebounded the Cajuns 51–39.

Dana Dingle and reserve guard Carmelo Travieso scored 11 points apiece for Massachusetts.

"This is the first time in three or four games that we've been able to go to the bench and get help at every position," Calipari said.

Bryan Collins led Southwestern with 17 points. Reginald Poole and Barry Bowman had 10 apiece.

"We didn't want to get embarrassed, but we did," Collins said. "They capitalized on everything we did wrong."

Calipari cleared his bench late in the game, playing everyone except Marcus Camby, the standout center who strained his left hamstring against St. Joseph's on Feb. 1.

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Dana Dingle was 5–7 from the field, scoring 11 points and leading No. 4 Massachusetts to a 94–63 blowout over SWLouisiana on Saturday.

Hockey goes 0–2 on weekend

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

Not many positives can come from a weekend where a hockey team is outscored 13–2.

The University of Massachusetts hockey team was steamrolled on the road by Maine and Merrimack. The Minutemen (5–22–2, 3–16 in Hockey East) dropped a 7–0 decision to Maine on Saturday after a 6–2 setback against Merrimack on Friday night.

Merrimack	6
Massachusetts	2

"We can't accept this, we can't accept this, we can't accept this, we

Campus Police Log

Suspicious Activity
Feb. 7
Police responded to a report of an individual trying to enter the rear door of the William D. Mullins Center. The individual was also seen trying to enter cars. No one was found in the area.
Feb. 10
An individual reported footprints leading up to their North Village Apartment window.
Feb. 11
Staff reported that an individual was looking into windows of Cance Residence Hall.

Larceny
Feb. 6
There was a report of a backpack missing from the Textbook Annex.
Feb. 7
An individual had jewelry in her purse stolen from Boyden Gym while she was at class. The jewelry is valued at $700.
Feb. 9
An individual reported that three compact discs were stolen from her room in Brown Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 12
An individual in Kennedy Residence Hall was allegedly watching Coolidge Residence Hall with binoculars. The individual was identified and spoken to.

Lost/Found Property
Feb. 6
A found credit card was returned to the police department.

Accident – Property Damage
Feb. 6
A minor accident occurred on Stockbridge Road, at which the drivers exchanged paperwork.
Feb. 9
An individual backed up between a PVTA bus and another vehicle, causing a minor accident. The operators exchanged paperwork.

Accident — Leaving the Scene
Feb. 9
A unidentified vehicle backed into another vehicle while attempting to park in parking lot 12.
Feb. 12
An individual reported hit–and–run damage to his vehicle on Eastman Lane.

Motor Vehicle Theft
Feb. 6
An individual who had lost her keys, reported that someone has been using her vehicle.

Injured Person
Feb. 9
An individual walked through the bushes on the east side of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library and fell approximately 12 feet to the ground. The case is under investigation.
Feb. 11
An individual allegedly sprayed two individuals with Mace. The case is under investigation. The police have a suspect, and intend on taking court action.

Vandalism
Feb. 11
An object broke a resident's window, after being thrown at Thoreau Residence Hall.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Feb. 14

Film — FBI's War on Black America. Contains footage of the Black Panther Party and others. Has interviews with surviving Panthers and activities. Discussion will be about the legacy of the Panthers. UMass, Campus Center, find room number at information desk, 7 p.m.

Senior class — Voting for where the senior class gift will go. UMass Campus Center Concourse. Information: 545–5479.

Volunteers — The Mass Transformation campaign needs volunteers to help improve the physical conditions on campus. Volunteers will be painting and cleaning walls, stairs, doors in designated areas of Worcester Dining Commons, Hasbrouck Lab, Bartlett Hall, Herter Hall, Arnold House and the Student Union/Campus Center. Registration will be at Memorial Hall and each of the work areas, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Everyone is invited.

Lecture — "Native American Art: A Northern Plains Beaded Shirt." Amherst College, Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Race Relations on College Campuses." Hugh B. Price, president of the National Urban League in New York City. Free. Amherst College, Johnson Chapel, 7:30 p.m.

Reading — Sam Allen, reading by African American poet. UMass, Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, 7 p.m. Information: 545–5177.

Reading — Connie Congdon, reading from excerpts from her plays, Tales of the Lost Formicans, Casanova and No Mercy, as well as from a work in progress. Part of Amherst College Creative Writing Center spring reading series. Free. Wootton's Books, 19 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, 8 p.m.

Auditions — The Importance of Being Earnest, by Oscar Wilde. Directed by Richard Trousdell and Virginia Scott. Roles: 5 men, 4 women. Read in pairs from the script. Particularly interested in non-traditional casting; actors of diverse ethnic background are encouraged. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two–hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room to be announced.

Audition — The Misanthrope, by Molière. Directed by Ron Spangler. Roles for men and women. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two–hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room 204.

Wednesday, Feb. 15

Exhibit — The Graduate Forum of the Art Department and Al Nuevo Mundo will present "Diálogo de las Artes en el Nuevo Mundo," images and discussion among artists, including Leonel Gongora, Colombian painter, Jorge González, Colombian photographer and others. Free. UMass, Herter 227, 4:30 p.m. Information: 545–2029.

Rally — Rally and speak–out for people on welfare organized by Arise for Social Justice. At noon, three groups will form, one at the State Street welfare office, one at Liberty Street welfare office and one at the federal building, all in Springfield. These groups will march to the church at Court Square. Information: 734–4948.

Senior class — Voting for where the senior class gift will go. UMass Campus Center Concourse. Information: 545–5479.

Volunteers — The Mass Transformation campaign needs volunteers to help improve the physical conditions on campus. Volunteers will be painting and cleaning walls, stairs, doors in designated areas of Worcester Dining Commons, Hasbrouck Lab, Bartlett Hall, Herter Hall, Arnold House and the Student Union/Campus Center. Registration will be at Memorial Hall and each of the work areas, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Everyone is invited.

Lecture — "The Art of Decorating Ancient Egyptian Temples: Problems and Solutions." Mount Holyoke, Gamble Auditorium, 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — "The Beginnings of the Jewish Critique of Christianity in the Middle Ages." Sponsored by the Program in Jewish Studies. Free. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series "If I Ever Lose My Faith in You: Idols, Saints, Celebrities, Martyrs, Men and Other Disappointments." Free. UMass. Campus Center room 917, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Auditions — The Importance of Being Earnest, by Oscar, Wilde. Directed by Richard Trousdell and Virginia Scott. Roles: 5 men, 4 women. Read in pairs from the script. Particularly interested in non–traditional casting; actors of diverse ethnic background are encouraged. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two–hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room to be announced.

Audition — The Misanthrope, by Molière. Directed by Ron Spangler. Roles for men and women. Read the entire play before auditioning which are available on a two–hour sign–out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room 204.

Film — Europa Europa. In German with English subtitles. Mount Holyoke College, Gamble Auditorium, 7:30 p.m.

Film — The Blue Kite, a Chinese film with English subtitles. Told from the perspective of a young boy, Tietou, it traces the fate of a Beijing family and their neighbors and friends as they experience the political and social upheaval in 1950s and 60s China. Free. Smith College, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Film — Everything For You, part of Jewish film series. Free. UMass Herter Hall room 231, 7:30 p.m. Information: 549–1710.

Forum — Campus reaction to the Massachusetts Association of Scholars (MAS) report Turmoil and Tension at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst: History, Analysis and Recommended Solutions. UMass Campus Center room 903, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Thursday, Feb. 16

Meeting — The UMass Animal Rights Coalition will have its first general meeting. UMass, Campus Center room 165, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Five–College College Bowl Tournament meeting. Information: call Mike 665–3765.

Senior class — Voting for where the senior class gift will go. UMass Campus Center Concourse. Information: 545–5479.

Lecture — "The Jews and Their Neighbors During the Holocaust." Free. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Five College Panel: Medicinal Plants and Herbal Healing." Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "The Destruction of the European Jews." Free. Amherst College, Campus Center Frontroom, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "What is Cultural Justice." Free. Amherst College, Octagon, Babbott Room, 8 p.m.

Notices

Yearbook photos — Senior photo session will continue through Feb. 24. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule an appointment.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the Umoja Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrone Johnson, 546–6787.

Voter registration — Cömmuter Services and Housing Resource Center offers voter registration daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Wednesdays.

UMass, Student Union Building, room 428. Information: 545–0865.

MAKE POLLUTERS PAY!
Clean Water Action
Now hiring motivated individuals to fight for environmental justice. Full time - $300 to 400/wk. Part time $5-8/hr. Work with fun staff, great student hours, easy access from anywhere in the 5-College area. Call 584-9830 EOE

Criminal Defense/ Personal Injury
On campus consultations available
UMASS Class of '87
Atty. Dean E. Goldblatt
413-731-8262
1441 Main St. • Springfield,MA

Deborah,
Our time together has been very special, and I look forward to many more!
Love Always, Erie

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work!

Only $1,129. Or about $22. a month.*

Macintosh® Performa®
475 4/160, Performa® Plus Display, Apple® Keyboard II and mouse.

Only $1,729. Or about $33. a month.*

Macintosh® Performa®
636 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple® Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and mouse.

Only $3,299. Or about $61. a month.*

Power Macintosh®
7100/66 8/500 with CD-ROM, Apple® Multiple Scan 15 Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and mouse.

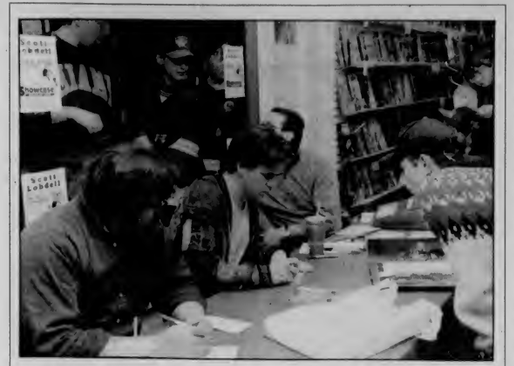
Before you need to make a single payment, Mercury will have orbited the sun, your New Year's resolutions will have been broken and the love of your life will have come and gone at least three times.

BUY AN APPLE MACINTOSH NOW. PAY FOR IT LATER.* We're not just making it easier for you to buy a Macintosh,* we're making it easier for you to buy something else you really need – time. Because for a limited time, with the Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan, you can own a Macintosh personal computer, printer, CD-ROM drive or other peripherals without making a single payment for 90 days.* Combine that with no hassles, no complicated forms and already great student pricing, and the easy-to-use Macintosh is now incredibly easy to buy. The Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan. The solution that gives you the power every student needs. The power to be your best.* Apple

Stop by the University Store Computer Department for more information.

UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center 545-2619
Monday-Friday 9-5 Saturday 11-3

*Deferred Apple Computer Loan offer expires February 17, 1995. No payment of interest or principal will be required for 90 days. (Some resellers may require a deposit to hold merchandise while loan is being approved.) Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to principal, and the principal amount, as so increased, will thereafter bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. "Monthly payment is an estimate based on the following information. For the Performa® 475 system shown here, a purchase price of $1,185.45, which includes 5% sales tax; including loan fees, the total loan amount is $1,254.44 which results in a monthly payment obligation of $22. For the Performa® 636 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $1,815.45, which includes 5% sales tax; including loan fees, the total loan amount is $1,921.11, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $33. For the Power Macintosh® 7100/66 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $3,463.95, which includes 5% sales tax; including loan fees, the total loan amount is $3,665.56, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $61. Computer system prices, loan amounts and sales taxes may vary. See your authorized Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices, loan and tax amounts. Loans are for a minimum of $1,000 to a maximum of $10,000. You may take out more than one loan, but the total of all loans cannot exceed $10,000 annually. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of November, 1994, the interest rate was 10.85% with an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.10%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment and the Annual Percentage Rate shown assume the 90-day deferment of principal and interest described above and no other deferment of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval. Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan offers available only to qualifying students, faculty and staff. Offers available only from Apple or an authorized Apple Campus Reseller or representative. ©1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, Macintosh, Performa and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleSwap and Power Macintosh are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.



SHINICHIRO SUZUKI/ COLLEGIAN
Scott Lobdell, artist behind the comic strips Uncanny X– Men and Generation X, two of Marvel Comics' most popular books, signs autographs at the Comic Store in the Hampshire Mall.

Comic book writer appears at mall

■ X–Men creator visits Showcase Comics

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

The line stretched through the halls of the mall for three hours Saturday as people waited over a half an hour to meet Scott Lobdell.

Lobdell, who made an appearance at Showcase Comics, is the writer of the Uncanny X–Men and Generation X, two of Marvel Comics' most popular books.

Hundreds of fans came to see the writer, including 6–year– old Crystal Hernandez, who came with her mom, and Frank Bowrys who traveled more than 40 minutes from Agawam to have Lobdell sign books for his two sons and his daughter.

And Lobdell didn't disappoint. Not only did he sign as many books as the fans brought him, he went beyond the call of duty. He got up to pose in pictures with families and went so far as to draw pictures of hil fans' favorite mutants including Gambit, Wolverine and even an impressive Nightcrawler.

Lobdell was also kept quiet about another sign of his charity. The owners of the store, Timur Voskoboinik and Robert Feinstein, got Lobdell to appear by being the top bidder for his services at a comic convention in Philadelphia.

However, unknown to many people there, was the fact that the money went to a charity, St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Tennessee. Usually, according to Lobdell, he gives money to the Pediatric AIDS society.

Lobdell said he has been giving money to AIDS society "for the last three years, since I brought Northstar out of the closet." Northstar was a character on a book Lobdell wrote several years ago.

Before getting a job as writer of the Uncanny X–Men, Lobdell "went through about five years of rejection slips, and I did every single job in the world from delivering meth for a dental lab to working at a summer camp every year for 10 years. And I also did stand–up comedy for five years."

Lobdell said his comedy background helped him in his current profession by teaching him to go with his first instinct because of tight deadlines. "And the deadlines being as tight as they are in comic books, you don't have the opportunity to write and rewrite and rewrite again."

Lobdell said he was going to be working in the future on a new entry–level super hero book for Marvel in order to attract new readers. "It's going to be somewhere halfway between Archie and X–Men."

Asked about the allure of the X–Men, Lobdell said, "The X–Men are about people who are born with their powers as opposed to people who get them later in life . . and I think it is an analogy for anybody who feels they are born into a situation and are trying to fight their way through . . and then there is a lot of different minorities . . any kind of group that feels apart from the rest of society."

Lobdell said many of his story ideas came from newspapers. "There's a thing in comic books called the Legacy virus which only affects mutants and now is crossing over to human population, and that's our version of telling a story about AIDS within the context of a comic book. We did a story not too long ago about genetic cleansing, of mutants trying to kill humans because they were genetically inferior, which we just pulled straight from the headlines."

Voskoboinik said that the owners hoped to have more signings in the future and that Steven Bissette and Jim Lee were prospects for future visits.

Faculty responds to Hooker's assessment

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Some University of Massachusetts faculty may want to take a vitamin C+ before attending the next faculty senate meeting — where President Michael K. Hooker will be available to answer questions.

This was only one of the many suggestions given at last Thursday's faculty senate meeting, in response to previous faculty assessments made by Gov. William F. Weld, and an overall C+ grade average given to the University by President Michael K. Hooker.

The meeting carried an overall negative tone in regard to recent administrative and governmental decisions to cut the UMass systems budget, and publicly refer to faculty as "underworked and overpaid."

"One will not make progress through chastising the faculty for laziness," Chancellor David K. Scott said in opening statements.

Edward Connors, a professor for the mathematics and statistics department, amused the crowd with an anecdote, involving UMass men's basketball Coach John Calipari's blunt expression of his opinions on the downgrading of faculty strengths, on public radio.

Allegedly, Calipari said "Who's this knucklehead saying our faculty are underworked and overpaid? Who is this guy? We've taken so many hits at the University, and the faculty that have stayed are the loyal people who love the place, who work hard," according to Connors.

Despite the many concerns brought forward about future cuts and worsening conditions, Arlene Cash, director of admissions, noted that the number of applicants to the University is on the rise.

Paul Page, vice chancellor of administration and finance, presented possibilities of utilizing a "tuition retention" method of funding. This would mean that money acquired through tuition would be retained at the University, instead of it being lumped into the state budget and having the state allocate funding to the University.

Provost Patricia Crosson reported of her discourse with University trustees. She has recently compiled a summary of reallocations and readjustments for the years from 1989 to 1994.

The summary consists of numbers of reductions and programs that were eliminated because of past budget cuts. The trustees seemed to be surprised, and acted as if they had never encountered the information that was presented, Crosson said.

Ron Story, vice chancellor for university advancement, stressed the importance of prioritizing a faculty pay–pack–

Health benefits on the downswing

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — By shifting workers by the thousands into managed care, businesses reduced their spending on employee health benefits by 1.1 percent in 1994, a survey of nearly 2,100 firms showed.

The average firm with 10 or more workers spent $3,741 per employee on health benefits, down from $3,781 in 1993, the benefit consulting firm Foster Higgins reported Monday.

Big companies, those with more than 500 employees, had the most success. Their health bills fell by 1.9 percent, to $4,040 per employee.

Companies with fewer than 500 employees, which generally offer less generous coverage, saw their costs climb by 6.5 percent, to $3,452.

But small or large, businesses are rapidly shifting their workers into managed-care plans that seek to lower costs by emphasizing primary care and imposing some restraints on which physicians and hospitals their workers use.

Foster Higgins surveyed 2,097 firms and found 63 percent of covered employees were in managed-care plans — health maintenance organizations, preferred provider organizations and point-of-service plans.

That was up from 52 percent in 1993. For years, health costs have been rising at twice and three times the rate of inflation. But that spiral slowed dramatically in 1994 while Congress debated, and eventually discarded, President Bill Clinton's proposal to make all employers and employees buy health insurance.

Another private firm, KPMG Peat Marwick, has estimated that overall private health insurance premiums rose 4.8 percent in 1994. The Clinton administration last week sharply lowered its estimate of the future costs of Medicare and Medicaid, but said health costs were still rising too rapidly.

While health cost inflation has abated, 41 million Americans, or 16.1 percent of the population, are uninsured, and the number is rising.

John Welch, a principal with Foster Higgins' Washington office, said, "Employers that have embraced and moved to managed care have been rewarded. ... They really saw the results come through for them for the first time."

■ rally

continued from page 1

"These students are exactly those kind of people."

Robert Bliss, spokesman for the Executive Office of Administration and Finance, said the $10 million cut would be set aside in a reserve, and if the schools matched it with their own fund-raising, they would get it back — in addition to the money they raised themselves.

"The idea here is to try to get these folks a little more focused on fund-raising among the private sector, particularly among their own alumni," Bliss said.

Overall, some $1.8 billion is spent at the state's public colleges and universities, with almost $700 million coming from the state, he said.

Before Weld unveiled his budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, Bliss said, The proposal included a $1.7 million cut for UMass–Amherst.

"When representatives start hearing from constituents in their districts, they will respond," Story said.

Christine Lopes, campus organizer for Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), said she was pleased with the press conference.

"It was an excellent test about student need to get out," Lopes said. "The crowd was energetic and ready to go on to the next step, organizing on individual campuses."

Wire reports contributed to this story.

Health Phoneline
Volunteers Needed!!
The Health Education Division is looking for volunteers to work a peer health education phone line.
Training will be offered and will include topics such as sex, alcohol and other drugs, eating disorders, and stress.
If interested please contact the Health Education Division at 549-2671 x181.

Cupid's Choice

MORE TREADMILLS! MORE STAIRMASTERS! MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

SKI INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS '95
There's only one PARTY IN THE SNOW! SPRING BREAK '95
ONLY $209 ST. REGIS CANADA (JUST ACROSS THE VERMONT BORDER)
5 NIGHTS & ONGOING LUXURY COMBO
5 DAY SKI & SNOW BOARD LIFT TICKET
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF INTERCOLLEGIATE PARTIES, CONTESTS & ACTIVITIES!
Call SKI TRAVEL 1-800-999-SKI-9

Move your career in a healthier direction
Now that you're about to graduate, are you wondering which direction your future should take? If your answer is "yes", consider the financial rewards and professional growth offered by one of today's hottest fields— health care. Then put your career in gear by joining Northeastern University's Bouvé School of Pharmacy and Health Sciences. We offer a wide variety of post-baccalaureate certificate programs that will give you the intensive instruction and valuable clinical experience you need to start your health care career on the right track.
Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences offers Post-Baccalaureate Certification Programs in:
• Health Information Administration
• Medical Laboratory Science
• Respiratory Therapy
• Dental Hygiene
To find out more, call (617) 373-3321. Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, 134 Mugar Life Science Building, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action, Title IX University.
Northeastern University

THE HAMPDEN
Munchies & More Snackbar
At the top of the Southwest Horseshoe
TONIGHT
UMass B-Ball Special
9:30 - Midnight
Slice of Pizza 50¢
also available...
mozarella sticks, onion rings, fries, chicken fingers...
EVERYDAY MENU SPECIALS!
Beginning at $2.00
ICE CREAM SUNDAE SPECIALS
Every Night From 7pm - 10pm

the TOC
New This Semester at the TOC Lounge...
LUNCH IN THE LOUNGE!
• HOMEMADE SOUPS
• SANDWICHES
• FEATURING HEALTHY CHOICE DELI MEATS!
• SALADS...AND MORE
11AM - 1:30 PM MON-FRI
UMASS STUDENTS ON THE 10, 14 OR 19 MEAL PLAN
THE TOC IS THE PLACE TO BE EVERY WEDNESDAY DURING FEBRUARY
JUST BRING YOUR UMASS ID AND RECEIVE A $3 LUNCH DISCOUNT AT THE TOC RESTAURANT!
11:30 AM - 1:30 PM
MON - FRI
• 11th Floor Campus Center •

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Juan Jose Chacon Chirros Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jessica Taverna News Editor
Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Heltner Editorial Production Manager
John Kha,hadoorian Finance Manager
Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior BookKeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Lost in the pigeons of our mind

Nathan Crick

The toy truck must have been taunting the boy.

It was sitting confidently on the sidewalk in front of the Mexican cafe, directly beside the table where a man sat peacefully alone, waiting for service. The boy, probably about three-years-old, had set it there with purpose, and walked away from it. Then with a wave of his arms and a yell to the poor man sitting alone, he set to running with as much vigor as he could muster, and sent himself soaring over the plastic obstacle with a five-inch vertical leap.

Then he would call to the man again, and run back a little further, and jump over it again. And again. And again. Each time he would reach terminal velocity about two steps into his run, but he continued to back hiinself up out of principle anyway.

Finally, he didn't make it. He caught his foot on the truck and tumbled to the ground, an image I would equate to watching a Weeble fall down if that were physically possible. This was the last straw for the old man, because with a frustrated grimace he got up and moved to a table in the back.

The boy got up, and started his routine again, this time without an audience.

I often watch children do these things, and try to imagine what is going through their minds at this point. In every square in every city I have ever been in, any child that can move its limbs is chasing like mad after every pigeon that they see, waving their arms madly and laughing with imaginable delight. They have the same expression as the boy with the truck, or any child I have ever seen doing some completely pointless action. One of utter ecstasy and joy in actions that follow thought patterns like pigeon ... pigeon ... fly away ... run ... run ... another pigeon ... run ... run ... mother ... run ... pigeon ... run ...

It seems like such a free existence when I imagine it, and I grow envious of their complete obliviousness to the world outside of their imagination. When I picture myself flailing through a crowd of pigeons in the middle of Paris, I realize with fascination that I still have the desire within me to join these children in whatever completely meaningless activity in which they seem to be achieving their own personal little nirvanas.

For instance, I remember when I was a kid I found this young blue jay in our yard that had a broken wing, and I thought that was really neat to be able to get that close to a bird. It was so neat, in fact, that I captured it inside a brown paper bag and started riding my tricycle around my driveway singing a song. It was a good day, just because I fulfilled my desire to carry around a bird in a bag.

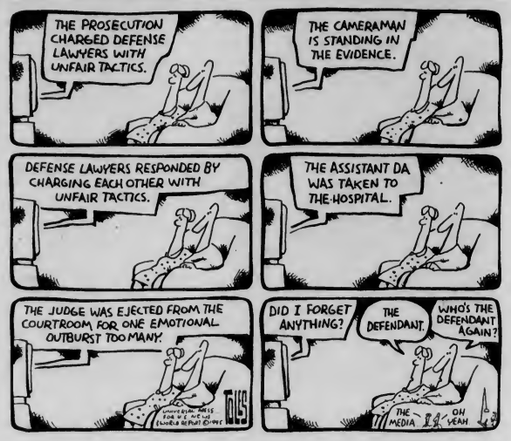
Then years later I emerged into junior high, and spent hours lamenting the fact that I had to wear USA Olympic sneakers while everyone else had Reebuks. I had bad hair too. But I adjusted. I bought Nikes and feathered my hair.

I always thought that I had eseaped those bonds of high school repression, but I have come to realize that just because we may change venues or change clothes does not mean we have liberated ourselves from anything. The students here are simply products of that place, and then we become products of this place when we graduate. Assembly line dolls that can be dressed up and taught new phrases dictated by the Generation Machine.

The problem it seems is that we try to "find ourselves" within the reflections of people and things around us, and keep trading one fashion trend for another. Cool hair to black clothes to Birkenstocks to dress suits, all the while deceiving ourselves that we are maturing and expanding our horizons. Underneath all of our surfaces, however, the part of our minds that desires and creates is stuffed deeper and deeper away, and occasionally we reach down and pick something out of it to show to people and make ourselves seem like individuals.

So as I watch these children run and reach for things that have no significance, the connection with those basic emotions is like a release. All around them are eyes that may feel the same as well, looking from deep within their heads to connect to something alive, and to make them smile for a moment. Then they may turn and continue walking, reconnected with the puppet strings that guide them, and ignoring the pigeons at their feet and the many trucks waiting for the challenge of their stride.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.



THE PROSECUTION CHARGED DEFENSE LAWYERS WITH UNFAIR TACTICS.
THE CAMERAMAN IS STANDING IN THE EVIDENCE.
DEFENSE LAWYERS RESPONDED BY CHARGING EACH OTHER WITH UNFAIR TACTICS.
THE ASSISTANT DA WAS TAKEN TO THE HOSPITAL.
THE JUDGE WAS EJECTED FROM THE COURTROOM FOR ONE EMOTIONAL OUTBURST TOO MANY.
DID I FORGET ANYTHING?
THE DEFENDANT.
WHO'S THE DEFENDANT AGAIN?
THE MEDIA
OH YEAH

Touching base in the dating game

Arthur Stapleton Jr.

The dating scene is a lot like baseball.

It's our national pastime, Romance. Men. Women. Relationships. How do you explain the references when we were kids? Rounding the bases, hitting a home run, striking out. The comparisons don't stop there.

You may go to the batting cages daily for a month, yet never show progress at the plate. No matter how many ground balls you take in infield practice, there's always the one in the game that finds its way through your legs. There's always the expert who can tell you exactly how to hit the curve after you've fanned on the previous pitch. Despite the advice, though, the next pitch will never be the same.

Of course, you can never tell exactly which pitch is coming. If you plan ahead, most of the time you're proven wrong. Never swing at the floater — those soft, easy ones that tease you and get you to swing, they make you look foolish.

When you get a hanging curve ball, wait on it and knock it out of the park.

Many of your teammates give you encouragement, telling you how much better you can become. However, when you strike out, they may in fact be up next. Or, the pitcher may be throwing around you to get to your teammate. And what if the pitcher hits your teammate with a pitch?

Obviously, the hurler is marked and will no doubt receive some sort of retaliation. Your teammates will always stick up for you.

If you are playing safe, laying down the bunt is always the way to go. You rarely take a big swing with so much on the line. Never offer someone a chance to pinch hit for you, but accept the offer if they extend one to you.

Stay away from the high hard stuff. They're most likely trying to lure you away from the strike zone. Don't swing at pitches low, outside and in the dirt — the pitcher wants to see if you are vulnerable.

The same goes for those on the mound. Never give 'em a good first pitch to knock out of the park. If you pay too much attention to the runner and not the batter, losing your focus, you'll blow it with both and most likely balk. Wild pitches happen all the time. You can never make up for them. Just brush them off and move on.

What about the winning and losing? That's where the games come in. Some use Vaseline on the brim of the cap, some use sandpaper. The tricks of the trade are concealed very nicely, yet you know they're being used. Why else did that ball drop like that?

The hidden ball trick? Seen that.

I know — what about fighting? An inside fast ball that comes really close to hitting the batter could cause much turmoil. The batter will attack the pitcher, almost always verbally. Before you blink, the benches from both sides empty, including your pals from the bullpen, and you have an all-out Baschrawl.

However, there are several differences. Those playing the romance game may go on strike, but a short time later, they're crossing the picket lines, ready to play again with the same stakes on the line.

And when you're having problems on the dating scene, don't worry — President Bill Clinton won't attempt to intervene and solve them for you. He couldn't even begin to understand some of the confusing situations encountered between those who date.

There's one thing I can't understand, then — we have a holiday for dating, not for baseball.

Maybe St. Valentine should be honored sometime in October.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

The dangers behind the regime China

Peter Orvetti

As the utter catastrophe that is the Clinton administration stumbles into its third year, the failed president is being praised for only one thing: his so-called "economic diplomacy." Marked chiefly by GATT and NAFTA, Clinton has found a way to simultaneously put Americans out of work, exploit poorer nations, and make industrialists and multinationals even richer.

Western governments shake their heads and feign disgust, but the money keeps rolling into Beijing. What industrial power is not secretly jealous of China, where the rich reign, the workers don't cost a cent, and those who complain are locked up and tortured?

Not to be lost in this is the President's new love for the People's Republic of China. The former peace activist has declared the Clinton Doctrine, which states that human rights and economic opportunity should not be linked. Clinton believes that China's abysmal human rights record should not keep American business from cashing in.

China is the reprehensible republic, indefensible by any standard. Under the banner of socialism, Beijing has created the world's first perfect capitalist state. In China, common laborers are paid zero dollars an hour — an unenviable minimum wage made possible by the nation's copious use of prison labor. Meanwhile, China's Pacific coast has developed into a shopper's paradise of stores, businesses and foreign industries, barely distinguishable from Tokyo or Manhattan.

Now that China has been welcomed into the world economic community, all entrepreneurs have the chance to benefit from this profitable labor situation. Western governments shake their heads and feign disgust, but the money keeps rolling into Beijing. What industrial power is not secretly jealous of China, where the rich reign, the workers don't cost a cent, and those who complain are locked up and tortured?

This China is Bill Clinton's new best friend. The President is threatening a phony "trade war," but this is a form of conflict traditionally launched only against our closest allies, like Japan — and now, the P.R.C.

Clinton has sold out America in the name of free trade, and has sold his own soul in exchange for plastic toys and cheap clothing. I would suggest that we boycott Chinese products, but the magnitude of Clinton's trade schemes will make that impossible. Chinese goods are so pervasive in America that they are virtually unavoidable. And so we all have the blood on our hands as we reach for our wallets.

Even the Clinton administration itself has admitted that conditions in China have worsened since Clinton put his arms around Deng Xiaoping. America's collective nausea at its complicity in this trade tragedy has led us all to ignore the issue.

I have written before about the dangers of the word "genocide." It is used too frequently, just like our leaders too often dub some minor potentate the next Hitler. We have become desensitized to these terms. So, when an actual genocide occurs, it means nothing to us.

Clinton's pact with China has served only to bring moral outrage to all thinking Americans, and to keep the Chinese people in their cell. It has also tightened the chains that hold Tibet captive.

China seized Tibet 35 years ago. In the past few years, Beijing has stepped up its domination of the occupied nation. The Chinese government has declared its intention to liquidate the Tibetan culture and people. The means of implementation of this policy is sustained massacre. At the present rate of elimination, all remnants of Tibet will cease to exist within our lifetime.

This China is our new comrade, and this trade policy is considered President Clinton's greatest accomplishment. America is not ignorant of the real China because of a lack of information. Our ignorance is willful. We turn away from China just as we cannot bear to look at a dying child. Our indignation keeps us in the dark.

Is the repulsion and guilt we must feel really worth it, just to buy half-rate Barbie dolls and designer rip-offs on the cheap?

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Making everyday a special one

Marni E. Helfner

It's February and it's cold outside. What better way to warm up than with me as your valentine? That's what was on the Valentine's day card I looked at in the drug store on Saturday. It made me want to hurl.

Yeah, so it's Valentine's day again and everybody is running around trying to out-do each other when it comes to showing how much they love one another. Buying stuffed animals, candygrams, cards, chocolates and $100 roses, just to prove their love.

From a young age, we push Valentine's day in our culture. Remember back to first grade, when your Valentine's day was so important and the person who got the most Valentine's cards became the most popular person in your class? Of course you do — because you probably weren't the person to get the most cards.

You spent hours at the store trying to decide between the Wonder Woman, Spider-Man and the Pac-Man Valentines (both priced at $1 for 35 valentines). You then spent another six or seven hours trying to decide which card to give to the popular person in your class.

If you were really adventurous you would sign one card, "love, your secret admirer," and give it to the cutest person in your class.

What getting all those cards really meant was that for every card you got — it was a measure of your goodness or how much you were loved.

As a young adult, a former boyfriend's birthday fell on Valentine's Day and I dropped more than a hundred dollars on the event — I got a card and a stuffed animal and felt cheated. I felt that he didn't love me as much as I loved him because I "gave him more." Truth was, he probably loved me just the same; it didn't add up simply to what he got and what I got.

Every year, I send a card to my dad and my brother for Valentine's day just to make them laugh. Usually, it's a Shoebox greetings card. However, I never feel the need to because every time I speak to either one of them, I tell them "I love you." You never know when you might not be able to say the things you never said, so I always simply end with it.

In my family, it's merely another parting farewell — "I'll talk to you tomorrow. I love you."

My friend Jen is spending more money than she can afford on her boyfriend (I'll call him Martin), and going all out to prove to him that she loves him. She knows Martin can't afford to buy her anything because he just got laid off from his job, but she tells me, "If he doesn't get me at least one flower or card I'm going to be pissed." Since when did this become a competition?

Americans spend thousands of dollars on these supposed tokens of love, and all it proves is that we know how to line the pockets of greeting card companies and florists across the country.

All this to prove how much we love one another. Isn't there a better way to prove how much we love one another? Why not donate the money you would otherwise spend to some worthy cause –like the Amherst Survival Center, Necessitics/Necesidades, Men Overcoming Violence, or TEAMS — I'm sure they could use the money.

Why not tell the important person in your life just how much they mean to you? Just pick up the phone, take pen in hand, or strum a guitar, and tell them the difference they make in your life?

For that matter, why not make every day Valentine's day and tell people how much you love them every day? Then there wouldn't be a need to even have the day. People would know how much you loved them all the time. Valentine's day could go back to being a religious holiday. People would spend a lot less money on frivolous, material things, and be more content because they would already know that they were appreciated and loved.

Yeah, let's make every day Valentine's day.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Make your voice heard.

When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

THAT BUDGET PRETTY MUCH SAYS IT ALL, HONEY...
IF WE BILL OUT AT $20,000 A POP, "NOTHIN' BUT ORPHANS" COULD CLEAR $350,000 IN THE FIRST YEAR!
I DON'T KNOW, SIR. YOU MIGHT BE CHALLENGED ON SOME OF YOUR SUPPOSITIONS ABOUT THE NEEDS OF CHILDREN...
LIKE, WHAT?
200 CALORIES A DAY?
ADEQUATE. IF WE DON'T LET 'EM TEAR AROUND MORE THAN ADEQUATE!

Arts & Living

Jerky Boys' movie debut a wrong number

By Michael Pessah and Laura Stock
Collegian Correspondents

TO LIVE
Directed by Zhang Yimou with Gong Li, Ge You
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

To Live is a sprawling epic following the evolving lives of its characters as their exotic homeland undergoes vast upheaval. Sound familiar? Zhang Yimou's To Live is the latest film in the "historical melodrama" tradition, a sub- genre that has been experiencing a recent renaissance. Films such as Chen Kaige's Farewell My Concubine have managed to redefine a milieu that has been weighed down by bloated operas still haunted by the ghosts of Scarlett O'Hara.

Unlike Farewell My Concubine, which focused on the stars of the Bejing Opera, To Live strives to tell the stories of China's "common people." The film centers around Fugui (Ge You) and his wife Jiazhen (Gong Li, of Concubine), two people who live remarkable lives but are of little personal historical relevance.

To Live follows Jiazhen and Fugui over a period of 30 years. From the beginning of the Communist takeover through "the great proletariat revolution." No explanation is given on the complex causes of these tremendous events, and they are never discussed. We experience these changes in a way that couldn't be revealed by a history book.

The ideology of Communism means little to Fugui and Jiazhen — to them it is giving away your oven-ware to build a group kitchen, not the glory of the proletariat. By showing the effects of Communism on a basic human level, To Live enriches our understanding of history in a fundamental way.

Therein lies the magic of the film. Yes, it features the usual historical melodrama trappings — triumph, loss, big metaphors, a cast of thousands — but there are few films that so successfully depict the ironic unpredictability of life. To Live works as a historical melodrama, character study and a moving embodiment of the old Chinese adage, "God laughs." B+ (M.P.)

COURTESY MILES ARCHOWITZ

Johnny Brennan (left) and Kamal (right) suffer a bad connection in their film debut — The Jerky Boys: The Movie.

IN THE MOUTH OF MADNESS
Directed by John Carpenter with Sam Neill, Jurgen Pronchow
Playing at Hampshire Six

"Do you read Sutter Cane?" is the most frequently asked question in John Carpenter's (Halloween) latest horror flick. I have answer for Carpenter — I would rather read this as a novel rather than sit through the movie again. The film opens up with insurance investigator John Trent (Sam Neill of Jurassic Park) being thrown into a padded cell in a straightjacket recounting his story to a never-named government official.

We find out that Trent was hired by a book publisher (Charlton Heston) to find out where the famous novelist Sutter Cane (Pronchow) is, as he has possibly disappeared in the midst of writing his latest work, In the Mouth of Madness. The madness and ridiculousness ensue as Trent follows Cane's trail to a surreal town, foreign on any map, where he realizes that whatever Cane writes becomes reality. Meanwhile readers of Cane's book are all going insane.

Several parallels are drawn between Sutter Cane and Stephen King and it's insulting to King. Carpenter's direction falls short compared to his more popular works like Halloween and the supposedly horrific scenes do not shock or scare, but rather make the audience laugh. The special effects are "wrdly convincing, and are reminiscent of a poorly directed version of Beetlejuice.

The film tries to incorporate too many issues: religion, love, good vs. evil, the distinction between reality and fiction, genocide. There is never any confrontation between Cane and the hero Trent, so no conflict is ever really resolved. Writer Michael DeLuca deserves credit for the original idea of an author being able to control the world with his pen. However, the direction in Madness is so poor and the acting so dry, it's impossible to believe on screen. D+ (L.S.)

THE JERKY BOYS: THE MOVIE
Directed by James Melkonian with Johnnie Brennon, Kamal
Playing at Hampshire Six

It is always particularly sad when movies made to exploit the latest trend are finally released long after the trend has fizzled. Few things are more awkward than yesterday's stupid trend, and The Jerky Boys is the cinematic equivalent of a crisp, new Generra Hypercolor t-shirt.

Perhaps the folks at Caravan Pictures (a subsidiary of Disney) thought they hi pay dirt with the discovery of Johnny B and Kamal, the consummate prank callers, a.k.a. the Jerky Boys. They were a big hit on bootleg tape and chart topping CDs, so what could be funnier than a movie centered around staged prank phone calls?

The Jerky Boys is the most conspicuously out of touch flop since The Fat Boys' cinematic vehicle Disorderlies. One expects the embarrassed crew to be credited as John Doe. The plot is nothing more than standard gangster mix- up. For some reason, Johnny B. persistently pranks the local mobster and convinces him that the Jerky Boys are hit men, visiting New York from Chicago.

When the criminals find out, the Boys have to extricate themselves from a variety of cliffhangers by making (surprise) prank phone calls, prank intercom calls, prank toilet stall voices, prank taxi radio calls, prank ventriloquist noises and other "dirty tricks." I haven't heard this many vocal hijinks since the last Police Academy movie. The Jerky Boys fails to succeed even as a novelty item. Spend the money instead on rubber crutches, or making farting noises with your armpits — you'll have more fun. D (M.P.)

'Imperfect' images and ideas inspire art works

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Herter Gallery will present "Imperfect," an exhibition comprised of works from eight internationally known artists from Feb. 9 – April 15. A visiting artist lecture series will be held in Herter 227. The works focus on the many of the problems that plague present day society and illustrate the fact that these problems often go ignored.

Jerry Kearns and Don Desmont will have a catalogue of essays as a literary side bar to the visual arts.

"The catalogues are coming in late," said Watt. "We had some problem with the printers over some of the images in the show. One hundred were sent and should be available around Tuesday."

Ida Applebroog, Beth B., Larry Clark, Judy Fox, Debroah Kass, Rona Pondick, Sue Williams and Martin Wong as well as University of Massachusetts graduate students Kristin Hartman, Elizabeth Hynes and Ed Pepe all contribute to "Imperfect" as both individuals and as a collective body raising its voice to the injustices of the world.

The exhibit is more than just paintings and sculptures, but also a look back on how pop culture has shaped our society.

"This represents a third face of pop culture. It concerns issues that confront us every day. The exhibit puts these issues in peoples' faces. Some things are often hushed up like skeletons in family closets. People are going to suppress it," Watt said.

One of the works featured in "Imperfect" is a life-size sculpted male baby, lying completely naked in a pool of soft white light. The work, simply entitled "Infant Jesus," is by Judy Fox. More radical and hard-hitting works include a painting called "Miss Alternate Universe," by Sue Williams depicting the demoralizing side to beauty pageants, and Kristin Hartman's "100 Babies," a colorful representation of the world's children in all shades of the rainbow.

"The show just opened on Thursday and so far there have been no problems with the exhibit. No one has been offended but I'm sure someone will be, although I think "horrified" is a little ridiculous as far as responses go," Watts said.

"The opening reception went really well," he said. "A couple hundred people attended. It was nice and steady flow and we've had good press coverage. I think so far the response is positive."

The exhibit was put together by Kearn's students From gathering grants to working with galleries, printers and traveling to New York, the students got a first hand look at putting a show together, according to Watts.

"Imperfect" should strike a chord in all who view it because it is concerned with a facet of our society that one can easily relate to. Sexual relations, power abusing and gender issues are all "hot" topics at the moment and have become a signature for our times. From popular cinema to raunchy talk shows, these are the issues that plague everyday life and make "Imperfect" a perfect thing to view.

Rona Pondick will be the first speaker in the lecture series beginning March 1 at 4 p.m.. On March 29 Deborah Kass will speak at 4 p.m.. Both presentations will be in Herter 227.

Herter Gallery hours are Mon.–Fri., 11 a.m.–4 p.m., Sun 12 p.m.–4 p.m. For more information call 545–0976.

HURRY! GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX YEARBOOK NOW!

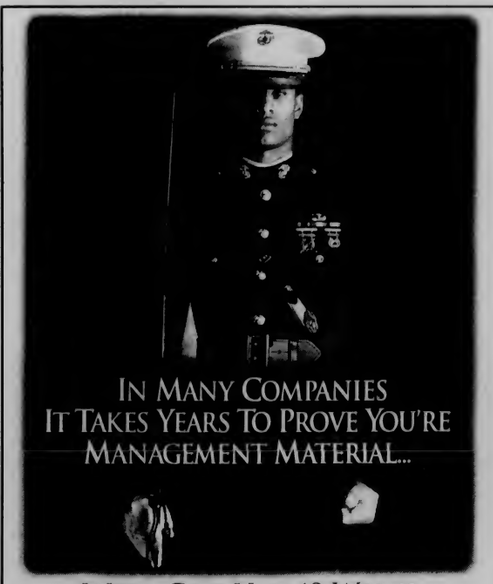
Campus Center Rm. 901-902

all this week & next week!

Schedule a free sitting

(800) 836-0558

Be a part of the first all color yearbook in New England!



IN MANY COMPANIES IT TAKES YEARS TO PROVE YOU'RE MANAGEMENT MATERIAL...

WE'LL GIVE YOU 10 WEEKS.

Ten weeks may not seem like much time to prove you're capable of being a leader. But if you're tough, smart, and determined, ten weeks and a lot of hard work could make you an Officer of Marines. And Officer Candidates School (OCS) is where you'll get the chance to prove you've got what it takes to lead a life full of excitement, full of challenge, full of honor. Anyone can say they've got what it takes to be a leader, we'll give you ten weeks to prove it.

If you think you can handle this crash course in management, see Capt. Blazis at the Career Fair (Campus Center) on the 15th of Feb. from 10am until 3pm and at the ALANA Career Fair in the New Africa House Feb. 15th from 4pm-6pm or call 1-800-255-8762 for info.

Marines
The Few. The Proud. The Marines.
MARINE OFFICER

House considers anti–crime bill

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Under threat of a presidential veto, the House took up a GOP bill Monday that would give $10 billion in crime-fighting money to state and local governments and end the program to put 100,000 new police on the street.

The final and most controversial of a six-part Republican package to rewrite last year's $30 billion anti-crime law also would eliminate funds set aside in the 1994 law for after-school and other crime prevention programs.

Instead, state and local governments would receive block grants of $2 billion a year for five years to use as they wished to reduce crime and improve public safety. The GOP bill, as amended Monday, requires a 10 percent local match of federal funds, compared with a 25 percent match in the 1994 law.

President Clinton warned Congress in his Saturday radio address against playing "partisan politics with police." He said he would use the first veto of his presidency to stop "any effort to repeal or undermine the 100,000 police commitment. Period." Clinton pledged during his presidential campaign to put 100,000 more police on the street.

Attorney General Janet Reno, wearing a badge saying "100,000 Cops: Don't Go Back," was on Capitol Hill to rally opposition to the bill Monday. She spent the morning lobbying Democratic and Republican members.

"That bill is working and it's being done in a straightforward, nonbureaucratic fashion," she said. "Congress must not move backward in the fight against crime."

Republicans say their bill gives localities the flexibility to tailor anti-crime programs to local needs.

"Washington simply doesn't have all the answers," said Rep. Martin Hoke (R-Ohio). "This one-size-fits-all approach to crime control is completely wrong," he said, adding that the pending bill does allow spending for crime prevention as long as law enforcement officers are involved.

The 1994 law provided $8.8 billion in grants for new police over six years, of which $1.3 billion is being appropriated this year to put 17,000 more cops on the beat. It also budgeted $3.9 billion for school programs, job and substance abuse programs, midnight basketball, economic development, gang prevention and other crime prevention programs that would be eliminated as separate programs in the pending bill.

The Republican plan "will do nothing to decrease instances of violent crime," said Rep. Bart Stupak (D-Mich.), a former police officer who opposes the new bill.

Hampshire employees contemplate union

By Reid Frazier
Collegian Correspondent

AMHERST — Employees at the Hampshire College Physical Plant are waiting to hear the verdict on two votes that will decide whether they will unionize.

The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) is expected to make a decision within the next few weeks, after 15 voted in favor of and 14 voted against having a union, according to Tom Pelissier, a carpenter for the Physical Plant.

The two votes were contested because they were cast by clerical workers. The rest of Physical Plant workers are blue–collar, Pelissier said.

Physical Plant workers are mainly custodians, carpenters, electricians, and grounds–keepers, while the two contested voters have desk jobs at Physical Plant. "The reason why we want a union is that right now we're working without a contract, so the College can terminate our employment at any time," Pelissier said. A union would give the workers collective bargaining, which is a way for workers to negotiate with management.

Hampshire, the nation's most expensive college, also has the lowest paid Physical Plant workers of all the five colleges, according to Sheila Moos, former director of Physical Plant.

Moos was replaced by Larry Archie last November, according to John Falkowski, director of human resources.

Starting salary for a custodian at Hampshire is around $8 an hour, compared with around $10 an hour for the other four area colleges, Moos said.

The college's administration does not want a union on campus because having a union would discourage open and direct communication between workers and management, Falkowski said.

"I don't see what the union has to offer that the employees don't already have at Hampshire," Falkowski said, citing life insurance as one of the benefits Hampshire employees receive.

Some workers voted against having a union because of improved management conditions influenced their decision, according to Mark Drapeau, a member of the grounds–crew.

The management of the Physical Plant was changed during the drive to unionize, Pelissier said. Employees issued a list of 13 demands, including a demand for the creation of a "receptive environment" for worker input in working conditions.

"With the old management, it was their way or the highway," Drapeau said. "The new director listens to what we have to say."

Last month a memo issued by faculty members stated that "red–baiting" had been used to intimidate workers from voting for the union, David Kerr, professor of communications said. Red–baiting is a term that means accusing a person or an organization of being communist.

According to a Physical Plant worker who chose to remain anonymous, several employees received an information sheet from the administration describing the proposed union as "the communist party masquerading as a labor union."

Falkowski acknowledged that his office staff had found the quote while researching the union's background, but that he did not authorize distribution of the sheet.

Nancy Kelly, executive assistant to the president, stated that "Hampshire College does not redbait. The whole idea strikes me as passe, anyway."

In a statement issued to the Hampshire community last month, President Greg Prince commented that the Staff Advisory Committee (SAC) gives workers a voice in the College's decision making process.

Bob McKean, a custodian who served on SAC, disagreed with Prince's statement, saying that certain decisions "had already been made" before they were brought to review by the committee.

For now, the decision of whether there will be a union rests in the hands of the NLRB, according to Pelissier. If no decision is reached in the next few weeks, then a hearing will be held by the NLRB at which both sides will argue their cases.

HIV–infected kids no longer tested with AZT

WASHINGTON (AP) — AZT, the most common antiviral drugs used against the AIDS virus, has been dropped from a clinical trial among children after it proved to be the least effective and to cause the highest rate of side effects.

The National Institutes of Health announced Monday that the AZT part of a clinical trial testing three drug strategies for treating children with HIV has been discontinued.

The other two arms of the study will continue, the agency said.

The clinical study, started in 1991, was testing AZT alone, AZT with ddI, another antiviral, and ddI alone, in the treatment of children from the ages of three months to 18 years. All of the patients were infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

A review board recommended discontinuing the AZT arm after it was shown that children receiving this drug alone had a more rapid progression of disease than did children receiving the other two drug therapies.

Patients taking ddI or the ddI-AZT combination will continue in the trial. Patients who have been taking AZT alone may continue, if their condition shows it is appropriate, or they may be switched to other therapy, the NIH said.

Those on AZT alone also had a higher proportion of side effects, principally blood and chemical abnormalities.

Patients taking ddI or the ddI-AZT combination will continue in the trial. Patients who have been taking AZT alone may continue, if their condition shows it is appropriate, or they may be switched to other therapy, the NIH said.

AZT, or zidovudine, was the first antiviral approved for treating HIV and it remains the antiviral most commonly used by adult HIV patients.

The second drug, ddI, or didanosine, is also approved for treating HIV, but it generally is chosen only after patients fail to respond or develop serious side effects while taking AZT.

Seniors to vote on annual class gift

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

The holiday season may be over, but the gift–giving continues on — at least for the class of 1995.

The University of Massachusetts Senior Committee will be seeking votes from the class of 1995 this February to decide what they will give to the University as the annual class gift.

For the first time, there will be a table in the Campus Center concourse from Feb. 21 to Feb. 24, collecting votes from seniors on the six choices for the class gift, said Deborah McGill, assistant manager at the Telefund office. Each year the senior class gives the University a gift of some sort.

According to McGill, the choices were narrowed down from 15 after a meeting last Thursday.

"I sent letter's to [resident assistants] to get the word out about the senior campaign," McGill said.

The first of the six choices the seniors will be eligible to vote on is a gift to the Study Abroad Program. The gift would result in a scholarship fund for one or two UMass undergraduate students to study abroad.

Alumni from the class of 1995 could be members of the committee to choose who be awarded the scholarship.

The second choice is a student administrative information kiosk in which students could view and print all of their personal information like student billing and financial aid.

An information kiosk in the CASIAC offices is the third choice. This would be set up to elevate the amount of student traffic that develops in the office.

It would do this by allowing students to access such information as class schedules and grade point averages more simply, or view an interactive self–help video.

A gift for the newly–named W.E.B. Du Bois Library is another choice that would supply it with new books and other information material.

The "Isle of View" project, which is the environmental sculpture at the south end of the campus pond, is also a possibility.

The renovation would include the island path, retaining wall, stone bridge, railing, decking and the surrounding area. A plaque on the island would acknowledge the senior class as a major contributor to the renovations.

The last choice is for last year's recipient the Mather Career Center. The Center would combine last years gift with this year, if they are chosen, and implement a CD- ROM career search system.

Graduate students, alumni and undergraduates could quickly locate jobs under the subject they chose. The program would also allow the user to send out personalized cover letters.

No matter what the seniors choose as their gift, a tree will be planted on campus.

McGill, who graduated from the University in 1993, said the biggest concern of hers is getting students informed.

"We have to get the class involved," said McGill. "I have had people say 'I didn't even know seniors gave a gift.'"

By sending more letters to the seniors and putting the voting table in a highly visible location like the concourse, McGill said she hopes to get a lot of participation from the class.

Alan Levesque, a legal studies sophomore and a brother of Pi Kappa Alpha, said they are trying to coordinate with the Senior Committee to get the Greek area involved as well.

"One of the problems is the University doesn't think the Greek community is good at giving back to the University," said Levesque. "Which is why we're doing this."

According to Levesque, members of his fraternity will be donating time to the committee, and trying to recruit other volunteers from around the Greek community.

Program enhances creative curriculum

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

Creativity is brewing in a Springfield elementary school, with help from the University of Massachusetts.

Approximately 25 UMass faculty and students are participating in a unique program which enhances creative curriculum for teachers and students at the Kensington Avenue Elementary School, according to Billbob Brown, co– director of UMass dancers.

John Jenkins, deputy director of the Fine Arts Center and professor of music and dance, has been working closely with Kensington Avenue Elementary School Principal Timothy Babcock since June of 1993 to create the "Arts Collaborative," Jenkins said.

"We make available different forms of art, and we teach the teachers how to use them," Jenkins said. "We hope the children will learn better by using them."

There are a lot of children who have difficulty learning in a classroom that encompasses traditional teaching methods, Brown said. There are many children who learn more easily through movement.

While studying geometry, students form shapes with their bodies, including right, obtuse and acute angles, Brown said.

"We're just using movement whenever possible to make the stuff interesting and fun," Brown said. "Because learning is about having fun."

Elaine H. Anderson, a developmental education consultant, suggested to Jenkins that he explore the opportunity to improve the learning environment at Kensington, she said.

Anderson evaluated nine Springfield schools, and noticed Kensington was unique, she said.

Seventy–three percent of Kensington's children are impoverished, qualifying them for the Federal Free Lunch Program, Jenkins said. The school's surrounding neighborhood is decrepit and drug–ridden.

Jenkins was invited to Kensington, and said he believed he was on his way to "a stereotypical inner–city school."

"Instead, I walked in and found an oasis of caring and cleanliness," Jenkins said. Administrators, teachers and parents were all working together to involve more parents in their children's education.

"They were looking for innovative and creative methods to challenge children and parents so that the children's educational experience would be enhanced," Anderson said.

Combined efforts of parents, the Fine Arts Center faculty, teachers and Kensington's principal are all responsible for the benefits the students already have, and will continue to reap, according to Anderson.

"Our initial finding ... indicate greater student attendance, a significant increase in parent involvement and students' higher test scores," Andersen said.

Jenkins is pleased with the results so far, and he sees many areas where the "Arts Collaborative" can continue having an impact.

Virginia court upholds law against blocking clinics

By Martha Slud
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — A federal appeals court upheld the law against blocking access to abortion clinics on Monday, rejecting arguments that the law infringes on free-speech rights.

The three-judge panel's unanimous ruling in two cases, brought by an anti-abortion group and a protester, is the first appellate decision on the act President Bill Clinton signed into law on May 26, 1994.

One challenge was filed by Joyce Woodall, an abortion protester who was arrested after kneeling in prayer at the door of a Falls Church clinic.

The second was filed by the American Life League, a Stafford anti-abortion group. The league's lawyer argued that protesters can say anything they want as long as they don't threaten or assault people or block entrances.

Judge M. Blane Michael, writing for the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said the law protects people seeking or providing abortions without infringing on anyone's First Amendment rights.

The act "strikes a balance among competing rights holders" while "those opposed to abortion or to any other reproductive health service retain the freedom to express their deeply-held moral or religious views in a peaceful, non-obstructive way," Michael wrote.

Ms. Woodall's lawyer, Wendell R. Bird, said he will ask the U.S. Supreme Court for a review.

"A protester can block a nuclear power facility entrance and that's not a federal crime. A protester can block the cutting of old trees in a forest and that's not a federal crime," he said. "But if a protester does the exact same action in front of an abortion clinic, they are on different grounds where the rules change and it is a crime."

But in its ruling, the appeals court said the protesters' agenda is irrelevant.

Moyers brings liberal perspective to 'NBC Nightly News' broadcast

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — When it happened that Bill Moyers, journalist and PBS documentarian, said he was coming to "NBC Nightly News" as a commentator and essayist, one of the first questions he faced contained the L-word.

As in "liberal."

Moyers, who starts work Tuesday, is a former CBS newsman better known these days for his documentaries about American culture, values and spirituality. But he was something of a liberal during his salad days.

A deputy director of the Peace Corps during the Kennedy administration, he was a political operative and press aide to President Johnson and the reporters covering his announcement weren't about to let him forget it.

"No one knows what my politics are, because when I left the White House in 1967, I resolved to do nothing else in a partisan way," he said, shortly after the news conference ended.

"They either are remembering the Goldwater campaign of 1964, or they remember my having told the truth about Iran-Contra, or the marriage of the religious right and the Republican Party — which any journalist worth his salt would have done at the time," Moyers said.

Nobody is more surprised than Moyers that the "liberal" label has become a curse-word in our national political discourse. "It's an old tactic of the extremists who label you so they don't have to debate with you," he said, adding, "These people have a hard time with anybody who is tolerant of diversity."

"The materials of my life are fairly ordinary, and the way I see the world is fairly ordinary, maybe too old-fashioned for the modern audience."

"I mean, I was raised in a small town. I did grow up in the Baptist church. I have been married to the same woman for 40 years. I've never tried any kind of drug. I may have one drink in the evening. I don't smoke.

"I may be too ordinary for this culture — and I'm serious about that," he said, and smiled. "It happens to people as they get older."

Moyers' last tenure in network news was not a happy one. It was the eve of an era when television networks were targets in corporate takeovers and TV news divisions were to become profit centers.

"I grew up with the sound of Edward R. Murrow in my ear, so when I went to CBS in 1981, I was going to the house of Murrow," he said. He arrived, he said, just as CBS was beginning to dismantle that house.

"This wasn't just a corporate conflict, this was a historic assault, and the profound transformation of an institution," Moyers said. "It happened. It was dismantled, they took it apart, and I left."

"I'm not concerned with who owns NBC, or who owns NBC News," he said. "I'm only concerned with one tiny province called 'The NBC Nightly News with Tom Brokaw.'"

It took a brush with mortality in 1993 to get Moyers to slow down and look at his life.

"After I came close to having a heart attack in the fall, I began to see that there are more grains in the bottom of the hourglass than the top," he said. "So each grain that now passes through is of its own minute value to me."

"One of the things you lose at 60 is dreams of future greatness. You just think about what's at hand: What can you do with the moment you have, the time you're allotted?"

Speaking of time allotted, is a two-minute segment on "Nightly" time enough?

"No," Moyers said flatly. "But what is long enough when it's all you've got? If I can't do something with it, I'll be the first to know and the first to say."

And are people still willing to listen?

"I just saw a study the other day that said four out of five people switch channels when they watch the TV news," he said. "It'll be very interesting as to whether or not they will stay with a human voice."

Moyers believes he'll be able to escape the trap of the icon, where a TV image becomes its own content.

"There won't be a Cronkite again. There won't be a Severeid again ... journalism has changed too much. The talk shows have seen to that. The explosion of opinion, cable, C-SPAN ... Of course, secondarily, journalism isn't held in that repute any more," he said, gesturing toward a television set. "And it remains to be seen if my mother will acknowledge that that's her son on there."

Kwong focuses on life's many lessons

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

MONKHOOD IN THREE EASY LESSONS
A Multimedia Performance By Dan Kwong
Bowker Auditorium
Feb. 11

Performance artist Dan Kwong's latest autobiographical work took a close look at not only his life story, but also his sense and search for "male identity." He performed his multimedia show, Monkhood In Three Easy Lessons, at Bowker Auditorium last Saturday night.

Percussionist Kevin Higa helped out with terrific musical accents from assorted gongs and drums while Kwong jumped around, at one point talking about his elementary boyhood "I played with FIRE! I played with myself!"

Later, with a film documenting horrific events of racially motivated violence toward a young Chinese–American man in the background, Vincent Chin, he did a little batting practice. When the story got cooked up and dramatic, he hit a mechanism pitching a ball straight up and into a screen between him and the audience. The rapidly batted balls reflected his angst after learning about Chin's death by being clubbed by two Detroit men in 1982. The film also shows an actor playing Chin recounting the details of the incident.

He did inject a little humor in the performance early on, as he placed himself behind a board of sorts while he operated a baby doll's arms with sticks. The segment showed him as if he were a baby being interviewed by a TV journalist just after his birth. He injected newborn mannerisms like crying and rubbing his face in between the questions. He began attacking sexism and racism from this early point and continued throughout the performance.

The most dramatic part had Kwong on a slow moving treadmill asking if he's "ethnic enough for [main stream American society]" and, "How am I doing? How's my form?" to the audience until at the end, he was sprinting, bellowing out his anxiety and search for identity in society, climaxing in a near panic until slowing down again.

The performance ended with a piece on his Chinese grandfather, who was a source of humor in Kwong's childhood and now is a source of admiration because of the hardships he endured throughout his life.

Monkhood In Three Easy Lessons gripped the audience with its multimedia barrage of images and acting held the attention of everybody straight through making it a performance worth viewing.

COURTESY NEW WORLD THEATER

Performance artist Dan Kwong in the multimedia presentation Monkhood In Three Easy Lessons.

Winter CLOTHING SALE
ZAWA
Amherst

Lincoln Real Estate
Apartment Rentals
25 N. Pleasant St.
253-7879

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR 78 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Rd., Northampton, MA 586-4444
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly Weekend Rates
• We Rent to All Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Companies

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS They Work!

!! Walking Distance !!
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive., Amherst • 253-3539
!! Save Time, Save Money!!

MITRE
MITRE people share responsibility for delivering high-quality, cost-effective, technically-advanced solutions for our nation's evolving information systems needs. We are currently looking for students with specialization in Computer Science or Electrical/Computer Engineering.
Full-time positions exist for BS/MS graduates, as well as co-op opportunities for juniors and seniors in the following areas: Imagery Systems, Human Computer Interaction, Information Systems Security, and Graphics-Based Mission Planning Tools.
If you have experience or knowledge in any of the following areas, we invite you to stop by MITRE's booth at the Career Fair on February 15th or the Co-op Fair on February 16th:
• Application development in C, C++, Ada or Lisp
• Object-Oriented analysis and design
• UNIX system internals
• GUI development in X-windows environment
• Open systems networking technologies and network programming in a TCP/IP environment
• Computer and communications security issues
IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO VISIT US AT THE CAREER FAIRS, MAIL A RESUME AND TRANSCRIPT TO:
THE MITRE CORPORATION ATTN: LISA TREARCHIS, HUMAN RESOURCES, 202 BURLINGTON ROAD, MS/UMA, BEDFORD, MA 01730-1420 SEND RESUME VIA E-MAIL TO: ITREARCH@MITRE.ORG
MITRE IS PROUD TO BE AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY AFFIRMATIVE ACTION EMPLOYER AND IS COMMITTED TO DIVERSITY IN OUR WORKFORCE. U.S. CITIZENSHIP REQUIRED
WHERE MINDS MEET TECHNOLOGY.

Study next year in Paris!
étudier!
UMass Boston's high-quality, low-cost Paris program offers
• opportunities to study at a range of institutions
• 30 or more college credits
• numerous cultural activities
• personal attention from experienced and caring faculty directors
• companionship with a small group of serious, sociable students
• varied lodging choices
• and affordability.
Apply now! Majors from most departments are eligible (you'll need intermediate proficiency in French). To learn more, come to an information session Thursday, February 16th, 1-1:45 in Harbor Hall, Rm 301. Application interviews will be held from 1:45-3:30. You can also pick up brochures and application forms at the Clark International Center Study Abroad Office. Financial aid may be available (check with Financial Aid Services).
For interview appointment call: Prof. Jerry Volpe (617) 287-7360 Monique Stern (617) 287-7588
Space purchased at no cost to the Commonwealth
UMass Boston

What's cheaper than a card?
Healthier than candy?
Comes in lots of colors?
Can be funny, cute or sexy?
CONDOMGRAMS!
Send one to that special someone
Campus Center
10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Th 2/9
Mo 2/13
Tu 2/14
Sponsored by your Peer Health Educators
Health Education Division
University Health Services

$5 off any Lift Ticket with this ad and your 5-college I.D.
Free Bus!
SKIER FRIENDLY!
Wed. 2/15 Wed. 2/22 Wed. 3/1
Leaves Boyden 10:30 a.m. & 5:30 p.m.
Leaves Mt. TOM 4:30 p.m. & 10:00 p.m.
Only a 25 minute ride from U. Mass!
This offer not good in conjuction with any other promotion.
Mt. TOM
Rt. 5 Holyoke MA • 413-536-0516

家鄉園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
Mandarin / Szechuan Cuisine
We Deliver in Amherst 5-9:30 Everyday
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 pm • Sunday Brunch 11am - 3pm
NEW ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children Under 10 $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30 - 3pm $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 chicken fingers, 2 chicken wings or hot & sour soup.
Take Out Service - Full Cocktail Menu
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

ARE YOU TIRED
of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

SUMMER
Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Ireland
Ireland Today
In Mexico
Spanish Language and Culture
Along the New England Coastline
Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island
Playwriting and Performance
On Nantucket Island
Marine Biology
For Information about these programs and over four hundred courses available this summer, contact:
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
UMass Boston

Be Worldly!
Write for Developing Nations!
Contact Juan Jose Chacon Quiros
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

REQUESTS FOR PUBLIC INFORMATION INTERVIEW

The University Health Services will be surveyed by their accrediting body, the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO) on February 27th - 28th and March 1st, 1995. The JCAHO standards deal with the safety of the environment in which care is provided. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the field representatives. Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and should be sent to the JCAHO no later than five working days before the survey begins. The request must also indicate the nature of the information to be provided at the interview. The request should be addressed to:

Survey Operations and Support Department
Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations
One Renaissance Boulevard
Oakbrook Terrace, IL 60181

The JCAHO will acknowledge such requests in writing by telephone and will inform the organization of the request for any interview. The organization will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time, and place of the meeting.

LONELY PARTS CLUB ❤ BECK/ARNLEY WOLDARTS

Finding a Part-ner is easy at...

PELHAM AUTO PARTS
RT 9 AMHERST
BELCHERTOWN LINE
256-0457

Saucy Suzuki Samari – new to area – seeking non smoking muffler assembly to mate with existing pipes. Long term commitment desired...must be willing to pass inspection several times. 726-vhm

TIRED, but willing to go another 150K! Red GTI is overbored and waiting for that special piston. Give me a ring! 838-TSY

Don't be fuel-ish! Newer (low 30s) style Camry seeks to climb hills with frsh electric pump. Please – no "universal" types! 598-ABJ

Petite, Low mileage Sprint – seeks discrete filter changes at regular intervals. Light viscoeity only. 242-PTG

Too Hot to BELIEVE! Middle aged Honda hits 280° day or night! Seeking a thermally responsive individual about 160° to control my steamy personality. 145-SCH

TIRED of rock and roll? Join me for a Dutch treat shock and struts – (Maybe eventually 4 wheel alignment together?) 518-SJJ

GREAT EXPERIENCE

GREAT PAY

ADVERTISING REPRESENTITIVES

...eeded
...ain
...mediately

The Collegian Advertising Staff is now looking for ambitious self starters who aren't afraid to "beat the pavement"

Applications are available at:
THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center

Deadline: March 10, 1995

GREAT JOB!

Jennifer Ann Rochette

Happy Valentine's Day!

I Love You!

Love, Pete

P.S. 555-4539

Happy Valentine's Day

From the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

HEART STOPPERS

Cupid's Choice

Alexandra,
Happy Valentine's Day! I love you! Andy

Alyssa,
You are the best thing that has happened to me. I love you! Love always, Bill

AM
I hope you can get soma sleep tonight! Better watch out- Cupid's heading your way. MK

Amanda
The last three months have been great! I love you! Happy Valentine's Day! Love Barry

Amy B.
The most beautiful girl in the world. Prince right. Happy Valentine. DA Genious

Andra Tam,
Have a great Valentine's Day! A secret admirer CXOXO

Andrew B.,
Somehow I know deep in my heart, you needed me because I needed you so desperately... Your secret admirer

Art Stapleton Jr.:
Hey, everyone gets a V-Day persona from me. Don't think I was gonna forget you. Even though you're turning into a graphics freak, the newsroom still loves you. Actually, we're really fond of graphics freak. Wa keep turning into them. You have more fun now that we do. Happy Valentine's Day and be good.

Arc
Hey Richie, it's a strange without Fonzie and with you out in Sundarland. But we've only got three months and many beers to drink. So let's live it up. Marino & Mono

Baby,
4 yrs. and two months ago on this very day wa calabrated our first Valentine. We have shared great memories and hope to make many more. I love you with all my heart and soul. Please be my valentine for another 4 yrs. Sowpie

Beck 8 and Long Nell,
I love you all! I Get raady for Jamaica LT

Bailey,
You bring out the animal in me. Baltimore-girl no matter what Mommy says you will still be mine no matter if you're good or bad. Your canine friend, Ruff-Ruff

Barchi,
Shoot for the stars, including mine I guess sixth grade love never dies. In your eyes. Hope you find a valentine about 25 of them. Bucket

Baccas,
Happy Valentine's Day! I could not imagine living without the unique slant you both put on my life. I love you both uniquely and immeasurably! Love Elephant Boy

Berger,
Happy Valentine's Day!

Beth,
I know it's been hard lately, but we have made it this far, and have forever to go. Happy V-Day. Beautiful. I love you! Fuji

Bethanny,
"Love is stronger than distance." Love, Cornell

Bio
15 mos. still not out of gas. You made my heart sing. Thanx for miracle M.

Bob!
1 1/2 yrs and always improving! Please never forget how much you mean to me! Happy V-Day!!! Love always, Laura

Brad!
This year it's really me. I couldn't resist this opportunity to tell you how much I love you. Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Amy

Cake,
Happy one anniversary. Thank you for all the great memories. I hope that we can share many more together. You're my best friend and a great listener. We've both been through a lot and we've made it this far. I hope that all our future plans work out the way we want them to. Love always, Your boyfriend Greg

Carly
I am very happy that you are a part of my life. Thank you for being there for me. I hope that you will be my valentine for more years to come. Love always, Greg

Christina,
Congrats on your bid from Kappa! I told you not to worry. Happy Valentine's Day! See you tonight! Love ya, Craig

Christine,
Hope you have a great Valentine's Day. Love you lots! Forever and always, Brian

Collegian Ad Reps:
No meeting tonight. Have a great Valentine's Day
Love Lisa

Craig,
Just wanted to tell you all the way in Birtland that I love you. Love, Tracy

Dean,
2 1/2 months seems like 2 1/2 years! I hope you're as happy as I am. Love always, Jake

Dannybear,
Thank you for making time for us tonight. I will definately make it worth your while! See you at the game! Love, Jeannie

Dar,
Happy Very Happy Valentine's Day my little friend. You are so cute and smart. I find this especially true after a few beers

Darionna J. Healey,
I know you and Bryce are meant to be together; it's only a matter of time and money. Stay away from cigarettes, pavement and beer. Keep smiling.

Dave, Erica, Sarah, Aaron and of course kitty,
Happy Valentine's Day. You guys are pretty cute

Dyswright Donna
I know the ball team is #5 but you's one of those #1 type funky gal keep bouncing. John Dangerous is on the way

Dear Kathy,
Thanks for all you have done to me. I will be thinking of you. Sincerely, Kevin

Dear Myra,
I hope you have a happy Valentine's Day. I love you very much. Love, Mika P

Dear Soshy,
I love you! Love, Your little gumba

Desmond-
Know what I love you for? Ever & ever! You're the best! MFED! Love, Tami

Doyle
Where are you? You never came back to do that late story and the Collegian misses ya buddy. Who knows why Kelly stays with you, but keep up whatever you are doing? Thanks for the pep talks outside of the KEG house. Stapes.

Carly,
I hope you still "nose" that after four long years I still love you. Love, Sharon

Chris –
If you do decide to turn gay this semester, you know where to call me. I'll even dress up as a woman if you like. Your future lover – Rufus

Chrissy,
You're my best friend. Thanks for giving me a second chance. I love you! Love, Muffin

Da dog from SJA
Happy Valentine's Day!!! U's a cutie. Your admirer from aright!!

Dan F. at WMUA
Happy Valentine's Day from your fan at the Collegian

Dear Tim,
Will you be my valentine? Love Alison

Emily A. Merino,
We have three month left of beers, cheers and jeers. Let's make it well worth our time and effort. We don't need Thursday night in Charlie's, I'll take Wednesday afternoons in the Bluewall and a large Rainforest Crunch anytime. Stapes

Everytime
I look at you I remember the first night at Triangle St. and how bad you wanted me! Always, Cake

Feliz Dia de Sns Valacnte.
Para Meches, Sonia, Alda, Diego, Mito, Yrisen, Evelyn y Ricard. Da Norris. Los quero mucho a todas

Fig
Will you be my Valentine?
P.S. Will someone tell him he got a personal, because he doesn't read the Collegian see ya thursday!

Fillies! Looking forward to see beautiful smile tonight. Love Zeus

Frederic Carrie,
Ta quiere con todo mi corezon!
Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Deborah Faulkner

Fudgy,
Going out with you is the best thing that ever happened to me. I love you more than anything in this world. Happy First Valentine's Day. Love Buster

Geoff-
Will you be my valentine forever? I love you cutie! Tammy

Ginny I love you. Boss

Gleason, I love your strip. In fact I just bought a new magnifying glass to read it. Keep the snow footage coming.

Glenn,
Our fantasy will be reality!! Happy Valentine's Day. Love, Kelly

Gummy,
Will you be my Valentine? Huh!!

Guy R.B.
Mon amour through the ups and downs you have been my sunshine. You will always have a special place in my heart. Happy Valentine's Day. Your Baby

Happy Valentine's Day Timmy!
Message fees? I love you always & forever. Love, Tracey

Happy Valentine's Day Trixie!
You are the best thing to happen to me in college. I am so very glad I met you. I hope you enjoyed the flowers and remember, they are only the prelude of thing to come. Love, Mike

Helen my dear.
You are so beautiful when you are singing to Grease. Take off with me to Venice. We must travel the globe together, you telling me funny little anecdotes, and me chuckling and pouring you more wine. All my love, Shasa

Hey little guy with the big hair,
Happy Valentine's Day! Love LT

Hey Malito
I'd still like to get together with you. Why don't you come by tomorrow? We can spill litter on the floor, chase bottle caps and d I really like you we can play in the bathtub. I have some new toys I'd love to share with you. Time's running out, bad boy- that big trip to the vet is coming up soon. Purr, Purr. Love, Meeka

I'm the tall blonde from the Whitmore snack bar. I keep trying to guess who you are, but you must be really shy. I hang out there all the time, hoping you'll come over and say hi. You haven't showed up yet, so I guess I'm left playing your game. You can respond here, but I hope you'll prove you're a real man and buy me a pretzel

I just can't wait to be comfy. Happy Valentine's Matt. Tonight we have a deal. Love Deb

I NEED A DATE.
I'm really not as pathetic as I seem writing this personal. My friend's mom thinks I'm really cool, and I'm getting a new pair of shoes. Hope to hear from you, whoever you are. A.B

Jay Raymond,
I've been thinking – all you need is the love of a good woman. And lots of buffalo wings. But don't start worrying that I think I'm that woman. I'm just writing lots of personals to everyone I know to fill up space

Jeanne,
Happy Valentine's Day. I love you. Love, Cory

Jeff, Jim, Brian, Dan, Chris,
Munch munch munch munch munch munch. Love The Munchers

Jennifer Ann Rochette
I love you with all my heart! Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Peter J. service. P.S. 555-4539

Jennifer,
Happy Valentine's Day, you are the best girlfriend in the world. I'm glad we are together for this day. "Nothing's going to stop us." Love, Big Sav

Jess Riz,
Happy Valentine's. Hope you made the funk team. Da Dog. You know the number Jim D.

I know we've had rough times these past two years, but I want you to know that I love you with all my heart. Happy Valentine's Day. Love always, Theresa K

John,
Happy Valentine's Day! And thanks for always being there and being such a great friend! Love ye. Love, Joanne

Jolissaí Beaz,
Happy Valentine's Dey! The pithy man

Juan Carlos
Un anol Y mucho mas vendr en. Te emo siampre, Aimee

Julio,
Ta extrano mucho. Estoy pensando en ti. Te quero- Happy Valentine's Day! Lorenza

Justin,
To my favorite valentine, Happy Anniversary Sweetie! Thanks for making the past year wonderful and memorable. Love, Melissa

Kate,
You are a beautiful sex machine and I wish that my roommate had not found you before I did because then you would not have to >< matters in your own hands so oft in. To tell you the truth, you are the best blonde I know! Happy VDay!

Kelly Spang
Keep up the good work on ME. Next time we're out, the Bud's on me. Maybe someday the st ift you write might impress Kim as much as mine does. A. Stapleton Jr. Collegian columnist

Kris Chapman,
goddess of physics. Happy V-Day EAT

Lisa Tanzenbaum,
You didn't expect me to write yours with you looking over my shoulder, did you? Next time you have a Happy Hour, do two things for me. One, play some of your music in the Back 8 Two, drink. Remember that finding a good woman is as easy as nailing Jell-O to a tree, too. Heppy Velentine's Day

Art

Lisa,
First and foremost, I love you! Things that you say to me, looks you pass my way, thoughts you tell me, and dreams you have all portray your love for me. I just want you to know that you just being on Earth, avan if I never got a chenca to meet you, is the most wonderful gift God gave to this world. Love always, Stephen

Lorac,
As you wish. Sally

Lydia,
I knew you would be looking for this. Happy Valentine's Day! Love Rich

Mark/Primus:
I love you by any name! You'll always be my valentine! I love you! The Wolfe

"Mary"
Feeling frisky. Happy V-Day! Love "Gene"

Matthew B. Pane,
I am doing this because I care. Happy Valentine's. I love you lots. Karb-Koew

Meeks,
you're a pain in the ass but we love you. Dirty pawprints in the bathtub, on the keg in the bathtub, on the sink, in our rooms... Stay out of the garbage and we'll rethink that long trip to the vets. All our love, Tracy and Darienne

Mel Boy, Happy Valentine's. I hope that it's fun for you and your buddy Pooped deck Pappy

Meredith K.,
As long as we know each other our love will never falter. See you soon. Love, Keith (Your squirrly)

Michael J. McRae:
I never told you, but I love you eternally too. Glad to know you feel the same way. Now that we've broken the ice, let's combine our talents and fake over a campus political coup or two. I'll buy you a gallon of cheap vodka. Love your favorite ooss

Michael:
I've set the date for our impending nuptials. I'm so very glad to know I've been an "integral part of your collegiate career." That just warms me down to my little tiny toes. XOXO your favorite blonde

Michele K. Bakis!
All of you Valentine's Day celebrants reading this, take a moment to thank Ms. Bakis for typing all of this in. She's really sweet and one of my favorite people. I'm kind of her boss. I hope she has a nice Valentine's Day and plays lots of pinball. If you see her brand head by StreetFighter II, give her a hug. She deserves one.

Michelle,
Let yourself go. Enjoy it and smile. Love David

Mika (Pugsly)-
Hope you have a happy birthday. We have to talk! Love, Kim

"Mellie D."
Happy Valentine's Day. We're holding your green sweatpants hostage. Stay tuned for details

Mommy,
We love licking and biting your face. Daddy really does love you! Happy Valentine's Day! Elmo & Kitty

Monahee,
I know you won't be my valentine, but maybe we can get together on Friday and celebrate my 22nd just like we did last year. P.S. Can I have your plane ticket to Valpo? Stapes

Mache amor para mi princesa
Mindy en San Valentin. Robert

My Sweet Rebecca,
Happy Valentine's Day. And you thought I would forget! Diego

Ned and Caska,
Hera is to Goldschlager! Thanx for all the smiles and all the hot butt naked sex!! Love Goldy and Goldy

Nidia,
Te guste el periodico? Happy Valentine's Day. Te extrano mucho. Nos vemos
Lisa

Nikki,
You should have a great Valentine's Day. In case you get bored, you could finish making that tape for me.

DOE TO HELEN (a valentine tribute)

O Helen, O Helen
You sing the Grease soundtrack like no other.
To your bird you are a great mother.
I can see that you will be like Sandra Dee
Your bird may flee

Love, Shane

Omodahl,
You are so smart and look like a piece of art. Love Curtney

Oui Oui!
Happy V-Day! Lots of love to my very favorite person. Love and choc kisses, Pookie

Paul Bilodeau:
We're really glad you came out of your shell and stopped being such a stiff. Fire in the Hole. By the way, there are beers in your future. Trace & Darienne

Pete,
Happy Valentine's Day you big manly man! Love & kisses Jen

Peter,
Roses are red, violets are blue, your socket is making my arm black and blue. Happy Valentine's Day. Jodi

Peter Sarvais. I Love You. Jennifer

Peter Sarvais. We love you too! Kitty and Elmo

Piglet, Happy Valentine's Day. Love, Muggy Bear

Priscilla, Kara, Lisa, Kristia,
Happy Valentine's Day! 32 days left. Call here we come! Love, Kelly

Rabi,
Here's your personal.
Where's my carnation?

Lisa

Rahnee,
Happy Valentine's Day

Richie,
Whenever I see your smiling face I have to smile myself because I love you! Thank you for the most wonderful year-and a half of my life. I look forward to many more. Happy Valentine's Day! Love always Lydia!

Ryl,
Happy Valentine's Day!

Ryan D'Neal.
I didn't know what to give you for our second Valentine's Day either. I hope love will suffice. Your chicken. We'll make our own "Love Story" Thursday night!

SNS Class of 91
When are we going out for a reunion? Let's get together soon! Happy Valentine's Day, Meredith

S.N
Heppy V-Day Cutie! You're my favorite warm + fuzzy. Spend today with your kind and friendly boyfriend. N F

Someday, someone will send me roses. I wish that day could be today.

Squeaker. You know you'll always be my private dancer- and I'll be your fiancee. Love always, Charlie

Stallion,
Nica package! Please be mine!!!
Christine

Stephen,
You are my sunshine. Love you for ever. Maureen

Stephen,
Whenever I see your smiling face, I have to smile myself because I love you! Happy Valentine's Day Boo. I love you with all my heart! Love always, Lisa

Sunlea,
I hope you have a loving day. Don't go having a better day than I do, though, for it will be a solo project for me. Stay warm and take care. Love, Andrew

Sunshine,
Happy Valentine's Day. I love you and I always will. D

Sxseo,
You will always be the one true love in my life. Happy Valentine's Day! I love you! Dean

Suzy Q,
Happy Valentine's Day!

Sweaty,
I can't begin to explain how much I love you. You're my baby tonight after I tell you Happy Valentine's Day. I'm gonna rule your world.

Tara,
Thanks for being a wonderful girlfriend and a so-so associate. Just kidding. Love Matt

Teresa Bakar. Tha best sister a brother could have. Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Mika

The Mudslide Queen,
You can have the cake because I'm the girl with the most... well you know. The Temptress

Tiffany,
Happy Valentine's Day. This past year and a half has been the best of my life. I love you more than words can say. Love, Billy

Tim:
Just wanted you to know that cast is the sawiest thing. I never got the real story on how you did that. Have a happy day and be good... Love, Darienne

To hate Valentine's Day to ignore the crocus. Live, love, and laugh to Monica from the Papes

To Amanda,
Heppy Valentine's Day. From the ones that love you the most... From Emme & Mann. XOXOXO

To Emmie,
Happy V-Day! I hope you get all the candy and peppermint schnapps you can handle. Love, Mann. XOXOXO

To Liliana
Your eyes are my vision, a view of sweet flowers, your mouth is my breath, in you lips, lost for hours, your heart is so caring, so tender, so fine, a great Valentine's Day, because I know that you're mine. Love Sonny

To my dear friend,
Fire and ice tend not to get along when too close together. Though I realize that we must remain separate at heart, I will always wish things could be different.
Love always, Mark

To my pumkin-honey bunny
Happy Valentine's Day. I love you. Love Indy

To Randy,
(the awesome bro TA) when does that whipped cream expire? Happy Valentine's Day! Your cute little admirer

To the boy
Cakes loves you! Happy Valentine's Day!

To the sweetheart that you are and a best friend in every way. Here's a poem I wrote for you on Valentine's Day. Roses can be red, and other colors too, there's so much of so many things but only one of you! Love, Neeeee

Tracy Monahan:
I had a great time with you at that Shumway party Friday night. I almost love you as much as I love Meeks. But we might lose her to that Malito critter, and then I'll love you best. I promise. Key West, two bikinis, and two toothbrushes. Play some Liz Phair today.

Victoria My Love
Can you believe this is our third Valentine's Day together? Each new day with you is better than the last. Love always, H.B.

Vivoeo
Buono Valentino di Paolo

Wa met tha other night at a party.
You are the girl with the guy's name. Will you be my valentine? Look for me in the CC basement in the morning.

Wendy,
You rule! This has been the best V.D. ever, thanks to you! Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Mika

YOU ARE MY SUNSHINE.
I know about the other woman and I don't care! I love you. From tha Huckleberry Fairie.

famfood•swifts

THE PUB

Valentines Day Dinner Specials

NEW YORK SIRLOIN
Black Angus quality, broiled
12.75

PRIME RIB OF BEEF
Slowly roasted and served with au jus
14.95

PRIME RIB COMBO
Prime rib and baked stuffed shrimp
15.95

BAKED STUFFED SHRIMP
Four jumbo shrimp with a seafood stuffing
12.95

GRILLED ATLANTIC SALMON
Served with a dill and caper Beurre Blanc sauce.
12.95

BLACKENED SWORDFISH
A fresh cut of swordfish, seared and blackened with cajun spices.
12.95

FILLET MIGNON
Center of filet broiled and served with bernaise sauce
14.95

CHICKEN MARSALA
Lightly sauteed chicken breast with mushrooms, shallots and marsala wine.
9.95

PASTA CARBONARA
Linguine with diced bacon, petite peas, cracked black pepper and Parmesan cream sauce.
8.95

All dinners served with tossed salad, choice of dressing, french bread and butter, and choivce of french fries, baked potato or rice pilaf.

EVERYBODY LOVES KAPLAN

LSAT
GRE
GMAT
MCAT
KAPLAN RULES

Expert Teachers
Permenant Centers
Total Training

Call Now:

549-5780

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

WORK FOR YOU!!

THEY'RE CHEAP AND THEY GET THE JOB DONE
CONVENIENTLY LOCATED AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER (IN THE BASEMENT)

AND ON THE CONCOURSE TUESDAY & THURSDAY

FREE MOZZARELLA STICKS OR 10 BUFFALO WINGS
When You Buy A LARGE or PARTY SIZE PIZZA at the regular price (2 toppings or more)
586-8255 KRETE Free Delivery
Coupon expires 5/31/95. Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per person. Cannot be combined with other offers.

LARGE 18" PIZZA AND 3 CANS OF SODA
WITH ONE TOPPING ONLY $8.49 +TAX
586-8255 KRETE Free Delivery
Coupon expires 5/31/95. Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per person. Cannot be combined with other offers.

FAST, FREE DELIVERY
586-8255
KRETE
GREEK • ITALIAN • AMERICAN CUISINE
PIZZA • HEROS • PASTA • GYROS
331 Russell St. • Rte. 9 • Hadley, MA

$1.00 OFF ANY CALZONE
$1.50 OFF ANY MEDIUM PIZZA
$2.00 OFF ANY LARGE OR PARTY SIZE PIZZA
(MENTION THIS AD WHEN YOU CALL)

MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA $4.50

MEDIUM 14" PIZZA W/ONE TOPPING & 2 CANS OF SODA ONLY $6.99 +TAX
586-8255 KRETE Free Delivery
Coupon expires 5/31/95. Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per person. Cannot be combined with other offers.

TWO LARGE 18" ONE TOPPING PIZZAS FOR $13.95

TWO LARGE 18" PIZZAS W/TWO TOPPINGS $15.95
586-8255 KRETE Free Delivery
Coupon expires 5/31/95. Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per person. Cannot be combined with other offers.

Photographers needed
No prior experience necessary; must have your own camera.
Come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement and talk with Paul Bilodeau.

FEBRUARY SPECIALS AT THE COFFEE SHOP

SUNNY RISERS 95¢ ALL DAY!
KIELBASA DOG 95¢ ALL DAY!

EVENING SPECIAL...
1/4 LB HAMBURGER, SMALL FRIES AND 12OZ COKE $2.95

AT THE BLUEWALL COFFEEHOUSE...
HOMEMADE MUFFINS, COOKIES, GOURMET COFFEES, FROZEN YOGURT

AND TOP YOUR OWN SUNDAE
6PM - 9PM
EVBERY WEDNESDAY

Self–motivated student organizes forum exploring documentary about Malcolm X

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Rather than restricting himself solely to University-planned events, one student decided to plan his own Black History Month celebration. The forum was held last night in John Adams residence hall.

Chinedu Ogbuike, a junior psychology and English major, organized a Malcolm X forum centered around a PBS documentary on the controversial figure, who was assassinated on Feb. 21, 1965. The program aired earlier this month.

Hailed by critics, "Malcolm X: Make It Plain" features a companion volume authored by Afro-American Studies department professor William Strickland.

The son of Nigerian immigrants, Ogbuike draws parallels between his early days and those of Malcolm X, who attended the Roxbury high school in Ogbuike's hometown.

"I was a focused student who let my academics slip," Ogbuike said. "I got involved with the wrong people and almost got killed about 5 or 6 times."

It was thus that Ogbuike, a Boston University transfer, became inspired to make last night's presentation; however, Malcolm X was not the only factor.

"Just because February is the only official Black history month doesn't mean this should be the only month Blackness is celebrated," Ogbuike said. "Black is where it is, where it was, and where it will be."

Yet, he notes that in many instances, Black students tend only to turn out in numbers to react to community provocation, such as the recent D.C. protests, the results of a racist remark.

"We shouldn't need O.J. Simpson or a D.C. incident to get us to be active," Ogbuike said.

Despite efforts to promote his positive Monday evening program to the Black student body, Ogbuike drew only 10 students, but said he wasn't phased. Rather, he said he doesn't mind "low profile" status.

"When I finish school, I want to be a teacher or counselor," Ogbuike said. "Also, I plan to set up my own library to influence Black folks.

"I'm not looking to be a role model, but

New class focuses on dealing with issues of racism

By M. Isabel Teresa
Collegian Staff

Have you heard a racist comment in class, at work, on a date, or at a social or family gathering and been afraid or unsure of how to deal or respond to the situation? Are you upset with the assumption that you were in compliance with someone's racist beliefs?

"Let's Talk About Race" is a one–credit course offered this semester through the department of women's studies.

The course is designed by undergraduate student K. Kaolin to outline solutions to the everyday occurrences of racism and begin to articulate the boundaries between what is offensive and unacceptable behavior when the issue is race.

Kaolin is a women's studies major who proposed the course when she noticed students were confused about how to how to handle racism.

She said class discussions will focus on the dynamics involved in becoming conscious of racism, and the effect that consciousness will have on ourselves and others.

"Students will, through their own ambitious effort and steadfast investigation into their behaviors, learn how to speak up when offended by racial slurs," said Kaolin.

The teacher said she also hopes "students will develop a social conscience compatible with realistic goals which both reflect students' integrity and ability to incorporate positive action in their lives on a day–to–day basis."

Course readings include Memoir of a Race Traitor by Mab Segrest, The Future of White Men and Other Diversity Dilemmas by Joan Steinau Lester and We Can All Get Along by Clyde W. Ford.

Requirements for the course will include keeping a journal, a project or presentation, a field trip and an interview.

Kaolin said she would like to see "through giving and receiving support from each other we will plan a future which honorably reflects our ideals, strengths, compassion and intelligence."

Credit is only available for undergraduate students, but graduate students are welcome.

MENTAL HEALTH GROUPS SPRING 1995

Topic-Focused Groups being offered by the Mental Health Division of UHS this Spring are:

Self-Exploration Group
Tuesdays 3-4:30

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families Process Therapy Group
Tuesdays 3-4:30

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families in Spanish
Wednesdays 3:30-5

Exploring Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Identities
Thursays 3-4:30

Groups are open to students covered by the health plan and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. Groups begin in early March. Pre-group interviews are required. For information or to sign up for a pre-group interview call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North. We're open M-F 8-5

■ blood

continued from page 1

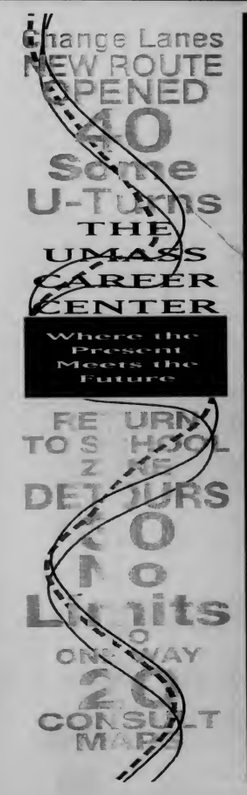
some rare blood types are frozen to preserve them. All blood is given out on an as–needed basis, Liquornik said.

The entire donating process, from signing all the paperwork to relaxing by the refreshment table, takes about an hour. The actual donating of the blood takes approximately 10 to 12 minutes, Liquornik said.

The Red Cross has a goal of 65 to 90 units of blood per day, said Natalie Drake, Red Cross volunteer for over four years.

The University Women's Association (UWA) is co-sponsoring the drive with the Red Cross, according to Swift. The UWA, comprised of faculty wives and University staff, has been co-sponsoring UMass blood drives for over 15 years, Swift said.

There is a list that potential donors look at that describes the elements that make–up an eligible and an ineligible donor, Drake said.



The University Career Center presents

THE ANNUAL CAMPUS-WIDE CAREER FAIR

Wednesday, February 15, 1995
10:00am - 3:00pm
Campus Center Auditorium and Lower Concourse

Full-Time Opportunities for Undergraduate and Graduate Students
All Majors

Report shows students satisfied

■ UM students happy with both academic and social aspects

By Lisa Greenfield
Collegian Staff

Most Five Collgge students said they are satisfied with their overall college experience in a report compiled by Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems (SARIS).

The 1994 Five College cycles report compares Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges and the University of Massachusetts on the basis of student satisfaction with administrative offices, personal and academic progress, use of the Five College Program, campus social problems and computer use.

Elizabeth Williams from SARIS said it is interesting to compare the five area colleges, "but obviously the other schools are small private institutions, while [UMass] is a large public institution."

UMass students were the only respondents rating both academics and social life highly. The other colleges reported being more satisfied with their academic experiences.

Ninety-two percent of UMass students reported being "satisfied" or "very satisfied" with their overall college experience. Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith ranged from 84 percent to 91 percent being "satisfied" or "very satisfied" with their schools.

Subjects rated academic satisfaction on how satisfied they were with their overall academic experience, academic advisors and accessibility of faculty members. The range was close; between 94 percent at Mt. Holyoke, 89 percent at Amherst and 88 percent at Smith, Hampshire and UMass.

Social life

Overwhelmingly, UMass students responded positively about their social life. Forty-two percent of UMass students said they were "very satisfied" and 52 percent said they were "satisfied." Total percentages of satisfaction at other colleges ranged from 57 percent at Smith to 78 percent at Amherst.

Mt. Holyoke rated highest in students reporting a feeling of community with 36 percent. Amherst was a close second with 32 percent, UMass with 25 percent, Smith with 23 percent and Hampshire with only 7 percent of students saying they felt a sense of community.

Administration

More than half of all five college students reported being satisfied with their school's financial aid office, ranging from 66 percent at Hampshire to 81 percent at Amherst.

Each school rated highly on student satisfaction with registrar's offices. Percentages ranged from 79 percent at Smith to 94 percent at Amherst.

Mt. Holyoke's library and health services were rated highest with satisfaction ratings of 94 percent and 76 percent respectively.

Only 3 percent of both UMass and Amherst respondents said they were "very satisfied" with food services. Overall satisfaction percentages were low, ranging from 40 percent at UMass to 59 percent at Smith.

Most Smith students, 96 percent, said they feel either "very satisfied" or "satisfied" with campus security. UMass was ranked second with 81 percent "satisfied" and 10 percent "very satisfied" with campus security.

Five College interchange

Most UMass students have not taken any courses through the Five College Program. Only 8 percent of UMass students have taken courses at another school, whereas 71 percent of Hampshire students report having taken a course at a college other than their own.

Most students said they use the Five College transportation system. Hampshire students reported using it most often, between once or twice a week to almost daily.

Social problems

More than half of UMass respondents said both sexual and racial harassment are campus problems. Slightly less than half said sexual orientation harassment was a problem and one–third said both religious affiliation harassment and lack of racial and ethnic diversity are problems.

Lack of racial and ethnic diversity is a problem at Hampshire College, with 62 percent responding that it is a problem to a "very great or great extent."

UMass had the highest percentage of students saying alcohol and drug use were campus problems. More than half of students at Amherst, Hampshire and Mt. Holyoke said alcohol was a problem, and slightly less than half said it was a problem at Smith.

Eating disorders were a problem according to 71 percent of students at Mt. Holyoke, 70 percent at Smith, 61 percent at Amherst and 50 percent at Hampshire. UMass was not asked.

At Amherst College 88 percent of students said they owned or rented computers. More than half of Hampshire and Smith students also said they own a computer.

Only 35 percent of UMass students and 46 percent of Mt. Holyoke said they owned or rented a computer.

Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges distributed their surveys to a random sample by mail, while UMass conducted a random telephone survey.

The numbers of students returning surveys from each school were 242 from Amherst, 161 from Hampshire, 222 from Mt. Holyoke and 446 from Smith. From UMass, 664 students responded to the survey.

Williams said the survey intends to chart trends in "general types of attitudes students have" and has remained very similar to the survey developed 20 years ago by the then Director of Institutional Research at Hampshire College.

The survey was initiated to look at the attitudes of Hampshire students and has developed into a joint effort to the Five Colleges.

UM professor to investigate epidemic

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Correspondent

An epidemic disease transmitted by mosquitoes is drawing a University of Massachusetts entomology professor to Thailand and Puerto Rico this month to investigate.

Professor John Edman will take part in a study being done on dengue hemorrhagic fever (DHF). According to Edman, DHF is a disease that causes severe flu–like symptoms.

"Dengue means 'break–bone,'" said Edman. "When you have dengue fever, you feel like your bones are broken because of severe muscle aches and pains, primarily in the main joints, like the shoulders and the knees."

Symptoms of the hemorrhagic type include severe muscle aches, fever, vomiting and frontal headache, according to Edman.

DHF is transmitted by the mosquito aedesaegypti, and has two billion people at risk in tropical urban areas, according to Edman.

"The goal of the study is to try to explain why the fever follows a seasonal pattern, and why it is more prevalent, more severe in some areas than others," Edman said.

DHF is a complication of the fever that can cause shock because of internal hemorrhaging and kidney and liver failure, according to Edman.

Edman explained that 30 percent of Asia's cases of dengue fever are "hemorrhagic."

Dengue fever has four different strains, which means one can get it four different times. The most commonly accepted explanation for what causes DHF is that if someone who had a strain of the virus already gets another strain, the hemorrhaging is triggered by an immune reaction.

Dengue case numbers vary recently from one–half to 3 million a year. Hospitalized cases of DHF have reached one– half million, with 95 percent of those in children under 15, according to Edman.

"In Puerto Rico and Thailand, there are certain epidemic seasons every year when you get lots and lots of cases," Edman said. "During the rest of the year, there are very few cases. If we understood, perhaps we could use that information in trying to control it."

The study was made possible by a three year, $769,737 grant from the National Institutes of Health.

Edman will travel to Thailand and San Juan, Puerto Rico as head of the University's part in the joint study. The University of Maryland, Mahidol University in Bangkok, Thailand and the Center for Disease Control Dengue Laboratory in San Juan, Puerto Rico will all participate in the study.

GWN assistant claims financial data skewed

By Lisa Greenfield
Collegian Staff

Last spring, women graduate students at the University of Massachusetts were surveyed by Project Pulse to examine women's experiences in graduate school.

Shyamala Ivatury, assistant director of the Graduate Women's Network (GWN), said the survey misrepresented graduate women's financial situations and satisfaction with academic departments.

The survey said only 19.9 percent of graduate women earned less than $5,000. However, Ivatury said the average stipend of a teaching assistant is $7,000, making the reported averages much higher than the actual figures.

Julia Mahoney said the financial status of graduate women was skewed because many women polled were in education and work full–time as teachers while attending school.

Ivatury said the statistic representing graduate women being satisfied with their financial situation is problematic among foreign graduate students and students with families.

She said many foreign students come to school with the understanding they will be fully funded, and after one year are "left on their own."

Students with children typically don't get enough "adequate support for childcare" and the T.A. stipend is not nearly enough to pay for it, Ivatury said.

Also problematic for Ivatury was the fact that the survey reported 82 percent of graduate women said their departments were "very sensitive" or "somewhat sensitive" to women's issues.

Ivatury said she has found "graduate women are not particularly supported by their department."

Mahoney said the sampling of the survey was not representative of all graduate women because the survey was conducted during a period when campus telephones were not functioning fully.

Elizabeth Williams from Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems said the survey was conducted to "provide a basic demographic information about graduate women at UMass."

Clinton prepares to face the music on nomination

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Striking back Monday in the row over President Bill Clinton's surgeon general nominee, Vice President Al Gore called Dr. Henry Foster Jr. the victim of an anti-abortion campaign to intimidate Congress. "We're not going to let the extremists win," he declared.

But critics of the Tennessee obstetrician showed no sign of easing up. House Speaker Newt Gingrich said in Georgia, "I think he's going to be very hard to confirm. I think it's going to be a very embarrassing set of hearings."

In Washington, White House press secretary Mike McCurry acknowledged, "We have our work cut out for us."

But McCurry also joined in the tougher rhetoric the White House has begun using. He said that extremists in the right-to-life movement "have now hooked Republicans and Congress by the nose and they're dragging them around."

Douglas Johnson, a spokesman for the National Right to Life Committee, said the administration was just trying to change the subject. "The White House now resorts to name calling in a desperate attempt to distract from the growing revelations regarding Dr. Foster's 30-year history as an abortionist and an abortion-drug innovator," he said.

Clinton left the strong talk to his officials, saying only that the controversy was not distracting him from other work and that he expected Foster to be confirmed if considered "by a fair-minded Senate."

Senate hearings are expected next month with a confirmation vote to follow.

Dispatching Gore to Tennessee was the latest in an aggressive set of White House moves to save the troubled nomination. While most nominees are held from public view until their confirmation hearings, Foster has defended himself in a medical school speech, a newspaper article and a national television interview.

On Monday, sitting elbow-to-elbow with Foster in a cramped low-income apartment, Gore stepped up the White House campaign to emphasize the doctor's efforts to reduce teen-age pregnancy among inner-city youths. The apartment houses Foster's "I Have a Future" program that teaches self-esteem and urges youths to abstain from sex.

Fewer unwanted pregnancies would mean fewer abortions, Gore said.

"Anybody who wants to see fewer abortions in this country ought to applaud the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster," said Gore, a former Tennessee senator. "He has devoted his life ... to making abortion less necessary."

The remarks were clearly aimed at anti-abortion groups rallying against the nomination — and the lawmakers who listen to them. The White House hopes to label any senator voting against Foster as an opponent of legalized abortions.

"There are people in this country who want to criminalize a woman's right to choose and they are now trying to make Dr. Foster a victim ... in order to make an ideological, political point and win on behalf of the extremists," Gore said.

"We are not going to let the extremists defeat this man," he said.

Foster had little to say, promising to defend himself at his confirmation hearing. "People have a right to speak," he said of his critics. "And I have a right to speak."

Asked for his position on abortion, Foster said, "Safe, legal and rare."

Winter SHOE SALE

Amherst

UMass Students: Spend Next Academic Year In France!!

Earn 30 credits in Humanities, Arts and Sciences!!

A Bargain: Comparable to A Year in Amherst!!

UMass Amherst Academic Year In France

1995-1996 Paris/Rouen Program

General Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 15
5:00 p.m.
301 Herter Hall

Study in a congenial atmosphere with a staff of French university professors carefully chosen for the students in our Program. Opportunities for additional courses in many fields!

Fall Orientation in a luxurious Parisian student center. Academic year in nearby Rouen, in the beautiful Seine river valley of Upper Normandy, at the University of Rouen (15,000 students). Excursions throughout the year (Loire Valley, Mon-Saint-Michael and Chartres; the Normandy beaches; etc.). Ample time for travel throughout Britain and the continent. Convenient to airlines and high-speed rail facilities (TGV). Enjoy the charm of a bustling, ultra-modern French city framed in the architectural splendor of an illustrious past. One of the great cultural centers of Western Europe will be your home for 8 months!

STUDENT COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Is there something you would like to say immediately before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker.

Eligibility:	Graduating UMass-Amherst Senior.
Format:	Submit not more than three word-processed or typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Subject Matter:	Text should concern higher education, and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Submit Proposal To:	Paul R. Appleby, ADA Compliance Officer, AA/EO Office, 305 Whitmore.
Selection Process:	A committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Authors' names will be deleted prior to the committee's review to ensure objectivity. Ratings will be assigned and selected authors will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the finalist will be selected.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 22, 1995, 4:30 p.m.
For additional information:	Paul R. Appleby, Chair, 305 Whitmore, 545-3464

Star pitchers fire back at Len Dykstra

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Roger Clemens and Greg Maddux took a break from golf Monday to throw some high, hard ones at Lenny Dykstra. The two three-time Cy Young award winners, both staunch union backers, expressed dismay with Dykstra for even suggesting players should alter their contract demands and go back to work.

"He's going to have to play with the team," Maddux said. "We all feel like we're on the same team and in this together. When someone has a different opinion, it's a little upsetting." Dykstra said last week he was considering playing despite the strike and wanted the union's negotiating committee to consider accepting a proposal offered by mediator W.J. Usery.

His comments, though, were dismissed by both Maddux and Clemens, who said they were misinformed and didn't reflect the thinking of almost all the other striking players.

"Lenny speaks up without really knowing the issues," Clemens said. "Lenny spent 20 minutes in a couple of meetings and then left. He should go to these meetings and spend the four to six hours that everyone else spends."

Still, Clemens said he didn't think the Philadelphia Phillies outfielder would actually cross the line and play without a settlement.

"Everybody knows Lenny is a little unusual," the Boston Red Sox pitcher said. "But I very much doubt he would cross the line."

On a week when pitchers would be reporting to camp to open spring training, Maddux and Clemens found themselves instead swatting golf balls at a charity tournament organized by PGA golfer Robert Gamez.

They were joined by the Houston Astros' newly acquired slugger Phil Plantier, who said union unity was not a problem despite a strike now stretching into its seventh month.

Plantier said Dykstra has the right to his opinion, but should study the issues before voicing it.

"There's only a problem when someone doesn't know the facts," he said. "I think when he hears the facts he'll change his mind." The long strike didn't seem to dash the enthusiasm of the handful of fans attending the tournament, who had their pictures taken with players and brought baseballs and trading cards to sign. One determined autograph hunter carried two bats around the course trying to get players and former players to sign them. "We just have to stick together and hope the fans will forgive us once it's all over," Maddux said. "I hope they do. It will take a lot of PR on the part of both the players and the owners when this ends."

■ swimming

continued from page 14

"I'm very confident," Newcomb said. "This time of year is very difficult. So many difficult and emotional changes and I'm very positive. This was a good meet for us, we're 2–1 against the Big East."

The Minutewomen finished up the regular season 7–4–1 and are looking forward to their upcoming tournaments starting with the New England Invitational at the University of Connecticut on Feb. 18. Also in store is the Atlantic 10 Championships at Piscataway, N.J., Feb 22–25, the ECAC Championships at Buffalo, N.Y., March 2–4 and ending with the NCAA Championships at Austin Texas, March 23–25.

■ hoops

continued from page 14

to bounce back (against GW)," junior forward Dana Dingle said.

With the absence of Camby, Roc has encountered double– teaming on defense, more so than usual. In fact,"the Colonials' zone defense triple–teamed the All–America forward. Despite the defenses specialized to contain him, Roc is not getting frustrated.

"I have great players around me. I'm confident that if I pass it out, they're going to knock down the shot," Roc said.

Speaking of Roc, a mid–season poll of 75 Division I college sports information directors tabbed him a close second behind Michigan State's Shawn Respert in consideration for the Ban/ Naismith Player of the Year award.

Roc received 39 points to Respert's 40, and ahead of Arizona's Damon Stoudamire (33), Arkansas' Corliss Williamson (32), UCLA's Ed O'Bannon (28) and Maryland's Joe Smith (20). The announcement of the winner will be made on March 26 on CBS.

* * *

The Atlantic 10 yesterday informed Massachusetts and Rutgers that the resumption of the suspended Feb. 7 game will not be played at the Palestra in Philadelphia. The new site has not been determined.

The resumption of the game will not be at the Palestra because of "extensive preparations in the facility for the upcoming A–10 Conference men's basketball championship, according to commissioner Linda Bruno. "All of these reconfigurations and adjustments require the continuous and open access to workers from outside entities."

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Self defense and fighting class. Easy to learn and effective classes starting now. All levels. Call Matt 256-1598

AIRLINE TICKETS

Think Spring Break! 2 airline tickets $250 hard value, will sell $225 each. Call 665-8963

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools - right here in Amherst! Free info session, Mon. Feb. 27th, Lord Jeffrey Inn, at 7pm, or call 1-800 U CAN MIX

PVOC Oil Coop Save money and stay warm. Join the oil coop. CSHRO, 428 Student Union or call 545-0865.

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice S.W. 107,300 miles automatic transmission. Reliable car and engine. Asking $900 or best offer. Please contact Fausto @ (413) 549-4808

Toyota Supra Turbo. 1986, 2 door, 5 speed, black, 101,000 miles. Just serviced. New tires. Good condition. $4995 or best offer. Call David 665-3704

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available: waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, ropes course, athletics, arts and crafts. For applications call: 800-424-2755

ENTERTAINMENT

Amherst area band Thermus is ready to play parties and functions. Call 546-8738

FOR RENT

1 room for rent in a 2 br apt. Located in E. Amherst, on bus route. 7/1- 253-4722. Female preferred.

Cape Cod Group summer rentals waterfront houses. Falmouth area. 508 477-5000

Female wanted to sublease 1 br in large 2 br apt. Cat welcomed. On bus route. 275+. Non-smoker. Starting for summer as optional. 253-3475

Sunderland, 4 bedroom apartment, pool, laundry, bus route, available March. $850 + 865-7311

FOR SALE

286 & 386 computer systems. Monitor, keyboard, cpu. Starting at $199. Steve (413) 549-5181

Aerobic ticket Bradley to Los Angeles a bargain at $100. Call Elaine 413-625-8083

AMP Brand just-chrome. $250. With pedal $50. Marvelon $100. Couch $50 253-2689

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $599. Call Chris at 800 289 5685.

Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 295-5496 after 2 p.m.

Revo sunglasses absolute lowest prices. Shades, H20, Classic Traveler. Call 1-800 980-VADER

Save $63. U.S. Air anywhere by March 28 $173 value for $110. For more 549-4015

Smith Corona 3000 word processor. $200. Call Chris 253-4913

FOUND

Found 2/7 wristwatch on Mount Ida bus. Call with description. Marie 5-2795.

HELP WANTED

Alaska summer employment. Fishing industry. Earn up to $3,000 $6,000+ per month. Room and board! Transportation! Male/female. No experience necessary! 206 545-4155 ext. A5007

Camp Tecumo. Prestigious Coed Massachusetts camp hiring motivated, team minded undergrads and grads who love working with kids. General counselors and instructors in: swimming, watersports, tennis, ropes/camping, arts/crafts, silver jewelry, photography, video, newspaper, musical theatre, dance, science/ mastery. Competitive salaries. Rewarding, enjoyable work! 800 767-2820

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp 3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront + arts. Call 1-800 973 3666. On campus interviews available

Counselors from NYC- general, sports, waterfront, + arts. Call 1-800 973 3666. On campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $2000 a month. World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1 206 634 0468 ext. C10014

Expanding environmental company needs ambitious self-starters immediately. Great opportunity. 413 534 5533

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod. Call Holly at 349 0382.

Live and work on Nantucket for the summer. Call Laurie 549-1303

New England's largest college daily is now accepting applications for an award winning advertising department. As an account representative you will gain valuable real-world experience. Freshmen & Sophomores; SOM Comm. HRTA. Call 545-3500 or come down to the Campus Center basement to pick up an application.

Wanted: Models for spring semester '95; figure drawing class. TR 2-4:30pm. For appointment call Ted Forras M-R 10-11, Holyoke Community College. Art Dept. Tel 538 7000 ext 492

INSTRUCTION

Guitar lessons. Enjoy the semester and earn credit! 25 years experience. Beginning/advanced. Peter 256 4641

MIDTERM EXAM

LG (love too) G. What is love? (1100 points) A Lust (ook you & me.) NK

PERSONALS

M. Gomes. Thank you for disproving the notion that a good man is hard to find. Love, Angela

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate to share 1BR in Brandywine. Available immediately. Call 549 7458

Housemate wanted ASAP! 5 minute walk to Campus Center! Conservative Clinton hating smokers preferred. Democrats need not apply! Call June 549-0649

SCUBA DIVING

Diva Key Largo Florida Spring Break. Earn 2 credits. Call Project Deep 1-800 767-0927

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm. 800 767-0927 Project Deep

SERVICES

Going away? Need your pets to be taken care of? Call Jen 549-8992. Exp. with all types of animals.

International students visitors: DV-1 green card program, by U.S. immigration Legal Services Tel(818) 882 9681 (818) 998 1473. 20731 Stagg St., Canoga Park, CA 91306. Monday-Sunday, 10am-10pm

Modem users! Call the Pagasus BBS. 256 6780. 19.2 K bps. 13+ mags online + CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski Spring Break '95 intercollegiate ski weekends only $209. Includes 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (luxury condos)/5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age 18). sponsors include: Labatts, Molson and Mt. Orford, Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Campus and Greek representatives needed. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

THETA CHI

Theta Chi fraternity spring rush '95. See what our brotherhood is all about. All are welcome. Feb. 13-16, 20, 21. 8:00-10:00pm. Questions or a ride call Ted Silva 549-4598

TICKETS NEEDED

I need two tickets for UMass vs. Duquesne Thurs. Feb. 16. Will pay cash. Call Mike 5-7434

TRAVEL

$129/person. Booking direct! Saves! Suites, kitchenettes, all beachfront in the heart of spring break! 1-800-868-7423

Daytona Beach Spring Break first class, oceanfront hotel, directly on the beach, pool, deck fun, nightclubs, sunshine, parties. Do not miss this trip!! Includes on campus pick up and drop off, only $259 quad occup. departs weekly in March. Call for free brochure. M-F, 8-6, 1-800-932-9866. See you at the beach!!

Spring Break Cheap and reliable. We beat all competitors prices. 549-7540

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jaff at 549-4937

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 6 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $429! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1-800-678-6386

TYPING

Typing. Word processing resumes. Fast, inexpensive. 549-8738.

VALENTINE'S FLOWERS

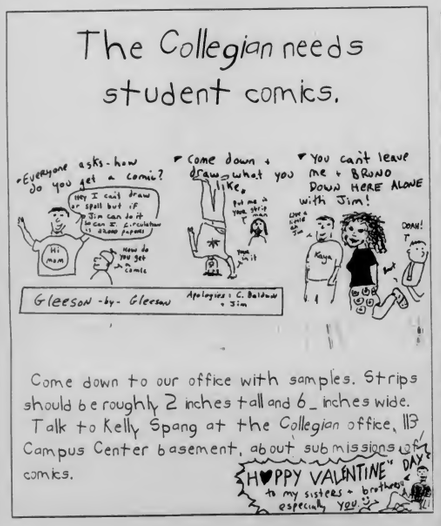
Have a carnation delivered to your Valentine on the fountain. Order at CC Davis Ctr. Mon.-Tues.

WANTED

I need Parent Psych 240 Stats tutor. Call Deena 253-9425.

HP Laserjet toner cartridges wanted for recycling. $7 cash each. Please include packing materials. Call 549-4368

The Collegian needs student comics.



Everyone asks how do you get a comic?
Come down & draw what you like.
You can't leave me & BRUNO DOWN HERE ALONE with Jim!
Gleeson -by- Gleeson
Apologies: C. Baldwin + Jim

Come down to our office with samples. Strips should be roughly 2 inches tall and 6 inches wide. Talk to Kelly Spang at the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center basement, about submissions of comics.

HAPPY VALENTINE DAY to my sisters + brothers especially you

Jewish Affairs needs writers!

If you have an interest in writing about issues affecting the Jewish community, Contact L. Jacob W. Michaels 113 Campus Center 549-7400

Eating Disorder Programs • 1995
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Immigration Law
Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law
1163 Main Street Springfield, MA 781-6370 | 13 Old South St Northampton, MA 584-3232 | 50 Congress St. Boston, MA (617)722-0043
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty

MORE TREADMILLS! MORE STAIRMASTERS! MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

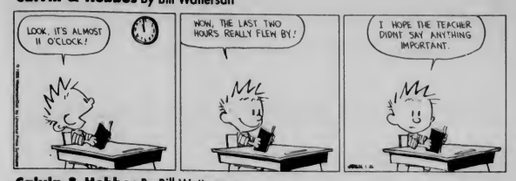
EATING DISORDERS
A FIVE COLLEGE FILM SERIES • ALL SHOWINGS AT 7:30 PM

FEBRUARY
Tuesday, 21: "Eating." Serious comedy about women talking about food, bodies, each other and life. Campus Center Front Room, Amherst College.
Monday, 27: "Famine Within." Documentary film addressing the socio-cultural forces that impact women's obsessions with their bodies and weight. Women's Center, Enfield House, Hampshire College.
Tuesday 28: "Food Fright" and "Fear of Fat." "Food Fright" is the film adaptation of a musical dramatizing women's obsessions with food, weight, body image, and personal and cultural perspectives. "Fear of Fat" is a film discussing the symptoms underlying psychological problems and recovery of individuals with anorexia, bulimia and compulsive overeating. Smith College, Seelye 106.
MARCH
Tuesday, 7: "Still Killing Us Softly." Jean Kilbourne video examining how advertising portrays women. University of Massachusetts, Campus Center Room 162.
Tuesday, 28: "Famine Within." Hooker Auditorium, Mount Holyoke. (See Feb. 27)
APRIL
Tuesday, 4: "Life is Sweet." Comedy focusing on an enduring couple and their iconoclastic twin daughters- one of whom suffers from anorexia and extreme self-loathing. Smith College, Seelye 106.
Wednesday, 5: "Life is Sweet." Campus Center, Front Room, Amherst College (See Apr. 4)
Thursday, 13: "Eating ." Women's Center, Enfield House, Hampshire College (See Feb. 21)
Wednesday, 19: "Pack of Lies." Jean Kilbourne video examining advertising of the tobacco industry, including the connection between smoking and thinness. University of Massachusetts, Campus Center Room 162.
Sponsored by the Five College Eating Disorders Committee. For additional information call 542-2760.

Summer Housing in New York City

Live at New York University in the heart of Greenwich Village while you work, do an internship, or just enjoy summer in the city.
• Minutes from New York's business and cultural centers
• Apartment-style and traditional residences; single and double occupancy
• Outstanding sports-recreation facility
• Over 1,000 courses offered day and evening
Housing available May 21-August 12
For more information, call toll free
1-800-282-4NYU, ext. 928 NYU Summer '95
New York University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Wattersan



Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Wattersan

YOU'RE TELLING ME THAT ANIMALS HAVE THEIR OWN WORDS FOR SPECIFIC SMELLS?
WELL SURE
OK. WHAT'S THE WORD FOR HOW WET LEAVES SMELL?
"SNIPPID"
WHAT'S THE WORD FOR HOW I SMELL?
"TERRIBLE"

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

THIS IS ALL YA GOT? A LOUSY FOUR BUCKS 'N' CHANGE?!!
HEY, I DIDN'T KNOW WE'D BE DOING BUSINESS TONIGHT!
A WISE GUY! HERE'S WHAT WE DO T'WISE GUYS--!

Jim's Journal By Jim

I saw Tony and Jill again today.
They both said hi to me as I passed them.
Later in the day Tony stopped by:
"Jim," he said, "you ever know somebody who did little things that just bugged you?"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

BUT LANCELOT MIXED A LITTLE SPACE. HE SAID, "SHE HAS A LOVELY FACE; GOD IN HIS MERCY LEND HER GRACE, THE LADY OF SHALOTT."
AND BEHIND HIS ALWAYS LOVED THAT POEM, BUT I NEVER THOUGHT IT COULD BE LIKE THAT NO KIDDING, TENNYSON IS FREAKING AMAZING. CIGARETTE?

Stick-Man By Matt Bellucci

LAST SEMESTER, STICK-MAN DISCOVERED THAT DOC. BROC. HAD SENT A STICK-ROBOT TO DO EVIL IN STICK-MAN'S NAME...
AH HAH!
NOW, HE'S ON HIS WAY TO DOC. BROC'S SECRET HQ!
OH-HO! PROBLEM SOLVED!
DOC. BROC'S SECRET HQ!
HOW AM I GONNA FIND DOC. BROC'S SECRET HQ AGAIN?

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat

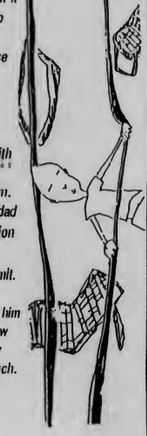
Garfield By Jim Davis

Leold By Roger Salloom

The police and my neighbors have the wrong idea about me. They think I am taking things from them. They know I always return the bicycles and the lawn chairs. I am not a thief. I am a communist. My uncle, Petain, thinks I will outgrow this, but he is embarrassed by me.

I am not only a communist, I am also an illusionist. There are very few of us left. I know it is hopeless to discuss this with the police when they catch me running through the backyards with several lawn chairs at 3 am. I phoned my dad from the station and he said it made him vomit.

I don't believe him because I know he has a very strong stomach.



P.S. Mueller

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Tracy Monahan
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Juan Jose Chacon Quiros
Production Supervisor.....Greg Iafrate
Production.....Dave Gleeson, Ken Perry

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Pizza	Southern Fried Steak
Hot Heroes!!!	Roast Turkey & at the commons
BASICS LUNCH	"Super Sundaes"
Pizza	BASICS DINNER
Savory Stuffed Pepper	Colache

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Hemingway's home
5 Pass out
9 "...to fetch —"
14 Mideast land
15 Author Kingsley —
18 Former alpine duchy
17 Model
18 Pity
20 Landlord's means of access
22 Bequeath
23 Cascade's crest
24 Companion of Ahhua
25 Border city
29 Whiners' valley
33 Travel documents
37 Secluded valley
38 Baseball brothers
39 1802 headliner
41 College or collar
42 Selangueze
43 Sparrow, for one
46 Turf cover
48 A lot
47 Out of town
49 Dime for 54 Up
57 Wrongful entry
60 Asses
62 Memorable court ruling
63 Polk's predecessor
64 Labyrinth
65 Cassandra
66 Run-down
67 Applications
68 Angry

DOWN
1 Browning's "— Passes"
2 Bellowing
3 Outmoded
4 "— of robins..."
5 Assess fim
6 "Runny —"
7 Lose beams
8 Sixth sense
9 Tempo
10 Rider on the Orient Express
11 Rank —
12 M
13 A Redgrave
18 Lhasa —
21 Opens wrongfield
24 Evaluates
26 Prune
27 Remit in advance
28 Cartographer's collection
30 Master of piano head-on 31 Anagram for pone
32 Bancroft or Boleyn
33 History
34 Utah ski resort
35 Fly high
36 Outdid
40 End of government
44 Part of B.P.O.E
46 Throb
48 Exhausted
50 Make — flirt
51 Stroll, in Seville
52 Poe house
53 Hebrew vower mark
54 Pres. undo
56 Mouthy comedienne
58 Ely or Wight
57 Clement
Moore opener
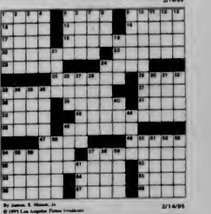
58 Demolish
59 Loose cover
61 Bird from down under

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



2/14/95

Quote of the Day

"You can wish you were in love, but you have to wait until the object of your affection knocks on your door."

–Anjelica Huston

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19) You may feel as if you are on a treadmill. Seek quiet time to contemplate recent choices. Romantic partner wants to share more of your life. Show tenderness. Give a business deal time to develop.

TAURUS (April 20– May 20) Getting overly involved in other people's problems would be a mistake. Do not let minor disagreements sidetrack good business ventures. Make certain a Valentine's gift communicates the message you want to convey. Romance sizzles!

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) Analyze your motives before purchasing something extravagant. An intellectual argument could grow heated. A brochure for an exciting class arrives; consider enrolling. Give your valentine a special treat this evening.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) Romance is uppermost in your thoughts today. Wear your heart on your sleeve if hoping to convince loved one of your sincerity. Acknowledge special anniversaries with a loved one. A local event could put you in touch with interesting new people.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) Compromise in business situations; the pay-off will be tremendous. Your well-known charm helps you make headway in a difficult personal situation. A loved one tries to pamper you this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) Stick to routine tasks early today. Higher-ups will be grateful if you display a protective attitude toward the company's welfare. Avoid throwing your weight around at home. Gentle reminders help youngsters remember the rules.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) One-on-one relationships enjoy highly favorable influences today. Show your caring, emotional side. A short poem or carefully-composed love letter will put your mate in an affectionate mood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) You are able to communicate on a deeper level with VIPs now. Use your social contacts wisely. An enthusiastic approach is often contagious. Let potential allies know exactly what you hope to accomplish. Success is assured.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) A well-planned presentation will attract support for a special project or campaign. Talks and meetings bring positive developments. Speak your mind in money matters. Timely home repairs will prevent larger bills later on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) When a loved one confides a secret wish, the future looks brighter than ever. Romance is heady! Business associates want to jump onto your bandwagon. Your tries-and-true philosophy helps your cause.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) A secret admirer wants to know you better. Send a signal if you are interested. Replacing bad habits with good ones will give you new vim and vigor. Spend more time with loved ones.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) Your drive and daring make a big impression on someone special. An influential associate will help you reach a special goal. Do not take work pressures so seriously. Friends will respect your wished. Lighten up!

The Men Of ΦΜΔ Invite You To OPEN RUSH

Tues Feb. 14, 7 - 9 p.m.
Thurs., Feb. 16, 5 - 7 p.m.
Fri., Feb. 17, 5 - 7p.m.
Wed., Feb. 15, 7 - 9 p.m.
Tues., 9 - 11p.m.
389 N. Pleasant St. • Call Shawn 256-8028

Sports

Massachusetts ready for rematch with GW

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

A little more than three years have passed since the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team was beaten in two consecutive games. A little less than four years have passed since a Massachusetts team has been swept by an Atlantic 10 opponent. And five years have gone by since the Minutemen have lost on campus (41 straight).

The latter two will be on the line tonight as Massachusetts (18–2, 9–1 in A–10) hosts George Washington (15–9, 8–4) at the William D. Mullins Center. That one L in the loss column for the Minutemen came at the hands of the Colonials, 78–75, at the Smith Center in Washington, D.C., less than two weeks ago (Feb. 4).

Is revenge on the minds of the Minutemen?

"Hell, yeah," senior forward Lou Roe said with a smile.

"A little bit, I guess," point guard Derek Kellogg said. "The main thing if for us to get better. Last time, we didn't do that."

Massachusetts was behind throughout much of the last game, but cut a six-point lead with :38 left in the game to one point with :10 remaining. A chance for the tie came up short as Kellogg's shot from deep behind the three-point line did the same.

For GW, Kwame Evans scored a game–high 27 points, while Vaughn Jones and Nimbo Hammons chipped in with 18 apiece. The Colonials spent much of their time scoring quick, uncontested baskets in addition to the 29 points scored on the free throw line.

Roe knows the team will have to play much better defense than they did at the Smith Center.

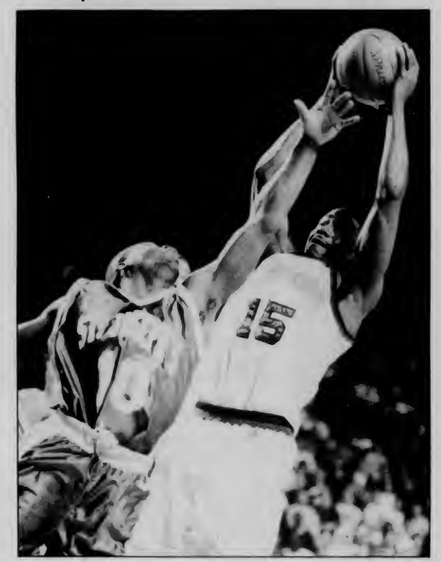
"We'll have to defend a little bit better," Roe said. "They pushed up the ball on offense a little too fast, and we didn't get back fast enough to stop them. I think that was the key — the quick baskets that were uncontested. We'll have to do a better job than that."

The GW game was the first full contest without the services of center Marcus Camby, who strained his left hamstring in the Feb. 1 game against St. Joseph's. Roe has seen a little time in the middle, as have reserves Inus Norville and Jeff Meyer.

"The guys are finally realizing that they have to step up their games a bit," Kellogg said. "We decided that if we step up our game about 10 percent during the stretch run, we'll be all right."

"We feel we all have to do just a little bit more. If each person does this, it should be enough for us

Turn to HOOPS, page 12



PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Senior Lou Roe said that revenge will be on the Minutemen's mind when they take on George Washington tonight at the William D. Mullins Center.

Game Preview

No. 5 UMass Minutemen vs. George Washington Colonials

At The Mullins Center
Amherst, MA
7:00 p.m.

Dana Dingle

Nimbo Hammons

Probable Starters

Dana Dingle	F	Nimbo Hammons
Tyrone Weeks	F	Antoine Hart
Lou Roe	C	Alexander Koul
Derek Kellogg	G	Omo Moses
Edgar Padilla	G	Kwame Evans

On the Air

Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM Brian Perillo, Paul Cacciatore

WHMP 99.3 George Miller and Jack Leaman

Conference rivalries play role in poll movement

The month of February means conference rivalries at their best in college basketball. This year is no exception, and the pollsters pin everything on that.

Around here people are up in arms about UMass being rated No. 5 in both the coaches and AP polls. Making it worse, at least for the time being, is that UConn sits atop the nation (more on that later).

North Carolina entered last week on top and dropped only one slot after a tough ACC road loss at top–10 Maryland. Kansas drops one spot (from 2 to 3) after a Big 8 road loss at Oklahoma State.

These teams should remain ahead of the Minutemen. Lose again and fall, but for now they are where they should be. Teams shouldn't be penalized for playing tough schedules. UNC is 19–2 playing in the ACC, Kansas 18–3 in the Big 8 (and don't forget KU handled both New England powers).

Anthony Guido on College Basketball

The advantage these squads will have, besides higher rankings right now, is the battle scars come tournament time. The middle–rung schools in these top conferences (add the SEC to the previous two) can pull off tournament upsets with regularity, because they have played games in NCAA– type atmospheres against tournament talent.

It doesn't really matter: Who cares if UMass is number 5? At worst the Minutemen would be a number two seed in the NCAA in the East region. UMass would be stationed in either Albany (close to home) or Baltimore (a place of past success). Both scenarios would be fine; most importantly a match–up with the hated Huskies in the regional final.

They're awesome baby: Anyone who watched the UNC – Georgia Tech battle on Sunday heard Dick Vitale rave about nearly every team and every player in the ACC. He stated that an ACC all–star team could beat any other collection of players throughout the country and he's probably right. As always, look for six ACC teams in the Big Dance and watch for two in the Final Four.

Why are the Huskies No. 1: Because Jim Boeheim cannot coach himself out of a shoebox. Can Syracuse handle the basketball? No. Do they have any form of a set offense? No. Did they choke away both UConn games in the last five minutes this year? Yes.

Is Lawrence Moten a superstar? No, not if he cannot take over a home game when his team was desperate for a basket. Nice player, but not a star.

Some coaches can recruit the best talent in the world yet never win with it. A school which has sent Derrick Coleman, Billy Owens, Rony Seikaly, Sherman Douglas and David Johnson to the NBA has never won an NCAA title. Fun–da–men–tals, its not that difficult.

How long will the Huskies reign: Well, tonight UConn plays at Georgetown. Looked like a potential upset, but, the Hoyas just lost to Boston College. Center Othella Harrington has been off his game. That's being generous; the Big O has been a Big Stiff. Still, Allen Iverson is a special player. Although just a freshman, he's had some phenomenal performances this year.

If the slumping Hoyas can't do it, maybe the hot Villanova Wildcats can. The teams square off on Saturday, in a battle of great perimeter shooting with little inside play. The equalizer can be Jason Lawson in the paint, but on the road it's a daunting task for Kerry Kittles and company.

NBA, here we come: With the NBA rookie salary cap looking like a legitimate possibility in the near future, many of today's star underclassmen will leave for the riches of pro life. The UNC tandem of Rasheed Wallace and Jerry Stackhouse and Arkansas' Scotty Thurman and Corliss Williamson have all been rumored to jump. This year's NBA draft can go down as the best (and deepest) of all time.

In the National Spotlight: Not there yet. Congratulations are in order for UMass women's basketball. Despite a tough loss for coach Joanie O'Brien's squad on Saturday, big steps were taken. A record crowd of 2,283 lent atmosphere to the William D. Mullins Center. The team is almost to the point of national contention and things will only get better. Hopefully, the support and program grows as UMass women's basketball escapes the shadow of the Minutemen.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

Minutewomen capture second at A–10s

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team placed second in the Atlantic 10 Championships at the University of Rhode Island this weekend.

UMass finished with 123 points, just behind West Virginia who won the seven way meet with 166 points. Rhode Island was third with 74 points, Rutgers was fourth with 66 points, Temple was fifth with 64 points, St. Joseph's was sixth with 57 points, and Duquesne finished last with only seven points.

"It went very well," coach Julie LaFreniere said. "The UMass athletes stepped up to the competition and took it to the next level of the A–10. It permeated the whole team and they competed better than they ever have. It is very exciting for a coach."

Freshman Rosie Bryan shined the brightest, winning the Most Outstanding Performance By A Rookie Award and having an overall score and team best of 20 points. She placed in three events, with two second place finishes. Her long jump score of 18–7_ was a personal best and an A–10 record, only being beaten at this meet by an Olympic jumper from Nigeria. In the triple jump, she placed with a leap of 36–9. Bryan also took fourth in the 55–meter hurdles with a time of 8.26. Bryan is a ECAC Championship qualifier in both the hurdles and long jump.

Senior Janey Meeks placed first in the triple jump with a leap of 38–1_. In the high jump, Meeks set a school record by leaping 5–6 and placing second only after an exciting tie– breaker. Meeks also competed in the 4x800. Her overall score was 18.5 points.

Senior Kelly Liljeblad placed first in the mile with a time of 4:58.45. This season, Liljeblad has run the fastest time in the A–10 in the 1000 meters (2:57.2), 3000 meters (9:44.5), 5000 meters (16:46.2), and the mile (4:50.2).

Freshman Rebecca Donaghue placed first in the 800 meters with a time of 2:15.58, setting a new Atlantic 10 record and qualifying her for the ECAC Championships. Donaghue also ran the distance medley relay in which Massachusetts captured first place with a time of 12:16.79 minutes.

Junior Jen Waeger came very close in winning the 1000 relay but placed second with a time of 2:58.64. Waeger also competed in the distance medley relay.

Sophomore Anya Forrest took third in the 55 hurdles with a time of 8.25 while sophomore Katie Greenia took fourth in the 5000 meters with a time of 18:09.37 minutes. Freshman Silifata Kenku also took fourth in the 400 meters with a time of 1:00.02 minutes. Nicole Roberts placed fifth in both the 55 meter dash with 7.39 and 200 meter dash with 26.04.

In the 20–pound weight throw, junior Christie Martin placed second with a throw of 45–10_. Freshman Shana Mitchell did well in an event new to her, placing fourth with a throw of 41–10. In the shot put, Martin took second again with a throw of 39–6_. Martin scored a total of 16 points in the meet.

The UMass team was missing six runners who could have placed at this meet. However, the women stepped up to this challenge.

"The overall team effort was outstanding," LaFreniere said. "The weekend was intense emotionally and physically for the coaches as well as the players. I couldn't have asked for more. This is a real high for us."

This Friday's upcoming meet will be low–key and will serve as a last chance for some runners to qualify. The UMass runners are looking forward to the New England Championships and the ECACs coming up in the next couple of weeks.

Bill Schaefer impressive for Massachusetts skiing

By Teri Klein
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's ski team placed third in both the slalom and the giant slalom this weekend at Ascutney Mt. in Vermont.

Junior Bill Schaefer led the way for UMass in both events, placing first in the giant slalom with a time of 42.86 seconds and second in the slalom at 97.99 seconds.

Massachusetts coach Bill MacConnell was impressed by the skiing of Schaefer, an All American.

He said that he is sure that Schaefer will qualify for the NCAA Regionals in the coming weeks.

"I'm looking forward to it," Schaefer said. "My goal is to peak prior to the regionals."

Tyler Gannon was the second finisher for the Minutemen in the slalom and No. 14 overall at 107.29. Coming in third for UMass and No. 17 overall in the slalom was Jim Cranston at 110.16.

In the giant slalom Michael Lenarczyk followed Schaefer, finishing second for the Minutemen and No. 11 overall at 45.60 seconds. Placing No. 16 and third for UMass was Gannon at 46.37.

MacConnell saw positives and negatives in his squad's performance.

"Overall people could have skied a little wiser, being ready for surprises and things they didn't count on," said MacConnell.

He added that unusual ski conditions at this weekend's race forced his skiers to adopt different techniques.

* * *

This weekend's results were similar to those of the rest of the season so far.

At the Brown Connecticut Winter Carnival at Loon Mountain in Lincoln, N.H. on Feb. 4 and 5.

UMass placed fourth in the slalom and giant slalom

Schaefer once again had a strong performance, placing second in the giant slalom and fifth in the slalom.

Brian Foster skied a combined time of 85.31 in the slalom, placing No. 14 and second for the Minutemen. Michael Lenarczyk finished third for UMass at 87.09 coming in at No. 23 overall.

Once again Lenarczyk and Foster placed second and third for UMass respectively in the giant slalom. Lenarczyk placed No. 19 at 60.05, while Foster finished at No. 25 with a time of 60.55.

UMass placed third behind Plymouth State and Boston College on Jan. 28 and 29 at Waterville Valley, N.H. Schaefer, Lenarczyk and Terry Retelle were the top three skiers for the Minutemen in the giant slalom.

The same is true for Schaefer, Eric McCormack and Gannon in the slalom.

* * *

With the majority of their season behind them, the team hopes to have an strong outing this Saturday and Sunday at Berkshire East Mountain.

Karen Sonnwald leads UMass past Red Storm

By Andrew Bard
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's swim team defeated the Red Storm of St. John's, 141–102, in its final home meet of the season at the Joseph R. Rogers Pool in Boyden on Sunday.

Seniors Barbara Banks, Maria Bavaro, Karen Hodges and Jen Sheehan were honored as part of the traditional "Senior Day."

St. John's took an early 11–6 lead on the opening 200 yard medley relay as the Red Storm combination of Kathy Jo Dedrick, Brandy Wilson, Tami Lynn Miller and Dawn Averys won with a time of 1:54.41.

After the opening race, the Minutewomen took control and never looked back. They built a 65–47 lead at the break led by first place victories by freshman Karen Sonnwald in the 1000–yard free style (10:31.81), junior Jessica Griffith in the 100–yard breaststroke (1:10.11), and junior Sarah Baker in the 50–yard freestyle (25.07).

Two consecutive first place finishes by the Red Storm to open the second half, cut the Massachusetts' lead to six at 78–72.

That was the closest the Red Storm would get as the Minutewomen reeled off first place victories by Sonnwald in the 500–yard freestyle (5:09.69), freshman diver Angelique Rodriguez in the three–meter dive (249.6), sophomore Jessica Farley in the 200–yard individual medley (2:15.29) and the combination of Toni Youngdahl, Jodi Walters, Griffith and Baker won the

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Freshman Karen Sonnwald.

200–yard freestyle relay with a time of 1:42.28.

Sonnwald led the Minutewomen with 21 points and Farley had 17, while Dedrick led the way for St. John's with 29 points.

The Minutewomen's triumph over the Red Storm gave Massachusetts coach Bob Newcomb confidence in his squad heading into the upcoming post–season tournaments that start next week.

Turn to SWIMMING, page 12

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 76 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Here and Now in Northampton
Boston's Letters to Cleo have been enjoying increasing success and will be playing a set at Pearl Street this Thursday (See Arts & Living, page 8).

Feminist language, logic discussed
Rachael Joffe Falmange presented a work–in–progress lecture on the study of feminist analyses at a recent talk at MHC (See story, page 3).

Home win streak ends for Minutemen
No. 5 Massachusetts lost to George Washington 80–78 last night for the second time this season (See Sports on page 12).

Extended Forecast
Possible snow and/or ice showers late afternoon, with rain showers likely in the evening. On Thursday, rain likely to end early. Friday's outlook looks fair to mild.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30	HIGH: 40 LOW: 20

Report blames a lack of funds for poor upkeep

■ Estimated $660M needed over 20 years in order to fix problem

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

An outside group recently released a report claiming that many of the University of Massachusetts maintenance problems stem from a lack of state funding and bureaucratic inefficiency.

The 80–page report, released by the Association of Higher Education Facilities' (APPA) consisted of documentation, analysis and recommendations concerning UMass maintenance facilities and management.

In order to act upon all the recommendations given in the report, a total of $660 million over 20 years would be needed to support the model and eliminate the maintenance backlog, according to William Rose, associated vice chancellor for campus services.

Approximately one year ago the UMass Office for Administration and Finance began commissioning the APPA to conduct an evaluation of the Physical Plant Division and the Facilities Planning Division, Rose said. The report cost the University $13,355.

Budgets and Bureaucracy

The report claims that cutbacks in the operation and maintenance budget, coupled with a slow and complex state bureaucratic process have resulted in the disrepair of the campus.

The report also criticizes the heavily–layered management and an inefficient work force within Facilities and Planning and the Physical Plant. These two departments are responsible for maintenance and long–term building projects.

The Physical Plant now operates with six to eight layers of management. According to the report, this should be reduced to four or five.

"The Physical Plant Division, in particular, has developed a unique culture, is hierarchical and heavily layered and struggles with it's purpose and vision," the report stated. Inefficiencies were observed and are described throughout the entirety of the report.

The recommendations given in the report deal with increasing the University's independence in planning and carrying out projects, streamlining the management within the maintenance departments to develop more of a "customer service" approach and finding additional funding.

"This institution is not prepared to successfully face the major forces that will impact the campus facilities during the remainder of this decade," the report said.

External Factors, Internal Problems

Although the report, released Feb. 7, included 68 recommendations for the management of the two departments, it is not placing any blame solely on either department, Rose said. External factors, such as lack of state funding, play a major role in handicapping the University.

"If we were to have a perfect–running Physical Plant Division, our resources and external constraints would overshadow anything we would be able to do to improve the campus," Rose said.

The evaluation program included a four–person team which visited the campus during the week of Oct. 11.

The evaluation team consisted of administrators from other college campuses who were experienced in the management and leadership of facilities organizations at institutions comparable to UMass, the report stated.

The team–members are Jack Hug of the University of California; William Daigneau of the University of Texas, MD Anderson Cancer Center; E. Lander Medlin, Associate Vice President of APPA and Paul F. Taboli of the University of Colorado.

Interviews with approximately 200 campus personnel were conducted. This included staff, deans, department heads, union leaders and student leaders, Rose said.

Potential Complications

The report also found that such vital systems as heating, water, electrical, data and alarm cable systems and sewers could possibly cause problems in the future.

The report specifies the problem of adequate steam production. The hot water and heated buildings on campus depend on reliable steam production.

"The poor condition of steam–generating equipment and the distribution system, coupled with capacity deficiencies, is a recipe for disaster," the report stated.

The report described the campus as "dingy, spotty and littered." Faculty recruitment and retention are harmed by the condition of the campus, the report stated.

"The inherent beauty of the campus is hidden behind years of neglect," the report said. "It will take long–term commitment of resources for deferred maintenance and a major change in the operation of the Physical Plant Division in order for improvements to occur."

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

Too bad I didn't get any...
Florists in the campus center sold "millions and millions" of roses yesterday in last–minute gift–giving for Valentine's Day.

Clinton vows to veto Republican amendments to anti–crime legislation

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House passed the centerpiece of the Republican anti–crime package yesterday, voting to create block grants for local governments while eliminating President Clinton's program to hire more police.

But the latest milestone in the House GOP's "Contract with America" agenda faces a far less certain future in the Senate. And Clinton, who has demanded that his police program remain untouched, has threatened to veto it if it reaches his desk.

"I'm not going to let them wreck our crime bill, which is putting 100,000 new cops on the street," Clinton said Tuesday in an interview with Huntington, W.Va., television station WSAZ–TV.

Sen. Orrin Hatch (R–Utah) said the Judiciary Committee he chairs will have to rewrite the House package to secure Senate passage and come up with a bill that Clinton will be compelled to sign.

The sixth and final bill in the crime package, passed by a 238–192 largely party–line vote, replaces crime–prevention programs and a commitment to help put 100,000 new cops on the streets — two cornerstones of the 1994 anti–crime law — with a $10 billion block grant that local governments can use as they see fit to fight crime.

Turn to CRIME BILL, page 8

Northampton smoking ban lawsuit dropped

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON — The lawsuit against Northampton's smoking ban was dropped last Friday.

Nine Northampton restauranteers had filed the suit in opposition to the smoking ban.

"Our group, as a whole, has dropped our suit against the city," McGovern said. "We're looking forward to having discussions with the city on the new version of the ordinance."

The restaurants plan on challenging the Northampton Board of Health's tobacco control measure through different legal avenues, according to Bob McGovern, owner of Packards. Packards is one of the restaurants in the coalition.

The old ordinance, which became law on Sept. 1, legally forbids patrons from smoking while at restaurants in order to protect citizens, according to Judy Vuono, tobacco control coordinator for the Northampton Board of Health.

The smoking ban was passed by the city on July 18, Vuono said. Three weeks after the law was passed, the nine merchants filed the lawsuit at Hampshire Superior Court in Northampton.

"We closed our restaurant on Jan. 22," said Lin Wetherby owner of what was the North Star Restaurant, but has become North Star Bar and Night Club. "[The regulation] put us out Thirty–five percent of our business was lost."

In addition to Packards and North Star, the seven other restaurants include Alexander's Restaurant and Cocktail Lounge, the Northampton Brewery, the Depot Restaurant, Jake's, Spoleto Restaurant, Fitzwillys and City Cafe.

The lawsuit filed by the coalition argued that the Northampton Board of Health overstepped their jurisdiction of power in banning smoking, Vuono said.

"It's time for the government to stop telling people what to do," McGovern said.

On Oct. 25, the coalition of restaurants requested a preliminary injunction against the regulation, Vuono said. This method of fighting the ban was filed in Superior Court.

"The ban would have been in limbo. It would have been ineffective until their case was won," Vuono said. "They wanted us to make a compromise and we didn't accept."

The coalition desired a compromise with the board of health allowing smoking in a percentage of seats, Vuono said. This was ultimately dismissed by the judge, keeping the regulation in–effect.

"It did not protect the public health at all," Vuono said.

Discussion will continue, which is what McGovern wanted all along, he said.

"We've always wanted to talk," McGovern said. "The board has always been adamant about their 100 percent stance on environmental tobacco smoke."

The new version of the ordinance will be discussed at a public meeting scheduled for March 8 by the Northampton Board of Health, Vuono said.

"[The new ordinance] would allow smoking in a restaurant or bar only in the bar area if it is separately enclosed and separately ventilated," Vuono said. "Because then it would protect the public health."

The tobacco control measure has already resulted in a 20 to 60 percent decrease in restaurants' business, Wetherby said.

"I'm happy [the new ordinance] will help other businesses," Wetherby said. "But it's too late for us and I wish there had been some concern for the economic impact before the smoking ban was imposed."

Court rejects software corp. on settlement

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal judge rejected the Justice Department's proposed antitrust settlement with Microsoft Corp., saying it fails to break the software giant's monopoly or correct its "anticompetitive practices."

In a 45–page ruling issued late Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin said he was unable to find — as required by law — that the proposed settlement was in the public interest.

"Microsoft has a monopoly on the market for personal computer operating systems," Sporkin declared, noting that company's share of the market is consistently above 70 percent.

The proposed decree, he said, applies only to future licensing practices by Microsoft. The government, he added, failed to show how that would "remedy the unfair advantage Microsoft gained through its anti–competitive practices."

"Simply telling a defendant to go forth and sin no more does little or nothing to address the unfair advantage it has already gained," Sporkin wrote. "The decree is too little, too late." Microsoft spokesman Mich Mathews said the company needed time to read Sporkin's opinion before deciding its next step.

"We are disappointed," Mathews said.

Justice spokeswoman Gina Talamona said antitrust division attorneys were reviewing the ruling. They declined further comment. "I'm going to read the opinion," said Attorney General Janet Reno.

Sporkin's rejection of the proposed settlement leaves the government with several options: It could appeal his ruling; it could go to trial on its allegations against Microsoft, or it could try to negotiate a new agreement with the company that would satisfy Sporkin.

Man charged with physical assault of UMass student

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Corey I. Driscoll, charged with last Thursday's alleged assault of a University of Massachusetts student, was arraigned and released from the Hampshire County District Court in Northampton on Monday.

Driscoll, 18, of Roxbury is charged with alleged verbal abuse with racial remarks and a physical assault of an Asian student, according to court documents.

He was released with a $25,000 personal surity, according to Phil Cavanaugh, UMass Police court officer.

A personal surity insures the court that the defendant will show up for their trial.

If they fail to do so, the defendant is charged the total sum of the allotted surity.

According to court documents, Driscoll is not to go near the victim or come to campus, and is required to report to a probation officer on a regular basis.

Driscoll's pre–trial is scheduled for March 9, Cavanaugh said.

The victim was allegedly struck and kicked several times resulting in injuries to the face, according to police documents. Driscoll allegedly made racial remarks while attacking the victim.

The victim had to be brought to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, and was later released, according to police documents.

The victims jacket was allegedly stolen, police said. The jacket was valued at approximately $250.

The official charges brought against Driscoll include unarmed robbery, assault and battery by a dangerous weapon (a shod foot), larceny of property, civil rights violation by bodily injury and civil rights violation by intimidation, according to court documents.

UMass Public Safety is continuing their investigation of the case, Cavanaugh said.

Public Safety has requested that the Northwestern district attorney's office completely review the case to see if there is a possibility of charges being brought against other individuals who were present, Cavanaugh said.

None of the three individuals present at the alleged assault, including Driscoll, are students at UMass, according to Karin Sherbin, University spokeswoman.

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Thomas P. Hannum directs the high–energy rhythms of the UM Minuteman Hoop Band during last night's basketball game at the Mullins Center.

Hoop Band energizes crowds

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

The days of the school song and fight tunes are gone as the University of Massachusetts Minuteman Hoop Band rocks and funks their way into entertaining as well as cheerleading.

"The perception is the band is equal to the team," said Thomas P. Hannum, director of the Hoop Band. "We try to have the best hoop band in the country."

Although Hannum said the band gets the crowd going with songs like "Fight Mass" and "Rock N' Roll Part Two," the 60–member big–band also plays jazz standards like "In the Mood" to entertain during breaks and half–time.

Marc Beaulieu, a junior jazz major and principle drummer for the band said it is for that reason they are different from other bands.

"A lot of the other hoop bands you see around the country are just subdivisions of their marching band," said Beaulieu. "We're like a big jazz band."

Hannum, who took the job as director in 1984, said the band was not even organized in the early days of the Curry Hicks Cage.

"Nobody wanted to do it, the team was awful," said Hannum. "It used to be just some people getting together and making noise."

As the basketball team got better, the Hoop Band had to, said Hannum.

"We're representing the University and the music department," said Hannum. "People see the hoop band and say either UMass has a good music department or a bad one."

With bullhorn in hand, Hannum is known to be emotional during games.

"Oh yeah, he gets into the game," said Beaulieu. "But he can go between having a good time and being a professional about the game."

Hannum said because he is right on the sideline of the court he has gotten himself in trouble, including a technical foul back in the Cage where sound travels easier in the smaller gymnasium.

"I've been asked to knock it off and gotten a few warnings," said Hannum. "Especially in the Cage."

Because the basketball team now plays in the 9,493 seat Mullins Center, the band had to drop the old

Turn to BAND, page 8

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Feb. 15

Exhibit — The Graduate Forum of the Art Department and Al Nuevo Mundo will present "Dialogo de las Artes en el Nuevo Mundo," images and discussion among artists, including Leonel Gongora, Colombian painter, Jorge González, Colombian photographer and others. Free. UMass, Herter 227, 4:30 p.m. Information: 545-2029.

Rally — Rally and speak-out for people on welfare organized by Arise for Social Justice. At noon, three groups will form, one at the State Street welfare office, one at Liberty Street welfare office and one at the federal building, all in Springfield. These groups will march to the church at Court Square. Information: 734-4948.

Senior class — Voting for where the senior class gift will be held. UMass Campus Center concourse. Information: 545-5479.

Volunteers — The Mass Transformation campaign needs volunteers to help improve the physical conditions on campus. Volunteers will be painting and cleaning walls, stairs, doors in designated areas of Worcester Dining Commons, Hasbrouck Lab, Bartlett Hall, Herter Hall, Arnold House and the Student Union/Campus Center. Registration will be at Memorial Hall and each of the work areas, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Everyone is invited.

Lecture — "The Art of Decorating Ancient Egyptian Temples: Problems and Solutions." Mount Holyoke, Gamble Auditorium, 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — "The Beginnings of the Jewish Critique of Christianity in the Middle Ages." Sponsored by the Program in Jewish Studies. Free. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series "If I Ever Lose My Faith in You: Idols, Saints, Celebrities, Martyrs, Men and Other Disappointments." Free. UMass, Campus Center room 917, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Auditions — The Importance of Being Earnest, by Oscar Wilde. Directed by Richard Trousdell and Virginia Scott. Roles: 5 men, 4 women. Read in pairs from the script. Particularly interested in non-traditional casting; actors of diverse ethnic background are encouraged. The entire play is available for perusal before auditioning on a two hour sign- out basis. UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room to be announced.

Auditions — The Misanthrope, by Molière. Directed by Ron Spangler. Roles for men and women. The entire play is available for perusal before auditioning on a two hour sign- out basis, UMass, 112 Fine Arts Center, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Auditions will be 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center, room 204.

Film — Europa Europa. In German with English subtitles. Mount Holyoke College, Gamble Auditorium, 7:30 p.m.

Film — The Blue Kite, a Chinese film with English subtitles. Told from the perspective of a young boy, Tietou, it traces the fate of a Beijing family and their neighbors and friends as they experience the political and social upheaval in 1950s and 60s China. Free. Smith College, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Film — Everythings For You, part of Jewish film series. Free. UMass Herter Hall room 231, 7:30 p.m. Information: 549-1710.

Forum — Campus reaction to the Massachusetts Association of Scholars (MAS) report Turmoil and Tension at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst: History, Analysis and Recommended Solutions. UMass Campus Center room 903, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Thursday, Feb. 16

Auditions — UMass Theater Guild will be holding auditions for Stephen Sondheim's Merrily We Roll Along. 7 p.m. Earthfoods. Callbacks will be Feb. 20.

Meeting — The UMass Animal Rights Coalition will have its first general meeting. UMass, Campus Center room 165, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Five-College "College Bowl" Tournament meeting. Information: call Mike 665-3765.

Senior class — Voting for where the senior class gift will go. UMass Campus Center Concourse. Information: 545-5479.

Lecture — "The Jews and Their Neighbors During the Holocaust." Free. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Five College Panel: Medicinal Plants and Herbal Healing." Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "The Destruction of the European Jews." Free. Amherst College, Campus Center Frontroom, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "What is Cultural Justice?" Free. Amherst College, Octagon, Babbott Room, 8 p.m.

Film — The Seven Samurai, in Japanese with English subtitles. Classic film about a 16th Century Japanese village that hires professional warriors to fend off bandits. Free. Amherst College, Merrill III, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, Feb. 17

Auditions — UMass Theater Guild will be holding auditions for Stephen Sondheim's Merrily We Roll Along. 7 p.m. UMass Campus Center room 101. Callbacks will be Feb. 20.

Lecture — "Dynamics Digital Maps," by Christopher Condit, UMass Department of Geology and Geography. UMass, Morrill 2 South, room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Sacred Continuum: Gods, Humans and Nature in Shinto." Free. Smith College, Seelye Hall 110, 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Biology Colloquium" — Saving Plants that Heal People: Tropical Herbal Medicine." Free. Smith College, McConnell Hall 805, 4:30 p.m.

Film — The Killing Fields. Memoirs of Sidney Schanberg, the New York Times reporter who remained in Cambodia after the American evacuation. $1.75. Amherst College, Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Notices

Yearbook photos — Senior photo session will continue through Feb. 24. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule an appointment.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the Umoja Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrwin Johnson, 546-6787.

Voter registration — Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center offers voter registration daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. UMass, Student Union Building, room 428. Information: 545-0865.

Spring Break
Cancun from $399
Jamaica from $439
Florida from $129
Carroll Travel 256-8931
TRISHA 549-6016
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
120 N. Pleasant St., Amherst MA 01002
Toll free 1-800-648-4849

Soccer Basketball Collegian Field Hockey SPORTS Rugby Has got it all. Football Water Polo Baseball

MORE TREADMILLS!
MORE STAIRMASTERS!
MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

EATING DISORDERS
A FIVE COLLEGE FILM SERIES • ALL SHOWINGS AT 7:30 PM

FEBRUARY
Tuesday, 21: "Eating." Serious comedy about women talking about food, bodies, each other and life. Campus Center Front Room, Amherst College.
Monday, 27: "Famine Within." Documentary film addressing the socio-cultural forces that impact women's obsessions with their bodies and weight. Women's Center, Enfield House, Hampshire College.
Tuesday 28: "Food Fright" and "Fear of Fat." "Food Fright" is the film adaptation of a musical dramatizing women's obsessions with food, weight, body image, and personal and cultural per spectives. "Fear of Fat" is a film discussing the symptoms underlying psychological problems and recovery of individuals with anorexia, bulimia and compulsive overeating. Smith College, Seelye 106.
MARCH
Tuesday, 7: "Still Killing Us Softly." Jean Kilbourne videa examining how advertising portrays women. University of Massachusetts, Campus Center Room 162.
Tuesday, 28: "Famine Within." Hooker Auditorium, Mount Holyoke. (See Feb. 27)
APRIL
Tuesday, 4: "Life is Sweet." Camedy focusing an an enduring couple and their iconoclastic twin daughters- one of whom suffers from anorexia and extreme self-loathing. Smith College, Seelye 106.
Wednesday, 5: "Life is Sweet." Campus Center, Front Room, Amherst College (See Apr. 4)
Thursday, 13: "Eating ." Women's Center, Enfield House, Hampshire College (See Feb. 21)
Wednesday, 19: "Pack of Lies." Jean Kilbourne video examining advertising of the tobacco industry, including the connection between smoking and thinness. University of Massachusetts, Campus Center Room 162.
Sponsored by the Five College Eating Disorders Committee. For additional information call 542-2760.

CHANGE THE WORLD!
OR AT LEAST YOUR PART OF IT!!
THE BIG RALLY
Saturday, March 4 at 12:00 p.m., Student Union Ballroom
Call the VIVA Community Service Council at 545-3368, for more information

AUTHORS-ARTISTS
POETS
PHOTOGRAPHERS
SEE YOUR WORK PUBLISHED!
SUBMIT TO
SPECTRUM MAGAZINE
Bring your work to 406E Student Union (above the credit union) or call 545-2240 for more info.
DEADLINE: FEBRUARY 17

SHINE HIRO SUZUKI / COLLEGIAN

Line 'em up!

Looking for some leftover cash, many students patiently waited yesterday to receive their refund checks at the Bursar's office and to complete other business.

Feminist logic, language discussed at MHC talk

By Lisa Greenfield
Collegian Staff

In an informal works-in-progress presentation last night at Mount Holyoke College, Rachel Joffe Falmagne posed questions about feminist analyses of language and logic in a talk entitled "Toward a Feminist Theory of Inference."

The Clark University scholar introduced ideas from her work-in-progress about embedded symbols of language and logic in relation to feminist knowledge.

Falmagne began by tying logic and language together in the context of feminist critiques and theories. She said "language is interwoven with logic and reasoning and shapes thought processes."

Falmagne said the "aim to understand human thinking" in the context of feminist theory came about after becoming involved with women's studies out of political affiliations, and questioning human thought processes from a cognitive perspective.

She said she began to look at the relationship between cognitive psychology and feminist perspectives on knowledge because it is "compelling as a critical and theoretical framework."

Although she distinguished cognitive thought processes and feminist theory as "entirely separate," she said these issues are "ready to be integrated."

Paper targets current themes

In referring directly to her work-in-progress, Falmagne pointed out three components of her paper. She discussed in detail current themes in feminist epistemology, recent feminist critiques of logic and the cognitive and methodological implications of those issues.

Falmagne said feminist critiques of logic point to the relationship between logic and masculinity in the sense that logic is set in a "patriarchal framework."

This patriarchal framework, said the scholar, explains that logic defines who has power in which, "exclusionary norms of authority are constructed."

Falmagne stressed the relationship between logic and language, emphasizing how language and logic are embedded in society as symbols.

The paper detailed analyses of different cognitive theorists and Falmagne used and adapted many case studies to illustrate her points.

According to Falmagne, the direction of feminist logic is the need to "desegregate logic and content." After posing the question of whether feminist logic is feasible and desirable, Falmagne said on a psychological level it is, but it is "idealized."

Falmagne spoke at length about the need for the context of women's lives.

"To see the meaning of logic, you need to put in the lived context in which it was developed," said Falmagne.

The talk was part of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center Colloquium series.

Photographers Wanted!
Applications are now being accepted at the Collegian for photography technicians. Contact Paul Bilodeau or Rebecca Peterson at 545-1701 for further information.
Get an edge on life at the Collegian

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

MEN'S OPEN SOCCER LEAGUE
WEST STATE SOCCER LEAGUE, INC.
Founded 1974, Affiliated with M.S.A., U.S.S.F.
COME JOIN OUR LEAGUE
For More Information Contact Skip Clark Today!
1-413-562-2603

Boarder war cease-fire marred by fighting

By Carlos Cisternas
Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador — New fighting was reported Tuesday between Ecuador and Peru, only 90 minutes after a cease-fire was to take effect in their border war.

Ecuador and Peru both declared victory in the nearly three-week conflict, which has left at least 49 people dead and 100 wounded. The two countries have fought over the rain forest at the headwaters of the Cenepa River three times since 1941.

The cease-fire was to take effect at noon, but Peru's military claimed there was "intense fire" by Ecuadorean artillery on the border post of Tiwintza beginning at 1:30 p.m. Peru claims it captured the base Monday, but Ecuador has denied that.

Ecuador's military also reported new hostilities, but didn't give any details. It has denied Peru's claim to have captured Tiwintza and two other border posts.

Peru's President Alberto Fujimori announced a unilateral cease-fire Monday. Ecuador said its forces wouldn't shoot as long as Peruvian troops held their fire.

Argentine President Carlos Menem said Fujimori warned him clashes could still occur because it was impossible to immediately inform all the soldiers in the isolated area of the truce. The disputed jungle zone is filled with snipers who may not have heard of the cease-fire, so there could still be fighting, Menem quoted Fujimori as telling him in a telephone conversation.

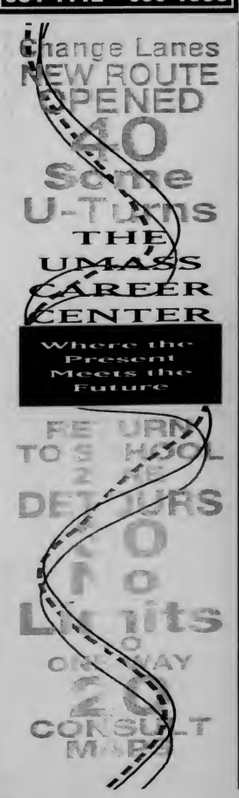
Ecuador's Defense Ministry said its troops would remain on maximum alert until there was a confirmed end to hostilities in the area 220 miles southeast of Quito and 590 miles north of Lima, the Peruvian capital.

The fighting erupted Jan. 26 over an unmarked 48-mile stretch of border in the Cordillera del Condor mountains that is said to contain valuable minerals, including gold and oil. Both sides blamed the other for starting it.

While who holds what is still in dispute, both sides had agreed to stop shooting.

"Ecuadorean troops concentrated on the Cenepa River will not fire one single shot if they are not provoked," ministry spokesman Col. Alberto Molina said Tuesday.

Both sides believe the other is being arbitrary in saying where the bases are actually located.



The University Career Center presents

THE ANNUAL CAMPUS-WIDE CAREER FAIR

Wednesday, February 15, 1995
10:00am - 3:00pm
Campus Center Auditorium and Lower Concourse

Full-Time Opportunities for Undergraduate and Graduate Students
All Majors

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief — Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager — Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager — Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Guzley Advertising Production Manager — Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jessica Taverna News Editor

Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Eric Abetman Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1984. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The secrets revealed in the palm

On July 6, 1993, there was an article in The New York Times that read, "Palms read, fortunes told, but no guarantees offered."

Last December, "DateLine" on NBC did a story on a "fake" fortune teller who scammed thousands of dollars off of people by telling them that there was bad luck in their future and they would have to pay money for a secret spell to get rid of it. The entire scam was videotaped and when the fortune teller was approached about it, she denied the entire thing.

Fortune tellers are everywhere.

Mostly women, these people claim that by either reading your palm, or reading tarot cards, they can foresee your future and tell you about your past. And although so many people say that they do not believe in fortune tellers, curiosity kills them, and fortune tellers stay in business.

Mostly women, these people claim that by either reading your palm, or reading tarot cards, they can foresee your future.

Geri Sahn

The biggest fortune telling scams are done on the telephone. There are more than 100 900-numbers available for people to call to get their fortunes told. I may be getting scammed by paying five dollars to get my palm read, but at least I am never tempted to call a number and pay more than two dollars per minute to get my fortune told.

In Seaside, N.J., there are three fortune tellers on the boardwalk. Every summer, I used to go to all three, but I recently narrowed it down to the one — Madame Isabelle. (She gives me the most detail about what she sees in my future.) The last time I visited her I asked her how much money she made reading people's palms. She smiled and said, "Money is not the issue. I have a special gift and that is my riches."

A good friend of mine has been going to his "personal" fortune teller for more than five years. He tapes his sessions and plays them back every so often to see if anything has come true. He says a lot of what she tells him does happen, but what does, could happen to anyone. (For example, take a trip.)

Many people fear getting their palms read because they don't want to hear anything bad. From my experience, palm readers never tell you anything bad. I am always getting married in my late 20s. I always have at least two children. And I am always going to live until my late 70s. Whenever I have gotten my palm read the predictions have always been generalizations.

Yet, when I went to see Isabelle last August she told me that by the end of the year I would have to choose between two men, one with the first name beginning in "C," and the other "J." Whomever I was with I would end up marrying the year I graduate from college. Well, Isabelle, I have no men in my life right now and the end of the year was a month and a half ago.

I recently purchased a book titled Revealing Hands, by Richard Webster. The author gives detailed descriptions about the meaning of each line on a person's palm. He also gives instructions on how to interpret a person's past and future by looking at the shape and size of their fingers. It will be impossible for me to memorize what each line means, but it is fun trying to learn how to read basic lines such as the life, heart, head and destiny line.

I don't believe palm reading is true, but it is entertaining to hear what a fortune teller says to you. It is also a good conversation starter at a party. When I tell people that I just got a palm reading book and I am learning how to read palms, they immediately throw out their hands, eager to know what the lines say about their futures.

Palm reading should be just that — a good conversation starter. People who are willing to spend thousands of dollars to get their fortunes told are desperate for some answers, and fortune tellers who can get the money, and take the money, definitely have a special talent.

Geri Sahn is a Collegian columnist.

Age discrimination affects students

Paul Sarkis

There is a very large group of people out there who are still being discriminated against. Anyone reading this is probably part of that group. Without this group, the world would collapse, and yet this group is still being denied certain rights and privileges by the powers that be.

Well then, who could this group be that are still being repressed after so many years? Anyone under 25. That's right it is you and me and all the other young people of our land who still live under unfair, and completely unnecessary restrictions.

To understand how, let's go back to government class. Remember one of the prerequisites for being president? Anyone? Anyone?

Yep, you must be 35 years of age. You got it, you can't lead us unless you are old enough to know the difference between what's right and what's wrong. After all, no one under 35 would be fit to hold the presidency.

It is only after years of maturity and a safe distancing from the haphazard ways of youth that one could hold such a high position. This should not only anger anyone under 35, it should enrage all voters who's choice is being limited exclusively to over-the-hillers, who's outlook has been so jaded by the ills of the world that no new thinking could possibly come out of them.

This restriction, like so many others placed on government positions, is completely unnecessary. If a candidate is not fit to hold office than by all means do not vote for him, but there is no magical age after which a person becomes endowed with the intuitiveness necessary to run our nation.

Of course you can't vote until you're 18 anyway, because by then you have learned that the laws concerning such criteria are obviously true wisdom having been written in the Constitution by our great founders.

What we have here is nothing short of discrimination by the people who hold power (old people) against those whom they lord over (young people.) And it isn't just the presidency, oh no, there are plenty of other positions which, it would seem, are equally in need of the wisdom of the ages.

Article 1, Section 3, Line 3 of the Constitution reads "No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained the age of 30 years," and Representatives must be 25. These seem more like arbitrary numbers filled in so the boys down in Philly could get back to their plantations, then a well thought out criteria for holding higher offices.

So they tell us what to do, and more importantly what not to do. They fund our education, and they slash said funds. They try to censor our music and our culture. They restricted our right to consume alcohol, a natural substance which has been around for centuries, an act akin to denying us honey or bread.

Yet, they remain distanced from our lives, and our ideals, and our needs. Every other group has they ability to attain office to achieve their ends, yet we, the young people, remain as the only group explicitly denied the right of holding such offices.

This may not offend, or even bother some of those under 25, yet it is painfully obvious that these restrictions are as useless as an appendix and would not be tolerated by any other group.

Paul Sarkis is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major.

The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SIR, WHERE EXACTLY ARE WE GETTING OUR CLIENTS FOR "NOTHIN' BUT ORPHANS"?
THAT'S THE EASY PART, HONEY. WE JUST TAKE 'EM FROM UNDERAGE, UNFIT, UNWED MOTHERS!
OH...
BUT ISN'T THAT KIDNAPPING?
NOT FOR MUCH LONGER. IT'S NUMBER THREE IN NEWT'S CONTRACT.

Opinion/Editorial

COLLEGIAN STAFF ART BY JEFF WILSON

Letters to the Editor

Student suggests campus workshops

To the editor:

While reading the cover article and letter to the editor which was found in the Collegian's February 13 edition that dealt with the derogatory comments elicited by one of the food servers, I was left to ponder the possible mediums that were being talked about as conducive for finding a solution to the problem.

After reading the first article, there seemed to be allusions to a possible basketball sit-in, as well as prompts for the student body to direct energy at the chancellor of this University in hopes, I gathered, of setting up extensive training for University employees on racial and cultural diversity issues, as well as notifying the chancellor of any other incidents that might be of a similar nature.

What I found surprising, while not denying the effectiveness of these measures, was the fact that they seemed to be only a first step in the process of battling racism on campus. And I think they fall short of the second, and maybe most important step of creating a medium through which the students on this campus can put our raised consciousness to use, by establishing a level of discourse which would enable us to talk about these issues and begin to deal with them.

I find that at certain times consciousness on this campus concerning racial issues are raised, but there are no mediums through which students can get together and talk about our own problems, through dialogue engineered by our own agendas, rather than relying on the slow, unpredictable processes of administrators and the like. Would it not be possible to approach a few willing faculty members to set up some type of classroom setting where students could begin to address some of these issues in an environment where knowledgeable faculty members could be present to help lend focus to student meetings?

At this point one might say well that's all well and nice but who would set this up, and who's agenda would run these meetings, and wouldn't they have the possibility of getting a bit tense, or maybe unproductive. And finally what use would they be when the only people who would show up are probably the very people who are already aware about these issues and are trying to deal with them in their own ways, day by day, leaving out the people that were chanting, "We want hoops," at Rutgers in response to the student sit-in.

To this I can only reply that I don't have all the answers, but I'm sure that in trying to deal with these issues it will not be very comfortable and may uncover a lot of things many people don't like to see, or never saw. But what is the use of waiting? What are we waiting for? If we can't do this on a college campus where higher learning is one of the driving forces behind what we do, how will we possibly do it outside of school when the dynamics of economics, and politics become central figures in determining how we think and behave?

My suggestion is just one idea, and is not aimed at undermining the ideas that have been mentioned before, but to admit that while they may be a necessary first step in dealing with the problem of racism on this campus, I also believe there is another, integral part to this solution, and that is getting students together to talk about our own attitudes about these issues, in an attempt to break down the stereotypes that are allowed to exist due to our lack of communication amongst each other.

Michael Doyle
Amherst

Campus racism is deeply rooted

To the editor:

The racist comments by the employee at the Franklin Dining Commons last Wednesday is yet another indication of how deeply racism is rooted within this campus and in society. From Francis Lawrence to Emily Tozloski, from University presidents to Food Services staff, the thread that binds seems to be built on racism and bigotry.

From the racist targeting of Black leaders invited to speak on campus, to the leaked transcripts of Black students and the recent assaults on minority and foreign students, it is clear that this campus has a long way to go before it can claim any kind of racial justice.

It may be a first step to suspend the Food Services employee for her remark, but what about the tenured professor in Plant and Soil science, Professor Haim Gunner, who termed Minister Farrakhan and Professor Tony Martin as "despicable" people? The silence from the chancellor's office on the issue of the professor's remark has been deafening.

What about the "investigation" into the leaked transcripts of the Black student athletes? So far, the only response has been the chancellor's statement that we all "have the responsibility to preserve the confidentiality of such records." No one has been held accountable for this racist and unlawful act.

Recent incidents, like the racially abusive threats by Badge #49 of the campus police against the coordinator of the Graduate Women's Network, a student from India, and last Thursday's physical assault on an Asian student near Memorial Hall show that while the campus police are not "investigating" racial assaults, they are engaged in a few of their own.

So long as the University refuses to hold individuals accountable for their acts and challenge the institutionalized culture of racism on campus, there can be no true awareness or appreciation of campus diversity, and no progress on issues of racial justice at UMass.

Prasad Venugopal
Amherst

Hillel responds to racial incident

To the editor:

On behalf of the Jewish community at the University of Massachusetts, we condemn the racial slur uttered by food services employee Emily Tozloski. We also join other groups who call for her termination from employment at this University. Hillel also offers support to the victim of this incident, Ronald Dottin. Racism of any kind and bigotry will not be tolerated at this campus. For the past 50 years, Hillel has been on the forefront of fighting racism directed toward all minority students, not just at the Jewish community. Hillel wishes to join any student group who is sincere about fighting bigotry of all types on this campus. Hillel will continue to passionately fight bigotry at UMass and will attempt to work with all minority communities which share our desire to end the intolerance and hatred which festers on our campus.

Alan Weinfeld
UMass Hillel

Student comic treated poorly

To the editor:

The Fire and Water Cafe in Northampton made my first attempt at stand-up comedy a nightmare. I was told to stop in the middle of my act so that a band could set up because they were running late! (Even though I had previously spoken to the band and was told that I could perform before they went on and the audience objected to my removal.)

It was bad enough that I had to fight to get on stage after I had already signed up for "open mic," but being interrupted by a so-called "assistant" who decided to stand next to me for a long time in attempt to bully me off stage was just unbelievable. After defending my right to continue with my act, I finally gave up when the radio went on. That was just plain unprofessional.

I was treated with insolence and downright asinine behavior. "Open mic" is a farce at the Fire and Water. Respect for art — my act should have resulted in pride, and not an anxiety attack.

I suggest you all stick with the Haymarket. They may have sold out with their renovated "yuppitization," but at least their bad attitudes are civil.

In conclusion, the employees and the employees and employers (with the exception of Cricket and possibly others who were not working Monday night), were rude and more annoying than Kennedy from MTV. Plus, $2.50 is way too much for a peanut butter and jelly sandwich — I don't care if there is a cup of fruit on the side.

And to think it was the crowd I was stressed over and worried about for a week! I never thought it would have been the management.

Leslie Nirenstein
Amherst

To the editor:

While walking through the hallway of my residential dorm, I noticed a certain flier offering work study to students. This flier stated that the Fort River School in Amherst was looking for applicants seeking positions in a "multicultural afterschool program." This was followed with a brief description of the background of the program and a work schedule along with a phone number to contact if interested.

The next line, highlighted with a bold faced asterisk, totally offended me. It stated "...people of color strongly encouraged to apply!" I took this note as a biased, often overlooked example of reverse racism. Does this insinuate that Whites are not strongly encouraged to apply as well because they are not multiculturally aware or conscious? Per se, if this flier stated "...people of non-color (Whites) are strongly encouraged to apply" would "colored" groups or organizations be upset or feel discriminated against? I truly feel that this flier is racially discriminatory and I am also a firm believer in equal opportunity for all based on merit, qualifications, and personal reference rather than racial quotas, gender, or age. So all interested parties wishing to apply be sure to visit a tanning salon so you too can be a person of "color."

Anthony White
Patterson

Arts & Living

UPC fights small budget, misconceptions to bring acts to UMass

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

Do you know how such diverse acts as The Grateful Dead, The Talking Heads, Velocity Girl, Pearl Jam, De La Soul and The Mighty Mighty Bosstones found their way onto the stage at UMass? Do the higher-ups in the administration have some great gift for picking acts to play on campus — many before they hit it big?

Well, not quite. Just about every show that you may have attended at UMass was organized from start to finish by the student run organization known as University Productions & Concerts (UPC).

Besides bringing the student body the Spring Concert since 1981, UPC has had a long history of getting bands that were destined for greatness to appear on campus before one had to fight long lines and pay service fees to see them.

Formed in 1977 (going by the name Union Program Council until 1992), UPC has grown into one of the largest student run concert production companies in the country, giving the students at UMass an opportunity to learn what it takes to put on a concert.

UPC allows students to get involved in promotions, hospitality, stage crew and security.

"People don't realize how much they can get involved," says Caralyn Pollich, UPC's production manager. "People see the contracts and they can meet the bands, it's a lot of fun."

In recent years, however, the number of people interested in putting on the concerts has seen a decline. UPC is run by 12 UMass undergraduate students and has a current general committee member count of about 30 — which poses a problem if students want to continue to see a diverse range of music on campus.

"It's kind of a shame," says Todd Wahlstrom, UPC's business manager. "It used to be up around 200."

The lack of current members is a problem that could possibly place the spring concert in jeopardy due to the fact that a certain number of security volunteers is required for the concert to take place. And the declining numbers leave staff members like Pollich concerned and puzzled.

"I've been involved for four years and I've seen what it used to be," she says. "Over the years the numbers have been shrinking increasingly. It puzzles me why. We've taken steps to get interest up, but its been hard. We need all the help we can get, especially around Spring Concert time."

UPC usually sees a boost in interest towards the end of the spring semester, as many students only equate UPC with the Spring Concert, and this is just one of the problems and misconceptions that the group faces. Many of them stem from competition by outside forces such as Pearl Street, Smith College and lately, the Mullins Center.

"The shows at Smith, which are put on by a promoter from Pearl St. hurt us because they're shows that are in our exact price range," says Talent Coordinator Terry Retelle. "Even the Mullins Center pushes it, we've felt more impact this semester already, and every semester it's getting more competitive."

But Promotions Director Stacey Peck points out that UPC is still competitive with other area venues.

"One of UPC's biggest problems isn't the size of the other venues, it's just the fact that we have less manpower and money," she says. "We've always been able to compete with Pearl Street and other places. The Mullins Center doesn't really take away that much of the competition, it's mainly a matter of timing, who gets the bid first and who has the money."

Every year UPC gets a certain amount of money through a proposal to the Student Government Association to produce concerts which makes getting acts that cost in the hundreds of thousands of dollars an impossibility. Instead, the group focuses on bringing in smaller acts before they hit the top of the charts.

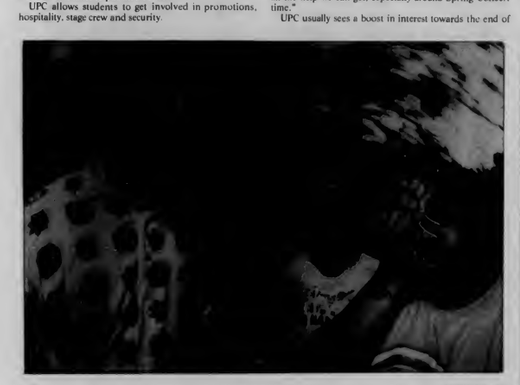
Getting involved is a major aspect of the UPC philosophy. Most concerts are run (with the exception of some of the band's personal crews), from the first phone call, through the contract negotiations and up until the day of the show and the final event, by the students who volunteer.

Committee members are also encouraged to contribute their own ideas for shows.

"At general committee meetings, we have a blue book that goes around," says Peck. "People write in their suggestions."

So what's in store for the UMass population for the rest of the year? Well, first of all, UPC is planning on altering its strategy a bit in order to improve the annual Spring Concert.

"We are going to try to do something different this year which is have a few less shows before the Spring Concert," says Peck. "We're thinking of one or two before the spring concert as opposed to three or four. We want to try and have a bigger and better Spring Concert. We felt that last year people weren't really happy it."



COURTESY GUY AROCH

De La Soul is just one of the many bands that UPC has brought to UMass in the past years.

MENTAL HEALTH GROUPS SPRING 1995

Topic-Focused Groups being offered by the Mental Health Division of UHS this Spring are:

Self-Exploration Group
Tuesdays 3-4:30

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families Process Therapy Group
Tuesdays 3-4:30

Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families in Spanish
Wednesdays 3:30-5

Exploring Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Identities
Thursays 3-4:30

Groups are open to students covered by the health plan and to Kaiser members whose site is UHS. Groups begin in early March. Pre-group interviews are required. For information or to sign up for a pre-group interview call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North. We're open M-F 8-5

Winter CLOTHING SALE

ZAMA

Amherst

ΣΣΣ ΣΣΣ ΣΣΣ ΣΣΣ

Make the most of your college career... Join an organization where YOU can make a difference!

Sigma Sigma Sigma
Come grow with us!

Come and find out more about us:

Feb. 14-16 Information table
Campus Center Concourse

Feb. 15 "Oh What A Night"
6-8 pm CC room 909

Feb. 16 "Sigmaopoly" 6-8
CC room 801

For more information call Pam at 253-0854.

ΣΣΣ ΣΣΣ ΣΣΣ ΣΣΣ

HURRY! GET YOUR SENIOR INDEX YEARBOOK PHOTO NOW!

Campus Center Rm. 901-902

All this week & next week!

Schedule a free sitting
(800) 836-0558

Be a part of the first all color yearbook in New England!

Gump, Fiction & Bullets lead Oscar nominations

By Jon Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Forrest Gump, the feel-good hit about a simpleton who triumphs in the end, received 13 Academy Award nominations yesterday, the most for any movie in nearly three decades. Its star, Tom Hanks, got a shot at a second consecutive Oscar for best actor.

The 13 nominations are the most for any movie since 1966's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The record is 14 nominations, captured by the Bette Davis soaper All About Eve in 1950, the record for actual wins is the 1959 film, Ben-Hur with 11.

Nominated with Gump for the best picture award were the British comedy Four Weddings and a Funeral, the bloody crime epic Pulp Fiction, the '50s era TV expose Quiz Show and Tim Robbins/Morgan Freeman prison drama The Shawshank Redemption.

The winners will be announced March 27 in a ceremony broadcast live by ABC. David Letterman will be the host.

Besides Hanks, who won the award last year for his work in Philadelphia, the best actor nominees were Morgan Freeman in The Shawshank Redemption, Nigel Hawthorne in The Madness of King George, Paul Newman in Nobody's Fool and John Travolta in Pulp Fiction.

"It's been 17 years since my last nomination," said Travolta, whose previous bid was for Saturday Night Fever. I never dreamed it would take so long to get another one."

Two-time winner Jodie Foster was nominated for best actress for her starring role in Nell. She will face Jessica Lange in Blue Sky, Miranda Richardson in Tom & Viv, Winona Ryder in Little Women and Susan Sarandon in The Client. Forrest Gump co-producer Steve Tisch, whose birthday is today, watched the televised nominations at home with his birthday present, a puppy named Forrest.

"When he heard his name, he woke up," Tisch said. "It was all thrilling."

Trailing Gump with seven nominations apiece were Woody Allen's roaring '20s theater comedy Bullets Over Broadway, Pulp Fiction and The Shawshank Redemption. Pulp Fiction's Samuel L. Jackson was nominated for best supporting actor, as were Martin Landau in Tim Burton's biography of filmmaker Ed Wood, Chazz Palminteri in Bullets Over Broadway, Paul Scofield in Quiz Show and

Turn to OSCARS, page 7

COURTESY BARRY WETCHER

Paul Scofield is nominated for Best Supporting Actor in Quiz Show.

STILL INTERESTED IN WRITING FOR ARTS & LIVING?

Then come on down. We are always looking for fresh perspectives on music, art, theater and dance. Just stop by the Collegian and ask to talk to Matt Audette.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385

- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
- Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems.
- We provide substitute transportation
- Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities

Shop Registration # RS1212

Where Musical Worlds Collide

music from the motion picture
HIGHER LEARNING

Contains all new recordings from:
Ice Cube
Tori Amos
Mista Grimm
Rage Against The Machine
Me'Shell NdegéOcello
OutKast
Liz Phair
Eve's Plum
The Brand New Heavies
Raphael Saadiq (of Tony! Toni! Toné!)
Zhané
Stanley Clarke

UMass Students:
Spend Next Academic Year In France!!

Earn 30 credits in Humanities, Arts and Sciences!!

A Bargain: Comparable to A Year in Amherst!!

UMass Amherst Academic Year In France

1995-1996 Paris/Rouen Program

General Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 15
5:00 p.m.
301 Herter Hall

Study in a congenial atmosphere with a staff of French university professors carefully chosen for the students in our Program. Opportunities for additional courses in many fields!

Fall Orientation in a luxurious Parisian student center. Academic year in nearby Rouen, in the beautiful Seine river valley of Upper Normandy, at the University of Rouen (15,000 students). Excursions throughout the year (Loire Valley, Mon-Saint-Michael and Chartres; the Normandy beaches; etc.). Ample time for travel throughout Britain and the continent. Convenient to airlines and high-speed rail facilities (TGV). Enjoy the charm of a bustling, ultra-modern French city framed in the architectural splendor of an illustrious past. One of the great cultural centers of Western Europe will be your home for 8 months!

MORE TREADMILLS!
MORE STAIRMASTERS!
MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

TONIGHT
Simply the 70's
weekly special
ROLLING ROCK
Pitchers $4.75 12 oz. Btls $1.75
new food specials
1/2 PRICE ALL APPETIZERS AND NACHOS
9:30 till 11:00
•Dancing•
•No Cover•
THE PUB
•Free T-Shirts•
•Cash Door Prize•
•Smokng Section
10:00pm-1:00•
15 east pleasant street • amherst

RUSH
PIKE
SPRING '95
JUST DO IT.
February 15, 16, 20, 21
Tonight at 8-10 p.m. •418 N. Pleasant St.
For more information, call robert Maffei at 549-5112

KATINA'S NIGHTCLUB
RT-9 HADLEY • 413/586-4463
JOHN VALBY
"DR. DIRTY"
FRIDAY
FEB. 17TH
A great night of unique side-splitting comedy!
18+ SHOW

Oscars

continued from page 6

Gary Sinise in Forrest Gump.

Two performers from Bullets Over Broadway — Jennifer Tilly and Dianne Wiest — were named for best supporting actress. The other three selections were Rosemary Harris in Tom & Viv, Helen Mirren in The Madness of King George and Uma Thurman in Pulp Fiction. The news caught Harris by surprise during lunch at London's Royal National Theater, where she is rehearsing a role in Women of Troy.

"I was eating some cabbage in the canteen and it got quite stuck in my throat," she said. "It's rather hard to concentrate at the moment. I'm supposed to be back 2,000 years ago, and suddenly everything's whirling around."

In the documentary feature category, Hoop Dreams failed to get nominated despite some of the best reviews of the year.

"Someone please explain that to me because I'd like to know," said a disappointed Catherine Allan of St. Paul, Minn., public television station KTCA-TV, which co-produced the story of two high school basketball stars.

Woody Allen was nominated for both co-writing and directing Bullets Over Broadway. Also nominated for directing were Robert Zemeckis (Forrest Gump), Quentin Tarantino (Pulp Fiction), Robert Redford (Quiz Show) and Krzysztof Kieslowski (Red).

Macedonia's Before the Rain was picked as one of the five top foreign-language films. It will compete against Russia's Burnt By the Sun, Taiwan's Eat Drink Man Woman, Belgium's Farinelli: Il Castrato and Cuba's Strawberry and Chocolate.

It was the first nominations for both Cuba and Macedonia.

In the Oscars, approximately 5,000 Academy members vote on the best picture selections. Nominations in other categories are done by specific Academy branches; the nearly 1,300 members of the acting branch, for example, vote on the acting nominations.

This coupon good for one Mass Daily Collegian

Free at many fine establishments throughout the Pioneer Valley

RETAIL MANAGERS

You're Right On Target With CVS

EXCELLENT SALARIES & BENEFITS PROMOTION FROM WITHIN POLICY
CVS

At CVS we have opportunities that only a leader in the industry can offer. Make your choice CVS.

We currently have opportunities available throughout Massachusetts.

If you have retail career goals, stop by and see us at the University Career Fair on:

Wednesday, Feb. 15 from 10am-3pm in the Campus Center Auditorium, Table #7

If unable to attend, please send/fax resumes to CVS Pharmacy, Bristol Shopping Center, 627 Farmington Ave., Rte. 6, Bristol, CT 06010. Phone: (203) 584-8261. Fax: (203) 589-8102. Attn: Grace Figueredo.

CVS pharmacy
An affirmative action/ equal opportunity employer.
A subsidiary of Melville Corp.

HEY YOU!

Are you bored? Got nothing to do?

Looking to do something with that [illegible] writing talent? Curious to all the [illegible] Career [illegible]

Then come write for the Collegian! We always need fresh, new writers!

Collegian Campus Center 113 545-3500

MITRE

WHERE MINDS MEET TECHNOLOGY.

MITRE people share responsibility for delivering high-quality, cost-effective, technically-advanced solutions for our nation's evolving information systems needs. We are currently looking for students with specialization in Computer Science or Electrical/Computer Engineering.

Full-time positions exist for BS/MS graduates, as well as co-op opportunities for juniors and seniors in the following areas: Imagery Systems, Human Computer Interaction, Information Systems Security, and Graphics-Based Mission Planning Tools.

If you have experience or knowledge in any of the following areas, we invite you to stop by MITRE's booth at the Career Fair on February 15th or the Co-op Fair on February 16th:

- Application development in C, C++, Ada or Lisp
- Object-Oriented analysis and design
- UNIX system internals
- GUI development in X-windows environment
- Open systems networking technologies and network programming in a TCP/IP environment
- Computer and communications security issues

IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO VISIT US AT THE CAREER FAIRS, MAIL A RESUME AND TRANSCRIPT TO:

THE MITRE CORPORATION ATTN: LISA TREARCHIS, HUMAN RESOURCES, 202 BURLINGTON ROAD, MS/UMA, BEDFORD, MA 01730-1420 SEND RESUME VIA E-MAIL TO: ITREARCH@MITRE.ORG

MITRE IS PROUD TO BE AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY AFFIRMATIVE ACTION EMPLOYER AND IS COMMITTED TO DIVERSITY IN OUR WORKFORCE. U.S. CITIZENSHIP REQUIRED.

Join an Established & Growing Software Company...

Who are we?

DataViz, Inc...

- Is a leading developer and marketer of Windows and Macintosh retail software
- Works closely with Microsoft, Apple, Novell/WordPerfect, Lotus and other prominent software companies
- Has been in business for over 10 years
- Has an open "non-bureaucratic" atmosphere where new product ideas and insights are always welcome
- Is on top of new technology such as PDA's, Internet, Windows '95, OLE, etc.

Who are we looking for?

Intelligent, energetic and computer-minded college graduates for postions in...

- Sales & Marketing
- Software Engineering

Don't miss the opportunity to talk to DataViz at the Career Fair!

DATAVIZ

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAP

Come to the Co-op Job Fair

Test Drive a Career

Thursday, February 16, 1995
10:00am - 3:30pm
Campus Center Auditorium

Summer and Semester Paid Positions
Undergraduate and Graduate Students
All Majors

Minimum wage hike offered by Democrats

By Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supported by pleas from low-wage workers, Democrats introduced legislation Tuesday to raise the minimum wage and said they would try to attach it to Republican welfare-reform and tax-reduction bills.

"It's time...to lift up those who are falling behind," said House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt (D-Mo.), speaking at a news conference with more than a dozen Democratic lawmakers and four minimum-wage workers.

Workers speak out

The sometimes teary-eyed workers — from Florida, West Virginia, Ohio and Maryland — described how they are barely making ends meet.

"Right now my children are laying on the floor because we don't have enough money for a bed," said Leticia Garza, a cashier in Toledo, Ohio, earning $4.25 an hour.

Her husband makes $5 an hour as a forklift operator. They have two children, ages 6 and 2.

The increase, proposed a week and a half ago by President Clinton, would raise the $4.25 minimum wage to $5.15 over two years.

Democrats at the news conference said repeatedly they planned to make it the "defining issue" between Democrats and Republicans this year.

And Gephardt promised repeated attempts to attach the increase to welfare-reform and tax-cutting legislation until Republicans "come to their senses" and support it.

"The best solution to welfare is a job, but a job that demands 40 hours a week, 52 weeks a year but still condemns a working family to poverty is no job at all," said Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D).

According to backers of the increase, 70 percent of minimum-wage earners are adults and 40 percent work full time, collecting an annual salary of about $8,800.

Republicans argue against hike

But Republicans have argued that raising the minimum wage will destroy jobs and make it more difficult for young low-skilled workers, many of them minorities, to break into the labor force and acquire the skills to better their circumstances.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey (R-Texas) has said he will fight Clinton's proposal "with every fiber of my being." Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., said Republicans have in the past supported minimum wage increases and Armey's comment "shows how extreme it has all become here."

"I mean we reserve this kind of passion for trying to prevent nuclear wars, not decent wages for people," he said.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich said, despite GOP contentions, recent research shows a modest increase in the minimum wage, of the type proposed by Clinton, would have a negligible affect on the number of jobs available.

"This is not a job killer," he said.

AMA develops program to start doctor networks

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American Medical Association, worried that doctors are losing control over patient care to insurers, began a program Tuesday to help physicians create their own managed-care networks.

The Physicians Capital Source will provide legal, financial and other advice and help link doctors with investment banks and venture capitalists.

"It's a way for physicians to preserve some of their autonomy," said Dr. Thomas R. Reardon, the AMA's secretary-treasurer. "They can form their own networks and determine their own destiny."

Managed-care plans are claiming an increasing share of the $900 billion U.S. health care market, with insurance companies, hospitals, physicians and other providers scrambling to make new business arrangements.

Traditionally, doctors and hospitals were paid for whatever services they provided. But managed-care plans try to hold down costs by paying set monthly fees per patient.

"Hospitals and insurance companies are organizing these networks, not physicians themselves," said Reardon, a general practitioner from Portland, Ore.

Most physicians lack the business management skills required to establish their own networks, said Reardon.

That is where the Physicians Capital Source comes in. The capital is needed to hire the legal, business and other managed-care expertise, he said.

It can cost $100,000 to $1 million to start a "group practice without walls," and up to $16 million to establish a health maintenance organization with its own full-time doctors and facilities, the AMA said.

■ band

continued from page 1

"Rage in the Cage" theme song, Hannum said.

"That's what the basketball team used to be," said Hannum. "Now it's 'Refuse to Lose'."

Now that the J. Geils Band tune has been out of commission for a while, Hannum said many of the fans would probably not even recognize the old theme.

According to Beaulieu, George N. Parks, director of the Minuteman Marching Band, came across a James Brown tune titled "Refuse to Lose."

"It's cool, it's funk, I think it will do well," said Beaulieu. "Hopefully the crowds will pick it up quickly enough and they'll go with it."

Beaulieu said there is a chant section like the old song, but he was unsure if the band would play the new song at last night's game against George Washington.

"It needs to be what the 'Rage in the Cage' was," said Hannum. "We have the greatest fans in the country, and we have to energize them."

■ crime bill

continued from page 1

The vote was immediately criticized by police groups.

Passage gave the new Republican majority their fifth major legislative triumph less than halfway through the 100 days in which their "Contract With America" promised votes on a number of issues.

The House GOP previously won passage of a balanced-budget amendment, a measure giving the president a line-item veto on spending bills, a bill to end unfunded mandates on state and local governments and a bill, already signed into law, making lawmakers abide by the same employment laws private employers must obey.

The crime package faces a precarious future. "We can't do it in six parts" because of Senate filibuster rules that could draw out debate indefinitely, Hatch said. "We're going to have to come up with our own Senate bill," he said, predicting it would take at least a month before it emerges from his committee.

All kinds of stuff is going on at UMass.
We know you have an opinion.
Write for the Collegian Editorial / Opinion page.
See Tracy Monahen 113 Campus Center, or call 545-3500.

COURTESY JAMIE LASS

Letters to Cleo (l to r): Greg McKenna, Scott Riebling, Stacy Jones, Kay Hanley and Michael Eisenstein.

Boston's Letters To Cleo blend cool pop & guitar–driven rock

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

Ask anyone what bands are currently on the verge of bursting out of the Boston music scene and Letters To Cleo is sure to be somewhere on their list. You can find out why this Thursday night when they take the stage at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton.

This Beantown quintet has enjoyed a steady rise to popularity since its inception in 1988 as a new wave band and is currently experiencing an even greater rise in attention due to their track "Here and Now," featured on the "Melrose Place" soundtrack. The track is also featured on the re-issue version of the band's debut CD entitled Aurora Gory Alice.

The album, originally released on CherryDisc two years ago, is being re-released by Giant records (in association with CherryDisc) with "Rim Shak" and "Here and Now" added on to the new version.

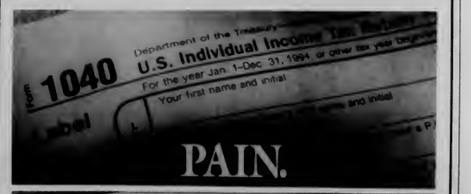
Letters to Cleo features vocalist Kay Hanley, guitarists Mike Eisenstein and Greg McKenna, bassist Scott Reibling and drummer Stacy Jones and cite their influences as ranging from Bob Mould to the Cocteau Twins.

The band released a self–produced cassette in 1991 and in 1992 found themselves as semi–finalists in the WBCN Rock n' Roll Rumble. Shortly thereafter they garnered a deal with New York's Famous Music publishing and earned numerous accolades from Boston radio stations and music reviewers.

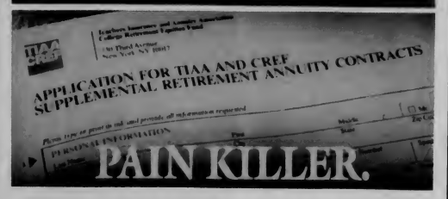
Now the band, named after Hanley's childhood friend and pen pal, is finally getting their due, and is even starting to see increased air play on MTV. This makes Thursday night a great chance to see a rising talent in their element — before they move on to bigger pastures.

Letters to Cleo will play Pearl Street on Thursday night along with Gigolo Aunts and The Gravel Pit. The show is 18+. For more information call 584–7771.

PRINCIPLES OF SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING



Department of the Treasury
1040
U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
For the year Jan 1-Dec 31, 1994 or other tax year beginning
Your first name and initial
PAIN.



For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets — money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pre-tax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, we offer a wide range of allocation choices — from TIAA's traditional annuity, with its guarantees of principal and interest, to the seven diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity. What's more, our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call our planning specialists at 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide-calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

Call today — it couldn't hurt.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

*Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1994; Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., Lipper-Directors' Analytical Data, 1994 (Quarterly). CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 5509 for a CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

© 1995 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund

SKI
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS '95
There's only one... "PARTY IN THE SNOW!" SPRING BREAK '95
ONLY $209
MT. SNOW CAMAR
5 NIGHTS LODGING, TO TOWN COMBO
5 DAY SKI & SNOW BOARD LIFT TICKET
5 DAYS & NIGHTS OF INTERCOLLEGIATE PARTIES CONTESTS & ACTIVITIES
Call SKI TRAVEL 1-800-999-SKI-9

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

"Become Part of Something – Something BIG"
ΛΧΑ Spring Rush '95

Date	Event
Monday 2/13	Boxing (Bet on Brothers)
Wednesday 2/15	Lizard Racing
Thursday 2/16	Pool Tournament
Tuesday 2/21	Jeopardy
Wednesday 2/22	Top Dog Night

All Events Begin At 8:00PM EST
374 N. Pleasant St.
For more Info Call Kevin at Lambda Chi Alpha: 549-

Miami Heat's coach replaced by team assistant

By Karen Testa
Associated Press

MIAMI — Kevin Loughery was fired Tuesday after 3 1/2 years as coach of the Miami Heat and one day after the team's new owners took over.

Assistant Alvin Gentry replaced Loughery on a day the owners, the Arison family, also hired Dave Wohl as the team's executive vice president of basketball operations.

Wohl told Loughery he was out after Tuesday's practice. The 55-year-old Loughery, who led the Heat to the playoffs two of the last three seasons, was offered a position as vice president for player personnel.

It was not immediately known if Loughery would stay with the team.

"It was difficult for him," said Wohl, a Heat assistant coach for the team's first three seasons. "I've been in that position where I've been fired as a coach. I've had long, personal ties to Kevin."

The shakeup came one day after the NBA approved the sale of the club to the family of Carnival Cruise Lines founder Ted Arison. Wohl, 45, coached the New Jersey Nets from 1985-87.

"I'd like a young, aggressive, smart group of people running this franchise," Micky Arison said at a news conference. He added that Wohl and he "share a similar philosophy and want the same kind of things for the franchise."

Gentry, who at 40 is taking on his first coaching job, said he was torn by the developments.

"It's really kind of an unbelievable Catch-22 for me," he said. "Kevin hired me here. It was a very, very tough situation, seeing Kevin leave."

The Heat (17-29) played their first game under Gentry on Tuesday night against Milwaukee.

Gentry said his goal was to get the Heat into the playoffs. He added that he wouldn't just focus on winning but getting the inconsistent Heat to work together.

"I think the fans will accept the losses if they know they're getting an honest day's work out of the players," Gentry said.

■ NHL

continued from page 12

Newly-acquired King Randy Burridge scored the game-tying goal in L.A.'s 4-4 standoff with Detroit.

The same game produced 1995's top offensive performance by an individual player. Detroit's Sergei Federov opened up a 4-0 lead by himself scoring twice at even strength, and added a power play and a short-handed goal.

He had a chance to score a game-winner, as well, when he was awarded a penalty shot in overtime, but was stoned by Kelly Hrudy. Hrudy, who last year became the only goalie to face a regular season OT penalty shot (he stopped Tony Amonte) is perfect against them in OT.

•This week's "only in hockey" comes from the collegiate ranks...

In the heart of the nation's premiere hockey conference lies the worst collegiate rink. Merrimack's S. Peter Volpe Complex is an absolute embarrassment to the school, Hockey East and college hockey in general.

The Warriors regularly draw fewer than 1,000 fans. The school's only sport even remotely close to big time can't even sell out the tiny building. There are dozens of high schools that draw better. When UMass traveled to North Andover to take on the Warriors, the Minutemen received a louder cheer at the introductions than the home team.

The rink is well below freezing with only McDonald's-reject heat lamps to warm the crowd, and even those are ineffective. The National Anthem is a bad recording of an a capella version by Huey Lewis and the News.

Pathetic.

•As of last weekend, the behind the pole, and various other obstructed view seats that make the Boston Garden, what it is, were still available for the Bruins final regular season home game in the old building. The $16, for whatever the view, is clearly worthwhile for a chance to be a part of the history.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

BASKETBALL, ICE HOCKEY, LACROSSE, CREW, RUGBY, FIELD HOCKEY, GYMNASTICS, TENNIS, SWIMMING, WATER POLO, CYCLING, SOFTBALL, TRACK AND FIELD, SOCCER, WRESTLING, BASEBALL, ULTIMATE FRISBEE, . . .

These are just a sampling of the many sports teams and games that are constantly being played here at UMass and away.

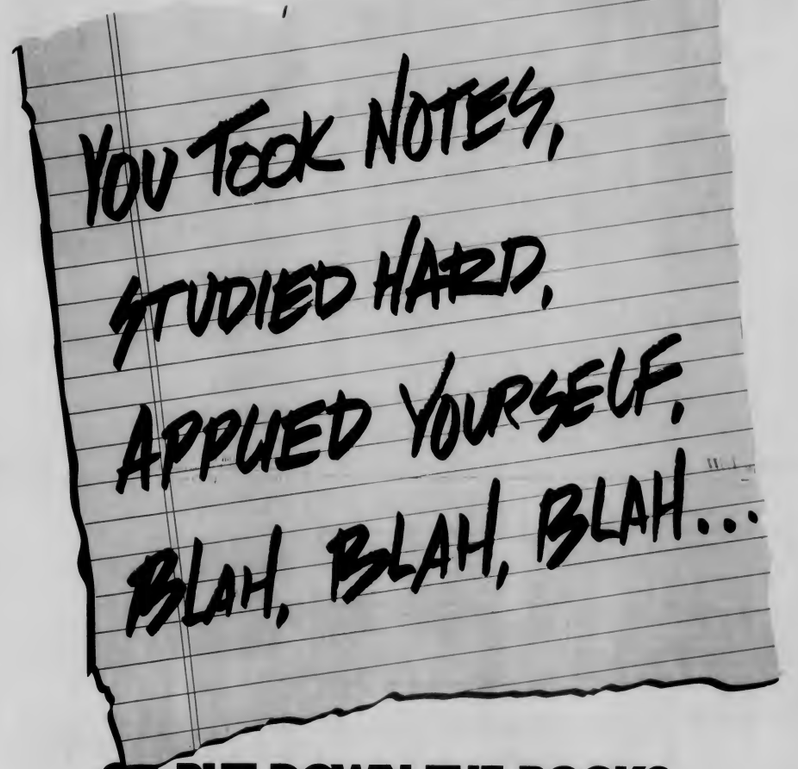
If you are interested in attending some of these games and writing about them, come on down to the Collegian office at 113 Campus Center. Andrew Bryce and Matt Vautour are anxious for new and talented writers to help them cover all of the many activities that are constantly happening here.

-OR-

IF PHOTOGRAPHY IS YOUR BAG, COME DOWN WITH YOUR CAMERA AND TALK TO PAUL BILODEAU.

JOIN OUR STAFF OF DEDICATED, WACKY AND SOMETIMES FUNNY STUDENT EMPLOYEES!

Winter SHOE SALE
ZAMA
Amherst



SO PUT DOWN THE BOOKS AND GET INTO THE GAME!

1995 SPRING BREAK PEEL & WIN GAME

AT A CAMPUS VENDING MACHINE.

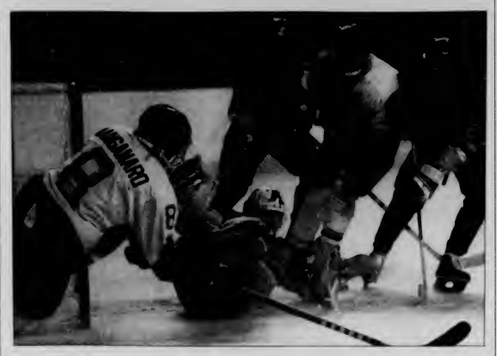
ALWAYS Coca-Cola

What you need now is a break –Spring Break. So enjoy a Coca-Cola product and let the games begin! Play the 1995 Spring Break Peel & Win Game and win "500 Bucks for Spring Break from the Coca-Cola Company." You could also win a cool T-Shirt or coupons for Coca-Cola products. So check out the 1995 Spring Break peel and win game pieces. They're on Coca-Cola products found in the specially marked vending machines on campus. So lose the books and take a break with your favorite Coca-Cola product!

POWERADE

Look for winning stickers on cans of Coca-Cola® products.

No purchase necessary. See Official Rules on display for details. © 1995 The Coca-Cola Company. "Coca-Cola," the Contour Bottle design and "PowerAde" are registered trademarks of The Coca-Cola Company.



CHRIS RACUSA / COLLEGIAN

Manganaro on ice

The Massachusetts hockey team, including Sal Manganaro (11), is currently enjoying a rest from the rigorous Hockey East schedule. The Minutemen's next game is on Feb. 17 at UMass/Lowell.

Tyson can box after release from jail

By Steve Herman
Associate Press

INDIANAPOLIS -- There is no legal reason that former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson cannot resume his boxing career once he is released from prison next month, the county's chief probation officer said Tuesday.

The lighter, however, still must serve four years probation, which includes counseling and community service.

"It's likely his supervision will be transferred to Ohio. I'll just probably oversee the case myself," said George Walker, the chief probation officer for Marion County.

Walker said once Tyson has been released from the high- to medium-security Indiana Youth Center just west of Indianapolis, he probably will return to his home in Cleveland.

"From that point on, he's on probation. There's paperwork that has to be approved through Ohio, and if he wants to do any out-of-state traveling, he'll have to let the department know where he is at all times."

Tyson was convicted in 1992 and sentenced to six years in prison for raping a teen-age Miss Black America beauty pageant contestant in his hotel room in July 1991.

"There's nothing that exempts him from fighting with the normal rules we have and just a few special ones that probably could be transferred to Ohio," Walker said. "He'll have to go through some type of counseling program based on the charge he was convicted of, and he will have to participate in a community-based program for youth. We'll find out more of that when he gets out."

Because of good behavior, which earns one day off his term for each day he stays out of trouble, he will be freed from the Plainfield prison on March 25, his original release date.

The date was set back to May 9 after Tyson was disciplined in May 1992 for threatening a guard and for disorderly conduct. But H. Christian DeBruyn, commissioner of the Indiana Department of Correction, decided to rescind the penalty because Tyson has been a model prisoner since then and deserves to be credited for good behavior, department spokeswoman Pam Pattison said Monday.

She said DeBruyn was convinced Tyson's misconduct probably resulted from a prison adjustment problem because it came so early in his term.

The administrative action by the Department of Correction is not subject to approval by the court or the county prosecutor's office. Prosecutor Scott Newman said, however, another petition to reconsider a possible release earlier than March 25 was denied by Judge Patricia Gifford last Friday.

"My predecessor had filed a response (to Tyson's petition) saying he was taking no position and letting the judge rule however she ruled," the newly elected prosecutor said Tuesday. "We filed a new response saying we oppose any early release, and oppose it rather vociferously. On Friday, the judge denied the petition, so that matter is closed."

The probation department is not involved with the date of release, Walker said.

"Once he's released through the Department of Correction, he'll come under our jurisdiction. He'll have standard rules of probation that everybody has that comes under our supervision."

■ hoops

continued from page 12

work. We've got to be more focused on what we're doing."

The Minutemen will try to get back on track tomorrow night when they take on the Duquesne Dukes at the Mullins Center.

Around the rim: With the controversy surrounding the racially inflammatory comments made by a Franklin Dining Commons employee, there were rumors of a sit-in protest similar to the one at Rutgers a week ago, but the game was played without incident...Marcus Camby participated in some light running and shooting before the game. There is speculation that the sophomore center could return as early as this weekend.

With all the hype surrounding the potential inter-New England grudge match with UConn, and with Boston College's basketball program on a down year, there has not been as much discussion of renewing the interstate rivalry.

The Boston Globe reported yesterday however that a deal is being finalized for Massachusetts to take on Boston College Dec. 9 in potentially the first college basketball game to be held at the Shawmut Center.

■ changes

continued from page 12

and pulling down 10 boards in 18 minutes of action.

Camby's absence is noted in the 1-2 record (not counting the suspended Rutgers game), but Kellogg says the team does not look at it as an excuse.

"I think we need (Marcus), but we just need to play hard and play physical. If Marcus comes back and we play the way we're playing right now, he can't carry us. We're just not playing UMass basketball."

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Lou Roe, who scored 22 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, goes up for the dunk in last night's 80-78 loss to George Washington.

George Washington 80, Massachusetts 78

At The William D. Mullins Center

George Washington (18-0)
Hart 3-4 4-8 10, Jones 5-13 3-5 14, Koul 7-13 4-6 18, Evans 6-15 6-8 20, Hammons 3-5 10-11 16, Moses 0-4 0-4 0, Calloway 0-3 2-2 2, F.Williams 0-1 0-0 0, Wise 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 24-58 29-44 80.

Massachusetts (13-3)
Dingle 2-6 3-4 7, Weeks 4-9 2-4 10, Roe 8-13 6-10 22, Padilla 3-9 2-2 10, Kellogg 0-4 2-2 2, Bright 1-7 4-8 6, M.Williams 5-20 6-8 19, Meyer 0-0 0-0 0, Nunez 0-0 0-0 0 Norville 1-1 0-0 2. Totals 24-69 25-38 78.

Halftime-GW 38, Mass. 30. 3-Point goals-GW 3-11 (Evans 2-7, Jones 1-1, Hammons 0-1, Moses 0-1, Calloway 0-1), Mass. 5-22 (M.Williams 3-11, Padilla 2-7, Dingle 0-1, Kellogg 0-3). Fouled out-Koul, Evans, Hammons, Bright. Rebounds-GW 40 (Evans 8), Mass. 51 (Roe 12). Assists-GW 8 (Jones, Koul, Evans, Hammons 2), Mass. 15 (Padilla 4). Total fouls-GW 26, Mass. 29. Technicals-GW bench, Evans, Mass. bench, Roe, Bright. A-9,493.

Player of the Game

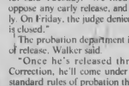
Kwame Evans – 20 points, 8 rebounds

Highlights...

The Colonials never trailed throughout the contest, as they controlled the game from start to finish. Evans, who was instrumental in the GW's upset of UMass less than two weeks ago, was impressive in the second half hitting key baskets down the stretch...The loss, UMass first in the Mullins Center, ends UMass' nation longest 41 game home winning streak...Lou Roe turned in a strong performance in defeat scoring 22 points and grabbing 12 rebounds despite battling leg cramps. Tyrone Weeks had impressive stats was well with 10 points and 10 rebounds.

Anthony Guido & Art Stapleton, Jr. on College Basketball every Tuesday

DO YOU LIKE MONEY?
Do you have lots of friends?
Promote your own party at a really funky nightclub just minutes from this campus! Transportation can be arranged from the horseshoe!
CALL MIKE AT (413)549-2244
DISCOUNTS FOR FRATS AND SPORTS TEAMS!
CALL SOON TO RESERVE THE BEST DATES



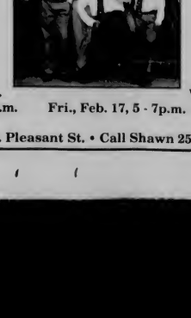
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Direct Insurance Billing
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
CARSTAR Collision Repair Centers
Where America goes for Quality Collision Repairs
North Amherst CARSTAR — 79 Old Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA — 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR — 141A Damon Road, Northampton, MA — 586-4444

Lincoln Real Estate

Apartment Rentals
253-7879 25 N. Pleasant St.

Health Phoneline
Volunteers Needed!!
The Health Education Division is looking for volunteers to work a peer health education phone line.
Training will be offered and will include topics such as sex, alcohol and other drugs, eating disorders, and stress.
If interested please contact the Health Education Division at 549-2671 x181.

The Men Of ΦΜΔ Invite You To OPEN RUSH



Tues Feb. 14, 7 - 9 p.m.
Thurs., Feb. 16, 7 - 9 p.m.
Fri., Feb. 17, 5 - 7p.m.
Wed., Feb. 15, 7 - 9 p.m.
Tues., 9 - 11p.m.
389 N. Pleasant St. • Call Shawn 256-8028

Classifieds
• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center
Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m

ACTIVITIES
Self defense and fighting class. Easy to learn and effective classes starting now. All levels. Call Mart 256-1598

ANNOUNCEMENTS
Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools - right here in Amherst! Free info session, Mon. Feb. 27th. Lord Jeffery Inn at 1pm, or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX
PVDC Oil Coop. Save money and stay warm. Join the oil coop. CSMBD, 428 Student Union or call 545-0865.
UMass Theatre Guild auditions Stephen Sondheim's Merrily We Roll Along Thurs. Feb. 16 7pm Earthfoods; Fri. 17 7pm CC 101; Sat. 18 11am CC 174. Callbacks 20. Call 545-0415.

AUTO FOR SALE
1982 Chevy Cuprice S.W. 107,500 miles automatic transmission. Reliable car and engine. Asking $900 or best offer. Please contact Fausto @ (413) 549-4809
Toyota Supra Turbo 1986, 2 door, 5 speed, black, 101,000 miles. Just serviced. New tires. Good condition. $4995 or best offer. Call David 665-2704

CAMP MATAPONI
Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available: waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, rocks course, athletics, arts and crafts. For applications call: 609-424-7755.

ENTERTAINMENT
Amherst area band Thermus is ready to play parties and functions. Call 549-8738

FOR RENT
1 room for rent in a 2 br apt. Located in a Amherst, on bus route. 275 • 253-4722 Female preferred
Cape Cod Group summer rentals-waterfront houses Falmouth area 508-477-6000
Cape Cod Seasonal rentals 1-5 bedroom houses in all towns. Rental rates Hanny Spence 508-394-2857 or 398-9367
Take over lease. Month of Feb free Call 545-5281 $822/month

FOR SALE
Airline ticket Bradley to Los Angeles a bargain at $100. Call Elaine 413-525-9083
AMP Roland slot chorus $250. Wah pedal $50. Mandolin $100. Couch $50 253-2609
Computer and or printer. Cordata 386 • mb RAM computer with software (Ind. Lotus MS Works + more) Canon BJ 200 printer $500 for both. Call 885-8787
Kitchen wood table w/ 4 chairs, good condition. $150 BO. Call 665-4608
Macintash computer. Complete system including printer only $599. Call Chris at 800-289-5685.
Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commission, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 255-5490 after 7 pm.
Revo sunglasses absolute lowest prices. Shades, H20, Classic Traveler. Call 1-800-WSHADES
Save $63. U.S. Air anywhere by March 26 $173 value for $110. For more, 549-4015.
Smith Corona 5000 word processor. $200. Call Chris 253-4913
Want a Macintash? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Carrawriters $490. Cheapoffer 549-7453

FOUND
Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn. Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain. Call Bill at 6-0704

HELP WANTED
Alaska summer employment- fishing industry. Earn up to $3,000- $6,000+ per month. Room and board! Transportation! Male/females. No experience necessary! 206-545-4155 ext A5001J
Counselors for coed N.E. PA overnight Jewish Federation camp. 3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront, + arts. Call 1-800-973-3865. On campus interviews available.
Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $2000 + /month. World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50014
Customer Service. Part time & gm 11pm. Typing/computer experience a helpful. Delivery Express 549-0077
Drivers wanted-Earn $8-$11 hour. 16.2 or 4.11. Delivery Express 549-0077
Expanding environmental company needs ambitious self-starters immediately. Great opportunity. 413-534-8533
Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Westhast on Cape Cod. Call Molly at 349-8797
Help wanted. Experienced waitstaff weekends. Apply within! Kai Chi Restaurant Mt. Farms Mall.
Live and work in Nantucket for the summer. Call Laurie 548-1303

INSTRUCTION
Guitar lessons. Enjoy the semester and earn credit. 25 years experience. Beginning/advanced. Peter 256-6641

PERSONALS
Aimee. Happy 1st anniversary. I love you more each day. This is a milestone in our long journey. All yours always, Juan
Goddess of the moon. You are the light of all my nights. You are the light of all nights. I desire your illumination, dine with me tonight and I shall howl all night. Your Prince
Grace. Today is your big day! Love Kent
Happy 21st B-Day Renee Langowski! Try not to "boot" in our room (again). Keyes + Brent Kathryn. Happy Valentine's Day. Love Ricky.
M Gomes. Thank you for disproving the notion that a good man is hard to find. Love, Angela

ROOMMATE WANTED
Female roommate to share rm in Brandywine. Available immediately. Call 549-7668

SCUBA DIVING
Diva Key Largo. Florida Spring Break. Earn 2 credits. Call Project Deep 1-800-257-0977
Earn 2 credits learning to dive. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800-257-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES
Going away? Need your pets to be taken care of? Call Jen 546-6982. Exp. with all types of animals.
Modern wares! Call the Playground 885-7568 0085, 19 2 K bps 130 mega online + CD-ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!
Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SKI SPRING BREAK
Ski Spring Break '95 intercollegiate ski weekends only $209. Includes 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (luxury condos!) 5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age 18). sponsors include Labatts Molson and Mt. Orford, Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Campus and Greek representatives needed. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

THETA CHI
Theta Chi fraternity spring rush '95. See what our brotherhood is all about. All are welcome Feb. 13,16,20,21 8:00-10:00pm. Questions or a ride call Ted Silva 549-4198

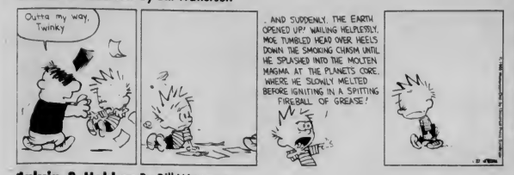
TICKETS NEEDED
I need two tickets to UMass vs Duquesne Thurs. Feb 16. Will pay cash. Call Mike 5-7434

TRAVEL
$125/person. Booking direct! Sweet Sandals, Inclusives, all beachfront in the heart of spring break! 1-800-868-7473
Daytona Beach Spring Break first class oceanfront hotel, directly on the beach! good deck fun nightclubs, sunshine, parties. Do not miss this night! Includes on campus pick up and drop off, only $250 quad occup. departs weekly in March. Call for free brochure. MF-8-6 1-800-837-9866. See you at the beach!!
Spring Break Daytona, Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica, South Padre. Great prices! Back soon! Roberta 253-5388
Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jen at 549-4937

TYPING
Typing. Word processing resumes. Fast responsive 546-6738

WANTED
Get an extra floor ticket for Live? Will pay well! Call 298-8130
I need Patient Psych 240 Stats tutor. Call Donna 253-9425
HP Laserjet toner cartridges wanted for recycling. $7 cash each. Please include packing materials. Call 549-4369

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



Outta my way, Twinky
AND SUDDENLY THE EARTH OPENED UP! WAILING HELPLESSLY, MOE TUMBLED HEAD OVER HEELS DOWN THE SMOKING CHASM UNTIL HE SPLASHED INTO THE MOLTEN MAGMA AT THE PLANETS CORE. WHERE HE SLOWLY MELTED BEFORE IGNITING IN A SPITTING FIREBALL OF GREASE!

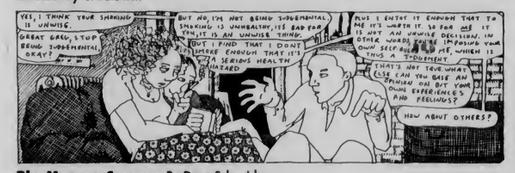
Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Jim's Journal By Jim

I saw Tony Today. He had just come back from picking up his mail.
I asked him where Jill was.
"You don't wanna know," he said.
He flipped through his mail to see what he got.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Bruno By C. Baldwin



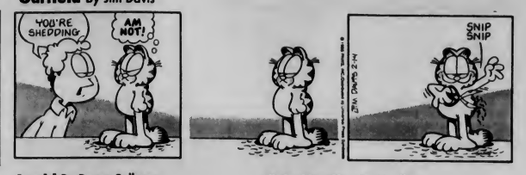
YES, I THINK YOUR SHARING IS UNWISE.
BUT NO, IT'S NOT BEING SUBSERVIENT. IT'S AN UNWISE DECISION, IN OTHER WORDS, YOU'RE IMPOSING YOUR OWN SELF-DOUBT ON ME, WHICH IS UNFAIR!
GREAT GRAU, STOP BEING SUBSERVIENT OKAY?
PLUS I ENJOY IT ENOUGH THAT IT'S NOT AN UNWISE THING.
THAT'S NOT TRUE WHAT ELSE CAN YOU BASE AN OPINION ON BUT YOUR OWN EXPERIENCES AND FEELINGS?
HOW ABOUT OTHERS?

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

YO, GUYS... THE FOOD'S HERE WHO'S GONNA GO GET IT?
COME ON GUYS! IT'S RIGHT DOWN STAIRS! NOW WHO'S GONNA GET UP AND WALK DOWN TO GET IT?
SCHNEIDER BK2
JUST PUT THE FOOD ON THE FLOOR! I'LL THROW DOWN THE MONEY!

8 Years in Braces By Eric Peterson

Garfield By Jim Davis

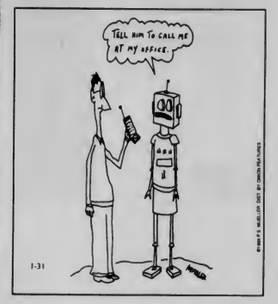


Leold By Roger Salloom

My ex-girlfriend Sheila is hassling me about who owns this special gold edition Batman comic book.

She says its hers.
I think its mine.
Really I don't care.
I'd just like to totally end this whole thing with her.
This break-up torments me. I can't sleep well.
I wish it would go away.
I wish she'd go off and die somewhere.
No, no I don't mean that.
But maybe she could develop a limp. No, no , I don't mean that either.
You know what would be nice.... a very slight facial twitch.....something to remember me by.

P.S. Mueller By Mueller



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Copy Editor ..... Matt Audette
Photo Technician ..... Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Sandy Bogage
Marni E. Helfner

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Tuna Noodle Casserole	Roast Pork + Gravy
Hamburg on a Roll	Chicken Fajita
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Tuna Noodle Casserole	Chicken or Tofu Fajita
Golden Burger	Black Eyed Peas

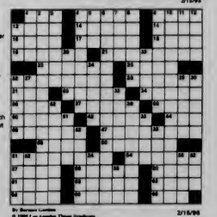
Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Impudent talk
4 Embers
8 The lawnmower
13 Sandwich salad
14 Lowest deck
15 Accumulate, with "up"
16 Like — out of hell
17 Wet behind the ears
18 Conductor Akiko
19 Copies, for short
21 Porches or portioces
23 Well-mannered
25 Spanish painter Joan
28 Safeguards
29 Position
31 Bruce or Brenda
32 Captain Nemo's creator
34 — one's thunder
35 Venomous viper
37 Fuss and hig namesakes
38 Wessex worker of yore
40 Labors long and hard
42 Dagger
44 Small dog, for short
46 Addresses
47 Deadlocks
49 — even keel
50 Per — for each
51 Tuffeau biscuit
54 Peaceful
57 Weep, in heredity
58 Friend's pronoun
60 St. Vincent Millay
61 Hip or road follower
62 Blocking company
63 Alphabet run
64 His companion
66 Pyre rot
68 Vane dir
DOWN
1 Grease job
2 Extremely tidy
3 Walk the beat
4 Deliberate
5 Mouths
6 Active
7 Score for Sampras
8 Certain whales
9 Railway tariff
10 Behave obediently
11 "M*A*S*H" name
12 Antique autos
13 Seaman
20 Popular name in Norway
22 Bits of land
24 Retreads
26 Reastor's maps
27 Classical tabulist
29 River runner
30 Certain scha.
33 Watery swelling
36 Defames
38 Mosel nonsensical
41 Card game
43 Native of the Malabar Coast
46 Scythe handle
48 Prepares tea
51 "Be still!"
52 Feed the kitty
53 Scorch
55 Concerning
56 Instance: Pl.
59 Novice

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

P	A	P	A		F	A	D	E		A	P	A	U
A	L	O	E		A	R	I	A		A	L	G	Y
P	O	S	E		C	O	M	P	A	S	S	I	O	N
A	R	E	T	E		A	S	I	S
			E	L	P	A	S	O		N	A	P	A
A	S	P	E	N		O	R	I	T		S	L	O	N
A	L	O	U		P	E	L	L	E	T		R	I	O	N
E	T	A	P		P	A	S	S	E		W	I	N	E
T	A	R		P	A	S	S	E	L
			A	W	A	Y			K	A	P	U	T
A	R	I	E	S		T	I	N	S	E	L
P	A	S	S	A	G	E	W	A	Y		A	S	H	S
T	I	T	L	E		M	A	I	L		S	E	A	L
S	E	D	I	T		U	S	E	S		S	O	R	E

2/15/95



© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/15/95

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today's events could turn a relationship or alliance upside-down. If you can remain calm and think about your long-term goals, a solution will be found.

TAURUS (April 20---May 20): Solutions to complex problems prove elusive; postpone making an important decision. Turning to "true blue" friends will boost your spirits this evening. Remain optimistic when talking with children.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day to focus on domestic issues and long-range policies. Someone who feels imposed could lash out. Be willing to make intelligent concessions. Comparison shop prove invaluable bargains on household items.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A fresh start is favored. Be prepared to turn over a new leaf. Answers can be found behind the scenes. Your heart sometimes overrules your head. Savor every minute of an exciting romantic encounter.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22): A power play takes place involving money. An older person plays a prominent role. Be sure the investment information you receive is legitimate. Your intellectual curiosity is a big asset. Make subtle inquiries concerning recent sales.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Selling an idea is almost too easy. Do some research before spending other people's money. You need to be candid when discussing goals with your mate or partner. Welcome constructive suggestions from close friends.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 22): Big changes are featured on the job front. Follow up on a creative urge. Loved ones are willing to help but do not want to interfere. Explain what you really need.

SCORPIO (Oct 23-Nov 21): Let others know where you are coming from and what is really important to you. Input from family members should be encouraged. Dress to impress if attending a special event tonight. Wear something elegant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 22-Dec 21). Do not play guessing games with your employer. When putting your thoughts on paper, focus on your strengths while soft-pedaling your weaknesses. Become a comparison shopper if in need of a computer. Look around.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Others may be as confused as you are. An atmosphere of trust and confidence must be created without further delay. Direct action is essential. On the home front, try to reach an accord with your mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18): Maintaining good family relations should be a top priority. Protect visions to your home against mishaps by making timely household repairs. Drop all fixed ideas about romance; find out what really pleases loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make the most of your powers of persuasion while you still have the opportunity. It is wiser to adapt to present circumstances. Expect some abrupt changes in your personal life.

Quote of the Day

"Love is deep. Sex only has to go a few inches.

–Woody Allen"

The Magic Lantern
THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT

Giveways & Audience Participation

Amateur Night
Wednesday, February 15
8:30 pm
Come See The Top Amateurs From New England Compete For $500 Cash Prizes

Coming in March: 40th Anniversary Bash

Only 30 Minutes From Amherst Rte 9 east to Rte 181 south to Rte 20 West for 1.5 miles
Open 6 Days - Closed Sundays 12 pm to 1 am - Boston Rd - Rte 20 - Palmer, MA (413) 283-9255

Associated Press Top 25 – Men's Basketball

1 UConn	6 UCLA	11 Syracuse	16 Virginia	21 Iowa St
2 N Carolina	7 Maryland	12 Arizona	17 Stanford	22 Miss St
3 Kansas	8 Michigan St	13 Arizona St	18 Alabama	23 Texas
4 Kentucky	9 Missouri	14 Wake Forest	19 Oregon	24 Minnesota
5. UMass	10 Arkansas	15 Villanova	20 Ga Tech	25 Purdue

Sports

G.W. defeats UM again; home streak ends

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

When it was over, the 9,493 fans looked lost. For the first time ever in the William D. Mullins Center, the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team did not go out a winner, and for the second time in two weeks, the Minutemen fell to George Washington, as the Colonials upset the No. 5 team in the nation 80–78.

The loss snapped Massachusetts 41 game consecutive on– campus win streak (including 27 in the Mullins Center), which had been the nation's longest.

The Minutemen entered the game with thoughts of revenge, as the Colonials knocked them from their perch atop the college basketball polls.

UMass 78
G. W. 80

"We didn't play very well," said senior point guard Derek Kellogg. "I thought we'd be a little more focused. The biggest problem is we're not playing UMass basketball."

While the Colonial's margin of victory was only two points, the visitors never trailed, dominating from start to finish.

UMass suffered from all kinds of shooting trouble early. Whether it was from three-point land or within five feet of the basket, the Minutemen could not get their shots to fall. The Colonials capitalized opening up a nine-point lead.

"We didn't shoot the ball well," said Massachusetts coach John Calipari. "We were out of sync offensively."

With sophomore Marcus Camby out of the lineup, George Washington exploited its height advantage in the pivot. Freshman giant Alexander Koul ended scoring 14 first half points with relative ease.

After the Colonials extended their lead to 11, with just over seven and a half minutes to go in the opening half, UMass went on a mini–run to cut the lead to five. But the Colonials answered, and after a last second put–back by Kwame Evans, the Colonials went to the locker room ahead 38–30.

After intermission, led by co–captain Lou Roe, the Minutemen fought back. Despite suffering from leg cramps that caused him to hobble for the rest of the game, the senior forward played a gutsy second half scoring 16 points en route to a game–high 22.

After shooting poorly in the first half, Mike Williams scored 15 after the break, including some clutch treys, but in the end George Washington's resiliency killed the Minutemen.

After, the Minutemen cut the lead to three with only 6:21 remaining, but Kwame Evans, who was vital to GW's first upset of UMass, stepped up again, hitting a short jumper followed by a three–pointer to give his team some breathing room.

"For every run [by UMass]," George Washington coach Mike Jarvis said, "for every situation, we had an answer."

The Minutemen cut the lead to two at the end, but by then the outcome was already clear.

Following the game, Calipari, who was hoarse from a game–long argument with the officials, was disappointed with the game, but acknowledged that the loss could be a positive thing.

"It was a war," he said. "We didn't play very well. We won't make excuses. This kind of thing is good for a basketball team. This humbles us. We know we have to get back to

PAUL BRODEUR / COLLEGIAN

Coach John Calipari holds his head in his hand during yesterday's 80–78 loss against G.W., the first–ever defeat for Massachusetts at the Mullins Center.

Turn to HOOPS, page 10

Rigors of season evident in second loss to G.W.

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

It was evident after the 80–78 loss to George Washington last night that times are beginning to change for the Minutemen. From the seven–year climb to becoming one of college basketball's elite teams, times certainly have changed for the better in the John Calipari era.

But now, in just two weeks, the look on the season is altered. Last night's game was sure evidence for many reasons. Streaks were broken, players were injured and weaknesses were exploited. The rigors of a long regular season became especially apparent.

For one, the nation's longest home winning streak of 41 that dated back to Jan. 8, 1992 was put to an end. In addition, the first place Minutemen (18–3, 9–2 in A–10) were swept by the second place Colonials (17–9, 9–4) — the first time they have lost both games in a season to the same conference opponent since losing to Temple twice during the 1990–91 season.

Massachusetts was Marcus Camby–less for the fourth consecutive game because of a strained hamstring, and key reserve Carmelo Travieso was in plain clothes due to a sore back. Lou Roe suffered a cramp at 10:57, and was obviously aggravated by it for the remainder of the contest.

As for the game itself, the G.W. zone defense dominated the Minutemen once again much like the Feb. 4 game, where the result was a 78–75 Colonial victory. The same physical defense that double–teamed Roe and co. and forced the use of the Minutemen's perimeter game the last meeting did the same last night.

"Desperate men need desperate things in desperate situations, like when you're against UMass, and you have six players and they have 12. And I hate zone with a passion. I think zone is an awful way to play basketball.

"But my mother said to me, 'Son, do what you have to do to win because they won't know whether you played zone or man–to–man. They'll just know you got fired.'

"You've got to give them credit, they played and fought us like heck," Minutemen coach John Calipari said. "I think every game we've had with them has turned into aggressive, physical kind of games. This was no different. We fought like heck to try to get back in it at the end."

Massachusetts hit just 9–29 from the field (31 percent) in the first half, and went 15–40 (38 percent) in the second half. That game totals included 5–22 from three–point range.

"They packed it down tight, and leaned on Lou and Tyrone the whole game. Our guard play just didn't come through tonight, I think," said Derek Kellogg, who went 0–4 from the field and scored 2 points. "And you can especially say me, I guess, I didn't play real well."

After the last four games between the two teams dating back to last season, its obvious that G.W. coach Mike Jarvis and the boys know how to play the Minutemen. They have won three out of four in that span, and the loss was a 56–55 won ironically by a Camby jam at the buzzer.

"It's crazy," Jarvis said. "When we play Mass., we know we're going to war, we know it's going to be 40 minutes of flat out pain and fortune. And that if we don't play hard, we're going to lose. It's like we match up well, we play very similar in that way.

"The way UMass plays is the way we play when we play well. That's why we play UMass well."

"Mainly we had nothing to lose, and anything to gain," G.W. guard Nimbo Hammons said. "I guess we played the best basketball we could."

The Colonials led from beginning to end, but Massachusetts did make some runs, namely the second half. The Minutemen were down by 14, 57–43, with 10:38 to play. A Roe dunk then initiatcd a 13–2 run that included 8 points by Mike Williams (19 points), cutting it down to three, 59–56, with 6:03 remaining.

Roe, playing in pain, scored 16 of his 22 points and grabbed eight of his 12 rebounds in the second half. Tyrone Weeks also had a stellar game, scoring 10 points

Turn to CHANGES, page 10

Trade involving Roenick would hurt Blackhawks; Buffalo steal Recchi

Blackhawk management denies that franchise forward Jeremy Roenick is on the block, but rumors persist to the contrary.

Keeping in mind his age and his talent, with the exception of Felix Potvin, Patrick Roy, Sergei Federov and Eric Lindros there is nobody that wouldn't be worth trading for Roenick straight up. Nobody.

Names like Gretzky, Lemieux, Hull, Bourque and Oates were not overlooked. At the stages of their careers in terms of age or health, Roenick would be better in the long run.

He is talented both offensively and defensively, has a tremendous work ethic, and a clean slate off the ice.

How much would the Bruins love to bring the Boston native home?

•Another week, more dumb trades:

Matt Vautour on the NHL

1. Mark Recchi for Eric Desjardins, Gilbert Dionne, and John LeClair.

Whose brilliant idea was this? The three players combined aren't as talented as Recchi. Lindros will miss his winger dearly. Recchi has averaged more points than Gretzky in the past three seasons, and should have brought a top notch defenseman and a forward. Somebody in Philadelphia thinks that just because the Flyers used to wear those ugly long pants like the Whalers did, they have to make dumb deals like the Whalers do.

2. Grant Fuhr, Philippe Boucher and Denis Tsygurov for Alexei Zhinik, Charlie Huddy and Robb Stauber.

The Sabres got an absolute steal on this one. Fuhr, at age 80, might still have a good year or two in him, and could be valuable to a team that is a goaltender away from the Cup. But the Kings, now without the Zhitnik and a talented young defenseman, are even further away. If the season ended today, the Kings would barely make the playoffs.

The L.A. Kings are still stuck in the mind set that if they reassemble the old 1980s Edmonton Oiler dynasty, they might form some kind of dynasty of their own.

What the Kings are forgetting is that most of these ex–Oilers are now residents of Southern California nursing homes. Unless they find the "fountain of youth," the Kings aren't going anywhere.

•Trade rumors have former Bruin Craig Janney headed to Insurance Land to join the Forever .500 (but usually closer to .300) Whalers. It seems like a perfect fit.

Steve Yzerman, who has been the subject of more rumors than Bill Clinton, will likely be headed somewhere soon. The rumors have been Washington, but he'd make a great addition as a leader and a scorer on one of the recent expension teams.

•Another former Bruin found himself in an enviable position last week, on the receiving end of Gretzky pass.

Turn to NHL, page 9

Minutewomen head to Philly to play St. Joes

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will try to rebound from a heartbreaking loss at the hands of No. 16 George Washington tonight in the City of Brotherly Love.

The St. Joseph's Hawks, 18–4, will host the Minutewomen tonight at the Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse in Philadelphia, PA. Tipoff is at 7 p.m.

UMass enters the contest at 13–7. The Minutewomen stand at 8–2 in the Atlantic 10, one full game behind the Hawks, who own a 10–2 league mark.

The Hawks sit atop the Atlantic 10, just ahead of the Colonial Women of GW, who fell 79–65 at Rhode Island Monday night to lose the top spot.

St. Joseph's has also won nine in a row, and haven't been defeated since a Jan. 14 contest at Duquesne. Their only other league loss was at the hands of the Colonial Women.

"This is a huge game," said Massachusetts Coach Joanie O'Brien. "It's for bragging rights."

The Colonial Women's loss at URI creates a logjam atop the Atlantic 10. If the Minutewomen can pull off the win at St. Joseph's, it would enable them to pull back into a first place tie with the Colonial Women, percentage points ahead of the Hawks.

However, beating the Hawks on their home turf is no easy task. St. Joseph's owns an 8–2 record at the Field House, and is averaging close to 1,500 fans per contest in its home arena.

The Hawks defense is traditionally one of the strongest in the league, and this season is no exception. Opponents are shooting only 38 percent against the St. Joseph's defense, and the Hawks are holding their foes to an average of only 55.7 points per game.

"St. Joseph's is a tough team to play against," said George Washington senior All–American candidate Debbie Hemery. "You always know you're in for a defensive battle."

The Hawks aren't the only ones who hang their hats on defense, however.

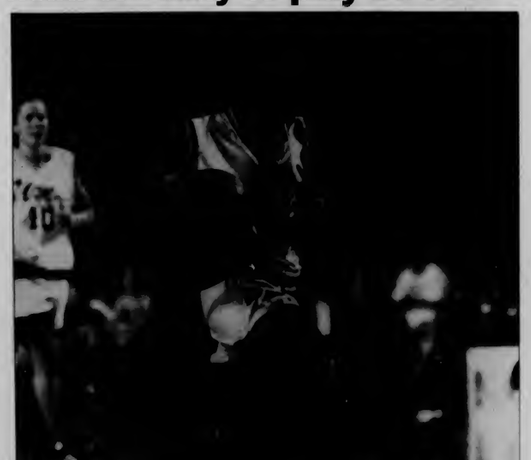
"UMass plays outstanding defense," said GW Coach Joe McKeown. "They do a great job on that side of the ball."

Much of the Hawks scoring punch comes from sophomore Megan Compain. Compain leads the team with 14.3 points per game, and has started every contest for St. Joe's.

The rest of the points mostly come from the bench. Junior Kristen Sullivan (12.5 ppg) and Amy Facer (12.2 ppg), two three–point threats, come off the pine to carry a lot of the offensive burden.

Maureen Costello is the squad's leading rebounder, grabbing six a game. She also pours in an average of 7.1 ppg. Senior Tonya Wenger, the only Hawk named to a pre– season All A–10 team, has struggled thus far, averaging 4.5 ppg and 5 rpg.

Nikki Jones is the only player besides Compain who has started every game for the Hawks. And while her offensive production is limited, she leads St. Joseph's with 79 assists.



CHRIS RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN

Sabryia Mitchell and the Massachusetts Minutewomen, coming off a 66–65 loss to No. 16 George Washington, will be in Philadelphia tonight taking on St. Joseph's.

For the Minutewomen, they will look to return to their winning ways. Since Dec. 10, UMass has lost only two games, both to George Washington.

"[The loss to GW] was not a make or break game for us," O'Brien said. "We're not going to go down the tubes just because we lost one game. We just have to come back and play another great game."

Intensity was something that UMass had in the battle with GW, and will be something they look to pack up and take with them to Philly.

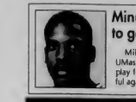
"We haven't played a game with as much intensity [as we did against GW] in a long, long time." O'Brien said.

UMass' next home contest is Saturday against Temple at the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 77 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, February 16, 1995



Minutemen look to get back on track

Mike Williams and the rest of the UMass guards will have to step up their play for the Minutemen to be successful again (See Sports, page 14).

Man arraigned in student's death

A March hearing is set for the man charged in the death of a former UMass student and marching band member (Story, page 2).

Black History comes alive

Black artists have often been seen as less than legitimate in the United States. Read how African–American art evolved (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast

Mix of sun and clouds today with highs in the mid 40s. Clouds coming in tonight, then clearing with lows near 10. Mostly sunny Friday and Saturday with temps remaining about the same.

	Today	Friday	Saturday
	HIGH: 45 LOW: 10	HIGH: 40 LOW: 10	HIGH: 40 LOW: 15

Forum addresses racial issues

■ 'Tension at UMass' author faces critics in open forum

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Members of the campus community last night confronted the author of a report attacking the University of Massachusetts administration's handling of racial issues.

While the author of the report attempted to voice his theory that the administration is polarizing the campus through multiculturalism, members of the audience whispered under their breath and one man began laughing aloud.

The audience member later explained he found the entire report to be a "big laugh."

The forum was held in the Southwest Residential Area South Side Room.

Reports and allegations

The report, Turmoil and Tension at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst: History, Analysis and Recommended Solutions, criticizes the administration for its handling of racial conflicts, admission quotas and academic programs that encourage student activism.

The Massachusetts Association of Scholars (MAS), a 50– member affiliate of a national organization of professors, released the report in November.

The panel included Brasor, along with Sara Lennox, director of the Social Thought and Political Economy program (STPEC); Shonwa Shanapande, president of the Black Student Union (BSU); Arnold Silver, English professor and member of MAS; and Paul Ferro, president of the UMass Republican Club.

Brasor's sources were questioned, and he was accused of using a "selective" method of picking and choosing information.

According to Grant Ingle, director of human relations, the report and method of information gathering had many serious flaws.

"It is not scholarly documented," Ingle said. "Secondary sources are used almost exclusively, when primary sources were available and very accessible."

Ingle said Brasor used unethical research methods, which included calling offices claiming to be a graduate student seeking statistics for a research project.

Such tactics, Ingle said, exemplify Brasor's values.

Ingle told the audience and panclists these were not the kind of values scholars at UMass entertain.

Minority statistics

Brasor said increasing minority enrollment to 30 percent would cause disproportionate figures in relation to state demographics.

The minority quotas documented in the report and Brasor's analysis of an enrollment increase to out–of–state minorities would mean decreased opportunities for in–state White students.

At a meeting earlier in the day, Arlene Cash, director of admissions, said the report used bad logic and relied on too many "could happens" and "would happens."

The University uses percentages of minorities who have graduated from high school, rather than minority percentages throughout the state, according to Cash.

In Massachusetts, the average percentage of public high school graduates who are minorities is 30 to 40 percent, she said.

Administrative response

Although Brasor insisted the report was meant to put the blame on the administration, not student activists and minorities, the audience seemed to disagree.

Much of the discussion concerned protests documented in the MAS report, some which entailed the occupation of buildings, destruction of property and acts of violence.

Silver said he felt the kind of protests that have been held on campus, and documented in the MAS report, were counterproductive and non–democratic.

In accordance with theories and conclusions made in the report, Silver blamed the administration and parts of the curriculum for these incidents.

According to Silver, the administration not only reinforces students to use a method of "intimidation, thuggery, hypocrisy and racism–in–reverse," but it educates them to do so.

"There is a paradox," Silver said. "There is a program on campus which trains, urges and educates students to take over buildings on campus."

The STPEC program, which Silver was referring to, was one mentioned extensively in the MAS report, for performing these functions.

This definition of the programs' functions is inaccurate, according to Lennox. She does not encourage, or discourage, activism on campus, Lennox said.

"STPEC is about critical thinking," Lennox said. "It's about respect for others' opinions. We educate them to be good citizens."

Brasor explained his angle on the report, as a way to give the University insight as to how the major of taxpayers perceive the activity taking place at the University from the outside.

"Perhaps this seems normal on campus, but from the outside, it seems like a very odd way of operating," Brasor said.

Lennox said she saw the report as "a heavy–handed ideological attack" on the University.

"This is just part of a larger right–wing assault on public higher education."

CHRIS RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN

Gary Brasor, second from right, fielded criticism last night on his report that the UMass administration mishandles racial issues. Pictured panelists (L to R): Arnold Silver, Paul Ferro, Grant Ingle, Brasor and sociology Professor Dan Clawson.

RSOs offer aid, resources to SGA higher ed campaign

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Staff

Speakers from campus organizations were welcomed last night by the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) to show support, talk about racism on campus, and promote higher education throughout the state last night.

Guest speakers at the second senate meeting of the semester included representatives from the Office of Third World Affairs (OTWA), the Cannibus Reform Coalition, and MASSPIRG.

MASSPIRG offered its resources and assistance to SGA in their fight for improved higher education.

"We would like to help out," said a representative of MASSPIRG who was identified only as Jason. "Students find it valuable working toward student's rights."

SGA President Mirran Raphaely said she was pleased with the outcome of Monday's "Education Declaration" press conference at the statehouse in Boston.

"We kicked off our massive campaign for public higher education and got nationwide coverage," she said.

The next step is another meeting in Boston, according to Student Trustee Al Lizana, who encouraged students to sign on to attend the March 3 meeting.

"Student charges, tuition and fees will be discussed, and we need as many students as possible," Lizana said.

The SGA recognized "the blatant racism in President Francis Lawrence's remarks," referring to the president of Rutgers University, in the meeting's agenda, and moved to support the demands of the United Student Coalition of Rutgers University.

OTWA Director Nelson Acosta was also on hand to address the senate concerning racial issues on campus.

"I know I can lose my job by releasing any student's grades to anyone, even parents," said Acosta referring to the release of Black athletes' last semester. Acosta asked the senate to "smell the coffee."

"If you want a better world we better start here, before we get into the real world," Acosta said.

New additions to the senate were also sworn in: Secretary of Finance Sean Carter, Senator Scott Sassoon from the commuter area and Campus Center Student Union Committee member Sonali Bajaj.

"I believe firmly in fiscal responsibility and accountability," said Carter, the newest member of the cabinet.

Bajaj said she will work with the Campus Center Student Union Committee, bringing student issues to their attention.

"I will voice students' concerns dealing with the Student Union, vending policies and space allocation," Bajaj said.

Space allocation is a problem for many RSOs, according to Raphaely and Senator Brian Jullin, member of the Cannibus Reform Coalition.

"We are having an office space crisis," Julin said. "The room we are in now has four RSOs already."

Urban League president speaks on race, poverty

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Hugh B. Price, president of the National Urban League of New York, spoke Tuesday night on the issues of affirmative action, poverty and racial relations.

Price spoke to a crowd of students and faculty from all five colleges in Amherst College's Johnson Chapel.

He said that while some minority applicants get hired by workers and accepted to colleges over White applicants with higher academic credentials, that is no reason to dismiss affirmative action.

Price went on to explain that academic credentials are not the only basis for hiring someone.

"The cerebral worker is not always the best worker," Price said. "Who would hire a salesman who finished summa cum laude but is antisocial?"

According to Price, African–Americans today have three major concerns: the education and development of Black children, enabling Black parents to be economically self–reliant, and fighting racial seclusion.

Price said today's society needs an entirely new inclusive form of capitalism if there is to be social stability.

"Without economic inclusion there will be no social cohesion," Price said.

Questions from the audience addressed such subjects as Black–Jewish relations, welfare reform and affirmative action.

Price said his current priority is to see more African–Americans get quality education and employment, not Black–Jewish relations. If a Jewish organization wished to work with the National Urban League, Price said he would see no problem working together to further common goals.

"We cannot afford welfare reform that puts poor mothers and their children out on the streets to beg," Price said.

He described visiting foreign countries and witnessing such begging which he called "inhumane."

Price questioned the reliability of entrance exams to truly measure a person's ability to contribute to society during and after college.

"No person has a right to get a job based on superior academic qualifications alone," Price said.

"There has been a lot of discussion about race relationships on this campus," said Shayne Klein, a senior history major at Amherst college. "[Price] was very optimistic."

Erika Butler, a senior at Amherst College, said she thought Price made potent arguments about affirmative action and what it means.

"It needs to involve every one of us if [Price's] vision is going to come true," Butler said.

Founded in 1910, the National Urban League is a non– profit, non–partisan group dedicated to assisting African–Americans in achieving social and economic equality, according to the league's mission statement.

Price graduated from Amherst College in 1965 with a degree in political science and from Yale Law School in 1966.

Report finds dam could endanger natives

By William A. Dávila
Collegian Staff

This evening the Nitassinan people, or the indigenous Innu, of Northern Québec will be the beneficiaries of a concert in Northampton, Mass.

Performances at the fund raiser will include spiritual folk– rock singer/songwriter recording artist Julia Burroughs, Tom Nielson, folk singer/songwriter and comedian Jack Golden.

According to concert organizers, the Innu and their tribal land will be financially, culturally and environmentally harmed by a Hydro–Québec dam project.

Hydro–Québec is a trans–national utility corporation subsidized by Québec. Almost a year ago this organization began construction of what is known as the Saint Marguerite–3 project (SM–3).

The SM–3 project includes the construction of dams on the St. Marguerite, Carheil and Pekans rivers.

Construction also requires 250 kilometers of access roads. Upon successful completion, the dams will "reduce the flow at the mouth of the Moise River by 11–13 percent," according to a brochure by the Friends of Nitassinan group.

According to The St. Marguerite–3 Project, a report by the Coalition for Nitassinan, SM–3 "will result in billions of dollars in debts assumed by the taxpayers of Québec to build a generating facility for which no demand exists."

In their publication, the Coalition for Nitassinan likens the potential economic ramifications of this "venture" to the relationship between the U.S. government and the defense industry, said the report.

According to the report the U.S. defense industry may be the American counterpart to Hydro–Québec as far as having "a similar political power to influence government into such irresponsible action."

The report also said similarities lie in the fact the Coalition attributes the U.S. debt to the American defense industry and expects Hydro–Québec to do the same to the province of Québec.

The Friends of Nitassinan charge the SM–3 project with "genocide of the Innu people," because the Moise River, for example, provided an accessible route to interior areas of Québec and will be interrupted permanently by SM–3.

The project will result in mercury contamination of the water which will affect the natural food source, the group says. This government project is expected to cripple and disable the Innu and "force [them] into a passive role within the welfare society," disfranchising them even further, said the report.

The report also said previous Hydro–Québec projects have resulted in significant increases in mercury concentration, making long–term repercussions of these projects, "estimates of the time required to restore normal levels range from 30 to 50 years."

The health risks associated with exposure to high mercury concentrations include threats to the central nervous system, kidney failure, and birth defects, said the report.

The reports says the Cree Indian community in the James Bay project, also initiated by Hydro–Québec, are experiencing the effects of mercury poisoning.

The Friends of Nitassinan said the politics of Hydro– Québec are domineering, suspicious and have gone astray from its initial motives.

The SM–3 project report states that Hydro–Québec, initially a public company, is now a private company and has made it extremely difficult to obtain any type of documents about SM–3 financial projections or business dealings.

The report mentions possible violations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), as well as the United States–Canadian Free

Turn to DAM, page 3

Scott addresses D.C. controversy

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott took action on the Franklin Dining Hall controversy yesterday, conferring with fellow administrators to discuss the issue which has sparked two protests thus far.

Closed to the public, the afternoon meeting was centered around the discussion of results from the review of last week's incident, according to Scott's spokesperson, Karin Sherbin.

On Feb. 8, Franklin employee Emily Tosloski used a racially offensive phrase in the presence of Ronald Dottin, an African–American sophomore who was choosing a meal at the time.

Although Tosloski did apologize shortly after making the remark, Dottin challenged the sincerity of the retraction.

Demonstrators lined the halls of the dining hall on Monday and last Friday. The protest Friday caused the building to be shut down by the University during dinner service.

In a press release yesterday, Scott condemned Tosloski's comment.

"The University considers the remark inappropriate for the rules of behavior in the work place, and offensive to the campus community," the statement read. "Accordingly, the University has taken appropriate action to address the seriousness of the case."

Sherbin confirmed that Tosloski, who is currently suspended with pay, is still employed by the University and no personnel decision was made in the review meeting.

She also said the 33–year–old Tosloski has received disciplinary action. Because it is a personnel action matter, the details are confidential.

"People have admitted that something happened that should not have happened," Sherbin said.

When Dottin learned of the outcome of today's meeting, he said he would not act until he was wholly informed on the content of the review.

"If I don't get a fair response, I would be willing to pursue the matter with other outside agencies," said Dottin, who had requested in a letter to Scott last week that Tosloski's employment be terminated.

Another of Dottin's requests, that all University workers receive sensitivity training, has been in effect for a year, according to Sherbin.

However, Sherbin is unsure if a portion of Dottin's meal plan has been reimbursed, the last of the requests detailed in Dottin's letter.

Man charged with DWI death of UMass student arraigned

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

NEWBURYPORT — The man charged with the death of a former University of Massachusetts freshman in an alleged drinking and driving accident was arraigned in court last Thursday.

Bernard J. Dube, 52, of Amesbury pleaded not guilty in Newburyport District Court and was released on a $10,000 cash bail.

Dube was charged with vehicular homicide, driving under the influence of alcohol, driving to endanger and failure to stay within marked lines.

At approximately 1:30 a.m. on Feb. 1, Dube allegedly swerved his black pick-up truck into the opposite lane of Route 1, killing Joseph Liguori, 18, of Byfield, said the Newbury Police Department.

Dube was released on bail after his attorney John H. Ronan convinced Judge James O'Leary that he was in no condition to flee and had too many roots to the area.

According to Ronan, who is a friend of the Dube family, Dube was in a coma for days after the accident and suffered facial, neck and chest injuries.

Police said they pulled seven 12-ounce bottles of beer out of Dube's truck, two of which were empty. Ambulance technicians said Dube had a strong odor of alcohol and became combative when conscious.

Dube allegedly left the scene of an accident where he rear- ended a car earlier that night, which Melkonian said shows an inclination to flee.

Blood taken from Dube is being tested and is expected to be over the legal limit, Melkonian said.

Police said Dube's only prior record was a traffic ticket in 1986.

According to the registrar's office, Liguori was enrolled in UMass last year as a freshman in the School of Business. Friends said he was currently enrolled at North Essex Community College.

Liguori was a snare drummer in the Minuteman Marching Band and well liked by students and instructors, friends said. A pretrial hearing is slated for March 10.

The Daily News of Newburyport contributed to this article.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Feb. 16

Meeting — The UMass Animal Rights Coalition will have its first general meeting. UMass, Campus Center room 165, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Five-College College Bowl Tournament meeting. Information: Mike, 665-5765.

Senior class — Voting for what the senior class gift will be. UMass Campus Center Concourse. Information: 545- 5479.

Lecture — "The Jews and Their Neighbors During the Holocaust." Free. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Five College Panel: Medicinal Plants and Herbal Healing." Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "The Destruction of the European Jews." Free. Amherst College, Campus Center Frontroom, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "What is Cultural Justice?" Free. Amherst College, Octagon, Babbott Room, 8 p.m.

Film — The Seven Samurai, in Japanese with English subtitles. Classic film about a 16th Century Japanese village that hires professional warriors to fend off bandits. Free. Amherst College, Merrill III, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, Feb. 17

Meeting — The UMass Juggling Club will hold its first meeting of the semester. UMass, Campus Center room 165- 69, 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Information: Jeremy, 546- 5334.

Lecture — "Dynamics Digital Maps," by Christopher Condit. UMass Department of Geology and Geography. UMass, Morrill 2 South, room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Sacred Continuum: Gods, Humans and Nature in Shinto." Free. Smith College, Seelye Hall 110, 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Biology Colloquium — Saving Plants that Heal People: Tropical Herbal Medicine." Free. Smith College, McConnell Hall B05, 4:30 p.m.

Film — The Killing Field. Memoirs of Sidney Schanberg, the New York Times reporter who remained in Cambodia after the American evacuation. $1.75. Amherst College, Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Saturday, Feb. 18

Planetarium — The Amherst Astronomy Association conducts free, public planetarium. Amherst College, Bassett Planetarium, 4 p.m.

Performance — "Around the Table." A performance feast by Seattle African American lesbian comedy group, Four Big Girls, exploring what happens when women cross the line of "appropriate size." Sponsored by the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns in conjunction with the Arts Council and the Multicultural Advisory Board. $7 general public; $4 students with valid ID. UMass, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Conference — "Ahead in Time: Looking into the Future of Korean-Americans in American and Assessing Need and Change." Lectures and seminars discuss the changing identity for Korean-Americans in America and provide tools to overcome obstacles facing Koreans of all backgrounds. Korean food, cultural entertainment and films included. $30, $20 students. Five College students and faculty can attend lectures free. Smith College, Wright Hall, 9:30 a.m. Information: 586-6285.

Film -- Native Son. A black youth accidentally kills his White employer's daughter and tries to cover up the crime. $2.50. Mount Holyoke College, Gamble Auditorium, 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Film — The Killing Field. Memoirs of Sidney Schanberg, the New York Times reporter who remained in Cambodia after the American evacuation. $1.75. Amherst College, Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m and 10 p.m.

Notices

Yearbook photos — Senior photo session will continue through Feb. 24. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule an appointment.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the Umoja Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrone Johnson, 546-6787.

Voter registration — Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center offers voter registration daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. UMass, Student Union Building, room 428. Information: 545-0865.

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS® OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA
Peter's

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
Mandarin / Szechuan Cuisine
We Deliver in Amherst 5-9:30 Everyday
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 pm • Sunday Brunch 11am - 3pm
NEW ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children Under 10 $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30 - 3pm $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 chicken fingers, 2 chicken wings or hot & sour soup.
Take Out Service - Full Cocktail Menu
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

4 SEASONS
MON-SAT. 9:00 TO 11:00 • RTE 9 HADLEY
VISA · MASTERCARD
SALE THRU 2-22-95 • NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOS
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • KEGS • BEER • ICE

ROLLING ROCK	BUD DRY	BUSCH & LT	KEYSTONE & LT	NATURAL LT	AMERICAN	10+ CASE!
24-12 OZ BOTT $12.99 +Dep	24-12 OZ CANS $9.99 +Dep	24-12OZ BOTT $9.49 +Dep	24-12 OZ CANS $8.99 +Dep	24-12OZ CANS $8.49 +Dep	24-12 oz cans $7.29 +Dep	BEER DISCOUNTS
1/2 KEG NATURAL LT $32.99 +Dep	1/2 KEG BUSCH $36.99 +Dep	1/2 KEG MICHELOB & LT $39.99 +Dep	1/2 KEG LITE ICE $39.99 +Dep	1/2 KEG RED DOG $39.99 +Dep	1/2 KEG ICE HOUSE $39.99 +Dep	Keg of the Week BUD $36.99 +Dep
ICE! 10 lbs...$1.99 50lbs...$5.99	100lbs...$9.99	FOUR SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	JACK DANIELS $11.99 .750ML	GOLDSCHLAGER SCHNAPPS $13.99 .750ML	BACARDI RUM $7.99 .750ML	POPOV VODKA $5.49 .750ML	CASTILLO SPICED RUM $6.49 .750ML
We Deliver! 584-8174 "Off Campus"		CARLO ROSSI $6.99 4.0L	SEAGRAMS WINE COOLERS $2.79 +Dep / 4 pk	COOKS CHAMPAGNE $3.69 .750ML	ANDREA CHAMPAGNES $2.99 .750ML	M/D 20-20 $1.99 .750ml	Boones Farm $1.99 .750ml

Only $2,539. Or about $48. a month.†

Macintosh® Performa®
6115 8/350 with CD-ROM, Multiple Scan 15 Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.

Only $2,169. Or about $41. a month.†

Power Macintosh®
6100/60 8/250 with CD-ROM, Macintosh® Color Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and

Only $3,299. Or about $61. a month.†

Power Macintosh®
7100/66 8/500 with CD-ROM, Apple® Multiple Scan 15 Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and mouse.

Before you make a single payment, you'll have read a zillion pages for 4 different classes, another Super Bowl will have passed with commercials better than the game and you'll be making your quarterly visit to the Laundromat.

BUY AN APPLE MACINTOSH NOW. PAY FOR IT LATER.†
We're not just making it easier for you to buy a Macintosh,® we're making it easier for you to buy something else you really need — time. Because for a limited time, with the Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan, you can own a Macintosh personal computer, printer, CD-ROM drive or other peripherals without making a single payment for 90 days.† Combine that with no hassles, no complicated forms and already great student pricing, and the easy-to-use Macintosh is now incredibly easy to buy. The Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan. The solution that gives you the power every student needs. The power to be your best.® Apple

Stop by the University Store Computer Department for more information.

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619 M - F 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. SAT 11 a.m. - 3 p.m.

†Deferred Apple Computer Loan offer expires February 17, 1995. No payment of interest or principal will be required for 90 days. (Some resellers may require a deposit to hold merchandise while loan is being approved.) Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to principal, and the principal amount, as so increased, will thereafter bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. ‡Monthly payment is an estimate based on the following information: For the Performa® 6115 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $2,663.95, which includes 5% sales tax; including loan fees, the total loan amount is $2,821.11, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $48. For the Power Macintosh® 6100/60 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $2,277.95, which includes 5% sales tax; including loan fees, the total loan amount is $2,410, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $41. For the Power Macintosh 7100/66 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $3,463.95, which includes 5% sales tax; including loan fees, the total loan amount is $3,665.56, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $61. Computer system prices, loan amounts and sales taxes may vary. See your authorized Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices, loan and lease amounts. Loans are for a minimum of $1,000 to a maximum of $10,000. You may take out more than one loan, but the total of all loans cannot exceed $10,000 annually. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of November, 1994, the interest rate was 10.85% with an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.10%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment and the Annual Percentage Rate shown assume the 90-day deferment of principal and interest described above and no other deferment of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval. Apple Computer Loan and 90-Day Deferred Payment Plan offers available only to qualifying students, faculty and staff. Offers available only from Apple or an authorized Apple Campus Reseller or representative. © 1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Performa and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign and Power Macintosh are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Fair offers students career opportunities, crack at tight market

By Colleen D. Shanahan
Collegian Staff

The Annual Campus-Wide Career Fair yesterday drew more than 3,000 students to the Campus Center in hopes of finding a job.

More than 90 companies represented virtually every major from accounting to wildlife and fisheries biology.

The fair, organized by Ginger Goldsbury of Mather Career Center, was designed to help graduating seniors narrow their job search and get a feel for what companies are looking for in potential employees.

Company representatives had a few words of advice for the job hunters.

Baybank company representative Sandy Decandio said "presentation is very important when the students come to these job fairs. If the position is something dealing with customer service, we must be able to see immediately that the person is people-oriented."

Mark Murphy of Stratus Computer Inc. advised students to always bring their transcripts along with resumes to give employers an idea of their strengths.

"We realize not everyone has a 3.5 GPA. Seeing what the grades are helps us give advice as to what direction the applicant should be heading," said Murphy. "I'd also suggest doing co-ops and internships to get hands-on training. The fields are so competitive any advantage will give you that extra edge."

"I think it's pretty good, there are a lot of good job opportunities here. I'm interested in a lot of the companies," said Karen Stefanick, a double major in psychology and sociology.

"Some students are unsure of how to present themselves. They should go to the career center," said Goldsbury. "They will help students prepare themselves."

Steven Williamson of Wallace Computer Service and a 1994 alumnus offered hope to anyone depressed about their job search. "The job market has turned around a lot, everyone is looking for help," he said. "With more companies recruiting, we're finding applicants are becoming more aggressive."

Prof shows his Holocaust movie

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

"It's about a conversation I needed to have with my father that I had never had," Abraham Ravett said of his movie Everything's For You.

The movie, shown last night in Herter Hall, was about Ravett's relationship with his father, Chaim, a survivor of the Lodz Ghetto and Auschwitz. Nearly 80 students were there to see the film and hear Ravett speak.

The movie was created using a combination of black and white film, color film, animation and still photography. The film lasted for just under an hour and afterwards Ravett spoke to the audience about the film.

Ravett, who is an associate professor of film and photography at Hampshire College, spoke mostly of the style he used in the film, including whether people could understand it, even though it had "no linear narrative."

The film moved quickly between scenes and used silence and darkness to make points as often as it used sound and visuals.

Scenes included a shower sequence done in stop-motion photography with Ravett and his son, who is also named Chaim. An audience member later said it really looked like a father and son in the showers in a concentration camp during the Holocaust.

Ravett, who has created 10 films including the soon-to-be released Forgotten Tenor, said he wanted to hear the audience's responses to the work so he could use them to help with his next project.

Ravett has created several other films "in the same series," including In Memory and Half-Sister.

He said there were several things in this film that were "very private." This referred to a shot of tailor's shears which represented his father's refusal to teach Ravett his trade.

Ravett said the movie was made "first for myself," then for the audience.

The film contained long periods of silence which Ravett said were intentional, as well as many repeated phrases in both English and Yiddish with subtitles. Many times questions were repeated, and not answers, reflecting the lack of communication between father and son.

"It was a really interesting film. It was moving and hit home a little bit," said Andy Gerard, who came at the request of a friend.

Ravett said that during the making of the film he began to learn more about being a parent and about his father. The filming was done from 1974 to 1977 and 1984 to 1989.

The program was sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Hillel's Cultural Committee, which is co- chaired by Andra Tam and Robyn Retblatt.

According to Tam, Ravett was chosen because the Cultural Committee decided to bring local artists — like Ravett — whose films were on a Jewish topic.

"We thought that that was something unusual," Tam said.

The film was shown as part of the Film and Lecture Series. The next film in the series is Yiddish Folk Singers on Miami Beach, by Joel Saxe will be shown on Feb. 23.

House rejects missile proposal; Democrats amend Republican bill

By Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a victory for President Clinton, the House rejected a Republican proposal Wednesday night designed to force the administration to move ahead with a national missile defense system.

With a 218-212 vote, the House dropped the missile defense language from a bill pushed by its GOP leadership as part of the Republican "Contract With America."

The vote was on an amendment by Rep. John M. Spratt Jr., D-S.C., that said improving the readiness of U.S. forces and developing a defense against shorter range missiles should have a higher priority.

Spratt's amendment droppped a defense system for intercontinental missiles from the top priority in the defense-foreign policy portion of the House Republicans' so-called contract to third in a list of priorities.

The amendment also said any such missile defense system should be ground-based rather than in orbit like the "Star Wars" program begun during the Reagan administration.

A subsequent effort to direct the Pentagon not to consider a space-based system was defeated.

Twenty-four Republicans joined Democrats in supporting Spratt's amendment. They included John Kasich of Ohio, chairman of the House Budget Committee; Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, chairman of the Banking Committee, and Rep. Ralph Regula of Ohio.

■ dam

continued from page 1

Trade Agreement (NAFTA, which also involves Mexico).

Hydro-Québec said their initial purpose was to achieve "energy independence" for Quebec. The report, however, said the company is undertaking projects that are "economically unsound and the human and environmental impacts are intolerable."

The concert will be at the Fire and Water Cafe at 5 Old South Street at 7 p.m. Money raised will go to an anti-Hydro-Québec movement by the Innu.

DO YOU LIKE MONEY?
Do you have lots of friends?
Promote your own party at a really funky nightclub just minutes from this campus! Transportation can be arranged from the horseshoe!
CALL MIKE AT (413)549-2244
DISCOUNTS FOR FRATS AND SPORTS TEAMS!
CALL SOON TO RESERVE THE BEST DATES

You Snooze You Lose
Book Now Snooze Later
NEVER TOO LATE FOR SPRINGBREAK!
413-256-1261
NASSAU from $449
JAMAICA from $479
CANCUN from $449
Includes: RT airfare from Boston, 7 Night Hotel accommodations based onquad occupancy, hotel transfers. Taxes and surcharges are not included. Rates subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant St., Amherst MA 01002

BUY BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS
from Noon to Six
Montague Mini Mart
•Microbrews•Foreign & Domestic Beers•
Wide Selections of Wine
All at Competitive prices
from Amherst: 10 miles north on Rt. 63 to Rt. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles I-91 north to Rt. 116 to Rt. 47N
(Follow signs to Montague Center • Proper ID Required)
Open Mon-Sat 9-9 • 367-9551
Sorry no kegs or beer balls

GREAT EXPERIENCE
GREAT PAY
ADVERTISING REPRESENTITIVES
Needed
Train
Immediately
The Collegian Advertising Staff is now looking for ambitious self starters who aren't afraid to "beat the pavement"
Applications are available at:
THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
Deadline: March 10, 1995
GREAT JOB!

CHANCELLOR'S AWARDS FOR MULTICULTURALISM

SPRING, 1995

On behalf of the Chancellor, you are invited to nominate an outstanding individual most worthy of recognition for his or her contributions toward a diverse, multicultural campus. A Certificate of Appreciation and four $1,000 awards will be presented at a reception to honor and celebrate their achievements on April 20, 1995.

One award each will be presented to an undergraduate student, a graduate student, a staff member, and a faculty member of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Faculty members are invited to use their award for research or scholarships.

Criteria will be based upon one or more of the following related to multiculturalism: (a) original contributions to the University; (b) attainment of high priority objectives; (c) crises of "beyond the call of duty" service; (d) achievement of significant improvements in the area of teaching or curriculum development; and (e) promotion of the awareness of multicultural issues and concerns.

Nominations should be written and include specific reasons or examples based on the above criteria, along with biographical and other pertinent information (including a resume or vitae, if possible) regarding the candidate's current position on campus.

Nominations should be submitted by FRIDAY, MARCH 17, 1995 to: Chancellor's Awards for Multiculturalism, C/O Frederick Tillis, 129 Herter Hall. For further information, contact Julie Fifield at 545-3517.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Mari Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Corner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Cuitas Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Manahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob N. Michach Jewish Affairs Editor Iris Abensur Distribution Manager
Hernan Ruzemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Peppas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Notes from Andrew's Basement

Why is candy a customary gift for Valentine's Day?

Just curious. And why do women get all worked up about the one day of the year, whining and moaning that they do not have a lover to share the day with?

As soon as it turns 12:01 on Feb. 15, it's like anguish is gone. But that one day is hell for them. I think it's the candy part.

As for me, let me just say the despicable, pathetic, preposterous, horrendous, haggard, get-the-lovey-dovey-out-of-my-face holiday is over for another year.

And since it's obvious I received little acknowledgement of Valentine's Day outside of my sister's phone call, I'm glad to see it go.

If you're wondering, the answer is no. I didn't get any Van Halen posters like the two I got from my girlfriend the last time I celebrated it...

In seventh grade.

* * * * *

Sometimes I think when I drink.

A couple of buddies from home came up to visit me this past weekend, and we chilled with some Molson Golden. Sitting there in the room, getting ready to go out, drinking beer after beer.

That's when the thinking part came in.

After consuming approximately my fifth brewskie, I thought about how many I had drank up to that point. I then thought of how many I was probably going to drink for the remainder of the night. With the sum lingering in my noggin, I was revolted.

Because I simply substituted in my head the number of bottles of soda in place of the number of bottles of beer I was drinking.

And it's screwed up to think how different drinking eight beers is compared to eight sodas. Imagine if college students on this campus went to the packie to get a case Dr. Pepper to polish it off in a night.

I gotta stop thinkin', man.

* * * * *

All I could think of when sitting in my class yesterday was how I got my reading done sitting on the john.

You'd be amazed. I went through a 400-page Muhammed Ali biography in a matter of days while on the throne.

* * * * *

Am I the only person who cuts my spaghetti before eating it? I haven't got the twirling effect with the spoon bit down just yet.

* * * * *

I'm in.

Internet, baby, has sucked me in. My roommate has a computer thingy where you can chat with people all over the place by typing on the keyboard (that's the best way I can describe what it does since I lost my computer virginity just three days ago). I've met some cool people, like Beastiegirl, and I've met some nimrods, too, like Larry. I don't know what's more fun — flirting with Beastiegirl or making fun of Larry.

It's amazing, though. Talking on the system is so addictive. I was on for four hours the first day, and until 4:30 a.m. the next. Nothing like being on a campus with about 20,000 people and feeling the need to try and pick up women over the computer system.

* * * * *

I set a personal record and I am checking on it to see if I broke any universal record simultaneously.

Before I went to bed the other night, I set my alarm for 9:15 a.m. because I had an 11:15 class. The alarm went off on time, so I did the norm and pushed the snooze button.

Not the average two or three times for the little bit of extra sleep — I finally rolled out of bed at 11:57. If you took math like I did on the 101 level, I believe that's 17 times pushing the snooze button.

I guess there is a positive in all of this besides setting a personal best in the snooze department — I'm getting the full use out of the alarm clock.

* * * * *

I would love to be able to wear a pair of overalls, and look half-way decent.

* * * * *

I'm not fond of the weather when I squeeze my nose... and my nostrils stick.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Fighting for bar justice in the cold

The bar scene in Amherst — long known as going "uptown" — is an experience in itself. It is even better while remaining sober.

At this time of year, socialites, mainly from the UMass Greek community, line the icy cold streets along North Pleasant Street. Fashion moguls wouldn't dare be "spotted" wearing a jacket to fight off the cold as it might, God forbid, actually keep them warm during the half hour and longer wait just to get into the bar.

Recently I noticed the common ritual of the bouncers at the door allowing their friends to cut the line of 20 or so people as if they were gold club members with priority status. Can I have some air miles please?

A few weeks ago a semi-drunk (non-Greek) decided to stand up for herself and actually everyone else in line when eight people just cut the whole line and entered the heated bar scene of the brutal night.

"Hey, what's going on?" she asked.

She then continued with, "Is this a jock bar or something? Why do some people get special privileges? They're no better than anyone else!" she yelled in her not-so-sober voice.

No one spoke. The rest of the line stood frozen like the human icicles we had been forced to be with the friends we made while waiting to get inside.

Then the bouncer said, "Shit like that happens. Leave because you're not getting in."

"Well shit doesn't happen like this to me," she said. "Why would we want to go to a bar that doesn't want us?"

When she left the line upset and on the verge of tears, I felt like clapping and cheering her on. Everyone in line agreed, but like the fools we were, we opted to deal with the so-called gatekeepers and freeze until we got in — even if so-called priority people were allowed to cut.

More recently, I was inside another bar and noticed a lot of familiar faces from the Greek community. To no surprise, there was a herd of underage sorority gals "gal-palling" around the bar and my table.

Now, etiquette is etiquette and no one needs to be rude or flip while enjoying the polluted air of a bar, right?

The perfume alone from these Heathers was enough to require perfume volume control as they surrounded my bar stool and table with the most stimulating conversation: "Like, it is soooo good (with head tilt). I can't believe your not active this semester. Like, promise me you'll come back next semester. Like, do you have a cigarette?"

The sorority girl with the bleached blonde hair said, "Like, anything for you my love." Yeah right, and a knife in the back too when she steals that girl's boyfriend. At this point, I felt like saying to the pretentious gal, "Nice blonde hair, but why do you dye the roots black?" But, it wasn't necessary until she sat on my hand and said, "I'm sitting here now."

I responded with, "Well, when my friend gets back, you'll have to move."

Drum roll please... "Tough titties" (as she exhaled her cigarette smoke in my face and did a hair flip — with head tilt as if she was a gymnast or something). I'll give her a 5.5.

That was it. I didn't need to be sitting with this classless little child who I knew was underage. She completely exemplified some of what non-Greeks call the actions of uptown cronies and the sorority-like attitude.

In my quest to enjoy myself I thought that waving to the freezing bar-moguls waiting outside would have been rude so I moved toward the back of the bar where I spoke with a really cool girl.

She proved the uptown experience can be fun and you can meet someone and have a completely normal conversation.

Europe was the topic, which suited me just fine when compared to everyone else's plastic attitudes and fakeness and hope-to-hook-up-with-your-best-friends-girlfriend or boyfriend attitudes.

Ironically, the non-Greeks sometime wrongly and unfairly called "randoms" by Greeks were omnipresent.

Well, I'd say, at least they allow for some diversity in an otherwise homogeneous environment. From the front door bureaucracy to sorority gal couture, uptown is still a great UMass experience, like, really, like honestly. Bartender, I'll have another ZIMA.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

GOOD OL' NEAL!! HE CAME THROUGH WITH THE FUNDS FOR OUR FEASIBILITY STUDY!
WE'RE CONDUCTING A FEASIBILITY STUDY, SIR!
YUP. $50,000 WORTH! ONLY PROBLEM IS HE'LL BE EXPECTING ME TO KICK BACK SOME OF IT TO HIS PAC...
YOU'RE THINKING OF SKIPPING RIGHT NOW, AREN'T YOU, SIR?
NO, NO... THIS IS CHICKEN FEED. I'VE GOT TO BE DISCIPLINED.

Opinion/Editorial

HERE IS MY VETO PEN. SEND ME ANY HALF-WAY MEASURES AND I'LL SIGN THEM.
STATE OF THE UNION 1995
THE POLITICAL HEALTH CARE FOR THE PRESIDENT ACT.
TOLES

Letters to the Editor

Dining hall worker responds

To the editor:

Campus wide, students of all color feel sympathy for the racial comment directed to Mr. Dottin at the Franklin Dining Hall. There is no doubt a serious issue needs to be addressed. But let's accomplish it in the right way.

Do the protesters realize what they actually accomplished Friday night? Well for starters, prepared food had to be thrown away. Employees had to be sent home. Most of the students that work at the dining hall need the job and need the hours. Thank you for making it harder for innocent students to get by until the next paycheck. Innocent casualties are not necessary for every battle.

For those of you wanting to be actively involved in the offense toward Mr. Dottin, please think. Think about the effects of what is said and done and to what or whose purpose the actions serve. A campus of such diverse ideals should be able to come up with a more effective way to motivate diversity awareness. Otherwise, there will be no resolution. Protests without specific goals lead only to a larger fire.

By the way, racists don't solely reside in Franklin Dining Hall. Just take a look around you.

Jennifer Stark
Amherst

State rep works hard for school

To the editor:

On Feb. 13, the Collegian published an article titled "UMass under siege from all sides" by Juan Jose Chacon. In his article, Mr. Chacon expressed seething contempt for someone who did not deserve it: my mother. Mr. Chacon labels her as being a "self serving scoundrel." You see, my mother is State Rep. Christine E. Canavan (D-Brockton, Bridgewater, West Bridgewater). I assure you "mom" is not a "malevolent outsider" seeking to "hold the University hostage." As a matter of fact, she in an alumna of UMass Boston. My mother has the full endorsement of the Massachusetts Teachers Association and has always been willing to fight for her alma mater on the House floor.

My point is this: we have some enemies in Boston, yes, but more often than not we overlook the demanding and unrewarding work our elected officials perform. The good ones have to make the tough decisions and are always crucified by whatever group lost out. Hell, my house was picketed for three days last year. My father keeps asking her why she left her high paying job in the Healthcare industry for this thankless endeavor.

She responds by saying that helping people makes all the aggravation worthwhile. Weld will be of no help to us. He is our true enemy by his own admission. He helps nobody but himself. Why should anyone who balances their checkbook to the nearest million care whether I can pay my Stafford loan?

Meanwhile my UMass-educated, highly motivated mother will take the huge raise she got (the raise that now pays her almost as much as the gentleman who collects my trash every week) and continue to do her very best.

Derek A. Canavan
Amherst

Protest ignoring deeper problems

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the protest being waged against the racial slur put forth by Franklin Dining Hall employee Emily Tosloski. While I don't condone the racist statement Tosloski uttered to the sophomore student, neither do I support the nature of the reaction by those offended.

Emily Tosloski made a racist comment which outraged and hurt many people's feelings. The reaction to all of this however is neither constructive nor conducive to greater understanding of the situation. Should someone who made a mistake with speech be stamped out of existence?

Tosloski is a 73-year-old woman who grew up in a time when racism was a much more prevalent part of society than it is today. Values have changed over the years and Tosloski's mistake may be that she has failed to embrace and understand an important one of them. I find myself asking if we as a society have become so intolerant as to throw a 73-year-old woman out onto the street without a moment's thought, without any open dialogue.

Simply getting rid of Tosloski does little else but satisfy feelings of revenge and sweep the problem under the carpet. Instead of looking at this from the perspective of being able to embrace, talk and learn more about a problem, we simply get rid of the source and then tell ourselves we rectified the situation. We can't go on stomping out every little fire that comes up before understanding how and why they are igniting. That's when things start getting repressive and our freedom of speech becomes lost in the shuffle.

What troubles me is the speed of the reaction and the feelings of hatred that comprise it. I don't see anyone wanting to find out why Tosloski said what she said, they just want her out of here. If her racial slur is understood to be based on ignorance, then I would say the reaction to it is showing to be not all that different.

Senior protester Dolly Fernandez said with regards to the protest, "It's all about unity on this campus." It's disheartening to think this "unity" comes only in the form of revenge and at the cost of open discussion. I would hope in the future we will seek first to understand and then react on that new understanding, instead of it being the other way around. If we continue to fail to at least strive toward this goal, then what we might label as our "progressive society" may in fact be in large part a place of zero tolerance in disguise.

Taylor Lincoln
Amherst

Intolerance prevents learning

To the editor:

I don't read the Collegian cover to cover, but occasionally I'll read articles and follow them for a few days. I have done so in regards to the Franklin Dining Hall incident where Ronald Dottin was insulted by Emily Tosloski. I'm unhappy with the results. I expected to see a letter or two in the opinion/editoral page that tried to give a less persecuting view to the problem. I didn't.

I strongly support the protest and the fact that this incident is being publicized, but I disagree with the idea that she should be fired. Now, to answer any mental questions as to my race, I am White. So now I suppose I just don't have a perspective on the problem, or that I am racist myself, or I just haven't been exposed to discrimination. I have an answer to that, but wait...

I suggest people take a look at a little novel called Fahrenheit 451 written by Ray Bradbury. One thing in particular you should look at is the coda. He suggests, by using a future society as his model, that censorship has lead to book burning, meaning reading is illegal. Millions of books are burned. He also suggests this came about as a result of groups of people being indignant, or offended by their content. Thus, all books with anything in them that might offend some group, no matter how small, must be destroyed so people could walk around in a zombie-like false happiness.

If everyone is fired for saying something that does not agree with someone else, there would be no one left to fire, no one left to learn. We'd all be thrown off campus. I'd be gone for calling people straight and you'd be gone for calling me a dyke, or gay, or hey, what if I decide I don't like the word homosexual? Words can hurt, but only education and understanding about why they hurt can heal. I'm not going to have someone thrown off campus for something they say to me unless it's threatening me physically. I would like to think I'd tell them they're wrong and ask for an apology. If I don't get it, then that's just one more person who's going to live ignorant. Let Tosloski have a chance. Let her learn.

Natascha Maria Batchelor
Northeast

Baseball needs president's help

To the editor:

This is a rebuke of Caleb Cochran's satirical column on President Clinton's intervention with the current baseball strike. It doesn't take much to criticize the president (many journalists base their careers on the very same thing) but I think you may have underscored how important baseball really is, as silly as that may seem to you.

The tradition of baseball is a meaningful part of many Americans' lives. Many of us wish we could do something about the strike, but we can't. Clinton is someone who can. Ask both the owners and the players and they will tell you there is much more pressure to resolve when the president is on your case.

Remember a few years back when the NFL used scabs? The president didn't intervene, nor did he get involved with the recent NHL dispute. Now here he is inviting Tom Glavine and Brett Butler into the White House. This proves my point that baseball is, in fact, a "national priority."

We give Mexico $40 million to try to booster their economy, but we are ignoring the thousands of people whose part-time or full-time work revolves around the baseball season.

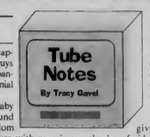
Sports are an integral part of society. Just like we have backed our basketball team, baseball and all big league sports unify many different people in a community that otherwise would not interact. We have lost a World Series and half an NHL season. Pro sports needs baseball to join this spring. The next time you see a family or friends going to a Senate hearing instead of a doubleheader, let me know. Until then, I believe that Clinton is in the right ballpark.

Ken Lambert
Amherst

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday, February 16, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CIV Issue 77

Miss USA makes for TV fluff

By Tracy Gavel
Collegian Staff



Dry your tears and cross yet another captivating TV beauty off your dance cards guys — because like it or not, Roseanne's abandoned the dating scene to enter matrimonial bliss with hulky bodyguard Ben Thomas.

So I guess it won't be long before Baby Roseanne-Thomas will be running around terrorizing day care workers, while Mom runs around terrorizing ABC executives with promises that a new sitcom starring her husband would be a smashing success. Any chance we'll be lucky enough to find that the latest Mr. R. isn't an aspiring bad actor? Only the new fall schedule will tell.

Speaking of television beauties, I saw quite a few of them last week on NBC's telecast of the Miss USA Pageant. I enjoyed the show, since there weren't a lot of corny musical numbers to suffer through and, for a change, I was able to pick the winner. I don't usually root for Texas, but she was the only contestant who was willing to give clear, direct answers during the final interview and I really respected that.

I can't stand when girls get up there and give wishy-washy statements just because they're afraid to offend the judges. In my opinion, Miss USA has to be able to stand up to the likes of Casey Kasem and Dr. Joyce Brothers — otherwise, what good is she? I mean, I still felt bad for the losers who probably

Turn to TUBE, page 9

The Art of Black History

W.E.B. Du Bois – Courtesy W.E.B. Du Bois Library Archives Special Collections

From writers to musicians to performers, the road of Black history has been a long one – but have we really come far enough?

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The African-American and pop culture — images bound hand in hand.

But why is this true in the United States, where Blacks have long been the objects of discrimination by the prevailing power? What past events set the stage for this trend of imitation and emulation in mainstream American life?

Harvard professor Cornel West, author of the critically acclaimed book Race Matters, says the country underwent what he refers to as an "Afro-Americanization" over the course of this century, a development which he suggests can largely be attributed to the influence of Black music.

It can also be speculated that from the first instance of a European vessel meeting West African soil, the foundation was laid for the alternating repulsion and fascination with which many Whites have historically viewed African-based musical expression.

Take for example the practice on many trader ships of few members forcing slaves to sing and dance at various times. Although the traders were essentially acting in a practical manner by allowing their "cargo" to exercise and keep fit, here surely must have been a certain entertainment in observing the strange and new movements and tonalities of the Africans. That same sense of curiosity would be retained in the United States.

"We would have no vibrant dance culture were it not for the African in America," said renowned musician Archie Shepp, who teaches a course at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst centered around the evolution of African-American music.

Yet white Whites would gradually begin to indulge themselves more in the musical aspects of African culture, African-American culture was already evolving at a rapid pace, storming toward the mainstream status that would both popularize and haunt Black artists in the 20th century.

Window of opportunity

Black intellectualism in the United States may have reached a new peak at the turn of the century, with minds such as W.E.B. DuBois and Marcus Garvey starting to gain prominence (although the pair were viewed in decidedly different lights).

However, it was the sadly underappreciated scholar Carter Godwin Woodson who was instrumental in the creation of Negro History Week in 1926, the celebration that would become Black History Month.

Admittedly, without the climate of Pan-Africanism and racial pride inspired by DuBois, Garvey and Woodson, the founder of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, and the publisher of the Journal of Negro History, may not have been successful in realizing his vision. But in the '20s and '30s, a window of opportunity opened.

Through that window came the sweet breeze of the Harlem Renaissance.

The other Renaissance

During this brief period, which extended through much of the Depression, Black artists representing all media came together — as had Italians to Milan centuries earlier — to work, play and live in what has often been romanticized as a near-utopian community.

It is difficult to imagine that so many figures considered legendary today were concentrated in such a small sector of New York City. The talented youth varied in diversity from a gracefully eloquent Columbia-educated poet named Langston Hughes to a dizzying, dazzling force of a band leader named Cab Calloway.

The attention of trendy White New Yorkers was soon focused on being a part of the Harlem club scene, increasingly popular joints where Blacks continued to manipulate both their instruments and bodies in strange and new ways, thus piquing the interest of their White counterparts. What was different at this stage was that many White artists were beginning to prominently feature Black style in their endeavors.

Little recognition of influences

What remained the same was that many of the Black originators of the various steps or riffs were relegated to obscurity, while the American mainstream slowly warmed up to the rich movements and grooves.

For every one White musician who openly gave credit to their Black influences, like "Porgy and Bess" composer George Gershwin, there were several more who imitated the style and downplayed the significance of those influences.

Sociologists Susan McCleary and Rob Walker note "a familiar pattern of African-Americans developing an expressive art form, but only having it register as significant when it is picked up by genuine artists." This pattern probably became epidemic during and after the Harlem Renaissance due to the decline of minstrel shows (which often included exploitation of Blacks through "black-face" performances) as a popular form of entertainment.

Says Shepp: "The White culture has relied heavily on the African-American for its own artistic personality."

Shepp goes on to criticize White academia for "drawing a strict line between so-called art and pop music and applied art," and by often designating Black music and dance as belonging in the latter category, the art forms have been subject to "de-legitimization."

Throughout the century, this trend becomes increasingly evident. For example, White band leaders and "cover artists" like Benny Goodman and Ricky Nelson populated the airwaves with the songs or song styles of Black artists.

Breaking the cycle

However, as West notes, America was mainly focused only upon the music of Blacks. Preoccupation with that particular aspect left the field of writing as perhaps the last bastion of the Harlem Renaissance spirit.

These writers, whose ranks included James Baldwin, Ralph Ellison and Maya Angelou, emerged as strong figures in the literary world as had Hughes and Zora Neale Hurston before them. Their acceptance by readers is most likely due to the tendency in American culture to largely ignore its authors in its pop life, leaving the written word to a more selective group of people.

Unfortunately, shifts in African-American music are rarely ignored by mainstream audiences for long and soon are exploited — hip-hop and rap are the latest victims. Shepp remarks that with each change, the record companies jump at the chance to categorize and package "genres."

"Jazz' was a term for sex," Shepp said. "It wasn't unusual to hear a preacher down South to be talking about the Lord 'rockin' and rollin' the church. And at the turn of the century, there was a club down in New Orleans called 'The Funky Butt Club.'"

To break the de-legitimization cycle, a multi-media effort may be the best course of action. Whereas film and television were not factors in the past, perhaps constructive powers like John Singleton and Martin Lawrence combined with musicians, writers and dancers can direct the course of the modern mainstream.

Rap artists Public Enemy – Courtesy Def Jam Recordings

Director John Singleton – Courtesy Columbia Entertainment

Jazz musician Branford Marsalis – Courtesy Columbia Entertainment

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Quotes of Note

"I'm 42 and this is my third marriage. I'm pregnant and I have four kids. I'm hardly a person that should wear white."
— Roseanne

"When Billy and Allison get together, they're annoying and self–centered."
— Courtney Thorne–Smith

"Sometimes I can wear a size two."
— Sarah Jessica Parker (size zero)

"I got kicked out of seven schools in New York City. The first time was in third grade, which is hard to do. I was a bona fide smart–mouth class clown. From the school's point of view, I was worse than the guys stabbing people, as long as they did it quietly."
— David Caruso

People and Pop Culture in the News

Valentine's Day is gone and past, but some celebrities don't need the newly declared "National Condom Day" to tell how much they love their significant others. John Tesh sends his wife Connie Sellecca flowers every fourth of the month to commemorate their wedding day on April 4. Country singer Clint Black gave his wife Lisa Hartman a winter wonderland, Aaron Spelling style, by covering their house in man–made snow.

"90210's" Brian Austin Green and Tiffini–Amber Thiesson may play characters who have been around the block, but they remain true to each other by trading platinum bands on their anniversary with the promise of wedding bells in the future.

Louis Farrakhan, a minister with the Nation of Islam, is planning to open three new restaurants in the Chicago area. The menus will have everything but pork and alcoholic drinks.

Sharon Stone has been hailed as one of the most beautiful and classy women on the screen. According to her colorist Matthew Boger, it takes 10 different shades of blonde to make her locks shine. Stone wants to make sure she always puts her best foot forward, which is why you'll never see her in the same dress twice and explains why she is having a custom–built makeup trailer created for her next movie. But Stone has a generous heart — she sends her makeup artist on week–long vacations to the Grecian Islands.

Fran Drescher of "The Nanny" seems to be the next actress turn model. She is featured on the cover of "Elle" this month and has been shot at various celebrity functions in Calvin Klein and Todd Oldham.

Nancy Kerrigan is also trying to change her image. The skater has recently been in the studios belting her heart out with the song "Shining Through." Her agent has waggled it in front of a few record companies and they are panting. One will have to wonder if the public will be so well trained.

Mt. MTV may have Kennedy and crew bundled up, but it was the nude layout in "US" magazine that revealed just how Republican the "US" magazine that revealed just how Republican the V–Jay is. The elephant tattoo on the top of her thigh is a nice touch — but all in all it was just too much information. Everybody wants a piece of the action. Joan Lunden recently took a peek behind the back door of the Central Intelligence Agency to discover they have Christmas lights with the CIA logo on them for all your holiday needs.

Oscar nominee Uma Thurman has snagged another choice role in a movie biography of acclaimed actress Marlene Dietrich. Material from this article have been compiled from various news and wire services.

Editors' Cuts

Clothes — Richard Tyler

Like almost everything today, designers are a dime a dozen. From Olivia Newton John to Roseanne, everyone wants a piece of the action and their own world famous label.

One designer, however, has been hitting it big among models and celebrities alike. Richard Tyler has turned one of fashion's biggest staples into its biggest statement. Tyler knows how to mix form and function with style and sass. Dressed up or dressed down, Tyler's suits have been seen on Crawford and Seymour and have been selling like hotcakes. From slim skirts and wide–legged pin–striped trousers, he can make even the most functional business suit say something personal about the wearer.

On "Melrose Place" almost all of the suits Amanda Woodward wears are made by Tyler because they can be altered to fit any size person. Heather Locklear has caught onto the craze and recently bought a tweed Tyler coat for a cool $2,000.

— Tara MK Connelly

Book — Beatles Encyclopedia

With the release of Live At The BBC and its enormous success, it would seem as though the world has been infected with Beatlemania all over again.

With this new found popularity for the Fab Four, Beatles lovers from all over are scurrying to scoff up any memrobelia they can get their hands on. A "must have" for any collector is The Ultimate Beatles Encyclopedia.

The book has recently been released in paperback and is the perfect complement to any fan's collection.

With entries for just about anything Beatles–related, the book contains facts from just about every aspect of the legendary band's career. From entries for each specific album, song and show the group ever played, plus extensive profiles on each of the band members themselves, The Ultimate Beatles Encyclopedia is sure to keep even the biggest completest content for hours.

— Matt Audette

Vinyl — Versus

Just a year ago, Versus was another obscure band out of New York. Since then, they have become one of the most popular indie bands in the country.

Featuring the boy–girl vocals of Richard Bluyet and Fontaine Coups, Versus has been creating some of the best pop melodies in recent memory. Their 1994 album, "The Stars Are Insane," has far and away the best debut album of the last year. Versus' new single on Teenbeat is one of their finest moments yet.

The A–side "Big Head On" successfully captures both their Sonic Youth–noise influenes and their softer poppy side. "Big Head On" is the pop song that Thurston and Co. from SonicYouth could only dream about. "N.I.T.A." is a cover of a Young Fresh Fellows tune. If you haven't heard them yet, run out and buy this — you will not be disappointed.

— Mike Burke

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Meisterbrau	$3.99	Ron Virgin White Rum	$6.99
Bud	$3.99/Six	Gordons Vodka	$6.49
Oregon Ales (I.P.A., Nut Brown Ale, E.S.B.)	$4.99/six	Lecoux 40	$6.79
Cider Jack	$5.29/six	Pepermint Schnapps
Mackeson Stout	$4.29/4 pack	Crawfords Scotch	$7.99
Tia Maria & Drambuie	$23.99	Courvoisier VS	$16.99

Open M-Sat 9am - 11pm
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
HELD OVER 2nd Week
DAILY AT 7:00 & 9:15
THE CROWN JEWEL OF THE YEAR!
★★★★!
Hugely Entertaining, Triumphant & Funny.
"Glittering, Swift, Entertaining And Eloquent!"
"A Marvelous Movie!"
THE MADNESS OF KING GEORGE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Photographers needed
No prior experience necessary; must have your own camera.
Come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement and talk with Paul Bilodeau.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday A.M.
Starting at $49.95
•Cars •4Wd Vans •Trucks •Cargo Vans
•Direct Billing to Insurance Companies
•We Rent to All Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR 76 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA 549-RENT
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Rd., Northampton 586-4444

Northwestern
Summer Session '95
Everything under the sun.
At Northwestern's Summer Session you'll find the same variety of courses we offer during the rest of the year: more than 300 courses in everything from anthropology to storytelling. Each summer students from all over the country earn a full year's credit in our intensives in chemistry, physics, and languages. Consider Summer Session at Northwestern, where you can study almost everything under the sun.
Noteworthy in '95: Field schools in archaeology, environmental studies, ethnography, and urban studies and a six-week program in Prague.
For more information, please call 1-800-FINDS NU.
For a free copy of the Summer Session '95 catalog, call 1-800-FINDS NU (in Illinois, call 708-491-5250), fax your request to 708-491-3660, e-mail your request to summer95@nwu.edu, or mail this coupon to Summer Session '95, 2115 North Campus Drive, Suite 162, Evanston, Illinois 60208-2650.
Send the catalog to ○ my home ○ my school.
Name
School Address
City State Zip
Home Address
City State Zip
Northwestern is an equal opportunity affirmative action employer

SALE
Every Component on Sale!
The Big One!
DASH FOR THE DEMOS MON. FEB. 20
STOREWIDE SALE SAT. FEB. 18–SAT. FEB. 25
Sound & Music
SOUND & MUSIC GOOD ADVICE & AN HONEST PRICE • 351 PLEASANT STREET • NORTHAMPTON • 584-9547 • MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED
DASH FOR THE DEMOS
DEMOS ON SALE MON. FEB 20 ONLY
ALL DEMOS 20–50% OFF
ONE DEMO AVAILABLE ON EVERY PRODUCT WE SELL
DEMO SALE DOORS OPEN 10 A.M.
STOREWIDE SALE SAT. FEB. 18–SAT. FEB. 25

Kenwood KRC-101 Car Cassette, removable face	$149
Kenwood KFC-1654 Car Speakers, surprising value	$35 pr.
Clarion in-dash Car CD player, high power x4	$249
Python insurance-approved Car Alarm, installed	$199
Boston Acoustics HD-5 Speakers, small wonder	$115 pr.
Boston Acoustics HD-9 Speakers, save $100!	$239 pr.
Nuance 1.1 Speakers w/stands "amazing image"	$329 pr.
Klipsch 5.5 Horn-type Speakers, 98 dB SPL!	$699 pr.
Denon DRA-365R receiver, an audio gem	$249
Onkyo TX-910 receiver, 90 watts, remote control	$195
Onkyo DXC-211 Six-disc Carousel CD Player	$249
Adcom GFA-555II Power Amp, 400 total watts!	$749
JVC HRJ-610 Hifi/Stereo VCR, ready for surround	$299
Sennheiser HD-435 Headphones save $20	$39
NAD 302 Integrated Amp., "stunning for the money"	$199
California Audio Labs DX-1 CD Player	$469
Proton 420 Table Radio, dual alarm, line-in	$89
Velodyne VA-1012 Subwoofer, amazing bass	$599
JVC PCX-110AM/FM Double Cassette/CD Boombox	$229
Onkyo TX-SV414 Pro Home Theater Receiver	$319

90-DAY/1 SAME AS CASH WITH YOUR GOOD CREDIT
NO LAY-AWAYS, NO CASH REFUNDS
TV-TV COMPONENT ON SALE

Sam Raimi's new western hits the right targets

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

THE QUICK AND THE DEAD
Directed by Sam Raimi
with Sharon Stone, Gene Hackman
Playing at Hampshire Six

You wouldn't know it from the likes of Unforgiven and Wyatt Earp, but the western started out as a down and dirty genre, amoral shoot–'em–ups that were more interested in being adventurous and fun than politically correct. By the 1950s, however, the genre had evolved into a golden age of super westerns — some tackled political concerns (The Ox–Bow Incident, High Noon) while others mired themselves (brilliantly) in social/familial themes (Red River, The Searchers), all while still managing to be entertaining.

Experiments in the '60s and '70s showcased the deliciously delirious spaghetti westerns of Sergio Leone and Clint Eastwood (low–rent, familiar plots pumped up with a keen visual sense and plenty of bang for your buck) and also displayed the first wave of revisionist westerns like Little Big Man (which took a more critical look at both myth and the western myth).

A lull in the '80s was followed by a '90s resurgence of serious, poker–faced westerns. New age slop like Dances With Wolves and the grim posturing of Unforgiven seemed to inflate the genre into stuffy pretentiousness while diluting any sense of pulpy thrills the genre once afforded. (And when they tried, as is Bad Girls, they just ended up with cheap exploitation.)

Which is a roundabout way of saying how refreshing The Quick and the Dead really is. Sam Raimi (Army of Darkness) and British scribe Simon Moore (Under Suspicion) cut through the hot air and deliver a nifty piece of pop Americana — the first post–modern, smart–ass western. Raimi concocts a goofy, stylized stunt of a popcorn thriller (the kind with genuine imitation butter on top).

In the best performance of her career (which really isn't saying much), Sharon Stone is Ellen, a cowgirl who rides into the dusty town of Redemption (which is itself is a misnomer; it should have been called Revenge–ville) to settle a score with Herod (Gene Hackman), the town's owner. Herod rules Redemption with a divinely fast draw and unrelenting intimidation. He's hosting an infamous quick draw contest — he says it's to prove who's boss — where gunfighters shoot it out (later to the death) for big money and bragging rights.

Stone's Ellen enters the contest, though she plans to kill Herod before their scheduled duel. Yet Herod proves a frightening adversary, mowing down contestants left and right, even going as far as to kidnap a former cohort (Russell Crowe) who has repented — if only to have the pleasure of killing him himself.

After the introduction of a gallery of nefarious rogues (among them This Boy's Life's Leonardo DiCaprio as Herod's son, the Kid and Ahens' Lance Henriksen), Q&D settles in to a resolutely repetitive pattern. Whenever the clock strikes the hour, there's another shoot–out. But instead of being just flashy time–killers, Raimi plays them like a movie lover's eternal rewind/fast forward button to all the good parts, spinning toward shoot–outs from every other western ever made: the funny ones, the bad ones, the serious ones, the ultraviolent ones — and injects them with his trademark schoolboy gore and frenetic glee.

By the big showdown, you probably won't care that Hackman's Herod is beyond even screen villainy and that literally all of a sudden Stone's hair turns from scraggly dirty–blond to frizzy perm. It's pull–out–the–stops time and Raimi's flair for visual puns takes the place of logic — which, of course, is where it should be in Raimi's world.

It's ultimately where the pleasure of Raimi's films lie. From Evil Dead 2 to Darkman, Raimi has always had the unique gift of making the disturbing funny, the outlandish commonplace, the same excessive — and then wrapping it up in a giddy package of pop thrills.

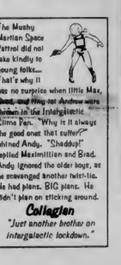
It's more than apparent in Q&D, though it may be problematic for those who aren't used to Raimi's cult style. By keeping his tongue in cheek and having the actors play it straight, the film's constant tone–shifting may be hard to pin down (the cheeky music score is a play on a cliche, but how many will get it?). Furthermore, the film's lack of amoral ambguity (everyone's bad, even the good guys) may leave questions for those who aren't sure whether to take Raimi seriously. (The answer is yes — as a serious prankster.)

Yet for those who consistently enjoy Raimi's work, The Quick and the Dead may even be a bit too tamed down (alas, no chopped–off hands come to life here). But the film's success in mining the Western genre for all of its spoofed–out clichés and then merging them with Raimi's dandy knack for comic visual indulgence proves there's still life in the old horse operas — even if there's a big see–through hole smack in the middle of it. B+

COURTESY TRISTAR PICTURES
(L to R) Leonardo DiCaprio, Cene Hackman, Sharon Stone and Russell Crowe heat up the Old West in The Quick and the Dead.

Back Street
• WEDNESDAY • GAY NIGHT MUSIC BY SPIN, INC.
• Thursday • 18+ DANCE PARTY HOSTED BY YHMP'S NICK DANGER
The Area's Biggest Dance Party Music by Spin, Inc
• Friday • RETRO NIGHT Dance Music From the Late 70s & early 80s with DJ Dennis 9:00pm-1:00pm "Free Admission With This Ad!"
• Saturday • THE ALL NEW! ALL REQUEST TOP 40 DANCE PARTY !!! I DARE SPIN THE BEST NEW DANCE MUSIC "MAKE A REQUEST FOR OUR NEWS REQUEST PHONE" ALSO, EVERY SATURDAY...
Limousine service courtesy of Michaels Transportation of Chicago 733-8470
TEEN DANCE PARTIES Sun Feb 19 & Sun Feb 26 / Ages 14-18 / 8:00 - 11:30 pm
LIVE MUSIC
Thur. Feb 16 - 8:00 pm/18+ LETTER'S TO CLEO Gigolo Aunts/The Gravel Pit
Fri., Feb 17 - 8:30 pm/18+ Record Release Party BIM SKALA BIM Jasper & The Prodigal Sons/SMA
Sun. Feb 19 - 7:30 pm/All Ages BABY JANE DOE Hindsight/Snafu Grimlock/Hypnotic Kick
Thur., Feb 23 - 7:30 pm/All Ages HOME ZEKE FIDDLER Cameron's Way
Fri., Feb 24 - 8:00 pm/All Ages MURPHY'S LAW Doom Nation
Sat., Feb 25 - 8:00 pm/W4SU MARY KARLZEN
Thur., Mar 2 - 8:30 pm/18+ Reggae Dance Party SISTER CAROL New Horizon
Fri., Mar 3 - 8:30PM/18+/ Record Release Party SYNAESTHESIA Fossil
Sat., Mar 4 - 8:30 PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
Coming...
3/9 Slowpoke /AllAges/
3/10 Art Steele Blues Band
3/11 Chucklehead /18+
3/14 Aquarium Rescue Unit /18+
3/17 Big Bad Bollocks
3/18 Roomful of Blues
3/23 Black 47
3/25 Graham Parker
4/3 Widespread Panic /18+
5/7 Tish Hinojosa's Border Tour
5/13 Ferron
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office: 586-8686, For The Record in Amherst 10 Pearl Street Northampton 584-7773

Sure I'm Important! For one thing, I own my own socks. Yes, you could call me a regular "Do-it-yourselfer." I love organizing my socks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my socks. I'd tell you about them... but I don't know you very well.
You may have germs.
COLLEGIAN
PLEASE REMOVE SHOES BEFORE ENTERING



The Mushy Martian Space Patrol did not take kindly to young folks... That's why it was no surprise when little Max, Brad, and Ring ran Andrew were thrown in the Intergalactic Slime Pen. "Why is it always the good ones that suffer?" whined Andy. "Shadup!" replied Maximillian and Brad. Andy, ignored the older boys, as he scavenged another hellhole. He had plans. BIG plans. He didn't plan on sticking around.
Collegian
"Just another brother on Intergalactic lockdown."

THE PUB
fun•food•spirits
MUSIC BY... D.J. PETE FREE
REQUESTS • DANCE
THURSDAY • FRIDAY • SATURDAY
12 oz. Btls $1.75 weekly special
Pitchers $4.75 weekly special
Thursday Cash Door Prize
Thursday Free T-Shirts Prizes
NEW FOOD SPECIALS
1/2 PRICE ALL APPETIZERS AND NACHOS 9:30 til 11:00
Beat the Cover!
Get in before 10:00 and...
NO COVER
SMOKING 10 TIL 1
15 east pleasant street • amherst

THE HAMPDEN
Munchies & More Snackbar
At the top of the Southwest Horseshoe
TONIGHT
UMass B-Ball Special
9:30 - Midnight
Slice of Pizza 50¢
also available...
mozarella sticks, onion rings, fries, chicken fingers...
EVERYDAY MENU SPECIALS!
Beginning at $2.00
ICE CREAM SUNDAE SPECIALS
Every Night From 7pm - 10pm

Madness of king makes for witty satirical film plot

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

THE MADNESS OF KING GEORGE
Directed by Nicholas Hynter with Nigel Hawthorne, Helen Mirren
Playing at Academy of Music

There's something in Madness — an aura, perhaps — that's so distinctly un–Hollywood that this sensibility alone is worth a round of applause.

Adapted by Alan Bennett from his play (you'll wonder how this spirited production was ever contained on one stage) and helmed by first–timer Nicholas Hynter, Madness takes a historical footnote and maneuvers it into a comedy of manners complete with sharp contemporary political commentary. Fleshed out with a talented cast (including a couple of Oscar nominees), Madness expertly swoops from pathos to satire without missing a beat — a feat seldom accomplished in today's movies.

Nigel Hawthorne (a deserving Best Actor nominee) plays the 18th century King George — the king that lost the American colonies — who soon finds himself losing his mind. Suffering from a condition that causes bouts of verbal mudslides (of the explicitly sexual kind) within periods of lucidity, he's becoming an embarrassment to the court and Parliament.

His n'er–do–well son, the Prince of Wales (Ready to Wear's Rupert Everett) seizes the opportunity and tries to shift power, even to the point of throwing out his mother (Supporting Actress nominee Helen Mirren of Prime Suspect) to speed up the transition.

Meanwhile, the queen and the king's court attendant hand man (Rupert Graves of Maurice) hire a country doctor (Frankenstein's Ian Holm) to cure the king before the prince can gain control of the crown. It's a race against time as the doctor's near–back techniques (including elaborate restraints and mind games) seem to be doing more harm than good.

One of Madness' chief assets is its endlessly able cast, which accents note for note the film's crafty twists and sly commentary. Hawthorne himself is a major discovery, if only for making degrees of madness and freedom seem to mean the same thing. Helen Mirren, so luminous in 1992's Where Angels Fear to Tread, brings an ethereal passion to the role of a woman who loves her husband but is not sure how to help. It's a sweet, gentle performance that invests the relationship between the king and the queen with a humanity that eschews typical costume melodrama.

This juggling of satirical melodrama and "Masterpiece Theater" credentials works, primarily because it ditches the presumed stodgy nature of all–British historical productions while keeping its understated poise. And Rupert Everett's decadently funny turn as the bloated and bored prince provides comic relief as well as pointed allusions to the power–hungry shenanigans of Reagan–era chump Alexander Haig.

Finally, Madness reveals that a wealth of important conclusion is lost a chance for the king to change his ways but to return to the comfort (and hypocrisy) of the status quo. It's this prickly allegiance — thorns and all — to both its characters and its story that makes Madness reign. Rounded out by delightful performances by Graves (one of the screen's most underrated actors) and the always deft Holm, Madness crackles with funny asides and pathos–rich overtones, soaring to heights so subtly grand you may not realize it until days later. This is one kind of Madness you'll be glad that lingered. A–

Mascis delivers moving acoustic set

By Matthew Justin Faerber
Collegian Staff

J MASCIS
The Iron Horse
February 14

NORTHAMPTON — St. Valentine's Day. For those involved in a picture-perfect, Hallmark card relationship, it's a time to celebrate the joys of love with flowers, chocolates and candlelight dinners. For those not so lucky, it can be like a 24-hour paper cut.

J Mascis knows all about paper cuts.

Playing to a full house at the Iron Horse Tuesday night, Mascis displayed his emotional scars with the lyrical eloquence that has made him the Pioneer Valley's greatest success story.

As the frontman for Dinosaur Jr., he has become best known for his ultra-distorted guitar wail, but on this night Mascis chose a more subtle approach that was better suited to the occasion. With the aid of only an acoustic guitar and his voice, Mascis proved there is definitely life after distortion pedals.

The absence of Mascis' trademark fuzz guitar effects allowed fans the opportunity to focus on his beautifully crafted songwriting, and the results were nothing short of mesmerizing. Unlike so many of today's big names who fall flat in "Unplugged" performances, Mascis effortlessly converted fist-pumping rock numbers to intimate acoustic ballads, often improving them in the process.

Long dismissed by many critics as hiding behind Dinosaur Jr.'s roaring walls of noise, Mascis took the opportunity to showcase his underrated ability to play more traditional guitar parts, such as the darkly emotive solo in "Repulsion."

This wasn't your usual slacker angst either. Mascis has gained a great deal of musical maturity over the last few years and this was evident Tuesday. From the tortured croonings of "What Else Is New" to the wistful melancholy of "Flying Cloud," he delivered his sobering melodies with a heart-felt conviction reminiscent of Neil Young.

Mascis' decision to close the set with a cover of Curly Simon's "Anticipation" proved to be a stroke of near genius. His rendition of this elevator music standard instilled it with new life and pointed to a lyrical beauty which most listeners had never noticed before.

Also on the bill was Northampton's Miss Reed, who substantiated their reputation as one of the valley's best new bands. "This is going to be the funnest thirty minutes of your lives," announced singer/guitarist Ray Neades just before breaking into the band's opening number, and while he was certainly exaggerating a bit, there was no denying the genuine power of Miss Reed's performance.

The band combined classic rock riffs with the type of post-punk college rock that Mascis and company are famous for. Highlights of their explosive set included the passionate "Believe You Me" (from their new Corn CD) and a punchy cover of The Kinks' classic "Tired Of Waiting For You."

Opening the show was the improv-rock act 33 1/3. Their otherwise bland set got a boost from a guest appearance by Mascis himself, who plugged in for one bluesy number.

Pianist showcased at Amherst College

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

The way classical music is usually conceptualized is in the format of large, somewhat over indulged, symphony compositions. The Boston Pops, the Houston Symphony and the London Philharmonic are the institutions that come first to mind when the outsider thinks about this genre.

Tonight at 8 p.m. on the campus of Amherst College, at the Buckley Recital Hall, the internationally acclaimed pianist Garrick Ohlsson will grace the classical palates of fans in the Five College area with an all-Chopin recital. A winner of the 1994 Avery Fisher Prize, Ohlsson has been considered by the experts in the business as one of the premier pianists of the present day. Different from the accustomed notion of this style of music, the intimacy the solo piano provides will show another side not often heard by both the casual and staunch fan.

The program for this evening's recital will be broken up into five phases. The Chopin pieces performed will include three nocturnes, Opus 9; three mazurkas, Opus 63; twenty-four preludes, Opus 28; two polonaises, Opus 26 and Sonata Number 2 in B-flat Minor, Opus 35.

Recently, Ohlsson has received both critical acclaim and numerous awards for his released recordings of the complete Chopin solo piano works. He will also perform the complete Chopin cycle at the Lincoln Center in New York City over the 1994-95 and 1995-96 concert seasons. Portions of it here at Amherst College in two recitals — tonight and March 30. Appearing consistently in the great concert and recitalist and orchestral soloist stage roles in his career. His repertoire and recordings run the spectrum of established piano pieces and literature of both the past and present day.

Tonight's program will not possess the ostentatious grandeur of Beethoven's Fifth, or the easy recognizability of Mozart's Line Kleine Nachtmusik, but the softness in tone of the equally influential works of the composer Chopin will be showcased. The breakdown from the symphony format to the solo piano will provide an opportunity to hear classical music in its simplest form and its best at times.

The Garrick Ohlsson piano recital will begin at 8 p.m. in the Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College. The concert is part of the Amherst Series. Tickets are priced at $15 for orchestra seats and $12 for balcony seats, with discounts to senior citizens and Five College area students available. They may be reserved by calling 542-2195.

The second Chopin recital performed by Ohlsson is scheduled for March 30. It is sponsored by the John Tennant and Elizabeth Collins Adams Fund for Music. The public is invited.

BY GEORGE, WE HAVE HONEST VALUES AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $9.99 +DEP
GUINNESS PUB DRAFT 4-PACK $4.99 +DEP
Coors EXTRA GOLD CASE OF 30-12 OZ CANS $11.99 +DEP
MOLSON ICE CASE OF 24-12 OZ BOTTLES $15.49 +DEP
HARPOON ALL FLAVORS 6-PACK $4.99 +DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
MG VALLEJO CABERNET SAUVIGNON CHARDONNAY MERLOT 750 ML SALE $4.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 COST AFTER REBATE $3.49
SEBASTIANI SONOMA CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.99
CARLO ROSSI ALL FLAVORS 4.0 LITER $6.99
RIUNITE ALL FLAVORS 1.5 LITER $5.99
WALNUT CREST CHARDONNAY CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LITER $4.99

Seagram's VO 1.75 LITER $15.99
Scoresby SCOTCH WHISKY 1.75 LITER SALE $14.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$4.00 COST AFTER REBATE $10.99
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75 LITER $13.99
COURVOISIER V.S. COGNAC 750 ML $15.29
GILBEYS GIN 1.75 LITER SALE $11.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 COST AFTER REBATE $8.49

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza, Route 9 253-8344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/16/95 THRU WEDS. 2/22/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

"HOLLYWOOD" COOL MTV VIDEOS.
STICK IT IN. PRESS PLAY.
SHUT UP DILWEED. LIKE, WE'VE ALREADY GOT SOME.
PREMIERING WITH
KICK-BUTT VIDEOS FROM BEAVIS AND BUTT-HEAD- "Work Sucks!" & "There Goes the Neighborhood." The gurus of mutant mayhem take on the hassles of work and go commando on neighbor Tom Anderson in these 2 outrageous compilations.
THE YEAR IN ROCK: 1994: The trends, the news & the absurdity of the world of rock during the year that was. Feast on rare interviews & unaired news footage.
THE BEST OF LIQUID TV: The best in underground, animated anarchy.
ANNOUNCING MTV MUSIC TELEVISION home video
More Videos To Come...

Today at
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION
The Grand Opening Of... T-MEX
(Totally Mexican)
Tacos & Soft Tacos
Chicken 99¢
Beef 75¢
Bean 75¢
(Include lettuce, tomato, cheddar & picante sauce)
Burritos
Bean .99¢
Veggie 99
Chicken $1.50
Beef $1.35
Chicken & Beans $1.50
Beef & Beans $1.35
(Include lettuce, tomato, cheddar & picante on a 12" soft tortilla)
FREE 12 OZ. SODA (with any purchase, 2/16 only)
At the Hatch Bar... Corona Beer $1.95 Red Dog Pitcher $4.25
POSTIVE ID REQUIRED

Students Of Color*
Find Your Job At Career Expo '95
February 23
Hynes Convention Center
900 Boylston Street
Boston, Massachusetts

Keynote Speaker: Dr. Gwendolyn Goldsby Grant
(Lecturer; Author, Psychologist, Columnist "Parvenu Di" for Essence Magazine)
(Seen on: Oprah, Donahue, Sally Jesse Raphael, Black Entertainment Television and many others)
Schedule of Events:
9:00 A.M. - 4:30 P.M. Career Fair
* Admission Free, Business Attire Required, Bring Plenty of Resumes!!!
* Meet Informally With Representatives From Over 50 Companies
9:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M. Workshops (1 hr. sessions)
* Resume Consulting
* Job Search and Career Development Seminars
* Free Graduate School Pre-taring provided by Stanley Kaplan
5:00 P.M. Keynote / Scholarships Awards
For More Information contact:
Your Career Placement Office or The C.E.P.C. Office at: (617) 426 - 6667
* African American, Asian, Hispanic, Native American, Pacific Islander
Sponsored By: The Career Expo Planning Committee, Inc. and Opportunity in Boston

Dreams doesn't score with Academy

By John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Filmmakers and critics cried foul Tuesday after Hoop Dreams was denied an Oscar nomination for best documentary by an Academy that has snubbed some of the most acclaimed documentaries of the past decade.

The omission of the inner-city basketball saga — following slights of Roger and Me, The Thin Blue Line and The Civil War — raised fresh criticism that the Academy's documentary committee is out of touch.

"It's a miscarriage of justice and fairness," said TV film critic Roger Ebert. "Hoop Dreams is obviously the best documentary America has produced in years."

Hoop Dreams follows Chicago high school stars Arthur Agee and William Gates for 4 1/2 years as they pursue dreams of playing pro ball. Both now are college seniors — Agee at Arkansas State, Gates at Marquette — and play for their schools.

Hoop Dreams was launched in 1986 as a short film about street basketball, but rapidly became more. Filmmakers Steve James, Fred Marx and Peter Gilbert followed Agee and Gates, taping more than 250 hours in gyms, classrooms and the players' homes. It took more than two years to edit, and the final length of nearly three hours might be part of the reason it wasn't nominated, according to one member of the nominating committee.

It was nominated for an Oscar for best editing.

The five nominated documentary features were Maya Lin, Complaints of a Dutiful Daughter, D-Day Remembered, Freedom on My Mind and A Great Day in Harlem.

"I have yet to hear of any of these movies that were nominated," said Michael Barker, whose well-reviewed Sony Classics release Crumb also was overlooked.

Gates, at Marquette practice Tuesday, said the news hit him almost like a basketball loss, "but it's on a different level. I've been playing basketball all my life and this here was a once in a lifetime opportunity," he told Milwaukee station WITI-TV.

"This may never happen again for me so it's probably one of the biggest disappointments of my life that it didn't get nominated."

Hoop Dreams already has won the Golden Globe for best documentary, and the equivalent awards from the National Society of Film Critics and the Los Angeles Film Critics Association.

Those left out of the Oscar documentary category were particularly indignant that the chairwoman of the committee nominating films saw her own obscure documentary win a nomination. Academy officials said Freida Lee Mock was prohibited from voting for her Maya Lin: A Strong Clear Vision, but filmmakers said the conflict was too profound.

"They've been very careful to say that they avoid a conflict of interest," said Ira Deutchman, whose Fine Line Features distributed Hoop Dreams and pushed the movie for a best-picture nomination. "But this is a group of people who spend a lot of time together."

For most categories except best picture, Academy voters are divided into branches. Costume designers nominate costume designers, editors pick editors, and so on.

There is no documentary branch, however. Forty-seven mostly veteran Academy members — actors, producers, directors — form a committee that nominates documentary features in a secret ballot, said committee vice chairman Walter Shenson.

"We looked at 64 movies this year," Shenson said. "The public and the press don't see as many movies as we do. We thought there were five better films. Democracy is painful — it's not always easy."

He said Mock was banned from committee meetings and screenings. "We are scrupulous."

Mitchell Block, a committee member who didn't vote because he represents D-Day, said Hoop Dreams may have suffered from its length. "If it was a really tight two hours, it would have sailed right through."

Several filmmakers said Hoop Dreams, the cartoonist R. Crumb's movie Crumb and Martha & Ethel, a biography of two nannies, should have been on the list.

"To see the documentary committee ignore these films is very puzzling. I don't see the criteria," said Sony's Barker.

It's a familiar refrain.

Filmmakers can rattle off a slew of highly regarded documentaries left off the Academy Award honor roll in recent years: Paris is Burning, Brother's Keeper, Heart of Darkness: A Filmmaker's Apocalypse, Sherman's March, Madonna: Truth or Dare and 28 Up, among many others.

■ tube

continued from page 5

spent their last dollar on costly breast implants and got little to show for it. Actually, some of them got quite a lot, and believe me, it showed. By the way, I was impressed that Miss Massachusetts managed to reach the semi-finals, before she bombed out. That's better than she usually does.

More T&A was to be found in ABC's four-hour docudrama "Texas Justice" which starred Heather Locklear as a woman with a lot of size 2 miniskirts. Not that it mattered much, but the plot involved Peter Strauss as a stone-faced, humorless millionaire who goes on trial for murdering his ex-wife's young daughter. I was initially upset the movie never got around to revealing the killer's identity, but now I realize all the courtroom stuff was just killing time between Heather's wardrobe changes.

I think the producers wanted to make this into a kind of mini-"Melrose Place," with a southern drawl — but ultimately "Texas Justice" lacked the character development and sense of humor that could have made it more fun to watch. It was just too bland — sort of like "Dallas" with no J.R. to liven things up. But for the record, Heather does have a swell physique.

Anyway, I'd seen enough beautiful people for one week, so I decided to check out that weird monster guy on Fox's reruns of "HBO's Tales From the Crypt." For those of you who don't know, it's a juvenile version of "The Twilight Zone" with a charismatic cadaver taking over Rod Serling's duties as a cheerfully eerie commentator. The series really isn't very scary, but seeing the guest stars tackle embarrassing roles is amusing (in one segment, Anthony Zerbe started having conversations with a portrait of his dead mother — and 15 minutes later he's eaten by a hungry Doberman). A bit too silly for me, but 10-year-olds would probably like it.

On the other hand, ABC's "A Whole New Ballgame" shouldn't be allowed to air on Saturday morning for anyone. In this sitcom, Corbin Bernson attempts to broaden his acting range by portraying a sleazy, womanizing TV sportscaster, instead of a sleazy, womanizing lawyer. This is the poor man's "Murphy Brown," a comedy without laughs that takes on the world of broadcast journalism without knowing or caring anything about the medium. Last week's show even had a nice little message attached to it: something about how women can box just as well as men — I think. You know, I really hate when stupid programs try to teach me things. They're always doing it too, when they run out of unfunny jokes. Painful.

Yet another show worth missing is the syndicated "Jones and Jury," which brings still more real-life court cases to the viewing public — Wapner-style. I mean, I liked "The People's Court" — after all, who could resist the earnest authority of Rusty the Bailiff, or the intruding pomposity of reporter Doug Llewelyn? But let's face it, without such colorful characters, small claims court is just plain boring. My apologies to moderator Star Jones, but I've seen infomercials with more drama and suspense.

Come to think of it, there is a really watchable infomercial out there for CDs called "Gems of the '70s." It's hosted by Rick Smith, who was sort of a geek when he hosted "Solid Gold" years ago, but now that he's been through puberty and gotten a cool haircut, he's much jazzier. I've probably seen this infomercial about a hundred and fifty times, and if they keep airing it I'll probably see it a hundred and fifty more. Anyone who honestly believes that music from the late '70s sucks ought to give this promo a shot. If you're still not convinced, just give it another 10 or 15 tries. And if you haven't gone out of your mind by then, you'll be converted in no time, trust me.

Royal Trux set to enter the mainstream

Royal Trux's latest release Thank You may be the band's ticket into the big time.

COURTESY CATALINA LEISERING.

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

Trying to define the word "alternative" or even "independent" for that matter is like walking on shaky ground these days. Thanks to the mad rush of guitar-toting whiners (like Green Day, Pearl Jam) on the Billboard charts, the aforementioned terms don't so much as represent a sound as they do an attitude, or even worse yet — a style.

That's why it doesn't seem too much of a shock to see Royal Trux — a band that once personified the independent scene — pull themselves out of the gutter and head to the majors. Throughout their decade-long career, the band has displayed enough down and dirty attitude and raunchy style to hang with even the most traditional of rockers. But the band has been seemingly reluctant to step up into the limelight, more content to drench their gritty tunes in lo-fi hiss, passionately numb vocals and loads and loads of irony.

But as with music's greatest artists, Royal Trux are ready to grow. The band has finally solidified its once erratic line- up (they started as a duo, playing with whoever was around) and is about to release its major-label debut, Thank You, on Virgin Records.

And while many indie die-hards will groan and proclaim their former heroes dead and buried, the fact remains that Thank You rawks. For the first time in Royal Trux's history the band has given in to their love for blues grooves and come up with an album that is more concerned with working the groove than grating your ears. Singers and founding members Neil Haggerty and Jennifer Herrema still offer up their version of Sticky Fingers-era Stones in their best snarls, but after the head trip freak-out of their 1990 double-LP Twin Infinitives, it would be safe to say the band has become a bit more cohesive.

"I don't really see [Thank You] as a progression," said Neil Haggerty, the band's guitarist/vocalist/and founding member. "Our first album was more straightforward than our third one."

And that may be one of Royal Trux's greatest assets. Throughout the band's incarnation, Haggerty and Herrema have shifted gears at will — not afraid to show their potential accessible side shine through amidst the drugged- out haze.

Now that the band has jumped ship from Drag City Records to Virgin, the band has started to lose interest in trying to mess with people's heads and more concerned with finely tuning their sound. Of course, this inevitably means the obligatory backlash, especially with the Rolling Stones comparisons, but the group seems ready to take it all in stride.

"If we could we would try to avoid all that Stones blah, blah, blah" said Haggerty. "We're not aping the Stones, we just have the same influences."

While there is an obvious Stones-y element to Thank You, to call it nothing more than a copy cat would be unfair. Royal Trux still delivers their songs with the style of arena rockers, but the heart of indie subversives. And considering the band's foundations come from the mid-eighties no-wave scene (Haggerty use to be a member of the atonal rock band Pussy Galore) it is not surprising the band still finds it hard to deliver a song in a complete straight-ahead fashion. The band has put its signature stamp on its songs by combining Sonic Youth-like noise with a more traditional blues feel — something that was almost unheard of in indie circles.

"The whole indie thing came out of a non-blues style — offshoots of punk rock," said Haggerty. "In the '80s nobody was doing [blues influenced rock]. I couldn't help it, we listened to stuff like that all the time."

Needless to say the outcome of Royal Trux's move into the big time should be interesting. The band already has played to mass audiences at Lollapalooza (which Haggerty described as a "strange" experience for the group) and has been garnered huge critical accolades for their last indie effort, Cats And Dogs.

Although the band's move to the big time may be looked down upon since they have split from Drag City — a label which nurtured them from the beginning of their career.

"[Drag City] is doing the vinyl of Thank You," said Haggerty. "We didn't really want them to do it, but Virgin asked them to."

Still, despite the Royal Trux's obvious desire to put their past behind them, the band still remains on a friendly basis with the label and its owner Dan Koetsky.

"Dan has been our friend for a long time," said Haggerty. "As long as he doesn't sell out we'll respect him. We can sell out — he can't."

Jewish Affairs needs writers!
If you have an interest in writing for and about the UMass Jewish Community,
Contact Jacob W. Michaels
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Summer break... Winter break... ISRAELBREAK!
Fly to Israel FREE on a special fellowship program. If you are an undergraduate college student and permanently reside or attend school in the five boroughs of New York City, Westchester or Long Island and have never been to Israel, call the hotline at 212-696-0248
and say:
GIMME A BREAK!

THE TOC
SPORTS BAR AND LOUNGE
• 11-FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER •
Tonight
College Hoops
Tomorrow
winter warm-up
.18 wings 4-7 p.m.
This Weekend
Hockey & Hoops
Saturday at noon
Join us for the Coach Mallen show with Ted Baker & Brock Hines (UHMP)
Chance for Prizes!
Sunday: open at noon
UMASS U Louisville 1:30
$3 half-time buffet
SAM ADAMS PINT $1.95
ICE HOUSE PITCHER $4.50
Positive ID Required

Mike's Westview Cafe
SPECIALS OF THE WEEK
Michelob Lite Bottles $ 1.75
Vodka Tonics $ 2.00
Grape Crush Shots $ 1.50
Thursday Night: Free Appetizer 9:30-10:30 p.m.
Friday Night buffet for $1.00
Come Celebrate George Washington's Birthday on Sunday Night
FREE Hot Dogs & Hamburgers 9 pm - 10 pm
FREE Hats & T-shirts

Opinionated? People tell you to mind your own business? Can't help but have a view about everything?
Then come sub out your thoughts to the Editorial/Opinion Desk.
Contact Tracy Markham 113 Campus Center 545-3500

Anthony's
Wildest Anniversary
All Week Long... Starting FEB 20th
100 Beautiful Girls From USA Appearing This Week
$1.00 DRAFTS
PRIZES TICKETS
STARRING 6 CENTERFOLDS
Register To Win Trip For Two To The Grand Cayman
Mon-Wed 4pm - 2am
Thurs-Sat Noon 2am
18 and over welcom with positive I.D.
$2.00 SHOT SPECIALS
500 NEW LUDLOW RD • S. HADLEY, MA
413-536-0502

TV soundtrack also in jeopardy

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

MY SO-CALLED LIFE SOUNDTRACK
Various Artists
Atlantic Records

Poor Angela Chase. Not only did she lose her best friend and realize the guy of her dreams isn't all he's cracked up to be, but her show is in boardroom limbo until May. And to add insult to injury, the only thing she has to boost her morale is a god-awful soundtrack and some Internet fans (savemscl@aol.com). Well, it isn't a totally awful compilation, but it's bad enough to make you wonder if it's the best the producers can do to rally support.

Juliana Hatfield (who guest starred as a Christmas angel in one episode) lends her voice to the opening track, "Make It Home." It is a watery acoustical song that is something Angela could whine to ("Why won't Jordan see me for me?") and probably did. However, it isn't as spectacular as the song "Spin The Bottle" that Hatfield did for that other so-called "Generation X" movie soundtrack, Reality Bites.

Buffalo Tom and Sonic Youth both add their sounds to the effort, the former with a palatable sounding song that's upbeat and less mournful than most of their works.

However, the usually musical interesting Sonic Youth fail miserably with their contribution "Genetic." One would think the song should have been called "generic" for its complete and utter lack of excitement and shameless predictability — making one wonder if they did this one just for charity.

Madder Rose's "Drop a Bone" has the same kind of pop catchiness as Veruca Salt's overplayed "Seether" but ends much too abruptly. The Lemonheads' contribution "Dawn Can't Decide" lends the soundtrack some trendiness with Evan Dando crooning delicately in popular Lemonhead fashion. A good song if a tad predictable.

The Archers of Loaf try to capture the same quality but fall flat on their faces with a track that screams "alternative" with token distorted guitars, feed back, thrashing drums and assembly line lyrics.

Contributions from The Afghan Whigs and Further aren't bad, but you have to wonder if the money invested in them wouldn't have been better invested in the Cranberries' "Dreams" because, after all, it is the song that is most remembered by fans and critics of the show, since it is one of the more notable songs that actually appeared in an episode.

Perhaps the most redeeming factors of the whole sha-bang are the two ending tracks. Frentel's "The Book Song" is simple and melodic — almost ballad-like and definitely something that could catch on given enough exposure. Daniel Johnston is by far the most interesting listen. His lyrics are unsophisticated but heartfelt. And like the show, Johnston's voice mirrors that of an insecure teenager unable to express his emotions eloquently, but willing to give it a shot anyhow.

My So-Called Life Soundtrack has many flaws much like the show itself. It's mostly soundtrack-by-the-numbers complete with unreleased tracks that should have probably stayed that way. Yet, like the show, if you listen hard and listen long enough you may be able to find a few gems to make it all worth while. C+

COURTESY STEPHAN DOUBLES

Belly's new album King has hit stores world wide.

Belly's new album step in right direction

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

KING
Belly
Sire/Reprise

It's only been a couple of years since Tanya Donelly took her private repertoire of songs and stepped out from the shadows of Throwing Muses and The Breeders to form Belly and release an album of her own songs. Star was a commercial success due mainly to its radio-friendly cuts "Feed The Tree" and "Gepetto."

Now that the band's lineup has been secure since the Star tour, it is not a surprise that the other members of the band would want to get in on the songwriting process, and King is the surprising result.

Sure, letting others in on the songwriting could be disastrous, but even where Donelly doesn't write, and King falters, it still shows incredible potential. Bassist Gail Greenwood pens two tracks on the album — the lead track "Puberty" and later "Super Connected." The latter is weak, but the energy the band puts into it still makes it bearable.

The bulk of the songs are written by Donelly, but when she pairs up with guitarist Tom Gorman on four tracks they turn out to be quite an amazing duo. "Red," "Silverfish," "Now They'll Sleep" and "Judas My Heart" are the result of their collaboration, but Donelly consistently shows herself as the premier songwriter of the group.

"The Bees," "King" and "Untitled And Unsung" are the gems Donelly gives us on King, but the high quality of the other selections make waiting for them a pleasure. Unlike Star, King is a much more upbeat album and gives drummer Chris Gorman (yes, Tom's brother) a chance to really shine. "Seal My Fate," "Lil Ennio" and "Red" display his ability to change gears quickly and he never overdoes a good thing.

King is a collection of simple pleasures. The songs are extremely accessible and most start to grow on you after a listen or two. Belly has accomplished what most bands worry most about, overcoming the sophomore slump. King is the promising first step in Belly's journey from Tanya Donelly's solo project to a band with the ideas of four members forming one vision. B+

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Lunch and Dinner Buffet
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-8800

RICHARD'S ARMY & NAVY
UP TO 50% OFF WINTER CLEARANCE
EVERYTHING BUT THE DOG!
Next to the Iron Horse
Center St.
Northampton
586-0275

INTERESTED IN A CAREER IN PUBLISHING?
The University of Denver Publishing Institute, to be held July 10 to August 4, 1995, is an intensive introduction to the publishing industry designed for recent college graduates.
A representative of the institute will present an information session in Porter Lounge, Converse Hall, Amherst College, on Tuesday, February 21. All UMass seniors with an interest in a book publishing career are invited to attend.

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Tues. 2pm - 10pm
Wed., Thurs. & Fri. 2pm - 10pm
Sat. 10am - 6pm
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7am - 10pm

Summer Study in Ireland and Mexico
The application deadline is April 21.
Ireland Today
This program is designed for students interested in observing Irish society firsthand and analyzing their experience within the broader context of political, cultural, and economic issues. Instruction blends course work with field activities, including meetings with political, industrial, civic, and union leaders. Participants can earn six undergraduate credits in political science.
June 15-July 5
Spanish Language and Culture in Cuernavaca, Mexico
Study Spanish at any proficiency level in a totally Hispanic cultural environment. Through formal and informal instruction, this program aims to develop proficiency in conversation and writing and an appreciation of Mexican culture. Participants can earn up to six undergraduate credits in Spanish.
June 5-July 8
For details, please contact:
Division of Continuing Education
International Programs
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
UMass Boston

Student Union Art Gallery Presents:
Spring 1995 Artist Video Series
Art Ache
A 3 part series offering an insiders view of the modern art world.

Feb. 22	"The Game of Art and How To Play It"	51 min
March 1	"The Image of An Artist"	53 min
March 8	"Life is Short"	50 min
Other artist videos include:
April 5	Alexander Calder: "Mobile"	25 min
April 12	Peirre Bonnard: "In Search of Pure Color"	30 min
April 19	Kazimir Malevich": "Breaking Free of The Earth"	54 min
April 26	Isabel Bishop	30 min

All videos are shown in Campus Center room 903 except:
•"Life is Short" CC room 917
•Alexander Calder: "Mobile" CC room 803
The video series takes place on Wednesday nights, from 5-7 pm. This event is free and open to the public, sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council. Any questions? Feel free to call the gallery!

The UMass Body Shop Announces...
Wellness Seminars

Topic 1:	How to Develop an Exercise Program That Works.
Held:	Thursday, Feb. 16, Totman Room 153 at 7:00 p.m.
Topic 2:	Free-weights and You: Everything You Wanted to Know. For the interested and beginner weight lifter.
Held:	Thursday, Feb. 23, Hilltop Body Shop (Webster Dorm) at 7:00 p.m.

For more information stop by any Body Shop or call 545-0324

ARE YOU TIRED
of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

CHECK OUT THESE HOT SPECIALS FROM SCOTT'S
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m Tel: 549-2692.
BUD DRY 24-12oz Cans $10.79 +dep
ICE HOUSE 24-12oz Bottles $12.99 +dep
BUSCH 1/2 Kegs $34.99
CHECK OUT OUR 3 FOR 5.00 WINE SELECTION
BUD ICE 12 pack bottles $6.99 +dep
COORS EXTRA GOLD 30 pack cans $12.49 +dep
RUBINOFF VODKA 1.75liter $8.99
JACK DANIELS 750 ml $11.49
CASTILLO RUM (White & Gold) 1.75liter $11.49
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games

❑ All Work. No Play.
❑ All Play. No Work.
☑ All Work. All Play.

Get the best of both worlds at Microsoft.

On Campus Interviews
Co-op Job Fair TODAY!
Campus Center
Will be accepting resumes for Technical Interviews taking place on Friday, February 17th in Mather Career Center.

Microsoft®
Microsoft is an Equal Opportunity Employer and supports workforce diversity.

©1994 Microsoft Corporation. All rights reserved. Microsoft® is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation.

■ gymnastics

continued from page 14

about collegiate gymnastics. She hasn't had to make that transition.

"She strengthens our team, not only as one individual performer can help us, but it makes the whole team better because she wants this team to make it as a team."

Swartz began at the age of six by "flipping around the house" and practicing her lifelong love for the balance beam on the wood floors of her home. The path of club competition followed her parents to Albany and Syracuse, but she credits the time she spent in Utica between ninth grade and senior year of high school as the key period in her development.

Before her first two years at GWU, she realized that college gymnastics was a team sport, and liked this level more than any others because of that fact. There were team awards in the clubs, but they were not considered even close to the importance of the individual awards.

"I definitely like the team style because you have so much support; whereas in the USGF it was against one another, even when you were on the same team, because you are all trying to win the all-around spot," she said.

"In college, it is not based on the importance of winning an event or the all-around. It is more of a team sport and I like that a lot better."

The impact of Tolhurst's talent has already been felt as she now holds three season bests. Co-holding the floor exercise best with junior Shaheda Keels (9.80), she now holds the bests in both the vault (9.90, and a school record) and the balance beam (9.75). Her dominance in these two events continued in last weekend's meet with the Mountaineers as she captured first place in both.

With a tough schedule for the remainder of the season, the team has begun to gel at the right time. With aspirations of reaching the NCAA Championships in Athens, Ga., the possibilities for post season success are brightening. Swartz pointed out that it basically comes down to the team boating itself, and Tolhurst agrees.

"We need to keep within ourselves and not worry too much about the other teams, like Georgia, because their skill level is higher than ours," said Tolhurst. "If we concentrate on our routines, the scores are going to be there and we are consistently going to get better."

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Tara Swartz has been impressive for Coach Dave Kuzara's squad this season.

■ hoop

continued from page 14

the team acknowledge that they are not playing their best.

"This kind of thing is good for a basketball team," Calipari said. "We need to get more focused on what we need to do to win basketball games and get away from all the hoopla and other garbage going on around us. We need to be a team on a mission."

"We're not playing 'UMass basketball," senior Derek Kellogg said. "We're not focused going into games. We're not playing real aggressive."

Calipari hopes that the recent losses will hit a nerve with his team and motivate them for the rest of the year.

"You're never going to go through a season without having a little dip," Calipari said. "If we're going to have it, let's have it now. We're going to be all right."

Around the rim: Perhaps the most positive thing to come out of UMass' rough stretch is the emergence of Tyrone Weeks. Dating back to Jan. 1, Weeks has averaged 5.5 points and 4.5 rebounds. When Camby went down with a hamstring injury, Weeks was inserted into the starting lineup. The 6-foot-6—inch sophomore has thrived in the role, scoring 10 points and grabbing 10 rebounds in Tuesday's loss to GW.

First Panthers, Jaguars chosen

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Steve Beuerlein joined a "Who's Who in the NFL" club Wednesday when Jacksonville made him the first pick in the first expansion draft in 19 years.

For the rest of the day, it was mainly "who's that?" as the Jaguars and the Carolina Panthers went for the unknown, the underpaid and, in some cases, the relatively unfit. The Panthers in particular stayed with low-priced, low-profile players throughout.

Beuerlein, who fell out of favor with coach Buddy Ryan after a good 1993 season with the Arizona Cardinals, became an asterisk when the Jaguars made him the first pick. Overall, Jacksonville went for veterans and spent more money while Carolina, hoping to attract free agents, went young and cheap.

He goes to Jacksonville with no illusions.

"One of my claims to fame throughout my career is that I've always been able to take a hit," Beuerlein said. "I'm sure that won't be any different going down to Jacksonville. I'll stand in there and take a hit with the best of them."

But after the 30-year-old quarterback, due to make about $2 million next year, the new teams turned to youth and low salaries. Carolina didn't go for quarterbacks until late, taking the veteran Jack Trudeau from the New York Jets in the 28th round after taking Miami's Doug Pederson six picks earlier.

And a number of big-name, high-priced players were ignored, including Michael Dean, William Perry, Gary Clark, Dante Jones, Chris Doleman, Mark Rypien, Tom Rathman and Chris Miller.

Rod Smith, a 24-year-old cornerback who started seven games for New England last year, was Carolina's first pick.

"I'm just one of 30 guys," Smith said. "I'm not worried about the contract at this point."

And so it went, with each team required to spend at least $14 million against what's expected to be a salary cap of about $36 million next season. Of the first 36 players chosen, 24 made under $200,000 last year.

But Jacksonville spent far more late in the draft, taking a group of high-salaried players, including wide receiver Desmond Howard, the 1991 Heisman Trophy winner but a major disappointment in Washington.

That and the selections of two other busted No. 1 picks — tight end Derek Brown from the New York Giants and guard Eugene Chung of New England — put them over the $14 million mark. That whole group had cap numbers over $1 million.

They also took such veterans as running back Reggie Cobb, wide receiver Kelvin Martin and linebacker James Williams in the late rounds.

And they took just 31 players, one over the required number. Carolina took 35, although both could have chosen 42.

In Beuerlein, the Jaguars got a player whom Tom Coughlin, their coach and general manager, said "was graded in the elite players in this particular draft."

He will immediately jump to No. 1 on the depth chart ahead of Andre Ware, the former Heisman Trophy winner who was released by Detroit and Minnesota last year.

But most of the choices were far lesser known and lower-priced than Beuerlein. And the existing teams, allowed to pull back one player after losing one, did the same as they protected their younger rather than the high-priced veterans they had exposed. "It was evident the two expansion teams picked younger players without the high salaries first, players with a future," said George Young, general manager of the Giants.

There were few veterans taken early.

Tim McKyer, the veteran cornerback who was beaten by San Diego's Tony Martin in the AFC title game, was taken in the sixth round by Carolina, coached by former Pittsburgh defensive coordinator Dom Capers, for whom McKyer played last year. Capers took another Steelers defensive back, Fred Foggie, on the 15th round.

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst! Free info session: Mon. Feb. 27th, Lord Jeffery Inn, at 7pm, or call 1-800-UCAN-MIX

The Distinguished Visitor Program is looking for new members! If you are interested in finding out about DVP come to the new members meeting on February 22 at 5:30 in rm 407 Student Union or call 5-0046

UMass Theatre Guild auditions Stephen Soundheim's Merrily We Roll Along Thurs Feb 16 7pm Earthfoods, Fri 17 7pm CC 101, Sat 18 11am CC 174 Callbacks 20 Call 545-0415

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice SW 107,300 miles automatic transmission, new paint and engine. Asking $900 or best offer. Please contact Fausto @ (413) 549-4969

1986 Mercury Lynx, standard, 1.9 litre engine, new clutch, brake, battery, very reliable. $2000 546-5698

Car for parts, 77 Buick wagon, running $150 or b.o. 546-7727

Toyota Supra Turbo. 1986. 2 door, 5 speed, black, 151,000 miles. Just serviced. New tire. Good condition. $4995 or best offer. Call Dave 665-3204

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Maine and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available: waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, ropes course, athletics, arts and crafts. For applications call 609-424-2755

FOR RENT

Cape Cod Group summer rentals: water front houses, Falmouth area. 508 477-6000

Cape Cod Seasonal rentals: 1-5 bedroom houses in all towns. Rental rates: Hotsey Scenic 508 394-7857 or 398 8367

Sunderland. 4 bedroom apartment, pool, laundry, bus route, available March. $850 + . 665-7311

Take over lease. Month of Feb. free. Call 548-5381 $622/month

FOR SALE

Airline ticket Bradley to Los Angeles a bargain at $100. Call Elaine 413 625-9083

AMP Roland JX3P synth. $750. Wah pedal $50. Mandolin $100. Couch $50 253 2909

Computer and or printer. Cordata 386 1 mb RAM computer with software (DosUnixMS Works + more) Canon BJ 200 printer $500 for both. Call 665-8287

Kitchen wood table w/ 4 chairs, good condition $75 B.O. Call 665-4606

Large dorm type fridge about 3 ft high $85 and microwave $75. Both in excellent condition. Call Rich 256-4580.

Macintesh computer. Complete system including printer only $599. Call Chris at 800 299 5685.

Moving sale February 18-19. 9am-2pm. Everything must go rugs, furniture, bikes, more. Lincoln apts. 514, Amherst, phone 549-7227.

Revo sunglasses absolute lowest prices. Shapes, H2O, Classic Traveler. Call 1-800-9BSHADES

Save $62. U.S. Air anywhere by March 28 $179 value for $116. For more 549-4015

Smith Corona 5000 word processor $700 Call Chris 253-4913

Stereo speakers. Hegel 09 $150. Pioneer CT F 10 $35. software WPS 0a. Paradox 3.5 Ultima Pro 5 @ 546-5098

Want a Macintosh? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Clarisworks $490 Christopher 549-7453

Atari, Intellivision, Colecovision games, controllers and systems. Buy/Sell/Trade. 256-1995, ask for Tony.

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan at Bus stop Sunday morn. Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain. Call Bill at 6-0704.

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol. Create available. Casa Bes 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512 418-8991

HELP WANTED

Alaska summer employment. fishing industry. Earn up to $3,000 $6,000+ per month. Room and board! transportation! Male/female. No experience necessary! 206-545-4155 ext. A50012

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp. 3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront, + arts. Call 1-800-973-3866. On campus interviews available.

Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $2000 +/month. World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50014

Customer Service. Part time 4 pm-11pm. Typing/computer experience helpful. Delivery Express 549-0077

Drivers wanted-Earn $8 $12 /hour 11-2 or 4-11. Delivery Express 549-0077

Expanding environmental company needs ambitious self-starters immediately. Great opportunity 413-534-8533

Full time, live-in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod. Call Holly at 349-0392.

Help wanted. Experienced waitstaff weekends. Apply within! Ke. Chi Restaurant, Mt. Farms Mall.

Live and work in Nantucket for the summer. Call Leone 548-1303.

Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 295-5400 after 2 p.m.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar lessons. Enjoy the semester and learn! Eight 25 years' experience. Beginning/advanced. Peter 256-4641

MOUNTAINBIKE FOR SALE

Paramount aerius 20 mint, ridden approx 20 on road miles. owner is resident. Rockey bars and rims. Sumtour XC approximately 2715. Light. Paid $850 will sell for $450. 413 527-8029

PERSONALS

M Gomes, Thank you for disproving the notion that a good man is hard to find. Love, Angela

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends. Gas $. 253-2909

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate to share rm in Brandywine. Available immediately. Call 549-7458

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo. Florida Spring Break. Earn 2 credits. Call Project Deep 1-800 767-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive. Monday Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm. 1-800 767-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Going away? Need your pets to be taken care of? Call Jen 549-6892. Exp. with all types of animals.

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS. 256-8895. 19.2 K bps. 130 megs online + CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906.

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski-Spring Break '95 intercollegiate ski weekends only $289! Includes 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (luxury condos)/5 days intercollege-ate activities (drinking age 18), sponsors include Lobatts, Molson and Mt. Orford, Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Campus and Greek representatives needed. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

THETA CHI

Theta Chi fraternity spring rush '95. See what our brotherhood is all about. All are welcome. Feb. 13-16, 20, 21 8:00-10:00pm. Questions or a ride call Ted Silva 549-4588

TICKETS NEEDED

I need two tickets to UMass vs. Duquesne Thurs. Feb. 16. Will pay cash. Call Mike E 7434.

TRAVEL

Daytona Beach Spring Break fest class, oceanfront hotel, directly on the beach, pool deck fun, nightclubs, sunshine, parties. Do not miss this trip!!! Includes on-campus pick up and drop off, only $258 quad occup., departs weekly in March. Call for free brochure. M-F, 8-5, 1-800-932-9866. See you at the beach!!!

Spring Break '95. Daytona $99. Panama City $149. The best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call Heidi + Andrea 256-6110.

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 5 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $479! Panama City $179! Daytona Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1-800-678-6386.

Spring Break. Daytona, Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica South Padre Great prices! Book soon! Reserve 253-5368.

Spring Break. Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jeff at 549-4932.

TYPING

Typing. Word processing resumes. Fast, responsive. 549-6738.

WANTED

Get an extra floor ticket for Live? Will pay with Cash! 256-8110.

HP Laserjet toner cartridges wanted for recycling. $7 cash each. Please include packing materials. Call 549-4368.

SEE COLLEGE FROM A DIFFERENT PERSPECTIVE

SIGMA ALPHA MU SPRING RUSH '95

TONIGHT	FEB. 16 6:30 PM	SURPRISE EVENT
MONDAY	FEB. 20 6:30 PM	OPEN RUSH
TUESDAY	FEB. 21 6:30 PM	OPEN RUSH

For more information, please call Aaron at 549-1602 or Jason at 549-2872 or stop by our Fraternity House anytime at: 395 North Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002

Mikara's
Springfield's Dance Party
Thursday Night Rock & Roll Shows
February 16... The Outlaws (21 and over)
February 22... Eddie Money (21 and over)
February 23... Max Creek (18 and over)
March 2... Ritchie Havens (21 and over)
270 Cooley St. Springfield, MA (413) 796-7127
Free Cover Friday or Saturday Nights with this ad. 2$ off any show with valid student ID.

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT
North American Van Lines is now accepting applications from college students and staff for its Summer Fleet Program.
Summer is the busy season in the moving industry, and we need your help to handle the load. We will teach you to safely operate an 18-wheel rig and load household goods cargo - at no cost. We pay your room and board while you're in training. Once you receive your Commercial Driver's License, we'll pay you $425 per week, plus $125 per week living expenses, plus bonus.
To qualify, you must be 21 years old, have a good driving record, and be available for training in May (the end of April would be even better!)
Take a break from the classroom, and make the most of your summer with North American Van Lines. We'll promise you an adventure you'll never forget.
Call 1-800-348-2147, Dept. U-21.
northAmerican.

Lincoln Real Estate

Apartment Rentals
25 N. Pleasant St.
253-7879

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring, "Miller High Life" cans $9.99 case
Killian's Red 12 oz. Bottles $14.99 cse.
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"
Catamount - Amber, Gold, Porter
Sam Adams - all flavors
Black Dog - Ale, Pale Ale
Dos Equis - Amber, Regular
St. Pauli Girl - Lager & Dark
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
Rolling Rock $12.99 cse. bott.
American Beer $7.19 cse cans
BUD $4.65 16 Oz. Bott.
Vodka 80 Proof $8.99 1.75L
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

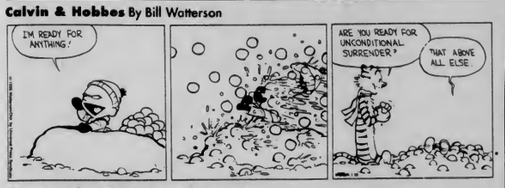
Judies
UMass Student Leah Jeffrey Says:
" The Frosting on that Chocolate Cake was Orgasmic..."
(Chocolate Mousse Cake)
51 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst • 253-3491

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Garfield By Jim Davis

WELL IF IT ISN'T "MISTER GLUTTONY"
HOW ARE YOU, "MISTER I THINK I'LL EAT TWO DOZEN DOUGHNUTS IN ONE SITTING"?
TAKING A NAP "MISTER STUFF MY FACE TILL I PASS OUT"?
JUST DON'T CALL ME "MISTER LARDO"

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



Loold By Roger & Salem Salloom

I was so happy the other day because my girl and I figured out that one of her biggest problems is fear of abandonment.

So.... I told her I'd never leave her.

Then she looked up at me with tears in her eyes and said her other big problem is that she is afraid of commitments.

So, I told her that soon I would drop her, and she would be free!

That didn't seem to help.

So then, I told her I was going to prison for five years.

That made her feel much better.

Love is magic.

P.S. Mueller By Mueller

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Jim's Journal By Jim

At the copy store today I worked with Hal-while he was looking at the copy we made, I noticed how tightly curled his hair is.
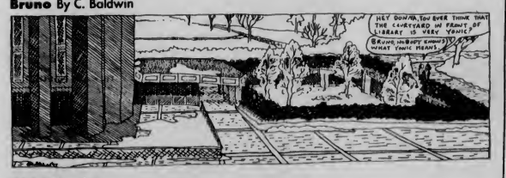
He showed me some paste-up marks he found on the copy, and told me to touch them up.
"This wouldn't happen if we had one of those Canon 665's," he said."

Bruno By C. Baldwin



HEY DOWN, DO YOU EVER THINK THAT THE CAVEYARD IN FRONT OF LIBRARY IS VERY "VERY"?
BRUNO, IN EVERY SENTENCE YOU SAY, WHAT YOU'RE MEANS!

DEAN By edwin

Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your tastes may differ from your loved ones'. Good fortune will smile on you this afternoon. Discussions related to socializing or marriage are favored. Find out more about events taking place at a distance.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): If something is on your mind, try to analyze your concern. Perhaps you sense that a revolutionary development is unfolding. Talking things over with your allies will help you reach a wise conclusion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day to deal with situation that has threatened your peace of mind. If family members are stubborn, bend so as not to break.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Turning over a problem to someone else is a good idea now. Do not withhold any information that might help solve it. Secrecy will only delay the results you desire. Tackle a promising creative project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Others are more affected than usual by your plans to support a special cause. Going along with your partner's ideas will work out better than expected. Try not to sound like a know-it-all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A strong bond is developing between you and an associate. A carefully crafted agreement will help you meet a financial goal while generating new business prospects. Let romance develop as its own pace.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Play your cards right and the pieces to a puzzle will fall into place. Let your offspring know that they are expected to abide by the rules. A good evening to get out and mingle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Business ventures enjoy good luck today. Although someone tries to steal your thunder, those who count know that you are responsible for a project's success. Finish one job before starting another. Thoroughness pays rich dividends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Although you have great talent, you sometimes procrastinate. Self-discipline can mean the difference between a mediocre showing and a spectacular success. A chance meeting could lead to a lifelong romantic alliance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Deal only with loyal people, even if this means doing more things on your own. Those in authority will respond favorably when you show greater self-confidence. Stop hiding your light under a bushel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Job frustration will not end until you present your case to those at the top. Challenge someone who is spreading false stories. The truth will make you a winner! Nurture your mate's dreams.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Press a business associate for a definite answer. Further delay could lead to the loss of a golden opportunity. Allow yourself plenty of time to get to and from appointments. Interviewers will not wait.

Quote of the Day

"The bitter and the sweet come from the outside, the hard from within, from one's own efforts."

–Albert Einstein

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Darienne J. Hosley
Copy Editor.....T. J. White
Photo Technician.....Paul Bilodeau
Production Supervisor.....Sandy Bogage
Production.....Olmy Rosenstock, Kevin Farrar, Dmitry Abramson

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Macaroni and Cheese	Baked Chicken
Broc./ Cauli. Casserole	Fettuccini/ Sausage
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
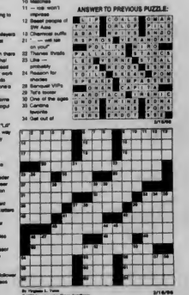
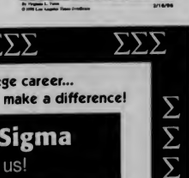
Ratatouille	Baked Chicken
Broc./ Cauli. Casserole	Fettuccini/ Sause

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



Make the most of your college career...
Join an organization where YOU can make a difference!
Sigma Sigma Sigma
Come grow with us!
Come and find out more about us:
• Feb. 14-16 Information table Campus Center Concourse
• Feb. 15 "Oh What A Night" 6-8 pm CC Room 909
• Feb. 16 "Sigmaopoly" 6-8 CC Room 801
For more information call Pam at 253-0854.

Sports

Minutemen hoping to rebound tonight

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The slumping University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will try to get back on the track tonight, when they take on Duquesne at the William D. Mullins Center.

The Minutemen enter the game in the midst of their toughest stretch of the season. They have lost two games in less than two weeks after winning 16 in a row, and have struggled even in their victories, but the Dukes could be just what the doctor ordered for the Minutemen, who pounded coach John Carroll's squad in Pittsburgh on Jan. 24, 103-53. The Minutemen have been tough to beat after any loss since 1992-93, going 15-2 after defeats.

Duquesne has been up and down in the Atlantic 10 conference at 5-8 (8-13 overall). They collected an unprecedented sweep of Temple and have been in close games with other strong teams, but have also gotten pounded by St. Bonaventure and lost twice to Rutgers.

Massachusetts coach John Calipari warned against taking the Dukes lightly.

"If we don't come to play, we'll get beat," Calipari said, citing the Dukes' upset of St. Bonaventure who had previously beat the Dukes by 22.

It is a different-looking Massachusetts squad than the team that beat Duquesne in January. Marcus Camby, who led UMass with 23 points, and Carmelo Travieso, who had 11 points and nine rebounds both sat out the loss against GW. Camby is doubtful for tonight's game, while Travieso is questionable.

Duquesne has had a tough transition this season from inside dominated offense that was led by current Philadelphia 76ers' rookie Derrick Alston, to the more perimeter oriented offense featuring sophomore Tom Pipkins and junior captain Kenya Hunter.

Pipkins, after an impressive freshman year, has picked up right where he left off. The 6-foot-6-inch swingman leads the Dukes with 18.2 points per game (second best in the A- 10), leading his team in scoring 18 of its 21 games. He has clearly established himself as the Dukes leader.

This is Hunter's second year as the Dukes' captain, and he's only in his junior year. He leads Duquesne with 87 assists on the season while averaging 11.2 points per game.

While Pipkins and Hunter have been consistent in the back court, the inexperienced front court has struggled.

UMass will look to exploit that with its deep front court even without Camby, but Calipari and

Turn to HOOP, page 12

COURTESY DUQUESNE MEDIA RELATIONS

Tom Pipkins has become a leader for Duquesne in only his sophomore year.

Game Preview

No. 5 UMass Minutemen vs. Duquesne Dukes

At The Mullins Center
Amherst, MA
7:00 p.m.

Edgar Padilla

Kenya Hunter

Probable Starters

Edgar Padilla	F	Kenya Hunter
Derek Kellogg	F	Dalvin Marshall
Lou Roe	C	Niska Tarle
Tyrone Weeks	G	Matt Curley
Dana Dingle	G	Tom Pipkins

On the

TV: No coverage

Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM Art Stapleton & Katie Giglio
WHMP 99.3 George Miller & Jack Leaman

Drexler for Thorpe swap doesn't help either team

Finally a major trade that grabs people's attention.

Clyde Drexler, unhappy in Portland, wanted out and was granted his wish. The Trail Blazers shipped him and Tracy Murray to defending champion Houston for Otis Thorpe. Drexler found a home back at home.

You may recall him in his college days being an integral part of the Phi Slamma Jamma at Houston with new teammate Hakeem (then Akeem) Olajuwon in the 1980s.

With the addition of Drexler and Murray, the Rockets lost Thorpe, a rebounding force and a tough defender. In the Providence

Andrew Bryce on the NBA

College product, they gave up a person who has only missed a handful of games in his career and is a class act.

As for Drexler, he is still averaging 20-plus a game, and continues to play a stellar all-around game. But to send off a key piece in the puzzle like Thorpe, the ultimate role player, could prove to be a mistake. Drexler ain't as young as springtime at 32, and the 11-plus years he has under his belt may hurt his cause more than help him.

Besides, why would Portland want to trade for a rebounder when they are second in the NBA in the category? And why would Houston trade one when their rebounding has been down from last year? Just your average nonsensical trade for either financial or athlete-pleasing reasons.

Speaking of financial reasons, Drexler's contract calls for $9 million next season. With the move back home, Drexler is probably looking to end his career in Houston. Do the Rockets really want to fork over nine mil?

• Roy Tarpley is out.

Not a surprise since Tarpley has entered and exited the league, going out with knee injuries and drug addictions. Expecting to come off the disabled list, Tarpley dropped a five-gallon water tank on his foot and can't practice for a week.

At least it was water that put him out this time.

• Something is wrong when dominant college players like Pearl Washington and Walter Berry do not make it in the NBA.

• How 'bout this? Chris Ford gets the heave-ho, and Don Nelson becomes Celtic coach — sounds like a good idea to me. Bring him back to Boston, where he spent his playing days.

I believed the whole Chris Webber episode unfortunately tarnished Nelson's image. Here's a guy who has twice been named the NBA's Coach of the Year, one of the best in the league. Nelson's had some bad luck in Golden State, with injuries and hotheads, most notably Webber. He just needs a new residence.

"OK, Mr. Nelson, this is the new Shawmut Center..."

• My last column was filled with errors. No excuses will spew out of my mouth as to why I made the mistakes. But I know that Anfernee Hardaway is in his second year, and Eddie Jones played only three years (he sat out his freshman year because of Proposition 48).

One other "error" that everybody and their sister noticed was the fact that I left out Grant Hill in the list of players that have peaked my interest. The interest, I noted, was "as of late," and Hill had spent that time on the injured list.

Hill is awesome. Incredible athletic skills and a bright future, his potential is limitless. I'd like to compare him to Michael Jordan like everyone else does, but that's unfair. One thing is certain — Jordan or not, Hill will be an all-star for years to come.

• With Danny Manning's season coming to an abrupt halt, the Suns are still deep but don't look as invincible.

• Why do I feel like Utah's going to blow it again this year? Seattle, too?

• Five of the seven teams in the Western Conference's Pacific Division have won 50 percent of their games. That includes Sacramento, who as of yesterday were 25-20.

The NBA's "It's Fantastic" slogan could change to, "Anything Can Happen — Just look at the Kings' record."

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Minutewomen toppled by St. Joseph's

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team dropped their second straight game last night, as they were handed their third conference loss by the St. Joseph's Hawks, 57-54, at the Alumni Memorial Field House in Philadelphia.

The Minutewomen had one last chance to tie, but sophomore Beth Kuzmeski (14 points) watched her desperation three-point attempt bounce off the rim at the buzzer.

UMass	54
St. J's	57

UMass, who now stands at 13-8, 8-3 in the Atlantic 10, could not take advantage of the opportunity to regain first place, of which the Hawks (19-4, 11-2 A-10) now have sole possession.

The Colonial Women of George Washington, who possess an 8-2 league mark, are in second, while UMass falls to third place in the conference.

The Minutewomen, who led by nine at one point, were ahead 27-25 at the end of the first half. The Hawks came out of the locker room strong, opening the second half on a 12-4 run, to extend to a 37-31 lead in front of their home crowd.

UMass, led by junior Melissa Gurile's 15 points and nine rebounds, did not give up. The Minutewomen battled back, cutting the St. Joe's lead to two on several occasions, before knotting the contest at 52 on two free throws from sophomore Crystal Carroll (13 pts) with 2:21 remaining.

The Hawks bounced back, however, and recaptured the lead for good when sophomore Megan Compain drained two free throws with two minutes left to play. St. Joseph's then extended the lead to four, 56-52, on their next possession with only 1:21 to go.

The Minutewomen, who shot 40 percent from the field against the heralded Hawk defense, also got 11 points from Octavia Thomas, a usual starter who came off the bench as freshman Tez Krafi got the start.

St. Joseph's got most of their scoring off the pine, as Amy Facer poured in 17 to lead the team. She also corralled a team high 7 boards. Junior Kristen Sullivan also came off the bench to add 13 for the Hawks.

Nikki Jones was the only St. Joe's starter to score in double figures, as he had 10 points.

The Minutewomen will be in action again Saturday, when they host Temple, the A-10's cellar dweller, in the Curry Hicks Cage at 2 p.m.

EMILY BERRY / COLLEGIAN

Beth Kuzmeski's last-minute shot couldn't stop the St. Joseph's Hawks from defeating the Minutewomen last night, 57-54.

Swartz, Tolhurst key for women's gymnastics team

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Attention is usually given to gymnastics only when the Olympics once again carries its torch into the collective consciousness of our country.

This publicity throws the individuals who rule the sport into the spotlight. From Mary Lou Retton to the stellar rise of Shannon Miller, solo performances are what brought them to the forefront.

As it pertains to collegiate gymnastics, the old saying that there is no "I" in "team" is the difference between the two levels of performance. When a gymnast makes that transition from "what is best for her" to "what is best for the team," a conflict in morality concerning personal goals can result.

Not so when it comes to two of the top performers for the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team (7-2). With sophomore Tara Swartz and junior J.J. Tolhurst, the team has two of the best in the Atlantic 10, and two team players who had no problems in their respective transitions from club to team competition.

"They are both really hard workers, and they help a lot with the team aspect. Especially since Tara is only a sophomore, even last year as a freshman she was very good at working for the team," said junior teammate Leann Zavotka. "They are both great athletes, and both good for the team."

For the Leawood, Kan., native, Swartz' career began in the shadows of her older brother. The third grader would go with her mother to pick up him up at gym practice, and through that customary childlike pestering, got into the sport and never left. Working hard from then on for club teams from the West Coast to the Midwest, the scholarship offers started to come in from the likes of Oregon State University and the University of Illinois. But she chose UMass for the experience of a new environment — both in a team and personal fashion.

"Before college gymnastics, it is all individual and how much you can do for yourself," Swartz said. "Once I got to this level I didn't realize how much a team sport it was. But it is, and it is so much fun because you are out there with the rest of your team. It makes it a lot more enjoyable."

It has been a tough start for Swartz this semester, as she came in injured. Combined with a knee injury to Zavotka (torn anterior cruciate ligament), all the little things have not worked out for the team. But the ball is finally beginning to roll, and with the uneven bars as her major strength, the hard work has continued to achieve the complete mastering of the all-around competition. That has been no problem as last week against the No. 23 nationally ranked West Virginia, she set the team's season best in the all-around with a score of 38.80, good for second place in the meet. As the team's anchor in the bars, she also tied her own school record last Saturday in the Cage with a score of 9.85. Unfortunately, it ended up a tough loss of less than one point, 191.475-190.850.

Combined with her freshman year successes as the second place finisher in the all-around (38.70) and champion of the bars (9.80) in last year's Atlantic-10 Championships, along with a fourth place finish in the bars in the NCAA Northeast regionals, the future seems bright. But Swartz basically placed the credit for her steady ascension to the support of her coaches and teammates.

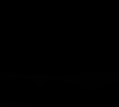
"I am fortunate I have two coaches (Dave Kuzara and assistant Rene Lyst) that I get along with really well, and they are great coaches too," said Swartz. "The team has so many different personalities, but we work out very well together, and everyone backs each other 100 percent."

With recent developments in the Mullins Center, a transfer from George Washington University might be the last to be welcomed to this campus. But with Tolhurst's positive work ethic and attitude, her experience as a national qualifier in the all-around in last year's NCAAs and A-10 champion two years ago, the changeover has been smooth for both her and the coach.

"Being that J is a transfer student it can be really scary. She really wants to be here, and that is a big plus," Kuzara said. "The changeover has been really smooth. It is smoother than a freshman would make, because a freshman has to learn

Turn to GYMNASTICS, page 12

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 78 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, February 17, 1995



Don't call me Larry
Laurence Fishburne has made his mark in Boyz N The Hood. Find out what the actor has to say about his career (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Campus Perspectives
A sample of students give their views on whether or not racism exists on the UMass campus (See feature, page 3).

Williams is suspended from team again
Senior guard Mike Williams has been suspended indefinitely from the UMass men's basketball team for breaking team rules (See Sports, page 6).

Weekend Forecast
Today will be mostly sunny as the rest of remaining snow will continue to melt. Weather will be warm through the weekend, turning cold by Monday with chance of rain or snow.

	Today	Saturday	Sunday
	HIGH: 45 LOW: 25	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25

GOP loses vote for increased missile defense

By Donald M. Rothberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House passed a Republican "mid-course correction" for defense and foreign policy yesterday after failing to turn around enough GOP dissenters to revive plans for a national missile defense system.

"This is not this Congress's last word on defense," said Majority Leader Richard Armey, R-Texas.

The vote on final passage was 241 to 181.

Despite the defeat on missile defenses, the Republicans prevailed on all other issues — going on record to cut back U.S. participation in U.N. peacekeeping and to support early expansion of NATO.

President Clinton made his opposition clear and the measure would face almost certain veto if it passes the Senate in its present form.

"We were a little surprised," conceded House Speaker Newt Gingrich, when asked about the vote against missile defense, a key goal of the GOP "Contract With America." Twenty-four Republicans joined Democrats to delete a provision requiring the administration to present a plan for deployment of a missile defense program. Army accused the Democratic administration of pursuing "a globalism that has lost sight of its essential footage." He said the bill "is a mid-course correction."

One of the most prominent GOP dissenters was Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, chairman of the House Banking Committee, who sought to delete a provision cutting back the U.S. contribution to U.N. peacekeeping.

Leach said the question was whether "there's going to be a retreat from U.S. leadership in international affairs."

But only six other Republicans joined him when the House voted 267 to 158 to reject his amendment.

During a debate that lasted until nearly midnight Wednesday, the House gave President Clinton at least a temporary victory by rejecting an effort to direct the administration to come up with a plan for deployment of a system to defend against intercontinental ballistic missiles.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry today called the vote "a measure of progress" because the House voted "not to drop billions of dollars on Star Wars, which is an idea from the 1980s, when we need to start thinking of 21st century defense."

It may prove a short-term victory for the president. The majority leadership was leaning hard on the 24 Republicans who joined Democrats on the critical 218-212 vote.

There were signs the pressure was working. One of the defectors was Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, chairman of the House Budget Committee, who said as the session ended Wednesday night that he had "misunderstood" the motion that gave the Democrats their victory.

More office space for CRC causes RSO squabbling

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Campus Center/Student Union (CC/SU) Commission held their weekly meeting Thursday night and was met with a strong — and at times heated — presentation by the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC).

According to a memo distributed at the meeting by Matthew Auger, chair of the CC/SU Commission, independent office space was granted to the CRC by the commission on Feb. 2. A week later, the motion affirming the grant was rescinded.

"Our membership has grown from 150 members last spring to 750 members now," said Brian S. Julin, vice president of the CRC. "It is clear my membership deserves better office space."

The reason cited in the memo as to why the motion was rescinded states, "the CRC had received preferential treatment ... to change office space without going through a space allocation process."

"The commission rescinded the motion and suspended any other movement of RSOs. [Registered Student Organizations] or agencies until a complete space allocation process is finished," Auger said.

"We don't have a policy that insures fair allocation is done. It just makes no sense to me that any group should receive preferential treatment."

The CRC's office is now located at 415 Student Union, which they share with Alpha Phi Omega, the Black Student Union, UMass Pagans, and the Armenian Students Association.

They were tentatively granted permission to relocate to office 407, an office which, in the meantime, has "chairs stacked on desks and no one is using it," Julin said.

Several RSOs attended the CC/SU Commission's meeting on Feb. 9 to voice their opposition to the CRC being granted different space, Auger said.

Results of the meeting included the motion being reconsidered. Another decision was that the CC/SU Commission banned discussion of any space-related motions until the space allocation process is completed, projected to be by early March.

"The snag is, are we being fair to all the other RSOs?" asked William Stevens, CC/SU Commission facilities officer. "We promote fairness and give

Turn to CRC, page 3

EMILY BERRY / COLLEGIAN

Poet and Professor Emeritus of Boston University Samuel Allen read from his collection of works Tuesday night at the Augusta Savage Gallery in New Africa House.

Poet honors Black History Month

Samuel Allen reads from works in Augusta Savage Gallery

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts played host to a distinguished African-American poet and scholar on Tuesday evening.

In the intimate settings of the Augusta Savage Gallery, located in New Africa House, Samuel Allen gave an inspired hour-long poetry reading.

Allen, a Boston resident and Professor Emeritus of Boston University, has lived a rich life, having graduated from Harvard Law School and attended the Sorbonne in Paris, where he lived for a time.

His four poetry collections, Elfenbeinzahne (1956), Ivory Tusks (1968), Paul Vesey's Ledger (1975) and Every Round and Other Poems (1987), have been translated into French and German. English department Professor Martin Espada, a fellow poet and friend of Allen, delivered a reverent introduction of Allen.

"Samuel Allen is the voice of the voiceless, and the voice of the dispossessed," Espada said.

Dressed casually in a sweater and slacks, Allen rose from his seat to commence the program.

"Conquistador," a work of historical fiction about the Spanish conqueror Cortez, epitomized the varying range of topics and styles of writing that would be displayed throughout the evening.

"He was tremendous ... I feel very privileged to have been here."

Following the first work, Allen jumped from tone to tone, as he pondered the difference between "thingemebobs" and "thingamajigs" in one nonsensical piece, then shifted to the sensitive imagery of s gay batallion placing a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Allen peppered the reading with brief explanations of many of his selections, including a particularly amusing anecdote one about his days at the Tuskegee Institute, where James Weldon Johnson was one of his writing instructors.

"Truthfully, I never finished his course," Allen said. "My brother had always been a great athlete, so I quit the class to play for the basketball team."

Legendary Negro Leagues pitcher Satchel Paige was the subject of Allen's final poem, a work that he noted had previously been recorded by the late Henry Fonda, and was recently re-recorded by actor James Earl Jones.

Years ago Allen personally read his piece, "To Satch," to Paige at a baseball game where the pitcher was making a public appearance. According to Allen, the athlete simply said, "I'm glad you stopped me."

After the close of the reading, audience members expressed their appreciation for Allen's diverse body of work.

"He was tremendous," Afro-American Studies Professor Cynthia Packard said. "I feel very privileged to have been here. This is one of the best celebrations of Black History Month anywhere."

After long delay, faculty moves to Conte Center

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

After months of delays, faculty of the polymer science department have begun to move into the Silvio O. Conte Polymer Science Research Center.

The office wing of the Research Center is open and faculty are moving in, said James Cahill, director of Facilities and Planning. The lab wing of the Research Center is still closed.

Currently the polymer science department is located in the Lederle Graduate Research Center and Goessmann Laboratory, Cahill said.

The laboratory wing of the Research Center has experienced problems with the lab exhaust system. The problem was unexpected, but not unusual, Cahill said.

The completion date of the Research Center was originally planned for last June. The delays have primarily been due to problems with the buildings exhaust system, Cahill said.

The Research Center was then scheduled to open last November, but the testing of the equipment and the exhaust system had not been completed, Cahill said.

"We're working as fast as we can and as diligently as possible," Cahill said. "We are making progress on it and we should be moving in their before to long."

The Research Center includes faculty offices, teaching labs, wet chemistry labs, physics labs and equipment labs, Cahill said.

The labs in the Research Center still need to be customized. Each lab is capable of receiving the same services, but each researcher's needs are unique, Cahill said.

The process of running piping for specific gasses, processed chilled water, liquid nitrogen and other needs to each specific lab still needs to be done. This customizing process is referred to as "lab fit up," Cahill said.

The polymer science research department is mostly made up of graduate and post-doctoral students.

The building was named after the late Rep. Silvio Conte, a local legislator who was responsible for getting the money for the Research Center.

The total price tag for the Research Center is $56 million. The state paid for $36 million, and the remaining $20 million was paid by the federal government.

The U.S. Department of Defense administered the money to fund the center's construction, but Cahill said the research conducted in the build-

Turn to CONTE, page 3

Speech portrays realistic Holocaust 'heroes'

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Staff

According to Raul Hillberg, a woman in Queens was attacked, knifed and killed several years ago while people opened their windows and watched. No one interfered.

The same thing happened during the Holocaust, said Hillberg, professor emeritus of political science at the University of Vermont.

Hillberg spoke last night at Amherst College in a speech based on the history of the Holocaust entitled, "The Destruction of the European Jews."

The speech given by Hillberg is one of several in conjunction with an art exhibit at Amherst College's Mead Art Museum, "Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block." In contrast with the exhibit, which emphasizes the heroics of those saved the lives of Jews, Hillberg's speech attempts to put the rescuers in a more realistic light.

"As soon as [Jews] were separated from their neighbors by laws and decrees, their fate became different" said Hillberg. At the ghettos, their "Jewishness" was an inescapable fact. To outsiders, "not being a Jew became a status symbol in and of itself," Hillberg said.

Ukrainians, among other groups, feared that if it could happen to the Jews, it could happen to them. "But since it didn't happen," said Hillberg, "they lost that fear."

"So like the people of Queens, these onlookers minded their own business," he continued. The Polish population had to be ordered to shut their windows and close the blinds. "Watching was a past-time," said Hillberg.

More than 6 million Jews lost their lives. Paris had the largest percentage of Jews to survive the Holocaust, but even in that relatively safe city, there were 30 potential rescuers for each single surviving Jew, according to Hillberg.

Some cities were safer than others, said Hillberg, who also said that if a Dane was caught sheltering a Jew he would get a few months in jail. If a Ukrainian or Pole was caught, he was killed. This was a result of a "hierarchy of nations in people's minds," he said.

In Warsaw, 99 percent of the Jews did not survive, according to Hillberg. However, the Danes gathered up the Jews, put them in boats and shipped them off to Sweden in large numbers in October 1943.

Although there were some organizations, like churches, that protected Jews, Hillberg explained "rescuing" was more often an individual effort. He described these rescuers as "righteous Gentiles, humanitarians, Good Samaritans, the ones who get medals and trees named after them in Jerusalem."

When asked why they did it, the rescuers don't seem to understand the question, said Hillberg. It was, for them, a nstural act.

Although Hillberg described both the rescuers and the rescued as "people of action," Jews usually had to initiate most exchanges. They knocked on doors and asked for a few days of shelter, which typically was extended to a few months or years.

The rescuers were discriminatory, according to Hillberg. Thousands of children, who were least identifiable, were often protected, as were Christians of Jewish descent. Those with "a strong pre-existing bond," such as intermarriage or employment, were also more likely to be sheltered, said Hillberg.

While many people made small contributions to the Jewish cause, such as making a warning phone call or misdirecting the Nazis, Hillberg said there were "volunteers" on the Nazi side as well.

"All over Europe, there was an apartment shortage and millions of Jewish apartments became available," said Hillberg. Gentiles quickly moved into these apartments. "They didn't kick out the Jews. [The apartments] were already empty," said Hillberg.

Jews moved out and looters moved in. "They tore out wiring, they removed doors," said Hillberg.

"They're a wall, a human wall, the penetration of which is risky," said Hillberg regarding the Nazis, implying the wall still stands today.

Hillberg told the story of one Nazi who evicted a Jewish woman and her child so he could take her apartment. That man's widow still lives in the same Vienna apartment, 50 years later.

Hillberg concluded that we have questioned the rescuers and survivors of the Holocaust enough and should start questioning the bystanders.

GLBT students host 'Escape to Planet Q'

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender students from across New England will make an "Escape To Planet Q" tonight when a three-day conference convenes at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Officially billed as a "student organizing institute," the conference is designed to benefit GLBT students from all over New England, said Planning Committee Member Terry Kates.

One of the main sponsors is the New England Network of LGBT College Student Organizations (NE-Net), a group that includes GLBT college and university students from the six New England states.

"[NE-Net's] most important aim is to bring together student activists in GLBT issues from all over the region so that queer issues can be furthered more easily," said Kates.

Other conference sponsors include the UMass Program for GLB Concerns and the UMass GLB Graduate Student Organization.

Workshops pass on experience and knowledge

The program boasts a wide variety of social, political and organizing activities including workshops, special interest meetings, videos, a concert, and a dance.

Workshops on Feb. 18 and 19 will explore everything from safer sex to surfing the Internet. Some of the workshops, like the one on forming a "queers of color" group, are aimed toward members of student organizations. Others, like "Drag Do's and Don'ts" are meant for the enjoyment of individual participants.

The Boston Lesbian Avengers will lead a workshop that includes techniques for confrontational street activism, said Kates.

According to Kates, the workshops were intended to "draw on the experiences of students at other colleges who are probably dealing with some of the same problems."

Participants at the NE-Net conference will also gather for caucus sessions for bisexuals, people of color, women, transgender, and graduate students.

Place to socialize

"Escape To Planet Q" is designed with plenty of social activities as well, said Kates. Participants will eat several meals together, and there are three events planned for tonight.

Graduate students will have the opportunity to attend a social sponsored by the UMass GLB Graduate Student Organization.

Undergraduate students will be able to visit residents of the 2 in 20 Floor for GLBT Students and Their Heterosexual Allies.

In addition, all participants will be invited to attend a concert at Hampshire College by Toshi Reagan, an "African- American, queer singer," said Kates.

Tomorrow night offers a live performance and a dance in the Student Union Ballroom. The performance at UMass Bowker Auditorium is by the 4 Big Girls, an African- American theater group. The dance is sponsored by the UMass LBGA.

Registration for the conference begins tonight at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center and costs $20, said Kates.

WOMEN making WAVES

Compiled by Colleen D. Shanahan

Reality condom

Some critics complained it looked like a "Trojan on steroids," others said "inserting it was like squeezing a slinky dipped in custard."

Now that the Reality female condom is available in drugstores across the country, input is growing more positive from women who have used it.

Most women say they like having the power of protecting themselves and the awkwardness of asking a partner to wear a condom is alleviated.

There are still problems surrounding the female condom, such as the 25 percent failure rate in pregnancy protection, and women still have some reservations about the protection they would receive from the AIDS virus and sexually transmitted diseases.

STD testing kits

Last year, more than 3 million women contracted gonorrhea or chlamydia. More than half the women had no symptoms.

Due to the grave consequences of undetected STD's, including cancer, sterility, and increase in susceptibility to the AIDS virus, scientists at the National Institutes of Health are working with researchers and manufacturers to develop simple and inexpensive home tests for gonorrhea and chlamydia.

Dr. Penelope Hitchcock, chief of the STD branch of the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases, counters, "without tools like home testing women will continue to lose their childbearing capability before they're old enough to contemplate parenthood."

In Washington ...

A recent study by the Capitol Hill Women's Political Caucus found that women in the House of Representatives are far more active than their male peers on behalf of women's issues.

Although women make up only 11 percent of all members, they introduced a full 42 percent of the bills concerning women and families.

Senator Carol Moseley-Braun's (D.Ill) amendment was passed through Congress last fall. The amendment promotes equality in college sports and is designed to cut the underfunding of women's sports by making the disclosure of federal funds given to men's and women's sports mandatory.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Feb. 17

Reception — GLBSGO invites gay, lesbian and bisexual students to join in a reception. There will be food and a cash bar for graduate students who bring their student ID card. UMass, Graduate Student Lounge, 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Lecture — "Dynamics Digital Maps," by Christopher Condit, UMass Department of Geology and Geography. UMass, Morrill 2 South, room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Presentation — Michael J. Smith, managing director of the NAMES Project Foundation to present "The NAMES Project Goes On–Line with UMass." Noon at UMass Program for GLB Concerns, Crampton House.

Lecture — "Sacred Continuum: Gods, Humans and Nature in Shinto." Free. Smith College, Seelye Hall 110, 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Biology Colloquium — Saving Plants that Heal People: Tropical Herbal Medicine." Free. Smith College, McConnell Hall B05, 4:30 p.m.

Film — The Killing Field. Memoirs of Sidney Schanberg, the New York Times reporter who remained in Cambodia after the American evacuation. $1.75. Amherst College, Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m and 10 p.m.

Performance — John Valby will be at Katina's. For information call: Rick Ward 584–2937.

Saturday, Feb. 18

Planetarium — The Amherst Astronomy Association conducts free, public planetarium. Amherst College, Bassett Planetarium, 4 p.m.

Performance — "Around the Table." A performance feast by Seattle African American lesbian comedy group, Four Big Girls, exploring what happens when women cross the line of "appropriate size." Sponsored by the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns in conjunction with the Arts Council and the Multicultural Advisory Board. $7 general public; $4 students with valid ID. UMass, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Dance — Sponsored by the UMass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance. $3. UMass Student Union Ballroom, 9:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. Information: 545–0154.

Conference — "Ahead in Time: Looking into the Future of Korean–Americans in American and Assessing Need and Change." Lectures and seminars discuss the changing identity for Korean–Americans in America and provide tools to overcome obstacles facing Koreans of all backgrounds. Korean food, cultural entertainment and films included. $30, $20 students. Five College students and faculty can attend lectures free. Smith College, Wright Hall, 9:30 a.m. Information: 586–6285.

Film — Native Son. A Black youth accidentally kills his White employer's daughter and tries to cover up the crime. $2.5. Mount Holyoke College, Gamble Auditorium, 7 pm. and 9 p.m.

Film — The Killing Field. Memoirs of Sidney Schanberg, the New York Times reporter who remained in Cambodia after the American evacuation. $1.75. Amherst College, Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m and 10 p.m.

Sunday, Feb. 19

Film — The Killing Field. Memoirs of Sidney Schanberg, the New York Times reporter who remained in Cambodia after the American evacuation. $1.75. Amherst College, Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m and 10 p.m.

Music — Mitch Frasier, acoustic singer–songwriter. Admission fee. Amherst College, Campus Center Frontroom, 8 p.m. Information: 542–5773.

Monday, Feb. 20

Special event — Escape From Happiness by George F. Walker, directed by Edward Golden. A special benefit performance to raise money to send the production to the regional Kennedy Center/American College Theater Festival. A provocative look at the desperate state of modern "family values" among a collection of highly eccentric characters. $15. UMass Curtain Theater, Fine Arts Center, 8 p.m. Reservations: 545–2511.

Notices

Yearbook photos — Senior photo session will continue through Feb. 24. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule an appointment.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the Umoja Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrone Johnson, 546–6787.

Voter registration — Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center offers voter registration daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. UMass, Student Union Building, room 428. Information: 545–0865.

Correction

The Garrick Ohlsson piano recital will be held at Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College on Thursday, Feb. 23. Tickets are $15 for orchestra seats and $12 for balcony seats. The Collegian regrets the error.

Attention Writers!

There will be a meeting

Tuesday, Feb. 21 at 5:30 p.m.

in the Collegian office for any writer interested in covering women's issues.

If you can't attend, but want to write, come down and talk to women's issues editors Colleen Shanahan or Lisa Greenfield or call 545–1361

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY 'TIL 6PM LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 4 Rte. 9 Hadley 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
HAMPSHIRE Hampshire Mall Rte. 9 Hadley 584-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes

THE DOVE'S NEST
Rt. 116 Sunderland • 665-7969
Open Mon-Sat 6am - 3pm
Sunday 7am - 3pm
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
2 Pancakes, 2 Eggs & 2 Bacon or Sausage for $2.15

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
SUNDAY BRUNCH $5.99 Regular Menu Available
COMEDY SHOWS Every Fri & Sat
BUFFET LUNCH $3.99 Mon-Sat 11-3
BUFFET DINNER $6.99 7 Days a Week 5-7pm *Includes fruit & salad bar
VISA/MASTERCARD • FREE PARKING
RT. 9 IN HADLEY • 586-1202 北京

MORE TREADMILLS!
MORE STAIRMASTERS!
MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

Study guides
You can't do homework to screaming silence. Pick up these mellow classics, tune in to your studies—and take note of our special low price.
8.95 ea. CD
list 13.99

Sarah McLachlan Touch
The Alan Parsons Project Best of the Alan Parsons Project
Weird Al Yankovic The Food Album
Elvis Presley Gold Records Vol. 1
Kenny G G-Force
Daryl Hall & John Oates Greatest Hits – Rock 'N Soul, Part 1
Rocky IV Soundtrack
Carly Simon Greatest Hits Live
Alabama Live
More Dirty Dancing Soundtrack
John Denver Greatest Hits
Waylon Jennings Greatest Hits
Barry Manilow Greatest Hits, Vol. 1
Henry Mancini All Time Greatest Hits, Vol. 1
Perry Como All Time Greatest Hits, Vol.1
Eddy Arnold Best Of Eddy Arnold
From Arista, RCA and Scotti

Special pricing valid through February 23

MEDIA PLAY
MUSIC • BOOKS • MOVIES • SOFTWARE
Hampshire Mall, 341 Russell Street, Hadley, 582-0410
Open Mon – Sat: 10 – 9, Sun 11 – 5
81-0097-025

Campus Perspectives

Do you think racism exists on campus?

Compiled by Marnie Thamel • Photos by Rebecca Peterson

"Yes, especially after the incident in the D.C. I started to recognize stuff this semester, but I haven't been personally effected. I am taking a class, Anthropology junior writing, which has made me more aware of racism."
–KYOKO ADAMSON, senior, anthropology, Nagoya, Japan

"Yes, most definitely. I guess it depends on who you are. If you are a minority, you see it more than if you are "mainstream" or a white person. On a big campus like this, you definitely find racism, classism, ageism, and sexism."
–LIMARI RIVERA, senior, sociology, Fitchburg

"Yes, racism is prevalent everywhere in the U.S. People are not aware of it enough. I think we need to learn more about it in high school. When people come to college, they don't know enough about it."
–RANDY ROCKFORD, senior, plant and soil science, New Hartford, NY

"Definitely, the presence of racism is not felt so much by each individual minority student, but it is there. I think racism is directed toward black students more than any other minority."
–KHARI ROULHAC, freshman, business marketing, Boston

"I haven't seen it, but it could be. I haven't had any personal experience. I have a black roommate, and he has not told me of any racism he experienced."
–SHANE DESROCHERS, sophomore, School of Management, Chicopee

"Not to the way it has been played up. I am sure there are people out there in both races that are prejudiced. It is not just a white thing. What happened at the D.C. was not right, but I don't know if she should be fired. No one should be treated like that with racial slurs."
–JENNIFER BAROY, freshman, environmental science, Huntington

■ CRC

continued from page 1

everyone the same chance."

Because cannabis, or marijuana, is illegal, it is necessary for the CRC to maintain their membership's confidentiality, according to Lance Brown, CRC office manager.

"We are the pariahs of society, enemies of the administration and the U. S. Government," Brown said. "We already have 100 new members this semester. We are indeed a very exceptional case."

■ Conte

continued from page 1

ing will all be public record.

The original plans for the Research Center include a security card access system. The wiring is in place, it is now up to the faculty to decide how complex a system they wish to have, Cahill said.

"We have not installed the devices," Cahill said. "There is money budgeted for that. We have not yet determined what system to put in."

The architectural firms involved in the planning of the building are Ellen Zweig Associates of Cambridge and Whitney Atwood Norcross of Boston.

There is no specific date set for the research staffers and lab technicians to move into the building, but Cahill said they will move them in as soon as they possibly can.

Businesses and students check each other out

By Dave LaFontana
Collegian Correspondent

Representatives from 53 different companies and organizations had tables set up at the Mather Career Centers annual Cooperative Education Job Fair yesterday.

The Campus Center Auditorium was full of potential employers seeking out student employees.

Recruiters came from a variety of organizations, such as computer companies, retail chains, engineering firms and government employers.

"Turnout was excellent," said Gaffer Silver, the associate director of Field Experience Programs. "Students came out in force."

Attendance was up from last year, Silver said. Approximately 2,000 students attended the fair.

"We love coming to UMass," said Shivoo Puttaniah, spokesperson for IBM. "The co-op students always impress us. This school has great finance and accounting programs."

Kevin Gilfrain, a recruiter from Abraham & Straus/Jordan Marsh, said that student response to his employers was "respectable," considering the fact that they are a fairly new company.

Many employers at the fair also stressed how important co–op experience is. According to Puttaniah, 40–50 percent of employers hire permanently through co–op.

"To graduate without experience these days is very foolish," said Silver. "Making contacts is a necessity."

Lynn Yafee, a field experience advisor at the Mather Career Center, said that it wasn't just seniors showing up, either.

"A lot more younger students, like freshmen and sophomores, showed up," said Yafee.

Lori Segel, a UMass student said, "I'm just here to see what's out there this summer."

Peace Corps
on-campus at UMASS
Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 22
7:00 pm
Room 911, Campus Center
For more information, call or visit the UMass Peace Corps Office
12 Draper Hall
UMass Amherst
545-2105

Kai Chi
Chinese-American Restaurant
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall Rt. 9 Hadley
We Deliver To Umass
Major credit cards accepted
Sun-Thurs 11:30 am - 11 pm
Fri & Sat. 11:30 am - midnight
10% off All Entrees
with this coupon
Expires 5/31/95
586-2774

WE WANT YOU!!! to be a
HEARING BOARD MEMBER
If You...
• are interested in Campus Leadership
• wish to improve your communication and listening skills
• are a full time student
• have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.
• are not on Judicial Sanction
Apply now to be a Hearing Board Member:
Training Held Feb. 21 & 22
7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.
Applications available at
RESIDENTIAL CLUSTER OFFICES & THE DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE
227 WHITMORE
ANY QUESTIONS?
CONTACT:
Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students
Dean of Students Office • Whitmore • 545-2684

Jewish Affairs needs writers!
If you have an interest in writing for and about the UMass Jewish Community,
Contact Harold W. Michaels
113 Campus Center
545-2500

AMHERST CINEMA
Downtown Amherst
PULP FICTION
7:30 PM Each Night
Students $4.00
253-5426

ARE YOU TIRED
of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

Fact File: Canada
Speak French Up There Don'tcha?
Mais oui, along with English Montreal is the world's second largest French speaking city (and one of the world's most sophisticated). We have two official languages; eight out of ten Canadians are fluent in English
Make Canada Your Home
Graduate students can learn more about immigration to Canada by contacting Paul Scot at Rekai & Johnson
REKAI & JOHNSON
130 Bloor St. W. Suite 504 Toronto, ON M5S 1N5 Canada Tel (416) 960-9674 Fax (416) 924-2311

SALE
Every Component on Sale
The Big One!
DASH FOR THE DEMOS
DEMOS ON SALE MON. FEB. 20 ONLY
ALL DEMOS 20-50% OFF
ONE DEMO AVAILABLE ON EVERY PRODUCT WE SELL
DEMO SALE DOORS OPEN 10 A.M.
DASH FOR THE DEMOS MON. FEB. 20
STOREWIDE SALE
SAT. FEB. 18 - SAT. FEB. 25
Sound & Music
SOUND & MUSIC · GOOD ADVICE & AN HONEST PRICE · 351 PLEASANT STREET · NORTHAMPTON · 584-9547 · MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

STOREWIDE SALE SAT. FEB. 18 - SAT. FEB. 25
■ Kenwood KRC-101 Car Cassette, removable face $149
■ Kenwood KRC-1654 Car Speakers, surprising value $35 pr.
■ Clarion in-dash Car CD player, high power x4 $249
■ Python insurance-approved Car Alarm, installed $199
■ Boston Acoustics HD-5 Speakers, small wonder $115 pr.
■ Boston Acoustics HD-9 Speakers, save $100! $239 pr.
■ Nuance 1.1 Speakers w/stands "amazing image" $329 pr.
■ Klipsch 5.5 Horn-type Speakers, 98 dB SPL! $699 pr.
■ Denon DRA-365R receiver, an audio gem $249
■ Onkyo TX-910 receiver, 90 watts, remote control $195
■ Onkyo DXC-211 Six-disc Carousel CD Player $249
■ Adcom GFA-555II Power Amp, 400 total watts! $749
■ JVC HRJ-610 HiFi/Stereo VCR, ready for surround $299
■ Sennheiser HD-435 Headphones save $20 $39
■ NAD 302 Integrated Amp., "stunning for the money" $199
■ California Audio Labs DX-1 CD Player $469
■ Proton 420 Table Radio, dual alarm, line-in $89
■ Velodyne VA-1012 Subwoofer, amazing bass $599
■ JVC PCX-110AM/FM Double Cassette/CD Boombox $229
■ Onkyo TX-SV414 Pro Home Theater Receiver $319
90-DAYS SAME AS CASH WITH YOUR GOOD CREDIT
NO LAY AWAYS, NO CASH REFUNDS
EVERY COMPONENT ON SALE

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gaffey Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Worrall Business Editor Jill Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Martin L. Bellmer Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gaily, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Wide-spread dissent cause of hate crimes

Lisa Chiu

He wasn't a University of Massachusetts student, nor was he a person of color. He got mad at someone and took out his rage on an individual that had the misfortune to be racially identical to the subject of his anger.

It happened last Thursday night, Feb. 9, two days after students at Rutgers University protested against allegedly racist words spoken last semester by Rutgers President Francis Lawrence, and a day before students at UMass rallied to stage a sit-in ("stand-in," according to participants) at Franklin Dining Hall, due to an employee's racist remarks.

On this night, as Corey J. Driscoll, 18, of Roxbury, and his friends were walking near Memorial Hall, they encountered a UMass Asian student. Driscoll allegedly got upset and attacked the innocent man from behind.

Documents stated that Driscoll demanded that the Asian man give him the pull-over jacket that he was wearing before he killed him. According to these documents Driscoll then proceeded to kick and beat the Asian student up and called him "a nigger."

The victim was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital where he was treated for a broken nose and bruised legs and abdomen. A witness to the incident called police and described the assailant and his two friends. Driscoll and his friends were later arrested. Driscoll was arraigned last Friday morning in Hampshire County District Court and released on bail.

Supposedly those are the facts from last Thursday night.

In fact, these are the facts every single day and night in the state of Massachusetts and in the United States in general. In 92.4 percent of all hate crime incidents, verbal harassment was the most frequent indicator 86 percent of the time. The "average" perpetrator of a hate crime incident was male (93.3 percent), White (75.9 percent), with a median age of 23 years (Hate Crime/Hate Incidents in Massachusetts: 1991 Annual Report).

So this is what it comes down to. We, as students of color at UMass, cannot expect that we can be free from a racially motivated attack while we walk past Memorial Hall. We, as students of color, cannot expect that we can choose our food in the dining commons without a racial slur being directed at us.

In short, the simple dignity and courtesy which should be accorded to all students from either University administrators, dining commons staff, and/or campus visitors is not something students of color can take for granted, for, as recent experience testifies, such simple dignity and courtesy are not values shared by all white European Americans.

We do, however, expect that when hate crime incidents do occur, such as the above mentioned, that the perpetrators be punished accordingly and that measures are taken to attempt to eliminate similar racist incidents in the future. We will not remain silent in this expectation. We will be heard.

Lisa Chiu is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Delusional writer lost in his head

To the editor:

I would like to congratulate Adam Scott Roberts on his fine portrayal of Greek life. I think it is wonderful when a "journalist" tries to pass off delusions as reality, stereotypes as facts, and misconstrued ideas as the norm.

Mr. Roberts does such a wonderful job of showing us a night uptown: I'm so glad all of the bar patrons are Greek. I wonder when we get a group discount rate. If we all wear our letters do we get half off pitchers at Barsle's? Do we get free wings at Delanos? After this informative article, I will notify the bar owners that since the UMass Greeks make up most of their business (especially under-age ones, according to Mr. Roberts) we should extend last call for at least an hour for Greeks wearing letters and especially ones with bleach blond hair.

It's one great Greek conspiracy, according to Mr. Roberts. Since we all get to cut in line, the bouncers must be Greek too. I didn't know the Greek area was that big!! Funny, I know a lot of bouncers uptown and none of them are Greek.

My favorite part of the article is the jab, "and a knife in the back when she steals that girl's boyfriend" (great grammar, by the way). As a member of a sorority for almost four years, I find that insulting. The sisters in my house and other women in the UMass Greek area have been the most loyal and respectful group of women I have ever met at UMass. It is pathetic stereotypes by ignorant people such as Mr. Roberts that give Greek life a bad name.

It seems that in his column Mr. Roberts tries to pass himself off as something he is not. As I read this giant ego that graces the pages of the Collegian I remember: Adam Scott Roberts, a founding brother of Zeta Beta Tau, a fraternity at UMass. My, my, my. Isn't that awfully hypocritical to criticize a group of which he fought so hard to be a part?

I love it when people try to pass themselves off as armchair intellectuals who sit back in bars and look down their noses at the "pee-ons" around them. It seems Mr. Roberts is much more of an elitist that any Greek could ever be. He is so superior — he talks about Europe in bars. Do you talk about the Renaissance period in Italy too?

Did Mr. Roberts ever think that these girls were rude to him because they thought he was a fool, not because they were Greek?

Catherine B. Pulley
Amherst

Columnists

Attention all columnists. New head shots will be taken on Tuesday, Feb. 22 at 2:00 p.m. Please come down, even if you already have a picture. Any problems, please call 545-1491.

No respect causes decay on campus

Mark McGrath

There is an epidemic sweeping across the University of Massachusetts campus. It seems worse now than it has ever been. There's evidence of this epidemic all over, and it's hard to ignore.

If you would like to see some of this evidence, just step outside your dorm room and look down the halls. Chances are that you will see paper of all sorts on the floor, some of which once hung on a bulletin board or wall. These papers were originally put up to educate and inform, but now they just make the place look ugly and increase the workload of the already overburdened cleaning staff.

Stroll down to the nearest bathroom. Probably more than half of the toilets and urinals you encounter will not be flushed. Examine the toilet seats. Do you like the sticky yellow coating which is found on almost every one?

When I see spectacles such as these, all I can do is shake my head and wonder who it is that could do such a thing. No one will likely admit to it, but someone did. The frequency of these occurrences leads me to believe that there's not just one, but many guilty parties.

The epidemic I mentioned above is a total lack of respect. People on this campus seem to think that they're the only ones around. Truth is, there are also professors and maintainers around who don't add to the problem; they're the ones who have tho deal with the results.

A professor's job is to teach students the material required for a particular course. The job is tough enough with up to 250 students to a class, never mind the joker in the back who insists on distracting the class and impeding the progress of other students. This joker, through his disrespect makes things more difficult not only for the other students, but also for the professor. It is unfair.

The maintenance staff here at UMass consists of many dedicated workers, whose job it is to make our surroundings more livable. When the dorms aren't as clean as they should be, residents point the finger at these people, when they should really try looking in the mirror. It's no wonder the maintainers get discouraged.

Too many people on this campus don't give or receive the respect they deserve. Each and every person ought to respect those around him. If that was to happen, there wouldn't be half of the problems there now.

UMass is a diverse campus with many different types of students. Often, these groups show little or no respect for one another. Whether the student body is divided along racial or religious lines, rarely will one group give another its due. With a little respect much of the tension around us could be alleviated.

Respect is more than a mere seven letter word. It is an idea, better an ideal. With a little effort and some thought we can make respect part of our daily routine. Lack of respect is an epidemic not only here, but in society in general. We can't stop it all at once, but we sure as hell can stop it one person at a time.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Title IX doesn't extend to coverage

Kyri Sparks

Someone needs to set me straight because I just don't get it. Why is a number one nationally ranked men's basketball team worthy of more attention, praise, and press than a women's team with the same ranking? The female athletes work just as hard, sweat just as much, and have accomplished the same impressive feat.

Correct me if I am wrong, but in the game of basketball when the ball goes through the hoop the team that made the shot gets awarded points. One for a free throw, two from inside the three point circle and three points from outside. The same scoring is used in both men's and women's basketball, albeit women use a slightly smaller ball than men.

Men's and women's teams often score the same amount of points in a game and the stakes are just as high. Yet women don't experience the same fan support or community endorsements as the men do and the media downplays their achievements by overlooking them or poorly reporting them.

On Sunday night, television station WFSB, the CBS affiliate in Hartford, aired a story about the UConn's basketball successes over the weekend. They lead with the men's win (77-70) over Big East rival Syracuse, which virtually secured their number one national ranking this week. The reporter said that Ray Allen had game high totals in rebounds (12), points (18), assists (6) and steals (5). They showed shots of Travis Knight and Doron Sheffer making their contributions.

They followed the men's coverage with a much shorter recap of the women's win (84-62) over Seton Hall. The women's win didn't catapult them into the number one national ranking, but that is no reason for the coverage to be sub-par.

The reporter referred to Jen Rizzotti and Rebecca Lobo as just Jen and Rebecca who both contributed 18 points. Not once did the reporter refer to any of the men's players by only their first names. By using only the women's first names the coverage took on a patronizing tone. It is these little omissions and oversights that frame the female athlete's achievements as being different and less significant than her male counterpart.

On Monday the Boston Globe reported the UConn men's and women's number one rankings as accomplishments unmatched in the history of college basketball. The lead to the article was, "Now it can be said without gender qualifications or other explanations to denigrate the accomplishment. UConn is No. 1."

Excuse me, denigrate?! I had to look it up to make sure. Webster's Dictionary explained it as "to speak damningly of." Was writer Mark Blaudschun inferring that since the women claimed the ranking first and to write about the number one Husky team he had to clarify the gender previously as being the women's team and not the men's, as if that was an aberration and nuisance? Have you ever noticed that when ESPN, CBS, NBC or ABC promote a college basketball game they don't include the gender? They just assume we know it is a men's basketball game.

What is sad is that this coverage of the UConn's women's basketball team is great compared to the usual portrayal of female athletes or women by the media. A study analyzing the 52 covers of Sports Illustrated in 1993 by Lynda Truman showed that six women were on the cover of the popular sports magazine.

"The first of course, was in a bathing suit," reported Truman. "The second, Monica Seles, was wearing tennis whites and a knife in her back. No. 3 and No. 4 were the widows of Indians pitchers Steve Olin and Tim Crews. They shared the cover. No. 57 The tennis player, Mary Pierce; her father beat her up. The sixth and last was Nancy Kerrigan. She was clubbed on the knee. Six women, five covers, five victims. Few enough to get together for group therapy over lunch. Except the fashion model — she can't eat."

The most underplayed difference between women's basketball and men's is that the majority of female athletes reach the pinnacle of their athletic careers between the ages of 18 and 22. When their collegiate eligibility is up, so is their opportunity to play. Of course there is the national team or European and Asian leagues, but those are for the lucky and talented few. Some men have the opportunity to make a career out of a game they love while women can only participate at the professional level as fans or cheerleaders.

Kyri Sparks is a UMass student.

The tough–guy syndrome

Caleb Cochran

Last week, when the roads were still covered with snow and jam-packed with slow moving cars, I had a most interesting run-in with a fellow driver.

I was driving on Route 9 heading into town when I found myself stopped behind a number of cars at a red light. A woman signaled that she was turning out of the side street just ahead of me on the right, so I pulled up a little short of the road to give her some space to pull out. The light was red anyway, so no one was going anywhere.

Suddenly, the driver of the maroon BMW behind me started honking like a madman, and both the driver and his passenger were screaming and throwing their hands in the air. I suppose they wanted me to move, but, like I said, the light was red and I wasn't going anywhere.

Well, after about 30 seconds of blowing the horn, the driver proceeded to get out of his car and approached mine. I tried to open my window, as I was really curious to see what this guy had to say. The window was frozen shut, however, so I opened the door and asked, with as little sarcasm as possible, "Where would you like me to go?" The gentleman's reply was, "I'd like you to get out of my way right [expletive] now, [expletive]."

The light was green by this point, so I happily obliged and left the driver to walk back to his car, probably missing the next light in the process.

This driver apparently suffers from an ailment that has claimed many male victims in the Five College area: the tough guy syndrome.

I live in an apartment complex off-campus, and last semester my roommate and I had the pleasure of dealing with a group of creeps who lived below us. These guys also suffered from the tough guy syndrome, and this led to an ugly incident one night last fall.

It started when our neighbors were making a ridiculous amount of noise one weeknight when I was trying to get some studying done (or TV watching, one of the two — the details are escaping me). At any rate, I walked down and calmly asked them if they would mind keeping it down. "Whatever," or something to that effect, was all I got for an answer.

A few nights later, my roommate and I were doing some entertaining of our own, and we got a little bit loud. After a while, two of my neighbors from downstairs (I thought it was a one-man job) started beating down our door. I calmly opened it and immediately was bombarded with flying words and flying spit as the two guys screamed in my face.

Soon enough, one of our guests came over to help resolve the conflict, and was immediately told to "sit down and shut up" since he didn't live in my apartment. Words flew from both sides for about 10 minutes before a female friend of my roommate's chimed in and explained that we should all probably shut up since there was a family trying to sleep across the hall.

It was then that the tougher of the two tough guys told her to shut up and raised his hand, pointing it in her face. (The sign of a real tough guy is when you can raise your hand to a woman). Anyway, as the guy raised his hand, he knocked over his roommate and sent him tumbling down the stairs. I'm glad the kid wasn't severely hurt, but it seemed to me to be justice served.

The most futile thing you can do when dealing with a tough guy is to try and address him as such. Last fall I was at an off-campus party waiting for a beer. The kid running the tap wasn't paying attention, so I tapped his arm with my cup, just to let him know I was there. This was all the kid needed.

"Who hit me?" he demanded.

"I tapped you," I replied.

"I don't like being tapped," he said.

"OK, tough guy. Just pour me a beer," I sighed.

"I'm not tough."

I think you all can see what a meeting of the minds this turned out to be. If the kid would have just poured me a beer, the conflict could have been avoided, just as many stupid arguments that arise could be avoided if people could just learn to knock off the tough guy act.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

WHEN ARE YOU GOING TO DO THE FEASIBILITY STUDY, SIR?
I ALREADY HAVE. I STUDIED IT, AND IT'S FEASIBLE.
YOU GOT $50,000 JUST FOR THAT, SIR?
THINK OF IT AS SEED MONEY, HONEY. WE'VE GOT TO UNDERWRITE 35 BEDS!
35? SIR, THAT'S INSANE! HOW CAN WE POSSIBLY CONTROL 35 KIDS?
EASY. DUCT TAPE.
DUCT TAPE?
HONEY, THERE'RE FEW CHILD CARE PROBLEMS THAT CAN'T BE SOLVED WITH DUCT TAPE.
©B Trudeau

Arts & Living

Fishburne shows versatility in three latest films

By Ric Leyva
Associated Press

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Laurence Fishburne, seen here in Boyz N The Hood, is starring in the upcoming film Just Cause.

NEW YORK — Laurence "don't-call-me-Larry" Fishburne doesn't jump down your throat if you let the nickname slip. He'll just let you know it's a thing of the past.

"I don't hate it," he said graciously after a visitor who had been warned misspoke anyway. "I just don't answer to it anymore." Spending just a few minutes with him is all it takes to agree that Fishburne is right to insist. The man is no Leisure Suit Larry.

Savoring a Hollywood hat trick (three films in release at once), he placidly steeps, sweetens, stirs then carefully sips mint tea in the sanctity of a Manhattan hotel room, a juice glass standing in for a teacup.

In theaters across the country, Fishburne, 33, can be seen trying to slap some sense into Ice Cube in Higher Learning, writhing on a sweaty office desk with Ellen Barkin in Bad Company and matching wits with Sean Connery in Just Cause. The three roles transform him from a college professor, into a reluctant corporate spy and finally a small-town Everglades cop who uses Russian roulette to extract a confession.

Just Cause, his most recent movie, which opened nationally in theaters on Feb. 17, presented two interesting challenges, forcing Fishburne to look physically older than his years and somehow stay out of Connery's superstar shadow.

He conquered both obstacles — with a knife and fork.

"When you're in the South you eat," he said. "So I picked up like 20 pounds — I'm like almost 200 pounds in the movie — which was kind of neat, to walk around and take up that much space. It felt kind of good.

"I mean, Connery's pretty big. Well, I had the extra weight, so I was like, 'I'm ready for that.'"

The mood is serene. Fishburne's had an Academy Award nomination for best actor, he's won an Emmy. There's no reason to bristle at the sound of the dreaded diminutive moniker, which he officially discarded a few years back.

He's heard much worse.

"Fishburger, fishworm, fishlips, fishburnout," he says, listing some of the mean names the other kids cooked up for him when he was a boy growing up in Brooklyn.

It made for a thick skin, an actor's most valuable asset. Larry may not fit now, but it was how a generation of movie-goers were first introduced to Fishburne in Apocalypse Now: A teen playing a teen, he immortalized Clean, Mr. Clean — the baby-faced deck gunner from the Bronx, rockin' out and blowing away unarmed civilians in Vietnam.

Too young in real life to serve in the real war, Fishburne got a lasting taste of what it was like anyway, even manifesting similar delayed stress back home.

"Apocalypse Now flashbacks? Used to get them all the time," he says. "Every time I saw a helicopter. Psychologically, it was pretty heavy."

Like real vets, the world to which he returned wasn't as friendly as he expected. Despite rave reviews, it took him more than a year to land his next film role.

"I kicked around, auditioned a lot and worked a little, and by some miracle managed to work fairly consistently, it wasn't like I completely disappeared I don't think," he said.

The waiting and settling for unglamorous parts paid off. The 1991 Boyz N the Hood role that re-established him in film arose from a friendship forged on the set of "Pee-wee's Playhouse," where Fishburne played Cowboy Curtis and future director John Singleton was part of the crew.

"I don't think I would have been able to handle any of the kind of success that I'm experiencing now had it happened 10 years ago," he said. "It was a real blessing in disguise."

Blues, jazz & plays highlight Black History Month events

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

This year's final two weeks of Black History Month in the Five-College area are occupied by just as many entertaining and informative events as the first half.

February's festivities come to a close with the following highlights:

Feb. 17: The Northampton Center for the Arts will offer a program entitled "Afro-Latino Folklorico" at 8 p.m. Through performance, three musical groups will illustrate the fusion of West African music with that of the Americas and Caribbean.

Feb. 18: Seattle's African-American lesbian troupe Four Big Girls presents "Around the Table" at 8 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center. The original work takes a humorous look at the issue of obese women from their standpoint.

Feb. 18: The Amherst Area Branch of the N.A.A.C.P. will hold its annual potluck dinner at 6 p.m. at the Grace Episcopal Church Parish Hall. Roberto Marquez, a Mount Holyoke professor, will be on hand to speak.

Feb. 22: The Northeast and Sylvan Area Residential Life Staff are sponsoring an event entitled "An African Heritage Celebration" at 6 p.m. in the Mary Lyon Residential Hall. In addition to food, there will be live open-mike music and poetry.

Feb. 23: A symposium on W.E.B. Du Bois entitled "Celebration of Learning" will take place at 11:15 a.m. in Room 163 of the Campus Center. Afro-American Studies professors Bill Strickland, Michael Thelwell, and David Du Bois will try to shed some light on the scholar's achievements.

Feb. 23: The Magic Triangle Jazz Series presents a concert at 8 p.m. at the Hampden Theater in the Southwest Residential Area. Sponsored by WMUA, the musical feast features several performers.

Feb. 23-26: "Dancing with Chaos," a original political murder mystery, will enjoy a short run at the Chrysalis Theater in Northampton, with each performance starting at 8 p.m. The play includes a score encompassing styles from classical to rock.

Feb. 25: Actor and playwright Roger Guenveur Smith brings his one-man show "Frederick Douglass Now" to the Bowker Auditorium at 2 and 8 p.m. Smith's work is a multimedia exploration of Douglass' life.

Feb. 27-Mar. 3: A pioneering African-American musician is the focus of the Fine Arts Center's 24th annual Black Musicians' Conference. This year's theme, "Blues Based Jazz: The Legacy of William 'Count' Basie", sets the tone for the week's festivities.

Feb. 28: In conjunction with the FAC conference, the multi-instrumental Claude Williams will perform at 8 p.m. at the Bowker Auditorium. The 86 year-old Williams was Count Basie's original recorded guitarist, but has since specialized in violin.

Feb. 28: Blues guitarist Buddy Guy will make an appearance at 8 p.m. at the John M. Greene Hall at Smith College. Considered one the top Chicago blues players, Guy has been a major influence on many modern blues and rock artists.

Wealth of talent, people and ideas create Miranda

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The Residential Arts is proud to present its second Off-Center Series program, Miranda — a collection of performances at the Hampden Theater Feb. 17-18 at 8 p.m.

The program will feature a special multi-media presentation by Wendy Woodson, founder and director of her own performance-art group, the Present Company Inc. Mixing text, motion and video technology, Miranda displays a journey through a linear world where the military collides with a mythical world.

The performance bashes female and male stereotypical roles and personas, creating a basis for a new definition of hero, using both ancient and contemporary female models as basic building blocks. Included in Miranda will be a new movement monologue by Peter Schmitz and additional performances by Ben Turner and Sandra Meyers.

With associate artists like Jim Brown (choreographer), Court Dorsey (artist and musician), Achim Nowak (artistic director), Peter Schmitz (choreographer), Susan Thompson (storyteller and actress) and Thia Sontag (choreographer and performance artist) all working on Miranda, the show should prove to be a brilliant mesh of various styles and of ideas.

The group has created over 40 performances and has had its efforts displayed nationally and internationally. Some of their performances include Baggage and the Fates, Roamers, Force of Habit, Landfill, A Disappearing and Visiting Hours.

Miranda is funded in part by a grant from the New England Foundation for Arts with the support from the Massachusetts Cultural Council, and the National Endowment for the Arts. Residential Arts is sponsored in part by the University Arts Council and the Student Affairs Cultural Endowment Fund.

Woodson is trained in modern dance and experimental dance. She has a masters degree in dance from George Washington University and has been a guest artist at various educational institutions nation wide. Currently she is on the dance and theater faculty at Amherst College and the Five College Dance Department.

Wendy Woodson & Present Company Inc. is a non-profit organization which has committed itself to challenging the ideas and boundaries between medias. They take all forms of performance arts to create new and innovative ideas and expressions.

Hampden Theater is located in the Southwest Residential Area. Tickets are $3 for Five College students and seniors; $10 for the general public. For more information call the Fine Arts Center at 545-2511.

Us folks down here at the Collegian want to wish the one, the only, Arthur C. Stapleton Jr. A VERY HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

THE SPOKE
THE SPOKE AMHERST, MASS
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1994
A DRINKERY
TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD POUNDERS
$2.00
Drink of the Week
RUM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Direct Insurance Billing
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
CARSTAR, Collision Repair Centers
Where America goes for Quality Collision Repairs
North Amherst CARSTAR 70 Old Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2080
Northampton CARSTAR 1414 Damon Road, Northampton, MA 586-4444

Spring Break
Cancun $399
Jamaica $439
Florida $129
Carroll Travel • 256-8931
TRISHA 549-6015
STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES
Toll free 1-800-648-4849

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
HELD OVER
2nd Week
DAILY AT 7:00 & 9:15
THE CROWN JEWEL OF THE YEAR!
★★★★!
Hugely Entertaining, Triumphant & Funny.
Roger Ebert, THE CHICAGO SUN-TIMES
"Glittering, Swift, Entertaining And Eloquent!"
Caryn James, THE NEW YORK TIMES
"A Marvelous Movie!"
Dave Denby, NEW YORK MAGAZINE
THE MADNESS OF KING GEORGE
ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treats 584-8435

KATINA'S NIGHTCLUB
RT. 9 HADLEY • 413-586-4463
JOHN VALBY
"DR. DIRTY"
FRIDAY FEB. 17TH
A great night of unique side-splitting comedy!
18+ SHOW

THURSDAY • FRIDAY • SATURDAY
12 oz. Btls $1.75 weekly special
Pitchers $4.75 weekly special
NEW FOOD SPECIALS
1/2 PRICE ALL APPETIZERS AND NACHOS
9:30 til 11:00
Beat the Cover! Get in before 10:00 and... NO COVER fun.food.spirits
THE PUB
MUSIC BY... D.J. PETE FREE REQUESTS • DANCE
SMOKING 10 TIL 1
15 east pleasant street • amherst

EMILY BEAT / COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby howls after a dunk, in his celebrated return to action.

Massachusetts 73, Duquesne 56

At The William D. Mullins Center

Player of the Game – Lou Roe- 20 points, 9 rebounds, 2 blocks

Duquesne (5-8)
Pipkins 6-19 4-4 19, Curley 4-14 0-0 9, Tarle 2-4 0-0 4, Marshall 2-4 1-1 5, Hunter 1-6 2-2 5, James 2-3 0-0 4, Seay 0-0 0-1 0, Price 4-13 1-3 9, Bridges 0-3 1-4 1. Totals 21-66 9-15 56.

Massachusetts (19-3)
Dingle 1-6 3-5 5, Weeks 1-4 1-2 3, Roe 8-11 4-5 20, Padilla 3-6 0-0 7, Kellogg 5-9 2-2 16, Bright 1-2 0-0 2, Germain 0-1 0-0 0, Camby 3-6 5-6 11, Travieso 3-9 1-2 8, Meyer 0-0 1-2 1, Cottrell 0-2 0-0 0, Nunez 0-1 0-0 0, Norville 0-1 0-2 0. Totals 25-58 17-26 73.

Halftime-UMass 41, Duquesne 19. 3-Point goals- Duquesne 5-19 (Pipkins 3-11, Hunter 1-3, Curley 1-4, Marshall 0-1), UMass 6-15 (Kellogg 4-6, Travieso 1-4, Padilla 1-4, Germain 0-1). Fouled out- Duquesne, Bridges. Rebounds- Duquesne 37 (Bridges 5), UMass 48 (Roe 9). Assists- Duquesne 9 (Marshall 4), UMass 19 (Padilla 8). Total fouls- Duquesne 20, UMass 18. Attendance- 9,493.

Highlights...

The Minutemen jumped out to a 41–19 halftime lead and never looked back. UMass got a boost from the return of sophomore All-America candidate Marcus Camby. Camby, after missing four games, returned with a vengence and in his 18 minutes, he scored 11 points and blocked three shots. Roe turned in another strong performance scoring a game- high 20 points on 8–11 shooting from the field...UMass also recieved great play from guards Derek Kellogg and Edgar Padilla. Kellogg scored 16 points on four three–pointers.

■ basketball

continued from page 8

out, he gave us a lift, especially on the defensive end. We're definitely a better ball club with him, and that culminated with the way we played as a team."

The Dukes did not quit in the second half, but the Minutemen lead only fluctuated and was in no danger, as it went as high as 26 (50–24 with 18:12 left) and as low as 16 (on two seperate occasions).

"(Duquesne) kept playing, and you've got to give them credit, though," Calipari said. "They just happened to play a team who needed to bounce back and do dome things, and we did it today."

Camby, who entered the game with 17:02 left in the first half to a standing ovation, played 18 minutes despite experiencing a little soreness. Calipari said the choice to play was Camby's.

"We need him on the floor, he's our guy. Boy, does he make it a lot ... he makes it a lot more exciting to coach, a little easier to coach when he's out there," Calipari said.

The return of Camby helped in a large way. Although his amount of playing time and 11 points do not speak volumes, his presence aided his teammates. Lou Roe had an outstanding game, scoring 20 points and grabbing nine boards. The guards stepped it up a notch, led by Kellogg's 16 points (4–6 from three–point range).

"It's nice when you're a guard, your man beats you, and he blocks it so hard that you get a lay–up down the other end," Calipari said. "[It's] kind of nice to know you have him in there. How about Lou Roe? Lou Roe has been helping him stretch for the last week to get him back quickly."

■ Williams

continued from page 8

down, we're going to be successful."

With the exception of the garbage time at the end, and a four–minute stretch in the first half, Calipari had two of the three guards in for the entire game.

* * *

Around the rim (literally): With the superstition of never having lost at the William D. Mullins Center gone, the Minutemen debuted new backboards. The state of the art equipment has been in Mullins center storage for a month and a half, but the team wanted to keep the old boards until they lost at home.

■ horn

continued from page 8

• Hair–do of the week — Jaromir Jagr–wanna be Greg Bullock of the UMass–Lowell hockey team. Great goal scorer, future NHLer, terrible hair.

• Fans of the week — Heidi Kocher and Melissa Mitchell of the Massachusetts women's soccer team. Kocher and Mitchell sat in the front row at the UMass–GW men's game in order to grace everyone's television screens. One problem, guys — the game wasn't televised.

• Here's a hint for local media personalities, when I won't mention by name to protect the idiotic and unprepared — check your pronunciation guide when you plan to talk about the Minutemen. For the 800th time, it's Dontã (Don– tay) Bright. For those of you who haven't figured it out yet, it's Carmelo Travieso (Trav–e–yes–o). You have to forgive me for not knowing how to write the exact pronunciations for the names, but obviously they don't work.

Media Relations guru Bill Strickland should give out a test before issuing credentials to intelligent folks like us ... I mean, them.

• Scooby Doo ending for the Minutemen — Lou Roe and Derek Kellogg figure out that someone else has been portraying John Calipari and they foil the plot, get Cal back and win the NCAA championship ...

• Bad news ending for the Minutemen — The team never figures out what is wrong, heads into the NCAA tournament as a No. 2 seed in the East, meets up with Travis Best and Georgia Tech and gets bounced in the second round. Again.

• Realistic ending for the Minutemen — I have absolutely no idea. This team is unpredictable.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist who turns 22 today.

■ hockey

continued from page 8

defenseman Dale Hooper, scratched when UMass made its first visit to Maine's storied Alfond Arena. That marked the second scratch for Hooper in four games, as he was replaced by little used Tony Giusto in UMass' 5–1 home loss to BU Feb. 3.

Mallen and Hooper agree that the circumstances that led to Hooper's benching will not present future problems.

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us aid. Call Student Financial Services ? 800-263-6495 ext 15011

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools , right here in Amherst. Free info session, Mon. Feb. 27th. Lord Jeffery Inn, at 7pm, or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX

Sick of the weather? Too bad, but why don't you head down to the Mullins Center at 4:00 today to catch the women's hockey team take on Wheaton?

The Distinguished Visitor Program is looking for new members! If you are interested in finding out about DVP come to the new members meeting on February 22 at 8:30 in rm 407 Student Union or call 6-0046

UMass Theatre Guild auditions Stephen Soundheim's Merrily We Roll Along Thurs Feb. 16 7pm Earthbods, Fri 17 7pm CC 101, Sat 18 11am CC 174 Callbacks 20 Call 545-0415

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice S.W. 107,300 miles automatic transmission. Reliable car and engine. Asking $900 or best offer. Please contact Fausto @ (413) 549-4809.

1986 Mercury Lynx, standard, 1.9 litre engine, new clutch, brake, battery, very reliable, $2000 546-5898

Car for parts. 77 Buick wagon, running $150 or b.o. 546-7227?

Ford Grenada 1981. Excellent condition Auto, ex- $1,400 obo 268 3861

Take over lease. Month of Feb. free Call 546-5281 $627/month

FOR SALE

Airline ticket Bradley to Los Angeles a bargain at $100. Call Elaine 413-675-9083

Computer and or printer. Cordata 386 1 mb RAM computer with software (DosLotus MS Works + more) Canon BJ 200 printer $500 for both Call 665-8287

Kitchen wood table w/ 4 chairs, good condition $75 B.O. Call 665-4686

Large dorm type fridge about 3 ft high $95 and microwave $75 Both in excellent condition Call Ron 256 4589

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $599! Call Chris at 800 789-5085.

Moving sale February 18-19 9am-2pm Everything must go-rugs, furniture, bikes, more. Lincoln apts 5/4, Amherst, phone 546-7227

Piano ticket for sale. Anywhere in continental U.S. $300 or B/O 253 7741

Revo sunglasses absolute lowest prices Shades, HQ, Classic Traveler. Call 1-800 98SHADES

Save $63. U.S. Air anywhere by March 29 $173 value for $110. For more 549-4015.

Smith Corona 5000 word processor $250 Call Chris 253-4913

Trek 850 mint apple Mac for sale 256 6891

Want a Macintosh? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Claravoerks $480 Christoffer 549-7453

Atari, Intellivision, Colecovision games consoles and systems. Buy/Sell/Trade 256-1995, ask for Tony.

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn. Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain. Call Bill at 6-0704

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol Credit available Casa Box 3279, Austin, TX 78764 512 416 8991

HELP WANTED

Alaska summer employment- fishing industry. Earn up to $3,000 - $6,000+ per month. Room and board! Transportation! Male/female. No experience necessary! 206 545-4155 ext. A5801?

Babysitter wanted. Area health club seeks babysitter. Limited hours available. Monday, Tues. and Thurs. AM is a must. Free membership with job! Call Mike at 549-3638

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp -3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront, + arts Call 1-800-973-3866. On campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $2000 +/month. World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50014

Customer Service. Part time 4 pm-11pm Typing/computer experience helpful Delivery Express 549-0077

Drivers wanted-Earn $8-$12 /hour 11-2 or 4-11. Delivery Express 549-0077

Expanding environmental company needs ambitious self-starters immediately. Great opportunity. 413-534-6533

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod. Call Holly at 349-8392

Help wanted. Experienced waitstaff weekends. Apply within 1 Kai Chi Restaurant, Mt. Ferma Mall

Live and work in Nantucket for the summer. Call Laura 546-1303

Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 295 5490 after 2 p.m.

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000-$4,000+/mo. Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

INSTRUCTION

Guitar lessons. Enjoy the semester and earn credit! 25 years experience Beginning/advanced. Peter 256-4641

MOUNTAINBIKE FOR SALE

Paramount series 20, mint, ridden approx 70 on road miles: owner is indolent. Richey bars and rims, Sumtour XC/std approximately 27/8 light. Paid $850, will sell for $450. 413-577-8329

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends Gas $ 253 7699

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate to share rm in Brandywyne. Available immediately. Call 549-7408

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo, Florida Spring Break Earn 2 credits Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800 282-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Going away? Need your pets to be taken care of? Call Jen 546-8992. Exp. with all types of animals

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS 256-6885. 19.2 K bps. 130 megs online + CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski Spring Break '95 intercollegiate ski weekends only $209. Includes 5 day lift tickets/5 nights lodging (luxury condos)/5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age 18), sponsors include Labatts, Molson and Mt. Orford, Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Campus and Greek representatives needed. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

THETA CHI

Theta Chi fraternity spring rush '95. See what our brotherhood is all about. All are welcome. Feb. 13-16, 20, 21 8:00-10:00pm. Questions or a ride call Ted Silva 549-4598

TICKETS NEEDED

I need two tickets to UMass vs Duquesne Thurs. Feb. 16. Will pay cash. Call Mike 6-7434.

TRAVEL

Spring Break 95. Daytona $99! Panama City $149. The best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call! Herb + Andrea 256 6110

Spring Break- Daytona, Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica, South Padre. Great prices! Back soon! Reberia 253-5398

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

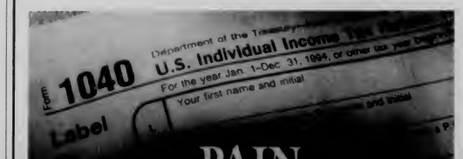
Typing. Word processing resumes. Fast, inexpensive. 546-6736

WANTED

Got an extra floor ticket for Live? Will pay well. Call 256-8110

HP Laserjet toner cartridges wanted for recycling. $7 cash each. Please include packing materials. Call 549-4368

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING



Department of the Treasury
1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
For the year Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1994, or other tax year beginning
Label
Your first name and initial
PAIN.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pre-tax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, we offer a wide range of allocation choices—from TIAA's traditional annuity, with its guarantees of principal and interest, to the seven diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity. What's more, our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call our planning specialists at 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide-calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

Call today—it couldn't hurt.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

*Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1994. Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., Lipper-Directory Analysis of Data, 1994 (Quarterly). CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 5509 for a CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

© 1995 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Classifed Advertising Submission

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto For Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Wrod Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

REGARDING PERSONALS
1. All personals MUST be submitted by Collegian classified employees before payment & acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for festivities & congratulatory personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harrassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'M ASKING EVERYBODY TO QUANTIFY THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS TO REVENUE. YOUR PAY WILL DEPEND ON IT
I REALIZE THIS IS HARD TO QUANTIFY BECAUSE YOU'RE DESIGNING FUTURE PRODUCTS BUT HERE YOU GO
A BILLION DOLLARS? IT'S AS IF YOU CYNICALLY BELIEVE WE CAN'T TRACK THESE NUMBERS THAT CROSSED MY MIND

Bruno By C. Baldwin

THERE YOU ARE. I THOUGHT I MIGHT FIND YOU HERE. YOU HAVEN'T BEEN READING THE NEWS AGAIN, HAVE YOU?
YES
AND YOU CAN'T MAKE ME GET OUT OF THIS BED EVER

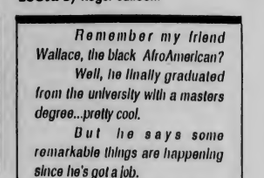
Leold By Roger Salloom



Remember my friend Wallace, the black AfroAmerican?
Well, he finally graduated from the university with a masters degree...pretty cool.
But he says some remarkable things are happening since he's got a job.
Some of the guys at work are already angry at him because he told them he doesn't know how to play basketball so he can't play on the office team.
The same thing happened in a high school jazz band. That time he gave in... he just stood there on stage holding a saxophone.
They told him,.....
"Just hold it, Wallace!"
So, he held it.
He's been holding it ever since.

P.S. Mueller

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

Jim's Journal By Jim

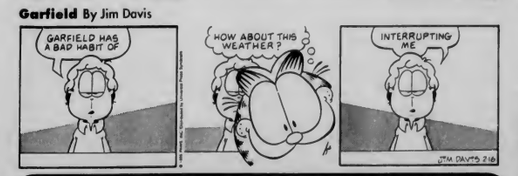
I was walking outside today when I noticed a squirrel by a tree.
He looked at me, then ran up the tree.
Then I came home and saw Mr. Peterson.
She dashed out the door as soon as I opened it.

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Evan, YOU'RE cooking?
Yep, get me another egg?
Evan, can you give me a hand with this?
I don't think we're getting this egg without a fight!

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat

Garfield By Jim Davis



Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Emily Marino
Copy Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Photo Technician.....Shinichiro Suzuki
Production Supervisor.....Marni E. Helfner
Production.....Jon Lupo
Josh Grey

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Sandwich	Fisherman's Plate
Ravioli with Sauce	Roast Beef
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Chicken Sandwich	Fisherman's Plate
Hummus Veggie Pocket	Heart Latin Stew

Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

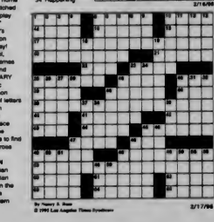
ACROSS
1 Dogsled's creator
5 Diver's dance
10 One-pot meal
14 Fairy-tale dentist
18 Pummeled with blades
19 Round dance
17 CLASSICAL
20 Cloisters' treasure
21 Frequent map failure
22 Dallies or Duncher
23 Become paler
25 Alcohol amount
29 Boast
30 Dam org.
33 Bakery necessity
34 Worm
35 Bengal bump
36 ERICA
40 Seabird
41 Representative
42 Encourage
43 Hog's home
44 Dispatched
46 They play "flute"
47 Editor's notation
48 Mayday!
49 Abigail, sometimes
52 Offhand
57 MILITARY
60 Comic Johnson
61 Shot of lotion's
62 Notion
63 Begot
64 Fireplace residue
65 Where to find 43 Across

DOWN
1 Egyptian Christian
2 City on the Jumna
3 Play item
4 Small pooch, for short
5 Thaw
6 Nile port
7 1934 Nobel chemist
8 Bills, to some
9 Californian's kin
10 Luster
11 Rocky peaks
12 Gaelic
13 Power unit
19 Northern capital
19 Move restlessly
23 Facade
24 Afro-Amer student's org.
25 After-bath garments
28 Turn aside
27 Minute
28 Banking abbr.
29 "The Spirit Staircase" actor
30 Emulate a majorette
31 Rim
32 Bolivian range
34 Happening
37 Accessorize
39 Architectural molding
39 Embrace
41 Pretext
42 Employer
47 — with-it-ness
48 Supports
49 Pound-filled
49 White whale hunter
50 Roseanne
51 Computing unit
52 Check
53 Given name, Horse sculptor
54 Icelandic
55 Barbary work
55 Gang ending
56 Pillow cover
58 Haggard novel
59 Bad actor

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	I	P		C	O	A	L		O	M	A	R
T	U	N	A		C	A	R	L	O		P	I	L	L
A	B	A	T	E		G	A	S		S	P	U	D
R	E	P	R	O	B		V	E	R	A	N	D	A	H
P	O	P	U	L	I	T	E		P	R	O	S	E
P	A	L	L	A	D	I	A		S	T	A	N	C	E
		A		R		E		S		A		E
A	S	P		R	O	D		E		S	H	E
T	O	I	L		E	R		R	I	N		P	O	M
P	A	S	T	E			S	E	A		S	E	N	A
	O	N	A	N		C	A	P	I	T	A	L
B	A	R	I	T	A		P	I	N	E		C
U	N	D	E		T	H	I	N	G		E	D	N	A
N	A	K	E	D		A	N	E	W		P	O	R	E
E	R	R		R	O	D			S		S	R	O

2/16/95



Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Remedial forces are now at work. A period of quiet reflection will leave you in a more constructive frame of mind. Keep a loved one by your side in both good times and bad.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Maintain an open mind about a business proposals. Too much intensity will grate on your co-workers nerves. Gather with good chums tonight and plan a special celebration.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Take a long look at your financial strategy. Improvements can be made in the way you handle your assets and resources. Forget past disappointments and articulate your needs to loved ones.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Love is a two–way street. Show romantic partner the same consideration that you expect. A daily walk or jog will give you new energy. Curb a tendency to nag your nearest and dearest.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Someone who comes on strong at work today may have hidden motives. Probe beneath the surface; you cannot afford to accept a seemingly generous offer at face value. A love relationship enters rough waters.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): People in high places may not respond as expected. Stay away from Bartlett – it gives off bad vibes. Those who think you mild- mannered will soon learn that steel lurks below your pleasant manner. Remember, politeness can be a sign of strength.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Do not ignore a hunch that you are being fed false information. Gains through gambling are highly unlikely; a responsible approach will take you much farther. Evaluate your financial choices carefully.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Zero in on what is important to you. Friendships can be costly; wise up! Focus on work and getting the job done. Trivial problems will soon resolve themselves. Help is on the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Remember, there is no room for sentiment in business when you are fighting a ruthless competitor. Write, phone or meet face-to-face with someone who can provide you with valuable insider information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): The emphasis is now on protecting both personal and joint assets. Change a budget only if the new arrangement will give you greater financial security. A former employer could use your services again.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Although a cash shortage may slow you down, it will not stop you entirely. A writing project could lead to a second income. Enroll in a special class. An ardent admirer could be overdoing things.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Watch for life in the last lane. Those who slow down will end up accomplishing more. When sharing your plans with loved ones, ask for their input. Romance is sweeter the second time around.

BE A R.A.

HELP SHAPE YOUR

PIECE OF THE WORLD

For more informaiton please contact the Baker Area Office at 545-1333

Applications for Fall 1995 RESIDENT ASSISTANT Positoins Now Being Accepted.

Application Available in Cluster Office

For PRIORITY CONSIDERATION applicatoins must be turned in to theORCHARD HILL/CENTRAL AREA OFFICE, B31 BAKER HOUSE, by 5:00 PM WEDNESDAY, MARCH 15, 1995. (Applications will continue to be accepted until all positions have been filled.)

Applications are encouraged (but not requied) to attend one of the following information sessions:
Tuesday, February 21st 7:00pm Filed Classroom
Wednesday, Bebruary 22nd 12:00pm 165-8 Campus Center
Wednesday, February 22nd 7:30pm Emerson Classroom
Monday, February 27th 7:00pm McNamara lounge

Quote of the Day

"I had reasoned this out in my mind, there was two things I had a right to, liberty and death. If I could not have one, I would have the other, for no man should take me alive.

–Harriet Tubman"

Sports

Men's gym heads to West Point

The Minutemen, who defeated Air Force 220.45 – 217.95 on Wednesday night, will be back in action tomorrow in Annapolis, Md. to face the United States Naval Academy.

Energized Minutemen dominate first half

Camby's surprise appearance leads No. 5 to needed victory

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Couch John Calipari and the No. 5 Minutemen entered last night's game against Duquesne in dire need of an injection of life. Something to jump-start the Minutemen, get the doldrums out of a team who has lost two of their last four games.

Duquesne	56
Massachusetts	73

The sold-out crowd at the William D. Mullins Center was boisterous. Calipari was seen pumping his fist in the air in the first half, Marcus Camby was back in action, and Duquesne was history as the Minutemen clobbered the Dukes, 73–56.

Forget that this was the A-10's eighth-place team that Massachusetts was facing. Forget the lack of importance to the standings, since the Minutemen are a favorite for the A- 10 title and a lock for the NCAA tournament, and Duquesne is a favorite to play in the eighth-place versus ninth-place game in the A-10 tourney.

For Massachusetts, the importance lied in the team itself, bouncing back from the slump.

"I was pleased, I was pleased that we got back to UMass basketball," Calipari said. "We swarmed — how 'bout diving all over the floor? And they created good shots for each other tonight."

Prior to last night's contest, it was announced that Mike Williams was suspended by Calipari indefinitely for breaking team rules. The Minutemen coach said he would "evaluate the situation after the weekend."

The Minutemen started the game by going on a 12–2 run, capped off by a Derek Kellogg lay-up with 15:22 left in the first half. The Dukes then rallied, going on an 8–2 run that included three–pointers by Tom Pipkins and Kenya Hunter to make it 14–10 at 13:30.

Tom Pipkins' two free throws with 10:25 left in the half cut the Minutemen lead to 10, 22–12. The Dukes were then held scoreless for the next five minutes as the Minutemen increased the score to 29–12 on a Camby mini-hook with 7:58 left.

Camby's monster dunk started a late–half rally as Massachusetts, up 31–16, took a 10–3 run led by Kellogg's five points into halftime, 41–19.

"I think that was one of the better first halves we had for the year," Kellogg said. "I think with Mareus coming

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 6

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

Carmello Travieso saw more action than usual with Mike Williams out of the lineup.

John Calipari suspends Mike Williams again

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

For the second time this season, Massachusetts senior Mike Williams was suspended indefinitely for violating team rules.

Williams' suspension is a result of "breaking team rules" according to an official press release.

In the post game press conference Calipari declined any specific comments about the suspension, while the players refused any comment at all.

"He's been suspended, I'll evaluate it after this weekend," Calipari said. "You hate to have things get that way, but that's all I'm going to say about it."

Williams was suspended earlier this season, for breaking team imposed academic rules. He missed UMass' opening game, a 104–80 rout of defending National Champion Arkansas.

Williams entered the game as Massachusetts' third leading scorer, averaging 12.6 points per game, and was second on the team with 64 assists.

Williams will at least miss Sunday's game against Louisville.

With Williams out, the Minutemen were left considerably thin in the backcourt. Carmello Travieso was nursing a back injury that sidelined him for UMass' 80–78 loss to George Washington.

Duquesne came in boasting a backcourt, among the conference's best. With UMass' guards seemingly slumping after a subpar performance against GW, the Dukes looked to exploit the Minutemen's guard play.

It didn't work that way however, as the three UMass regular guards that did dress stepped up their play considerably.

It started with senior Derek Kellogg. From the outset, Kellogg was a factor on both ends of the floor. In the first half, the co-captain led the Minutemen scoring 13 points before intermission (16 on the game). With Williams out of the lineup, Kellogg became the apparent go–to–guy. He went five for nine from the field including four for six from behind the three–point line.

"I thought I had to hit the open jump shot if it was there," Kellogg said. "It wasn't so much, that I had to score more [without Williams], but if it was available I was going to shoot it."

Edgar Padilla was strong driving to the basket and distributing the ball, collecting eight assists, tying his season best, to go along with seven points.

Despite his back problems, Travieso was a key contributor. Despite only shooting three–for–nine, Calipari was pleased with the sophomore's performance.

"He didn't shoot the ball very well, but he defended well," Calipari said. "He had three assists and no turnovers."

"Carmello is doing a heck of a job on defense lately," Kellogg said. "If me and Edgar can step it up to his level, I think we'll be able to shut the other teams guards down."

Kellogg said that he thought the team's offense would not change without Williams.

"We are going to run the same basic offense," he said. "Try to get the ball inside and when they kick it back outside we'll shoot the ball. If we can knock a couple

Turn to WILLIAMS, page 6

Gurile leads the way for UM

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Melissa Gurile came here to help start a new tradition of women's basketball at Massachusetts.

Joanie O'Brien became the head coach in 1991 and a year later began the rebuilding process by bringing in her first top notch recruiting class.

A key member of that class was Gurile.

"That's why I came here, to help build a program," said Gurile, a junior All–America candidate.

Helping to build a program is definitely what Gurile has done in her three years here at UMass. Not long ago, the Minutewomen were the doormat of the Atlantic 10 Conference, and in 1990–91 they finished 0–27.

But with the help of Gurile, the Minutewomen are now on their way to becoming a big–time program.

"We've come a long way," Gurile said. "I've been talking to former players and they've been telling me how proud they are that we're doing so well."

Gurile came to UMass after starring for Watkins Memorial High School in Pataskala, Ohio where she was District 11 Player of the Year and honorable mention All–Ohio as a senior.

As a freshman, she burst onto the scene with a 34 point and 13 rebound performance against Northeastern in her very first collegiate game. She then went on to lead the team in scoring (14.0 ppg) and rebounding (8.3 rpg) for the season while being named the ECAC/Holiday Inn Rookie of the Year.

Gurile followed up her outstanding freshman campaign with an equally impressive sophomore season, averaging 14.2 ppg and 7.2 rpg, while breaking the school record for points in a game (38, also set a career high) against Providence in a 82–80 UMass win.

This season, it's safe to say that she's been one of, if not the most consistent performer for the Minutewomen. She has scored in double figures in all but two games and scored the 1,000th point of her career against Duquesne on Jan. 28., a feat which is outstanding considering she never scored 1,000 points in her high school career.

"[On 1,000th points] felt pretty good. Since I never did it in high school, it was special," said Gurile, who is currently averaging a team–leading 15.5 points per game.

Just being able to play college basketball has been special to Gurile.

"Basketball has always been a part of my life. I'm living out my dream. I've always dreamt about it. It's been great. It's meant a lot to me."

Gurile is hoping that she and her teammates can finish out this season on a high note. For the first time in many years, the Minutewomen have a legitimate shot at winning the A– 10 tournament championship.

"We want to win the A–10 tournament definitely," Gurile said. "That would get us to the NCAAs. I'm not sure if there is any other way for us to get there."

That may be so, but a trip to the NCAAs is not entirely out of the question. If the Minutewomen can come away with the A–10 tournament, they will indeed gain a berth to the NCAAs, a feat which could not be possible without the outstanding play of Gurile.

Tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage, Gurile and company will be taking on the current doormat of the A–10, Temple University. But the junior leader knows that the Minutewomen can not take the Lady Owls lightly.

Minutewomen to be televised for first time

For the first time ever, the William D. Mullins Center will be host to a nationally televised women's basketball game.

This Monday night at 8 p.m., the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will play the University of Rhode Island on the Atlantic 10 Conference Network.

The Minutewomen will look to defeat the Rams once again as they did in Kingston, R.I. on Jan. 21, 82–69.

In that game, Octavia Thomas recorded a double–double (27 points, 12 rebounds) to lead UMass to a victory.

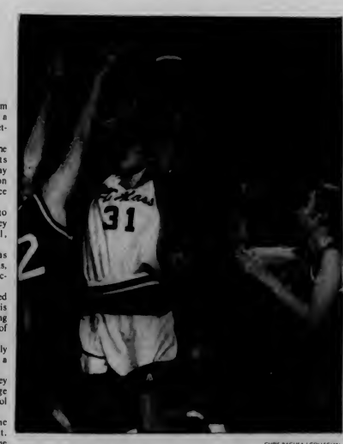
The Rhode Island Rams will be led by senior Rebecca Bright, who is third in the Atlantic 10 in scoring with 18.9 points per game (as of Feb. 11).

The Minutewomen have lost only once at home so far this year with a record of 7–1, 3–1 in Mullins.

In their last game at Mullins, they lost a heartbreaker to George Washington 66–65 before a school record crowd of 2,283.

UMass' final home game of the season, against first place St. Joseph's, will also be played in the Mullins Center on Mar. 1.

— Candice Flemming



CHRIS RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN

Melissa Gurile has helped the UMass women's basketball program get closer to big time.

'Cous is a homer, fans of the week, and Scooby Doo

I respect Tommy Heinsohn and Bob Cousy for being exactly what the Boston Celtics' front office wants their No. 1 broadcast team to be — homers. Here's a recent subject of conversation between Heiney and the 'Cous: the decision by the C's to bypass Eddie Jones in the 1994 NBA Draft, in order to select Eric Montross. It went something like this ...

'Cousy: Did you see that Jones kid out of Temple last weekend in the Rookie Game? He's a star, but if I had to do it all over again, with what I know now, I'd still select Montross.

Heinsohn: Right, Cous. Good pick by the C's.

Montross is from North Carolina, a factory of NBA players. Boston had too many forwards to begin with so they didn't need Jones, right?

Wrong. He would have brought excitement to the Gahhhden. The C's signed Pervis Ellison to fill the middle and they didn't need Montross. They could use Mr. Smooth who now stars for the Lakers. Sorry. Cous, but that's the point — you went for the need the first time, M.L. Carr would most likely go for the stud if he had a second chance.

• Maybe the revolving door outside of the WHMP broadcast booth will allow Cous to become the color man for George Miller and he'll lend his thoughts to Minuteman basketball. No offense to Jack Leaman, but it seems as though there's a new partner for Miller every season. Why not Cousy, at least for one game this season if not for an entire year of pain and suffering?

I can hear it now ... I tell ya, George. That Germain kid would start on any other team in the country. But with the talent here in Amherst, boy, that's why he doesn't play ...

Right, Cous.

• George Washington's Mike Jarvis is a fantastic X's and O's coach and has proven just that in both meetings against the Minutemen this season. I tend to disagree with Jarvis about one thing, though — he says GW has won twice in the Mullins Center in men's basketball (Jarvis includes last season's loss to Massachusetts in the final minute when Marcus Camby dunked on Yinka Dare to win the game by a point).

I say Jarvis should let by–gones be by–gones and forget about last season. You lost, Mike — check the record book.

• Oh, by the way, I love GW's Debbie Hemery ... as a player, that is.

• Tennis, anyone? Can someone tell me what in God's name Boston Globe/NBC analyst Bud Collins was wearing at the UMass–GW game the other night? Speculation was running rampant as to what topic Collins would write on. Here are a few examples: one–on–one with Judy Dixon, would the long shorts (uhhh, knickers) worn by Mike Williams work in the game of tennis ...

• New baskets were installed Wednesday morning in the Mullins Center, only hours after the Minutemen had their home–winning streak broken by those same Colonials. No superstitions, right?

Turn to HORN, page 6

UMA and UML fight for bragging rights in the state

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

The struggle for state school hockey supremacy resumes this weekend between the University of Massachusetts at Amherst the and University of Massachusetts at Lowell, with game one of a home–and–home series tonight at 7 p.m. at the Tully Forum in Billerica.

The series resumes tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the William D. Mullins Center.

The inaugural game of the season for both clubs, which UML won not–so–handily by a 6–1 count, was on Oct. 22 of last year.

The Riverhawks skated to a 2–0 advantage on goals by Jeff Daw and Hockey East scoring leader Greg Bullock (22 goals, 35 assists, 57 points), but Tom O'Connor's score at 3:22 of the third period — UMass' first goal in Hockey East play — cut the margin in half before UML ran off four unanswered goals.

UML forward Christian Sbrocca set a HE record with five assists. Sbrocca (12–25–37), Bullock and Jeff Daw (24–13– 37) comprise one of the league's deadliest offensive trios.

"We've beaten some good teams in this league, but no matter how you slice it, there's nothing easy in this league," UMass coach Joe Mallen said. "If you had to handicap this game, you'd say they're a goal and a half better than us."

It has been a transition season for the youthful Riverhawks (three seniors on the roster), who have not managed to approach the heights they reached last year, a school–best 23–10–5 record via Bullock's scoring title and All–America goaltender Dwayne Roloson's stingy work.

UML has not disproved the preseason coaches' poll, as it stands fifth in HE at 8–10–1, 13–15–4 overall.

"It's getting down to that time of year: Who has the positive momentum? The never say die type of attitude? Who's just kind of cruising along?" Mallen asked. "Unfortunately for us, it seems like every time we go to play someone, they just do something great, like Lowell beating New Hampshire. That's got to give them some momentum."

The Riverhawks went into the cramped quarters of Manchester's IFK Arena and stifled No. 7 UNH, 5–2 last Saturday. UML has played well on the road, recording a 7– 4–2 away record opposed to a 5–9–1 ledger at the Tully Forum.

UMass (5–22–2, 3–16 HE) ranks last in HE in goals per game at just 2.58. Sal Manganaro's absence won't help UMass surpass that average tonight, as he and his 10 goals in 15 league games will be scratched. Mallen suspends a player for one game for a misconduct, which Manganaro received in last Saturday's 7–0 loss at Maine.

Mallen thought of reuniting Rob Bonneau with old linemates Warren Norris and Blair Wagar, but opted instead for Jon Jacques in the top right wing slot with Bonneau and left wing Tom Pryce.

UML, conversely, is a potent outfit, but its defense often resembles Swiss cheese. The Riverhawks average 4.32 goals per game, but have allowed 4.84. Craig Lindsay and Scott Fankhouser need more time to develop into high caliber HE goaltenders.

Lindsay looked sharp opening night, turning back 28 of 29 UMass shots, but has had some rough nights in the four months since. He may have righted himself with his 33 save stumping of the Wildcats and will start tonight.

"We're counting on him to play strong in back–to–back games," UML Coach Bruce Crowder said.

Checking back into the Minuteman lineup will be

Turn to HOCKEY, page 6

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 79 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 21, 1995

Williams' parents hold press conference
Mike Williams' parents held a press conference yesterday afternoon regarding their son's suspension (See Sports, page 10).

Chiapas rebellion faces
Amherst college professor Ilan Stavans has experienced life in Mexico from a firsthand viewpoint (See Developing Nations, page 5).

Jazz–core and folk highlight Trax
Trax On Trax Off column looks at new releases from such diverse artists as Mary Lou Lord and Trenchmouth (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast
Today will be sunny and increasingly warm, with a springtime feel to the air. Wednesday brings much of the same weather, with cooler temps. Thursday will be cooler, with a chance of rain.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 35	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30	HIGH: 25 LOW: 20

UMass loan recipients may face payments while still in school

By Marnie Thomel
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — University of Massachusetts students who receive government subsidized loans may need to start making interest payments on their loans while still in school.

The Republican Party's proposal for the federal budget fiscal year 1996 removes the student loan interest exemption that is currently financed by the federal government.

Students who receive federal Stafford loans based on need are not required to pay interest on loans while attending school, according to Burt Batty, director of financial aid services at the University.

If the cut passes, the federal government will not assist students with subsidy interest payments, according to Batty.

"If the interest is cut, it would be the single largest cut in history," said Laura McClintock, legislative director of United States Student Association (USSA) in Washington, D.C. "This cut could cost students and their families up to $13 billion over five years."

John Kasich, chairman of the house budget committee, is an advocate of eliminating student loan interest exemption, according to Chris Ullman, press secretary for the committee.

"The personal view of the chairman is that students should have to pay interest on their loans," Ullman said.

In order to balance the budget by 2002, the committee needs to look at all aspects of the budget, according to Ullman.

"Everything except social security [Medicare, defense] is on the table for the 1996 budget," Ullman said. "Everything is being put under the microscope."

Everyone needs to help balance the budget, according to Ullman.

"Students should have to pitch in," said the committee's press secretary.

In turn, McClintock said taking money from students is not the way to balance the budget.

"Reducing the deficit is a good thing, but not on the backs of young people," she said. "Cuts to financial aid are not acceptable."

USSA has been working as a coalition to fight proposed financial aid cuts, and preparing for national student lobby day on March 20.

"Our entire spring campaign is dedicated to maintaining the federal financial aid program," McClintock said.

Leslie Lillard, spokesperson from the office of Massachusetts' Congressman John Olver said Olver is against the cut, and will be working to see that the cut does not pass.

"It is a tragedy. Education is the most important investment we can make," Lillard said. "We need to invest in the young to compete globally."

The cut of interest on student loans may prevent some students from attending school because they do not have the money, Batty said. "It doesn't make sense."

Circa Psychotherapy opens Amherst branch

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Staff

Last October, Circa Psychotherapy Associates women's program opened a branch office in Amherst. Circa is a counseling program providing psychotherapy primarily for women.

The program began almost 16 years ago in Northampton with the intention of offering various counseling and psychotherapy services for women.

"Our primary focus centers around women's issues, family therapy, children and women with their children," said Paula Olsen, a Circa counselor.

In both the Northampton and Amherst branch offices, individual, group, couple and family therapy is also offered.

The newest Circa branch office in Amherst makes services more accessible to the Five College area.

According to Olsen, a Circa counselor, many college–aged women have visited the Amherst branch.

"The majority of women who come in are 18 years and older, primarily adults and college students," said Olsen.

Olsen also said many of the people visiting Circa are adolescents.

"We were happy to hear that the Amherst branch is easier to get to for everyone without having to deal with the bus system," she said.

Olsen has more than 16 years experience working with issues related to substance abuse, anxiety, depression, grief and loss, physical and sexual abuse, eating and food disorders, sexual identity and bi–sexual and lesbian issues.

"Our primary focus centers around women's issues ... the majority of women who come in are 18 years and older, primarily adults and college students."

In March of this year Olsen plans to start two specific counseling groups focusing on the age groups of 18 to 23, and will each be running once every week for six to eight weeks.

The first group, dealing with eating disorders, will include talks and provide counseling for anorexia, bulimia, compulsive eating and dieting.

The second group will be a group specifically for motherless daughters.

"This second group will be primarily for girls who have lost their mothers at an early age through abandonment and mental illness," Olsen said.

"At Circa Psychotherapy Associates women's program, we are practicing psychology from a feminist perspective and my approach is to build on their strengths and coping capacities and increase self–awareness," said Olsen.

Circa Psychotherapy Associates women's program is located at 320 North Pleasant St. in Amherst.

For more information concerning counseling groups, contact Paula Olsen at (413) 586–6471.

Herbal cures being lost to deforestation

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON — Herbal medicines which may help fight such diseases as cancer, AIDS and post–traumatic stress disorder may be lost forever due to deforestation, according to Roslta Arvigo, who spoke to more than 180 students last Thursday night at Smith College.

Arvigo has been the "apprentice of Don Elijio, the most respected and last surviving Mayan medicine man, for the past 10 years.

Arvigo gave examples of herbal medications such as rose petals, tree bark, vines and even weeds. These plants can help with such health problems as arthritis, diarrhea, bleeding, chronic fatigue syndrome, toxic blood, post traumatic stress syndrome, envy and potentially cancer and AIDS, according to Arvigo.

During her internship, Arvigo started to work with doctors from New York to set up the Ix Chel Tropical Research Foundation. Arvigo sends the Foundation plants which are felt to have potential in helping cancer and AIDS patients.

"There are 12 plants showing strong promise against cancer and AIDS," Arvigo said.

Arvigo has enlisted the help of the youth of Belize to save endangered medicinal trees. The trees were located in an area which was to be cleared for citrus production. She was astonished at the level of deforestation. The audience was shown evidence of this destruction in slides.

"You can see how hot and dry it is. Ten feet away is the forest where it was cool and birds were singing," Arvigo said. "On one side was life. On the other side was devastation."

Deforestation is not the only threat to traditional medicine. With traditional healers few in number and only a handful of apprentices among them, loss of knowledge is also a serious threat to traditional medicine, said Arvigo.

"It is truly astounding how much of their knowledge has been forgotten," Arvigo said. "I asked them to compare ancient traditional medicine to a tree. When I asked them how much they know now, they said 'a leaf.'"

Originally from Chicago, Arvigo now lives in Belize, a South American country, where she has helped found a 80,000 acre national preserve for the protection of endangered medicinal plants.

Arvigo's interest in herbal medicine began when she witnessed rose petals save the life of a woman who was hemorrhaging after giving birth.

While Arvigo admits most American doctors do not respect herbal medicine, she does see hope for the future.

"The younger the doctor, the more open he seems to be," Arvigo said. "They don't seem to have the same rigid arrogance."

Hospitality fair to be attended by nearly 80 representatives

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Hotel Restaurant Travel Administration majors looking for jobs may be able to find one at today's HRTA career fair, which will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium today from 9 to 3:30.

Approximately 80 different companies from across the nation such as Marriot, Disney and Friendly's will be attending the fair.

"For the first time we have information from 10 foreign firms because we have students from Germany and Switzerland," said Jason Magoon, student chairperson and senior HRTA major.

The fair is primarily for graduating seniors, but there are some internships and co–operatives for both six months and the summer. Magoon advises students who are not in the hotel management program to consider attending if they are interested in the hotel and tourism industry.

Today's fair is considered one of the nation's largest fairs in the hospitality industry. In the past more than 1,000 people have attended the fair, said Magoon. Last year roughly 71 firms attended the event.

"A large percent of recruiters are alumni which shows the strength of the program," said Magoon.

Students manage the whole event from setting up the floor plan to catering a luncheon this afternoon for recruiters according to Magoon.

Go UMass

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Minutemaniac–in–training, 3–year–old Nicholas Mone of Amherst cheers on the Minutewomen last night at the William D. Mullins Center. The Minutewomen won over the University of Rhode Island, 76–72. See game story In Sports.

Leader speaks out on 'Planet Q'

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

On June 27, 1969, New York City police busted a small gay bar in Greenwich Village for selling liquor without a license. The bar had been busted before, but on this night something extraordinary happened: the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender patrons fought back.

Ros Magill was living in New York at the time, and in the keynote speech of the "Escape to Planet Q" conference, Feb. 18, she told an audience of 75 people "what life was really like back then."

From 1968 to 1970, Magill was president of the New York chapter of the Daughters of Bilitis, one of the first lesbian groups in the United States. She joined the organization after four years living with the city's intense homophobia.

When Magill first arrived in New York in 1964, she was immediately aware that the city was not willing to embrace her as an out lesbian. In fact, New York City police attacked "faggots," "dykes" and other "undesirable elements" as a matter of course, she said.

Police in the city's Public Morals Section would conduct regular roundups to "clean up" bars, public bathrooms and streets, Magill said.

Often police would assign young officers to hang out around gay bars and pose as male prostitutes. Patrons leaving the bar would be propositioned for sex, and those who accepted would be arrested, said Magill.

Some of the worst crackdowns took place in the city's numerous gay and lesbian bars, Magill said. City police would use every rule in the book to bust bars and close them down, she said.

According to Magill, one of the most common set–ups was for a police officer to enter the bathroom and perform an "inspection." After slipping the bar of soap on the sink into his pocket, the officer would report that the bar was in violation of the city's public health codes. The bar would be closed immediately, Magill said.

People at dance clubs were under constant threat from the police, said Magill, because there were laws against same– sex dancing. Someone at the bar would stand by the door to watch out for the police, Magill said, and when the police were on their way, they would flash the lights to warn the patrons. People all over the club would scatter left and right and assume proper opposite–sex positions, she said.

It was under this extreme pressure that the Stonewall Riots erupted, said Magill. GLBTs from all over the city had been expecting something to happen for months, and when the police raided the Stonewall Inn, they were ready with pamphlets and a plan of action. The riots lasted three days, she said, and GLBTs gathered to fight against the police and take care of the wounded.

The Stonewall Riots ignited GLBTs in New York and across the country to stand up against society and fight for their rights, said Magill. Memberships in organizations like the Mattachine Society and the Daughters of Bilitis went up, and soon the modern GLBT movement was on its way.

Workshops set up for computer illiterate

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Students who are interested in learning the intricacies of computers from software to the Internet can take various workshops offered by the UMass Office of Information Technologies.

"The goal of the workshops is to introduce people and give them enough information to use the various applications," Charles Lyman, associate director of the Office of Information Technologies.

Students do not need any past experience with computers in order to take any of the workshops, Lyman said. He recommends new users start with either the DOS workshop or the Windows workshop.

Within the two–and–a–half hour workshops, students will become familiar with the basic functions of the operating system.

The workshops are on various applications such as Word, a word processor package, and Excel, a spreadsheet package, and there are two different levels. The introductory levels are level one, while level two are more advanced workshops, Lyman said.

Lyman said students do not have to take level one workshops in order to take level two workshops as long as they are familiar with the basics of the software.

The workshops are offered for PC users and Macintosh users as well. Lyman said there are 12 IBM PC compatibles and 11 Macintoshes which limits workshops to 10 to 11 students. Because there is limited space, he advises students to sign up early.

The workshops cost $10, and are open to faculty, and staff as well as students.

Lyman advises against bringing notebooks because students will be given handouts on the software.

Internet Workshops

If students are interested in cruising the information superhighway, the University offers workshops to learn the complexities of the Internet.

Like the personal computer work–

Turn to WORKSHOP, page 2

Campus Police Log

Liquor Law Violations
Feb. 9
John M. Eagan, 19, of Fall River, Mass. was arrested for carrying an alcoholic beverage on Fearing Street.
Feb. 11
Michael R. MacGinnis, 19, of Medfield, Mass. was arrested on Sunset Avenue for operating a vehicle under the influence.
Feb. 12
Mosheer H. Rashid, 19, of Springfield, Mass. was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for transporting alcoholic beverages as a minor, operating a vehicle with defective equipment and giving a false name to an officer.
Feb. 14
Matthew J. Skubic, 18, of Ramsey, N.J. was arrested on Kennedy Road for falsifying his age to purchase alcohol and transporting it as a minor.

Larceny
Feb. 15
An individual reported clothing and two compact discs stolen from a room in the John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior
Feb. 16
Sinks on the third and fourth floors of Thatcher Residence Hall were plugged, causing flooding. The case is under investigation.

Injured Person
Feb. 15
An individual who sustained a head injury from a fall was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Suspicious Activity
Feb. 12
An individual in Kennedy Residence Hall was allegedly watching Coolidge Residence Hall with binoculars. The individual was identified and spoken to.
Feb. 14
There was a report of a man in the women's shower area in Cance Residence Hall.
Feb. 15
A group of individuals at the Campus Center protested drug testing in the work place.

Animal Complaints
Feb. 12
A raccoon was reportedly acting unusual in the vicinity of the PVTA bus garage on Governors Drive. The police were unable to find the animal.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Feb. 21

Film — People of the Shining Path. First video to be made by outsiders in the base areas of the revolution. Video includes interviews with members and supporters of the Communist Party of Peru both inside and outside prison. Sponsored by the Maoist Internationalist Movement and the Alliance for Student Power. UMass Campus Center, check information desk for room number, 7 p.m.

Meeting — MASSPIRG will be having its first general meeting to kick off spring campaign on Earth Day 1995: Free the Planet, Higher Education, Hunger and Homelessness. 8 p.m. UMass Campus Center room 174. Information: 5-0199.

Lecture — "Moral Acts, Immoral Times: the Holocaust Rescuers." Rabbi Yechiael Lander, Jewish religious advisor. In conjunction with exhibition entitle: Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block. Free. Amherst College, Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Painting with Plants." Slide lecture by Lynden Breed Miller '60, award-winning public garden designer. Reception following in Lyman Plant House. Free. Smith College, Wright Hall auditorium, 4:30 p.m.

Colloquia — "Gender and Modernism in the Music of Marion Bauer and Rugh Crawford Seeger." Five College Women's Studies Research Center. Free. Mount Holyoke College, Dickinson House Living Room, 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, Feb. 22

Lecture — "Stonewall 25." Part of Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series. Lloyd Pratt, Ph.D. candidate, Brown University. Free. UMass Campus Center room 917. Noon to 1:30 p.m.

Theater — You Could be Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College. Movement-oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Meeting — MASSPIRG will be having its first general meeting to kick off spring campaign on Earth Day 1995: Free the Planet, Higher Education, Hunger and Homelessness. 8 p.m. UMass Campus Center room 174. Information: 5-0199.

Lecture — "Moral Acts, Immoral Times: the Holocaust Rescuers." Rabbi Yechiael Lander, Jewish religious advisor. In conjunction with exhibition entitle: Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block. Free. Amherst College, Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Painting with Plants." Slide lecture by Lynden Breed Miller '60, award-winning public garden designer. Reception following in Lyman Plant House. Free. Smith College, Wright Hall auditorium, 4:30 p.m.

Colloquia — "Gender and Modernism in the Music of Marion Bauer and Rugh Crawford Seeger." Five College Women's Studies Research Center. Free. Mount Holyoke College, Dickinson House Living Room, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Feb. 23

Film — Yiddish Folksingers on Miami Beach. Joel Saxe. Discussion with the director will follow. Free. UMass, Herter Hall room 227. Part of Jewish Film Series. Information: 549-1710.

Film — High and Low. In Japanese with English subtitles. Thriller. Business executive who is financially ruined when he nobly pays ransom money to kidnappers who mistakenly steal his chauffeur's son. Third film in the Akira Kurosawa Film Series sponsored by the Japanese Foundation. Free. Amherst College, Merrill III, 7:30 p.m.

Film — The Beijing Watermelon. English subtitles. Sharp-witted comedy about a Tokyo grocer who becomes involved with a group of penniless Chinese students, with potentially disastrous results. Demonstrates the keen sense of social satire that characterized the best of recent Japanese cinema. Free. Smith College, Sweency Concert Hall, Sage Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Symposium — "Celebration of Learning," W.E.B. Du Bois symposium. Bill Strickland, Michael Thelwell and David Du Bois will present W.E.B. Du Bois the intellectual, the citizen and the world leader. Followed by a plaque presentation by Graduate Student Senate. Free. UMass Campus Center room 163, 11:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

Theater — You Could be Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College. Movement-oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Homeless Women and the State: Scrambling for resources." Free. Smith College, Seelye Hall 201, 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Can Computers Be Free Agents?" UMass, Skinner Hall Lounge, 5:15 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Call UMass Honor Program if interested in attending: 545-2483.

Lecture — "The Roots of Evil, the Roots of Caring: Perpetrators, Bystanders and Heroic Rescuers." In conjunction with exhibition entitle Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block. Free. Amherst College, Converse Assembly Room, 7:30 p.m.

Music — Pianist Garrick Ohlsson, recipient of the 1994 Avery Fisher Prize presents Chopin program. Music at Amherst Series. $16/$10, discounts for students. Amherst College, Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Reservations: 542-2195.

Notices

Yearbook photos — Senior photo session will continue through Feb. 24. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule an appointment.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the Umoja Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrone Johnson, 546-6787.

■ workshop

continued from page 1

shops, students are advised to take introductory workshops before they take the advanced workshops, said Doris Peterson, manager of a division of Office of Information Technologies.

"We assume people understand e-mail when they take other workshops," Peterson said.

Exploring the Internet is an advanced workshop where students can learn such features of the Internet as telnet which allows users to connect to remote computers and gopher which is a large database.

The third workshop offered is an advanced e-mail workshop which teaches students how to send text files created on personal computers as e-mail using Procomm Plus for PCs and Microphone for Macintoshes.

The basic e-mail workshop is free while the advanced Internet courses are $10. All workshops are one session, and the Internet workshops range from one-and-a-half hours to three hours.

If students are interested in the programs, they should contact the Office of Information Technologies.

BE A R.A.
HELP SHAPE YOUR
PIECE OF THE WORLD
For more informaiton please contact the Baker Area Office at 545-1333

Applications for Fall 1995 RESIDENT ASSISTANT Positions Now Being Accepted.
Applications Available in Cluster Offices
For PRIORITY CONSIDERATION applications must be turned in to the ORCHARD HILL/CENTRAL AREA OFFICE, 831 BAKER HOUSE, by 5:00 PM WEDNESDAY, MARCH 15, 1995. (Applications will continue to be accepted until all positions have been filled.)
Applicants are encouraged (but not required) to attend one of the following information sessions:
Tuesday, February 21st 7:00pm Field Classroom
Wednesday, February 22nd 12:00pm 165-9 Campus Center
Wednesday, February 22nd 7:30pm Emerson Classroom
Monday, February 27th 7:00pm McNamara lounge

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ELECTIONS
MARCH 14 - 15th
NOMINATIONS PAPERS ARE NOW AVAILABLE FOR THE OFFICE OF TRUSTEE AND PRESIDENT OF THE STUDENT BODY, AREA GOVERNMENTS AND HOUSE COUNCILS
NOMINATIONS WILL BE OPEN FROM FEBRUARY 21 - MARCH 6th @ 5PM
Nomination Papers Can Be Picked Up At The SGA Office 420 Student Union From 11AM - 5PM

COMPLETE OPTOMETRY EXAMS AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Program.
We offer. . .
. . .quality, comprehensive vision care at a reasonable cost.
courteous, friendly, professional staff.
. . .reduced rates on eye glasses at participating opticians with a complete optometric examination at the University Health Services for Student Plan members.
. . .a comprehensive contact lens service.
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.
uhs EYE CARE PROGRAM
"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."
Convenient hours and on campus location.
call 549-2671 X244

Criminal Defense/ Personal Injury
Class of '87 Atty. Dean E. Goldblatt
413-731-8262
1441 Main St. • Springfield,MA

Write for Women's Issues
Contact Lisa Greenfield or Colleen Shanahan
113 Campus Center
545-3500

MORE TREADMILLS! MORE STAIRMASTERS! MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

HOW TO GET YOUR JOLLIES AT COLLEGE 24 HOURS A DAY.
Open a tab at a diner. Belgian waffles and cheese fries with gravy are delicious, regardless of the hour.
Visit a local court of law. Plenty of seating, unique conversation and drama that improves the later it gets.
Be the gym night janitor. Work out at your leisure and never wait in line for lat pulldowns or the erg.
Get a Citibank Classic card. For your peace of mind, operators are on call 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOU.
To apply, call 1 800 CITIBANK

ROBERT BARRETT / COLLEGIAN

On top of the world
The view from the top of the W.E.B. Du Bois library stretches for miles, encompassing the living areas of Central and Orchard Hill.

Prof selected for job with NIH

By Emily Gold
Collegian Correspondent

The National Institute of Health (NIH) has selected a University of Massachusetts professor to review research grant applications.

Philip Nasca, a public health professor who teachers epidemiology, was chosen by the NIH to the organization's Epidemiology and Disease Control Study Section 2 division of research grants, according to Nasca. Epidemiology is the study of epidemic diseases.

During his term on the review committee, which runs through June 1998, Nasca will help decide which epidemiology projects to fund.

"It's the responsibility of the group to review grants, to give them a priority scale," Nasca said. "These grants basically involve a variety of different disease groups people may study."

Nasca said the disease groups include chronic diseases, environmental health and infectious diseases.

Nasca, whose field specialty is cancer epidemiology, teaches "Principles of Epidemiology" in the public health department this semester.

He also teaches a similar course at UMass Medical School in Worcester. He is planning and developing a new course in public health survival, which will be implemented at this Universtity.

Reviewers are chosen for the position by the director of the NIH following an initial nomination process, according to Mack Stiles, Scientific Review Administrator of the study section for which the new reviewer will check over grants.

"It's a process that evolves through knowing them as scientists," Stiles said. "[Nasca] has reached a status that he is recognized in the community as a scientist."

Stiles said Nasca's field specialty makes him qualified to review grants for this study section.

"He knows cancer epidemiology," Stiles said. "That is the kind of research grant applications we review."

Members of the review committee, all of whom are epidemiologists, are assigned to be the primary or secondary reviewer of those grants that deal with their field specialty, he said.

This ensures that enough expertise exists within the group to make fair decisions, according to Nasca.

"Every effort is made to give each person submitting the grant a very fair review," he said.

Nasca will meet with the entire group three times each year for about three to four days to go over all the grants, he said.

"It takes a lot of preparatory work before the meeting," the professor said. "The meeting is the climax."

According to him, he group reviews about 300 grants each year.

In reviewing grants, the scientific benefits and the uniqueness of the project help decide which applications will receive funding.

"We evaluate them based upon originality," he said.

Protection of human subjects, confidentiality of data, budget and an effort to include women and minorities in research are also aspects of grant applications that reviewers consider, according to Nasca.

"There is clearly an interest on the part of the National Institute of Health to make sure women and minorities are included in research," he said.

Nasca said he will be exposed to new epidemiology research while on the review committee, and that he will bring this data back to students.

"I will be there reviewing what is the cutting edge of research," the professor said. "That will improve the quality of research that I do."

His position will also benefit the University since he will learn the best techniques in grant writing, he said.

"You learn what sells and what does not sell," Nasca said. "Hopefully, things that I will learn will improve our competitiveness."

Nasca said he was invited by the NIH to hold the position because of his solid publication record, his success in attaining grants, and his past experience reviewing grants.

"It's pretty competitive," he said. "They were pleased with the quality of my reviews."

According to Nasca, the review committee is a public service. It helps ensure that tax money for grants is not spent for political reasons.

"The grants are chosen on the basis of their scientific quality," he said. "That is a service to the community in an indirect way."

Researchers apply for NIH grants since the organization provides more money than other groups that give funding, and since the NIH is held in high esteem, Nasca said.

"Funding from this group carries a certain level of prestige," he said. "The NIH, while a government organization, does high quality science."

"It's the responsibility of the group to review grants, to give them a priority scale. These grants basically involve a variety of different disease groups people may study."

New signs to help visitors get around

By Reid Frazier
Collegian Correspondent

Getting around Amherst will be made easier thanks to a new sign program to be installed by summer.

The Amherst American with Disabilities Act (ADA) signage project will erect 38 directional signs around town by June 30 to make travel easier and facilities more accessible, according to Jonathon Tucker, senior planner for the town of Amherst.

The project will consist of five types of signs: vehicular stack signs, pedestrian stack signs, public kiosks, historic site signs and building identification signs, according to Tucker. Signs will include maps of downtown and will direct pedestrians and motorists to the nearest parking lots, town buildings and historic monuments.

"The new signs will also help tourists and parents who are visiting to find their way around town," said Constance Kruger, community development planner.

The town is paying an archiectural firm $4500 to design the system. This sum is "incredibly low" considering the size of the job, Tucker said.

Amherst was awarded a $30,000 Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) from the state to make the downtown as accessible for handicapped and disabled people, Tucker said. The signs will be in accordance with the ADA requirements for accessibility.

Using braille, wheel-chair level signs, as well as building identification signs with raised lettering and graphics will make the signs accessible to the disabled, according to Tucker.

The raised lettering will enable the sight-impaired to "read" the signs with their fingers.

According to the town's summary sheet, signs will have white lettering with dark backgrounds, using four colors for the background: dark green for parking and regulatory, dark purple for Amherst center, maroon for historic sites and dark blue for destination signs.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR 78 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Rd., Northampton, MA 586-4444
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly Weekend Rates
• We Rent to All Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Companies

University Barbers (Campus Center) 549-0123
Hours: Weekdays 8 am - 4:45 pm Sat. 8 am - 3:00 pm No Appointment Necessary

Spring Break
Cancun $399
Jamaica $439
Florida $129
Carroll Travel # 256-8931
TRISHA # 549-6016
STS STUDENT TRAVEL SERVICES 120 N. Aurora St. Ithaca, NY 14850 Toll free 1-800-648-4849

Get Involved! with campus health issues SHAB*
• Sponsor health projects
• Represent student health care concerns
• Review UHS budget
• Serve on UHS Search Committees
• Meet other students interested in health care
COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT
Meeting: Wednesday, February 22
Where: UHS Room 302
Time: 6:00 - 7:00 P.M.
*Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971) University Health Services
"I appreciate my lists of French Poodles and Nell Diamond in only 27 days!!! "And it's all because of you Mass Daily Collegian" "But the extra time and $ also, your grandmother'll Quickly!"

The Collegian Congratulates
#1 Craig Brody
#2 Jen Geagan
#3 Eric Abenaim
For outstanding performance in advertising sales
ALSO CONGRATULATIONS TO THE ENTIRE ADVERTISING STAFF FOR SURPASSING THEIR TEAM GOAL!
If YOU want to join this winning advertising staff as an Account Executive please come to the Collegian at 113 campus center (in the basement)

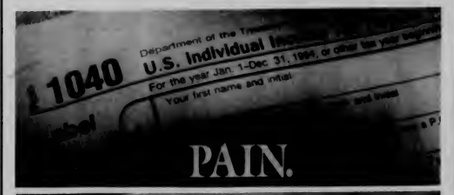
SCHEDULE CONFIRMATIONS FOR SPRING 1995

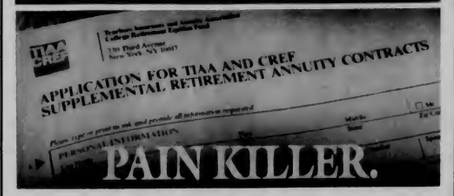
Starting Tuesday, February 21, the Registrar's Office will be mailing to your local address your course schedule for Spring 1995. It will be accurate as of Friday, February 17 and it will include any five-college registrations as of that date.

If you have any questions about the courses you are registered for or do not receive your schedule by Friday, March 3, please contact the Registrar's office to verify your schedule.

If you have registration problems and/or never attended certain classes, please contact your Undergraduate Dean's Office as soon as possible.

PRINCIPLES OF SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING





For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.
Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pre-tax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.
As the nation's largest retirement system, we offer a wide range of allocation choices—from TIAA's traditional annuity, with its guarantees of principal and interest, to the seven diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity. What's more, our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.
To find out more, call our planning specialists at 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide-calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.
Call today—it couldn't hurt.
TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™
*Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1994. Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., Lipper-Directors' Analytical Data, 1994 (Quarterly). CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 5509 for a CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.
© 1995 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gainey Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni L. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Hernan Ruzemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessika Taverna News Editor Marty Puppas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Waiting for God to give us the happy pill

E.C. Thomas

"Our father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name ..." My mind began to wander. I have so much work. I wonder what everyone's up to right now? Probably sleeping. Should I be saying this along with everyone? Do they notice that I'm not saying anything? "Give us this day our daily bread ..." I hope our neighbors fed the cats. They must be going crazy right now. Thesis. I have to work on my thesis. "Forgive us our trespasses ..." God, I'm so bored — oh damn, I probably shouldn't have said that ... or that either. What am I doing here? "... and the glory of heaven. Amen."

The shifting of people sitting in their pews woke me up from my tossing and turning head. The reverend asked for a moment of silent prayer. Umm ... well, God, please help me finish my thesis on time, so I can graduate. And please let me get a job ... that pays really well. And please let it be in San Francisco ... and if you could send Ed McMahon to my door that would be really great.

I looked carefully out of the corner of my eye; I wanted to see if everyone had their eyes closed. I wanted to see what they all looked like, silently bowing their heads. They're probably all praying for Jo-Bob to recover from the tractor accident or asking for Grandma's bank not to foreclose on the farm. Here I am, asking to graduate and get a job. I started feeling really bad. I'd better say something "good." Well, God, thank you for not blowing up my plane on the way here (if you could do it on the way home, too that would be great). Ummm ... thanks for our cat's health, thanks for my friends, thanks for my little car ... please look after my dad and all that — blah, blah, blah. I hope that was o.k. Oh, if Bailey's up there with you, give him a milkbone for me. This is insane, why am I even bothering?

The 80-year-old organ lady hunched over and started creasing the page of her hymnal book. After what seemed like years, her feeble hands found the keys and the church choir began singing. There was a soprano or two who sounded like angels in heat. I started feeling guilty for noticing.

I looked at my dad sitting next to me and wondered what he was thinking about. He just stared straight ahead at the altar. In fact, everyone was just staring straight ahead with funny grins on their faces. I wonder what they're all thinking about. I wonder if anyone's thinking about sex. Certain images began to pop into my head. Stop it. What am I doing? Of all the things, you're in church, try to behave yourself. God, I sound ridiculous. I'm having entire conversations with myself. Wow, what if someone is really listening. I sound like a paranoid idiot.

The reverend began his sermon. It was about accepting change. I started getting really self-conscious, and tried desperately to clear my mind. But then I only started thinking about how I had to clear my mind otherwise I'd really be going to Hell, which made the process even more difficult. My mind escaped me. I really don't get this. Everyone's singing their Hallelujahs and amens and love your neighbors, but they're all so intolerant of people. Well, not all I guess — but a good many. And now he's spewing something off about "change" — change is simply not in the Christian church's vocabulary.

Images of Pat Buchanan and Jesse Helms preaching their agendas entered my head. Please, "change?" Yeah, right. This is all so hypocritical. If they had it their way all gays would be banished from the earth, victims of AIDS would be quarantined and the only art hanging on the walls would be portraits of the Virgin Mary and Jesus on the cross to remind us of our sins.

The reverend asked if there were any announcements. People called out upcoming surgeries, a few recoveries and a couple of birthdays. All of a sudden a whole dialogue began. People were laughing and throwing out one-liners like they were at a comedy club, and the reverend was the comic ... only he had a choir sitting behind him. Wow ... did God come down and give them all happy pill? By this point I was really confused. Everyone was so nice, and concerned about everyone else. I started feeling bad that I had just rambled off such cynical thoughts. These people took God seriously, but with a grain of salt, and some humor.

The service continued, and I tried to pay better attention. I started to come to the conclusion that maybe Christianity wasn't all that bad, people like Phil Gramm and Newt Gingrich just give it a bad name.

I looked over at my dad. All my life he had preached to me to accept people for who they were and never judge another — and he believed whole heartedly in God. Believing in God shouldn't be a branding of intolerance. It's a shame that preachers have become so political, it's only serving to destroy people's faith in the church. And church isn't such a bad thing. Believing that something or someone is watching over us is kind of nice ... it gives hope.

The service finally ended. As we walked down the aisle to the back door, I looked behind me at the stain glass window that hovered over the altar. I'm sorry for not paying much attention ... and not having much faith in all this. But if you are really there ... I meant that part about my dad's health ... Thanks. I turned back around. My dad looked down at me and smiled.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Columnists

Last Friday's blurb about the columnist headshots was incorrect. Due to the wisdom of UMass and the changing o' the days that comes about from a state holiday, we didn't realize that Tuesday was actually Monday. Go figure.

To rectify this dastardly situation, we will instead be holding a three-hour photo shoot on Thursday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom. If you are a columnist, weekly or biweekly, or a regular contributor, come on down.

If there are any questions, please call the editorial desk between now and then, 545-3491. We won't promise to have all the answers, but by golly we'll give it our best shot.

Enjoy your Monday (or is it Tuesday?)

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

I JUST REMEMBERED! I GOT MYSELF AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY!
YOU DO?
THEY WERE HANDING OUT ADDRESSES TO THE HOMELESS, SO I SNAPPED ONE UP!
WHAT A GREAT IDEA! A PLACE WHERE PROSPECTIVE EMPLOYERS CAN FIND US! DO YOU POST A RESUME?
YUP! NO NIBBLES YET!
THAT'S ODD— WHAT'S YOUR ADDRESS?
LUNATIC @ STREET LEVEL.

Israel, PLO must learn compromise

Jacob W. Michaels

There is a vicious cycle in the Middle East today. In fact, it is a deadly cycle.

Palestinians and Israelis are engaged in a fight that seems endless, while at the same time each government says they are formally at peace.

As Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said recently, "This conflict is between two peoples fighting over the same piece of land, the same territory."

And the fight has been bloody. A year ago an Israeli settler massacred some 40 Muslims praying in a Mosque in Hebron. Palestinians have set off bombs, killing themselves, and as many Israelis as they possibly can take with them. A little more than a month ago, 22 Israelis were killed by such a suicide bomber while waiting for a bus. More than 50 Israelis have died since the peace accords between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel were signed.

Yet, people on both sides seem not to care about the deaths. The grave site of Baruch Goldstein, who attacked the Muslims as they prayed, has been turned into a shrine where people pray in his honor.

The brother of the Palestinian suicide bomber said he felt sad that his brother was dead. Then, he said, he thought of all the Israelis that died and he was happy again.

With this attitude, the killing cycle will continue, and it is only a matter of time before fundamentalists strike again.

A Palestinian extremist will kill some Israeli citizens, the Israeli government will attempt to crack down on the terrorists, the extremists will attack again as revenge for the crackdown, and the cycle has begun again.

The co-dependence of the two groups on each other makes matters worse. Israel depends on the Palestinians for labor and the Palestinians depend on their Israeli jobs for money. Yet this constant mingling makes it easy for terrorists to cross into each other's territories and inflict what damage they are capable of. This results in the closing of borders which only hurts both groups. Yet, if the borders are left open then people are killed in these suicide attacks.

So how can the vicious cycle end? The Israel/PLO peace treaty is not the means, no matter how noble an attempt. The reason it won't work is that there are both Palestinians and Israelis who are opposed to the plan, and who have done everything they can to derail it.

As Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said at a recent Middle East summit, "What do you want from me? Hamas is threatening me, too." Last year, Arafat was thrown out of the funeral of a Palestinian terrorist, his trademark kaffiyeh knocked off his head.

While Rabin has not been bodily threatened, Israeli settlers are upset as they would have to move from their homes if the land were given for the Palestinian state.

There is no easy answer to the problems in the Middle East. Both people want the same land, yet neither wants to give it up. Somehow the groups must learn to work together. And both groups must work together to stop the extremists on both sides from destroying the plan to give a safe and long life to all the citizens of the Middle East.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

Self-confident even in our stupidity

A.J. Stewart

Humans suffer from a chronic need to feel superior. Not only in relation to other forms of life, but also to each other. Our criteria is varied. Sometimes we imagine that we are smarter than our peers, or stronger, or more beautiful. We claim that we are kinder, funnier, more interesting.

We all use different standards (the ones we excel at, usually) to determine our worth, our importance. And when we can't find logical reasons to put ourselves above others, we resort to foolishness. We say that Whites are better than Blacks, or straights are better than gays. We believe Christians superior to Muslims, or vice versa. Anything at all we can muster to retain a feeling of mastery. But the only plausible explanation for making others feel inferior is to generate a feeling of superiority.

Racism is natural. That is a hard statement to accept. Our environment may very well dictate the particular groups or races that are traditionally discriminated against, but we are born as people who hate. That it is natural does not, however, make it excusable. There are plenty of natural urges we must learn to ignore and control. It is a part of being human that we have trouble accepting those who are "better" than we are. We frequently feel the need to create ridiculous rationales to lower the value of others.

But are there any appropriate criteria for a feeling of superiority? The self-esteem movement in our educational system has tried to develop our egos. It has worked; we feel great about ourselves. Recent surveys of fourth, sixth and eighth graders showed that America's children had the highest degree of confidence in their math and science skills worldwide, while their actual performance lagged behind many Asian and European nations.

Finding a good measurement of a person's utility will help in deciding the leaders of democratic institutions. Should we look to the intelligentsia for a body of people to rule? We could start our search by reviewing the membership of Mensa, the society of geniuses. To become a member, you need to demonstrate an I.Q. of 140 or above, a level that is in the highest 2 percent of the population. But before we turn our governments over to these folks, one might be curious to learn what they think.

The Los Angeles chapter's newsletter included many policy suggestions over the past few months. Articles contained an advocacy of the concept of a "master race" and a plan was offered to "humanely dispatch" the mentally infirm. What is the newsletter's cure for homelessness, one of the most complicated and pervasive of urban ills? "Homeless people should be done away with, like abandoned kittens."

We could use wealth as a marker of importance, although some of the richest people are gangsters or athletes. The ability to generate large revenues cannot possibly be our standard and judge of worth. Is Deion Sanders better than your mother? Before you answer that, remember who changed all those diapers and gave you soup when you were sick. All Deion does is dance.

What should be our measure? Do we use beauty? There is always plastic surgery. Strength? Anabolic steroids. How about kindness? There is always ... Hmmm, perhaps that is an answer. I can't imagine it being artificially manufactured. You can't buy or sell it, and kindness can be easily determined. If only someone is willing to take the time to find out a person's character. Maybe we can find ways to determine how well we are living life, how we measure up with others. Perhaps the problem is we are too impatient to find the answer. Or perhaps we don't really want to know the truth. We are too comfortable basking in our self-determined greatness.

A.J. Stewart is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Bigotry threatens mosaic of campus

To the editor:

As UMass students we are constantly reminded of the theme "celebrate diversity," and that we are all members of the mosaic that is UMass Amherst. The actions of certain people have cracked our mosaic, they have marred our existence as students on this campus. The administration has tolerated abject bigotry for far too long.

We cannot continue to preach diversity and understanding while practicing hatred and intolerance. We must make clear to the administration that we will not tolerate the events of the past week. UMass students have had their rights violated through inaction, and the administration has effectively revoked their rights.

In response to Taylor Lincoln's "Protest ignoring deeper problems" the proposed reaction to this problem is not a panacea, nor was it intended to be. The termination of Emily Tosloski would foster greater understanding of the situation. Tosloski's termination would send a message, in no uncertain terms that this sort of behavior will not be condoned. This is not to "sweep the problem under the rug," but it is a start. If an object tears away at the fabric that unites us all, then that object must be removed.

If we continue to accept people that impede our growth, that obstruct us from realize multiculturalism, then we must accept the consequences. Tosloski must accept the consequences of her statements, despite the era in which she came of age.

We must stand firm in our resolve: that we as students have the right to be safe from both verbal assault and physical assault. We refuse to stand idle while the actions of racists turn our melting pot into a seething cauldron.

Kola Alokunde
Southwest

Sacrifice needed to achieve goals

To the editor:

It was rather disheartening to read the letter entitled "Dining Hall Worker Responds," by Jennifer Stark. While she felt "sympathy for the racial comment directed to Ron Dottin at the Franklin Dining Hall," she denounces the protest at the dining commons. By shutting down the D.C., she complained of food being thrown away, employees being sent home, and "making it harder for innocent students to get by." The reason why there was a protest was because Dottin was 'an innocent student' victimized by racism. It's obvious that Stark can only 'sympathize' for Dottin, rather than 'understand' how it feels to be degraded by racism. Being non-colorless, I'm appalled to think that racism should take a backseat. Why should Dottin and fellow non- colorless students contribute to pay for Emily Tosloski's salary when she represents the very thing I call ignorance, which breeds racism. I wonder whether Stark has ever been a 'direct' victim of racism here at UMass? Stark's final comment, "by the way, racists don't solely reside in Franklin Dining Hall. Just take a look around you." I don't need to 'look' Ms. Stark, because racism is not something you 'look at,' it's something you feel.

Yoon Park
Amherst

Accusations against police unjustified

To the editor:

As one of the witnesses to the Thursday night attack of an Asian student on campus, I feel required to respond to the portion of Prasad Venugopal's "letter" published in Wednesday's Collegian, which deals with that event.

". . .[L]ast Thursday's physical assault on an Asian student near Memorial Hall show[s] that while the campus police are not 'investigating' racism assaults, they are engaged in a few of their own."

Huh?

Prasad Venugopal was not present for the attack, nor was he there to observe the police response but he feels qualified to make conclusions and pass judgements. The conclusions and judgements I made from being there were that the UMass Police responded quickly and acted professionally.

The question that keeps representing itself it: If the UMass police are racist as suggested, why did they make an arrest? Members of the great Global White Conspiracy never arrest their own.

Venugopal's logic is at the very least irritating, in that it starts from a faulty premise — the UMass Police are racist because they arrested a White man for the attack on an Asian man.

That racism exists, I have no doubt. What I saw and heard of Thursday night was more proof than I cared to witness. I also do not care to witness students wade through blood up to their armpits because a panjandrum such as Prasad Venugopal sensed a media opportunity for self- aggrandizement and used it to whip everyone into a frenzy.

Alex Dering
Northampton

Developing Nations

Tuesday, February 21, 1995

The Unmasking of Marcos

How a rebel leader came to life in the Xochimilco campus 'Activism as a sport'

By Ilan Stavans
Special to the Collegian

Shortly before deploying tanks and artillery to Chiapas, Mexico's President Ernesto Zedillo Ponce de León, in a speech on public television and as part of a new strategy to debunk the public appeal of the Ejército Zapatista de Liberación Nacional, unmasked the true identity of Subcomandante Marcos. He recognized him as Rafael Sebastián Guillén Vicente, a 37-year-old college professor born in the Gulf cost city of Tampico, the son of a furniture salesman ald a product of Jesuit education.

Apparently Guillén had moved to the nation's capital as an adolescent. He had been a prize-winning sociology student awarded the Gabino Barrera medal for his outstanding performance. He enrolled at Universidad Nacional Autónoma de Mexico (UNAM), a mammoth-size public institution designed for the poor that catered some 30,000 students in the late '70s. And after graduation he became part of the faculty of the radical Xochimilco-campus of Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana (UAM).

The campaign to discredit the Subcomandante

Guillen's identity had been the subject of innumerable rumors for many months and the picture Zedillo offered was one a large part of the Mexican public was not attracted to: the dangerous terrorist. Given Subcomandante Marcos's mass appeal, dangerous is clearly not an adjective many would attach to him. The weapons that Marcos and his army is small and unprepared.

But Zedillo's profile was designed to create fear. He purposely made Guillén resemble Abimael Guzmán, the now-imprisoned Peruvian leader of the Maoist movement Shining Path, known among his followers simply as Presidente Gonzalo.

By capturing Guillén, Zedillo obviously wanted to enjoy a raise in popularity similar to Alberto Fujimori, Peru's elected president, who in 1993 managed to put Guzman behind bars and strike a strong blow against his nation's most fearful enemy. Subcomandante Marcos, like the head of Shining Path, had vanished from public life, distanced from his family and friends, disappeared into the Lacandón jungle, only to reemerge a decade later as a charming freedom-fighter.

And like Guzman, Guillén had shaped his political views and writing skills while at a government sponsored university.

Not surprisingly, while the international media focuses on the Zapatistas, Zedillo's crackdown has had another major target: students, faculty and the administration at UAM's Xochimilco campus.

As reported in Spanish television, professors are reportedly under arrest and in hiding, and the school is under heavy surveillance. According to government sources, arms were found in two houses, one in Mexico City and the other in Veracruz, which suggests the Zapatistas were ready to spread their insurgency across the country. Which means they had tentacles everywhere, particularly among members of the nation's bus-drivers union, among Cuathemoc Cardernas' Partido de la Revolucion Democratica, and among the UAM population.

Marcos' birthplace: UAM's Xochimilco Campus

Subcomandante Marcos' rhetoric is indeed typical of the Xochimilco campus. Since last February, his communiques sent to the press, often described as post-modern, mix fiction with reality. He enjoys quoting Gabriel García Márquez, Carlos Monsivais and Octavio Paz, writes letters with a thousand addenda and post-scripts, irreverently shows his buttocks to journalists, and knows his best, most fearful soldiers have no weapons but TV cameras.

Consequently, he managed to turn the Chiapas uprising into a theatrical event, full of glare, sarcasm and humor, which eventually exasperated the Mexican political elite.

Life at the Xochimilco campus

His enchanting, unconventional style was common practice at UAM, where I was a student at the time Guillén was around. We frequently crossed paths in hallways and cafeterias and, although I didn't, some of my colleagues took class with him, commending his sharp intelligence and lucid verbosity.

Well known as a brooding center of Marxist, pro-Cuba, pro-Sandinista activity, the institution was created in the early '70s by Mexico's ruling party, Partido Revolutionario Institucional (PRI). Since the cathartic 1968 massacre in Tlatelolco Square had been a result of massive student concentration at UNAM, the regimes of Adolfo Diaz Ordaz and Luis Echeverria Alvarez decided to decentralize the gigantic institution by building a new university divided into three campuses, each in a different corner of the city.

Xochimilco immediately superseded UNAM in anti- government militancy. It became a magnet for subversive artists, future guerrilla fighters and sharp political thinkers. The place was known for its progressive educational methods. Fields of study frequently lost their boundaries. The goal was not only to make us sensitive to the nation's poverty and unjust government, but encourage action.

Friends would often take trimesters off to travel to distant regions and live with the aboriginal population: some would eventually come back but many wouldn't, vanishing into a new identity, a new life.

Finding links between political theory and activism was a sport. We emulated the anti-psychiatric movement and often were expelled from asylums and mental institutions, where we did field work, for allowing patients to go free. I, for one, worked with a urban priest devoted to homeless kids, who believed he needed to live with them in the dumps, to commit acts of vandalism and take drugs with them in order to enter their universe and help them from within.

It was an exciting, if contradictory place. In spite of the wealthy upbringing of some of our teachers, they would encourage us to travel to the Yucatán peninsula, to the states of Guerrero and Oaxaca, to agitate peasants. Our idols were Ernesto "Che" Guevara, Antonio Gramsci and Herbert Marcuse. The faculty was composed of émigré Argentive psychoanalysts and other disenfranchised Latin American intellectuals.

What's more we were aware that the PRI perceived our agitation, our animosity as productive. In fact, it wanted our hatred. The rationale was clear: if adolescents in the Third World are always full of anti-government feeling, the government should provide a secluded space to let them function. They'll scream, they'll organize, but since their link to the outside world will be kept to a minimum, nothing will come out of it.

Indeed, President Echeverria is alleged to have once said that to be a Marxist before age 20 is crucial to one's intellectual formation, but to continue to be one afterwards is foolish and could be deadly.

The Chiapas uprising: larger than Mexico itself

Mexicans have never perceived the Chiapas uprising as an isolated event. Deeply rooted in the centuries-old unhappiness of aboriginal cultures in the southern region, its wide support signaled important links to the other sectors of the population. In fact, it was well known that many Zapatista leaders were "foreigners," white urban intellectuals attached to Nicaragua's Sandinistas and to left-wing groups within the country.

Zedillo's unmasking of Subcomandante Marcos has been carefully composed: Guillen is made to be an isolated case of anti-government anger with strong violent instincts. But he is as much a product of the system as Zedillo himself, also an outstanding student, a one-time shoe shine and newspaper delivery boy who aligned himself with power figures and eventually benefited from a PRI scholarship to enroll in an Ivy-league school north of the Rio Grande.

It's obvious that, to enhance his economic and political policies, the new PRI president has to eliminate his revolutionary counterpart. Long perceived as a weak leader and an unlikely appointee to the nation's highest office, Zedillo needs a coup de maitre to regain the people's confidence and Subcomandante Marcos is an extraordinary scapegoat. Yet, both drank from the very same well.

Ilan Stavans, a novelist and critic, teaches at Amherst College. His books include The Hispanic Condition (Harper Collins) and Tropical Synagogues (Holmes & Meier).

The Collegian would like to thank In These Times and the author for the permission to print this article.

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — An anti-government protestor standing on stilts holds a sign of support for Subcomandante Marcos, leader of the Zapatista rebels, Feb. 11, at Mexico City's main plaza, the Zocalo.

Desde Nicaragua . . . The "new" Sandinismo moves to the right (Barricada, Jan. 1995)

Algerians fight against French imperialism

Islamic group leads struggle for renewed independence

'The battle of Algiers'

By Miguelito Carlos Pequeño
Collegian Correspondent

The Jan. 30 car bombing in Algiers that killed 38 people and wounded 256 caught the attention of the New York Times, but its cover photo drew attention to only a tiny fraction of the blood shed in the past three years in Algeria's civil war. Thousands die every month as Islamic anti-French militants and the comprador regime wage war. The government has France's monetary and military support, but the rebels have the support of the people.

While rightist French opinion clamors against the popularly-backed Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) claiming the front wants to create another Iran, it ignores the very real concerns of the Algerian people who look to the FIS as a better alternative on many issues beyond religion. While the rebels' Islamic agenda is in many ways as patriarchal as the current regime — both sides give women the status of minors (Middle East Report, Jan. 2) — it is still a better alternative than the current compradors who seek nothing but exploiting Algeria's resources to the benefit of the imperialists and a tiny national minority.

The war in Algeria continues despite the rounds of peace talks in Rome. While some observers still hope that the bloodshed — now estimated at 1,000 casualties per week (L'Express, Jan. 19) will end, neither side is keeping its promises made around the diplomatic table. According to L'Express, advertisements in the streets of Algiers from the Islamic Army Group (GIA) — the most militant force in Algeria — warn that those who fight "with the pen" perish "by the two-edged sword."

The GIA and FIS have been at war with the government since 1992 when the government nullified free elections. The anti-French Islamic FIS received huge support in the ballot boxes, winning 47.5 percent of the votes in the first round, su the government cut off that avenue to them. And now, three years and 35,000 deaths later — as reported by L'Express — the French government continues its assistance for the comprador regime.

Security forces fight in almost every province in Algeria. The fighting has perhaps never been greater intensity than the bloody Algerian war of independence. The government uses napalm to eradicate the countryside of Islamic strongholds, even while the fires rage over kilometers of forest to the Tunisian border. According to many witnesses, entire villages have been razed, the harvests destroyed and hundreds of "suspects" have been executed. This reign of terror perpetrated by 40-50,000 troops is deemed necessary to control what the military calls "useful Algeria": the large urban centers and petroleum zones (L'Express, Jan. 5).

Military government invites help from Paris

The Algerian government continues making pleas to France in desperation. One general reports that "Algeria does not have the resources, finances or the morale to persevere long in this way. Even if we suppose there are new means, new arms — France just gave helicopters and night-vision equipment — new methods of struggle, will that stop the violence and guarantee a return to stability?" (L'Express, Jan. 5)

The "eradication" campaigns are reminiscent of de Gaulle's carte blanche for his generals in 1959 at the height of the Algerian war of independence. But this time, the Algerian generals have even less popular support than de Gaulle's troops did. Their only comfort is the all-out support of France. According to the Middle East Report Algeria's former colonizer has been increasing deliveries of sophisticated military equipment to the Algerian state.

France claims that it does not take sides and supports elections. According to France's Foreign Affairs Minister, "The only party that France supports in Algeria is that of democracy." But actions speak louder than words. The justification for continuing aid is that if it were to cut off this aid, which has been the lifeblood of the oppressive regime, it would be supporting the rebel groups. This is of course true in that without France's support, the Algerian government would fall in short order. The French are terrified of Islamic rule in their former colony that would push French imperialist interests out of Algeria. There are doubts that the French would be kicked out entirely (only communist revolutions can do that), but the FIS will surely make business there more difficult and less profitable.

"The Batlle of Algiers"

Paris is very much a part of the war. While French security forces were successful in preventing the GIA high-jacking of a plane said to be headed to explode over the city, the nerves of Parisians were rattled nonetheless. The French are now looking more skeptically at their government's blind support of Algeria's powers that be. But they fear waves of refugees will pour out of Algeria if there is a change in power. The patriotic rallying for keeping Algeria French-controlled that brought de Gaulle to power when the Algerian anti-colonial revolution was raging has morphed into a First World chauvinism that is leaning toward America's more conciliatory approach. America is quietly urging dialogue between the government and the FIS because it realizes that the popular support is insurmountable, according to the Middle East Report. It hopes that the more fundamentalist GIA can be marginalized by opening relations with moderates in the FIS. This is not to say that America cares what the Algerian people want, it just wants to get cozy with Algeria's future rulers in hopes to cheaply salvage what imperialist interests it can.

The FIS has been extremely cautious not to damage U.S. oil facilities in Algeria because American assistance for the government would be a huge force to counter. And because of this tactical imperative, it is difficult to discern what the FIS would do about U.S. imperialism after it gained power.

An Islamic republic in the making

Algerian President Zeroual has promised presidential elections at the end of 1995. Non committal reports say that the GIA has claimed responsibility for the Jan. 30 car bombing, and it will likely be cited as an excuse to delay elections still longer. The GIA, which has taken responsibility for somewhat similar things in the past (although none killed more than five people), has not officially taken responsibility.

The government has every interest in trying to deter support for the revolutionaries at any price and may well be masquerading as its enemies in order to gain even a tiny shred of public support. The consensus in Algeria and internationally is quite sure that its future is Islamic, the Middle East Report acknowledged. The questions remain of when the war will end, how decisively France will be defeated, and how far forward the FIS will take the people. The Islamic program is much weaker than the Marxist one since it does not necessarily incorporate feminism and an understanding of the class struggle into the national struggle.

The Maoist Internationalist Movement contributed information to this article.

Mexico: All out war declared on Zapatistas

Maoist Int. Movement

President Zedillo of Mexico declared all-out war on the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN) and called off peace talks on Feb. 8. This hard line stance led to quick praise from the imperialists and was immediately followed by a large economic bailout aid package of more than $50 billion, mostly from the United States and the International Monetary Fund (IMF). Zedillo has sent more than 50,000 soldiers into Chiapas to wage this war on the EZLN.

Chiapas is bordered by Guatemala on one side and just across this border are thousands of troops from the Guatemalan army (many financed by the Mexican government) cutting off any escape for the Zapatistas. Already the ruling PRI government in Mexico has arrested leaders of the Zapatistas and there is every indication that those arrested are being tortured.

Zedillo claims that this attack on the EZLN is necessary because he has discovered new evidence that "has allowed us to prove that the origin, nature of the leadership, and the purposes of this organization are not popular, nor indigenous, nor from Chiapas." He went on to say, in a speech on Feb. 9 "In order to protect the population, to prevent new illegal and violent acts by the EZLN, the government must immediately assume its constitutional mandate to preserve the safety of all Mexicans and preserve social peace." This "mandate" seems to include attacking all human rights groups in Mexico judging from the property destruction and arrests carried out by the PRI soldiers in the few days after this speech.

These claims by Zedillo are proven false by the 5,000 people who attended the National Democratic Convention Feb. 3 through 5th in support of the national organization that the EZLN initiated. Zedillo is mocked by the huge marches and protests by the people of Mexico, both against the U.S. imperialist bailout aid and in support of the peoples struggles against the government.

However, statements by Mexican supporters of the EZLN suggest that it is a pacifist organization that does not intend to fight an armed struggle for national liberation. Instead the EZLN calls for a national plebiscite on the 26th of February and wishes to continue negotiations with the government of Mexico to achieve liberation through concessions from the imperialists.

MIM believes that there are times when negotiations with the imperialists are useful to demonstrate the bankruptcy of imperialism and to gain concessions from a position of power, but historically it has been demonstrated that laying down arms in favor of negotiations with the imperialists does not lead to national liberation.

The hypocrisy and bloodthirst of the Mexican government has been revealed clearly for the people to see. To sweep away this imperialist disease that murders so many people the only solution is a revolutionary national liberation struggle. Although many people die in armed struggle, many more die of starvation, preventable diseases and murder at the hands of the imperialists.

Submitted by Mike Little on behalf of the Maoist Internanonolist Movement (MIM).

The Movement Internationalist Movement acknowledges Apoyo, the publication of the Mexico Emergency Response Network, February 1995 and the talk given by Luisa Camora, sponsored by the some orgonization.

Arts & Living

Trenchmouth's latest delivers new sounds

TRENCHMOUTH VS. THE LIGHT OF THE SUN
Trenchmouth
Eastwest/Elektra Records

COURTESY MICHAEL HAY

Fred Armisen, Damon Locks, Chris DeZutter and Wayne Montana make up Trenchmouth.

In their attempt to reinvent music as we know it, Chicago's Trenchmouth stand beside No Means No as leaders of the newly emerging genre daringly declared jazz– core. Their latest release, Trenchmouth Vs. The Light Of The Sun combines schizophrenic guitar janglings with unique percussion stylings to create an original, occasionally brilliant, take on modern rock.

"A Prescription Written In Another Language," a wiry, minimal funk based on dexterous bass and drum combinations, is the track which best defines the band's sound. As is the case with several songs on the album, if you can ignore Damon Locks' horrid vocals, the music is instrumentally impressive.

Occasionally, the band's enthusiasm supersedes their art. This is most evident on the frantically energetic "If Bricks Had Wings" and "The Effects of Radiation," on which the opening percussion montage resembles an infant with an uncanny ear for rhythm banging on pots and pans.

The album's lyrics as a whole reflect a disgust for what Locks sees as a world full of machines and automatons lacking passion and dreams. Trenchmouth's innovative music and unusual, if somewhat pretentious, lyrics illustrate their refusal to follow any set prescription or model for success.

Despite the lack of ear–catching melodies or hooks, Trenchmouth's latest is one of those albums that improves with every listen, revealing many rough gems amidst several noble failures. B– (Craig O'Connor)

Trax On Trax Off

MARY LOU LORD EP
Mary Lou Lord
Kill Rock Stars

Street musician. Folk singer. Punk rock girl. Who is the real Mary Lou Lord? A few years ago Lord was performing on the streets of Boston to earn a few extra dollars. Following this she released a cassette on a folk label as well as a three–song single on the Kill Rock Stars, one of the punkest labels around. Just recently she released this eight song self titled EP.

Although indie rock purists have fallen head over heels for her seductive, innocent voice, Lord is a folk singer in the classic sense. Like many folkies such as Pete Seeger and Joan Baez, she would rather cover other people's material than her own. On the new release a mere three of the eight songs are her originals. Among the artists she covers include Daniel Johnston, The Bevis Frond and Matt Keating.

The opening track features an all–star cast including Julianna Hatfield and Brian Dunton (ex–Helium) as they rock through a cover of the Bevis Frond song "The Lights Are Changing."

The highlights of the album are the closing two tracks, "His Indie World" and "Speeding Motorcycle."

The former song pokes fun at the indie rock scene, while the latter is a stunning cover of the Daniel Johnston classic.

It is unfair for Lord to be considered anything but a folk singer. Her roots are obviously Dylan — not the Sex Pistols. In an age where MTV Unplugged is the only place where kids see an acoustic guitar, it is a welcome change to hear a true acoustic artist. A– (Mike Burke)

Write for Women's Issues
Contact Lisa Greenhill or Colleen Quinlan
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Cleo's pop magic marred by aggressive audience

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

LETTERS TO CLEO
Pearl Street
Feb. 16

NORTHAMPTON — When Letters To Cleo took the stage last Thursday night it all seemed innocent enough. The five–piece Boston band would play through a set of poppy tunes, the crowd would bounce, and — whallah — instant fun.

Well, it didn't quite happen that way. As positive proof that people will mosh to anything, the pit that accompanied Letters To Cleo rivaled that of the recent performance by Frank Black, and if you're even vaguely familiar with both of these artists, you can understand that there is something intrinsically wrong with that.

Letters To Cleo churned out about an hour worth of tunes, a large amount from their debut CD Aurora Gory Alice. "Mellie's Comin' Over," "Big Star" and "Rim Shak" were some of the highlights of the show, which lead singer Kay Hanley kicked off by discouraging people to mosh.

Unfortunately, her words didn't seem to have any effect on the sold–out crowd which got progressively more aggressive as the night went on. The heavy moshing seemed to distance the crowd from the band, as after the first few songs, Hanley said very little and each song became just another excuse for the audience to crowd surf.

The band's college radio hit "I See" and their current single "Here And Now" got everyone in the crowd moving but often times the songs bled into one another and failed to take on any individual identity. The attitude of much of the crowd also ruined the show for those there to enjoy the music.

Another local bunch, Gigolo Aunts, preceded Letters To Cleo. Their's was a generic set of rock backed with dada– esque harmonies but without that band's clever arrangements. They filled their set with witty in–between–song banter and 20–second snips of covers, probably hoping no one would notice how boring their originals were. The high point of their set came when they did a dead–on cover of Neil Young's "Cinnamon Girl," if that says anything.

The Gravel Pit opened the show with a lesson in derivative rock that was less interesting than their name.

Peace Corps
on-campus at UMASS
Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 22
7:00 pm
Room 911, Campus Center
For more information, call or visit the UMass Peace Corps Office
12 Draper Hall
UMass Amherst
545-2105

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Wednesday - March 1
(repeated on)
Tuesday - April 25
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass Campus
Room Number Will Be Posted By Campus Center Elevators
I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?
If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234
UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES - UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - AMHERST

MORE TREADMILLS!
MORE STAIRMASTERS!
MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080
460 West St.

BANANARAMA
fabulous frozen YOGURT
HOT Specials on Smooth Nonfat Frozen Yogurt
and
LEMON CHILL Soft Frozen Lemonade
"It's Better than Dell's"
Nonfat Colombo Frozen Yogurt — Buy 1, Get 1 FREE — Good for a small cup or cone — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
"Lemon Chill" Frozen Lemonade — Buy 1, Get 1 FREE — Good for a small cup only — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
FREE Nonfat Fudge Packet — With the purchase of a large cup of Frozen Yogurt — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
One Boltwood Walk (thru the Alley next to Antonio's)
Downtown Amherst • 253-2774

BE A R.A.
HELP SHAPE YOUR
PIECE OF THE WORLD
For more informaiton please contact the Baker Area Office at 545-1333
Applications for Fall 1995 RESIDENT ASSISTANT Positions Now Being Accepted.
Applications Available in Cluster Offices
For PRIORITY CONSIDERATION applications must be turned in to the ORCHARD HILL/CENTRAL AREA OFFICE, B31 BAKER HOUSE, by 5:00 PM WEDNESDAY, MARCH 15, 1995. (Applications will continue to be accepted until all positions have been filled.)
Applicants are encouraged (but not required) to attend one of the following information sessions:
Tuesday, February 21st 7:00pm Field Classroom
Wednesday, February 22nd 12:00pm 165-9 Campus Center
Wednesday, February 22nd 7:30pm Emerson Classroom
Monday, February 27th 7:00pm McNamara lounge

Take a Free Test Drive
LSAT • GRE • MCAT
If you took the test today, how would you score? Come find out.
Take a 2 1/2 or 3 hour test, proctored like the real thing.
Receive computer analysis of your test-taking strengths and weaknesses.
Get strategies from Kaplan teachers that will help you ace the real exam.
Don't miss out on this cost-free opportunity.
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST to reserve your seat today
Tests on campus, call for room number.
KAPLAN

■ women

continued from page 10

after Dayna Smith was fouled while shooting a trey, giving her three foul shots. Smith hit only one of three, keeping the Rams still down by two.

On the next inbounds play, Thomas was fouled immediately with 7.6 seconds left and hit both ends of the one and one to clinch it for UMass.

Tasha King led the Rams with 21 points, including three treys, while Rebecca Bright finished with a double–double, 18 points and 10 rebounds.

"I give Rhode Island all the credit in the world. They played as hard as any team you will find in this whole country," O'Brien said.

***

A relentless full court press and 12 points by freshman Tez Kraft helped the Minutewomen hold the Temple Owls to 12 first half points on their way to a 82–40 shellacking Saturday in the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Owls did not score their first basket until two minutes into the contest, and did not even get into double figures until there was 5:04 left in the half. UMass' press caused 12 first–half turnovers.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

through a big pile–up in front of Lindsay.

UMass' Mike Gaffney and Basaraba traded goals, Gaffney's first collegiate goal. Neil Donovon had a power–play marker at 5:51 to expand the lead to 5–3 early in the third period.

At 10:24 of the third, defenseman Brad Norton took a shot to the face from Lowell's David Dartsch. Norton suffered a concussion, and was down on the ice for over 10 minutes.

Norton was hospitalized and released the next morning; he remains questionable for next weekend's action against Northeastern, as is Jacques.

UMass could not capitalize on the five minute major given to Dartsch. Instead, Donovan and Concanon (to complete the hat trick) scored short–handed goals to put the game away.

"The emotions were so high, but the bottom line is to win the game," Mallen said.

It's set: UMass–BC Dec. 9 at new arena

While Connecticut and Massachusetts still can't seem to come to an agreement to rekindle that local basketball rivalry, the UMass–Boston College rivalry is apparently ready to be revived.

The old rivalry will take place in a new building. Officials from the Shawmut Center in Boston announced Friday that UMass and Boston College will compete in the first ever college basketball game in the new building on Saturday, Dec. 9. The Shawmut Center is slated to open this September.

Officials added that the game is expected to be nationally– televised, but an announcement will come at a later date.

The game, which is expected to be a sellout, would be the largest audience (19,600) ever to watch a college basketball game in New England.

Massachusetts athletic director Bob Marcum was pleased at the announcement.

"We are excited and honored to be able to participate in the first collegiate event in the Shawmut Center," Marcum said. "We hope this can be the beginning of a long and fruitful relationship between the state university and one of the finest new arenas in the country."

The two teams last squared off in 1990, when UMass defeated the Eagles 83–81 in the Abdow's Classic. The Minutemen have won six of the last seven meetings between the two schools.

The two teams have competed 27 times dating back to 1905. Boston College leads the all–time series 15–12.

"Hopefully this game will go a long way toward renewing a great rivalry. At the same time I think it's great for New England college basketball," Massachusetts Coach John Calipari said. "I'm grateful that we were able to put this together and that it will be televised nationally. It's going to be something special for both schools, their alumni and their fans."

— MATT VAUTOUR

■ hoops

continued from page 10

three pointers. Kellogg (11 points) and Carmelo Travieso buried treys, only to be followed by three–pointers by Kiser (12 points) and DeJuan Wheat (team–high 20 points) to make the halftime score 40–34.

The Minutemen started the second half by scoring the first 10 points, capped off by a Donta Bright (13 points) lay–in, to up the lead to 50–34.

Four consecutive made free throws cut the lead to 66–58 with 8:28 to go.

"We played a good basketball game. I'm very pleased with how we played together," Calipari said. "Twenty–one assists means we're passing the ball. You have to admit, that was truly a team effort."

While the loss of Camby in early February hurt the Minutemen, the Cardinals were in a much bigger hole without the likes of Walker.

"I was very proud of my team, I thought they played as hard as they could play," Crum said. "Obviously we were out–manned. Without Samaki Walker, we were hurting in the middle."

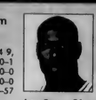
Massachusetts 91, Louisville 76

At the Worcester Centrum

Louisville (18—11)
Kiser 3–6 4–4 12, Rogers 3–10 2–4 9, Osborne 7–14 1–3 17, Sims 4–8 0–1 8, Wheat 6–12 5–8 20, Flynn 2–3 0–0 4, Johnson 0–0 0–0 0, Smith 1–1 0–0 2, Dantzler 1–3 1–2 4. Totals 27–57 13–22 76.

Massachusetts (20—8)
Dingle 3–5 2–2 8, Weeks 2–4 4–6 8, Roe 9–16 3–6 21, Padilla 4–9 0–0 9, Kellogg 4–6 2–2 11, Bright 6–7 1–1 13, Camby 7–10 1–1 16, Travieso 2–8 0–0 5, Norville 0–0 0–0 0. Totals 37–66 13–18 91.

Halftime — UMass 40–34. 3–point— Louisville 9–21 (Kiser 2–5, Rogers 1–1, Osborne 2–4, Wheat 0–1, Dantzler 1–2), UMass (Padilla 1–4, Camby 1–1, Kellogg 1–2, Roe 0–1, Travieso 1–5). Rebounds — UMass 39 (Roe 8), Louisville 29 (Osbourne, Sims 6). Asists UMass 21 (Kellogg 5), Louisville 12 (Wheat 6). Total fouls — UMass 18, Louisville 18. Attendance 13,758



Lou Roe – 21 points, & rebounds

Highlights...

Led by the inside play of Lou Roe (21 points) and Marcus Camby (16 points), the Minutemen led through most of the game. Massachusetts exploited their size advantage to outscore the Cardinals 69–42 inside and scored 13 more points off of second chance opportunities junior Donta Bright added (13 points and seven rebounds) and sophomore Tyrone Weeks were also strong ... Roe moved into second place on UMass' all–time with 1740 career points passing Lorenzo Sutton.

Camby's presence key in victory

Minutemen back in sync now that star center has returned

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — After George Washington defeated Massachusetts on Feb. 4, in his elation over the victory, coach Mike Jarvis tried to downplay Marcus Camby's absence.

"I don't think that Camby's presence would have necessarily changed the outcome of the game," he said.

If Sunday's 91–76 win over Louisville was an indication of what Camby can bring to the lineup, Jarvis was wrong.

"He means a difference obviously," said Massachusetts coach John Calipari. "People in other programs say, 'They're just missing Marcus. They're still the same team.' Obviously we know that's not the case."

The Louisville game was only Camby's second since returning from his hamstring injury. In his absence, the Minutemen were out of sync, going 1–2, with the lone victory coming against a subpar Southwestern Louisiana team. The team dropped two close games to George Washington during Camby's absence — games that despite what Jarvis said, Camby could have changed.

When he checked into the game less than two minutes in, the Worcester Centrum gave him a standing ovation. Less than a minute later, with the shot clock running out, Camby stepped back and knocked down his first career three– pointer.

"It was spur of the moment," Camby said. "I had it in my repertoire, I just never used it."

Less than five minutes into the second half, Camby hobbled off the floor with tightness in his injured hamstring. "It got real tight," he said. "I almost couldn't walk. I felt like I needed a good stretch before I went back out there."

After stretching, Camby returned and continued his strong play.

Camby was admittedly not at his best, estimating his leg's health at only "90 percent." But what is scary to most opposing coaches is the prospect of facing the sophomore All–America candidate at full strength after seeing what he can do at partial strength.

"Marcus played well," Calipari said. "But we all know that he's better than he played today. When he gets back into playing, he'll be fine."

The game had a chance to be a battle of two talented young centers. Samaki Walker is one of the nation's most talented freshman big men, but a stress fracture to his foot sidelined him. It also left Louisville with nobody to guard Camby, who finished with 16 points, shooting 70 percent from the floor.

Louisville coach Denny Crum said that keeping Camby healthy is crucial to UMass tourney success.

"He's a great player. They don't miss him that much against most people," Crum said. "When they get down to playing in the Final Eight, they would really miss a guy like Camby."

What Camby adds is more than 14.1 and 3.2 blocks per game. His contributions go beyond the stat sheet. Despite the blocks that he does get, countless other shots are altered or sometimes not even attempted because of his presence, according to teammates.

"He changes the entire chemistry of our defense," said senior Lou Roe. "[Our opponents] are more intimidated."

When Camby wasn't in the lineup, opposing teams smothered his teammates in the frontcourt, especially Roe.

Now with Camby occupying his share of defenders, Roe was freed to play his game, scoring 21 points and grabbing eight boards.

Camby put the finishing touches on his afternoon at 5:18, when he exploded from the right corner past two Louisville defenders for a dunk that brought the crowd of 13,758 to its feet.

"Donta Bright flipped it to me," Camby said. "I got a running start and I just went up and ... Whoa."

Associated Press Top 25 NCAA Men's Basketball

1. Kansas
2. UCLA
3. North Carolina
4. Connecticut
5. Massachusetts
6. Kentucky
7. Maryland
8. Arkansas
9. Villanova
10. Wake Forest
11. Virginia
12. Michigan State
13. Arizona
14. Missouri
15. Arizona State
16. Mississippi State
17. Syracuse
18. Oklahoma State
19. Stanford
20. Alabama
21. Purdue
22. Minnesota
23. Iowa State
24. Georgia Tech
25. Oklahoma

the
New This Semester at the TOC Lounge...
LUNCH IN THE LOUNGE!
• HOMEMADE SOUPS
• SANDWICHES
• FEATURING HEALTHY CHOICE DELI MEATS!
• SALADS...AND MORE
11AM - 1:30 PM MON-FRI
UMASS STUDENTS ON THE 10, 14 OR 19 MEAL PLAN
THE TOC IS THE PLACE TO BE EVERY WEDNESDAY DURING FEBRUARY
JUST BRING YOUR UMASS ID AND RECEIVE A $3 LUNCH DISCOUNT AT THE TOC RESTAURANT!
11:30 AM - 1:30 PM
MON - FRI
• 11th Floor Campus Center •

Rush D.U.
February 21st: Nagleschlaugen - Twice as nice
February 22nd: Open Rush - Free Food
All events run from 8-9 pm
For more info. or a ride call Mike or Jamie at 549-3831 or feel free to stop by our house at 778 N. Pleasant St. ANYTIME
TOTMAN NORTH EAST NORTH PLEASANT ST. GRAD TOWER
ΔΥ
Cable T.V.
E.S.P.N.
Sportchannel
N.E.S.N.
Rush Delta Upsilon

On the day of the apocotyque Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd. grade

Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879 • 25 N. Pleasant St. (above McDonald's)
Has the best selection of 1,2,&3 bedroom Apartments with gas heat.
We begin showing apartments in April and May for June or September occupancy

summer
Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Ireland
Ireland Today
On Nantucket Island
Playwriting and Performance
In Mexico
Spanish Language and Culture
Along the New England Coastline
Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island
Marine Biology
For information about these programs and over four hundred courses available this summer contact
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
UMass Boston

Eating Disorder Programs • 1995
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Learn German This Summer At URI
June 25-August 4, 1995
The University of Rhode Island in cooperation with the Goethe Institute Boston is hosting the Fifteenth Annual German Summer School of the Atlantic. German will be the sole language of communication, and German life and culture the heart of this six week residency program of intensive language study. Earn up to nine undergraduate or graduate credits while living in the beautiful surroundings of our country campus, just minutes away from Rhode Island's magnificent beaches and historic Newport. This program is ideally suited for anyone wishing to enroll in beginning through Master's level German. Take advantage of this rare opportunity to participate in this total German language experience
Contact: Dr. John Grandin or Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors
Dept. of Languages, URI
Kingston, RI 02881
Or call: (401) 792-5911
Hearing impaired: (401) 751-4790
URI College of Continuing Education
University of Rhode Island
199 Promenade St., Providence, RI 02908

Arts & Living

Trenchmouth's latest delivers new sounds

TRENCHMOUTH VS. THE LIGHT OF THE SUN
Trenchmouth
Eastwest/Elektra Records

COURTESY MICHAEL HAY

Fred Armisen, Damon Locks, Chris DeZutter and Wayne Montana make up Trenchmouth.

In their attempt to reinvent music as we know it, Chicago's Trenchmouth stand beside No Means No as leaders of the newly emerging genre daringly declared jazz- core. Their latest release, Trenchmouth Vs. The Light Of The Sun combines schizophrenic guitar janglings with unique percussion stylings to create an original, occasionally brilliant, take on modern rock.

"A Prescription Written In Another Language," a wiry, minimal funk based on dexterous bass and drum combinations, is the track which best defines the band's sound. As is the case with several songs on the album, if you can ignore Damon Locks' horrid vocals, the music is instrumentally impressive.

Occasionally, the band's enthusiasm supersedes their art. This is most evident on the frantically energetic "If Bricks Had Wings" and "The Effects of Radiation," on which the opening percussion montage resembles an infant with an uncanny ear for rhythm banging on pots and pans.

The album's lyrics as a whole reflect a disgust for what Locks sees as a world full of machines and automatons lacking passion and dream. Trenchmouth's innovative music and unusual, if somewhat pretentious, lyrics illustrate their refusal to follow any set prescription or model for success.

Despite the lack of ear-catching melodies or hooks, Trenchmouth's latest is one of those albums that improves with every listen, revealing many rough gems amidst several noble failures. B- (Craig O' Connor)

MARY LOU LORD EP
Mary Lou Lord
Kill Rock Stars

Street musician. Folk singer. Punk rock girl. Who is the real Mary Lou Lord? A few years ago Lord was performing on the streets of Boston to earn a few extra dollars. Following this she released a cassette on a folk label as well as a three-song single on the Kill Rock Stars, one of the punkest labels around. Just recently she released this eight song self-titled EP.

Although indie rock purists have fallen head over heels for her seductive, innocent voice, Lord is a folk singer in the classic sense. Like many folkies such as Pete Seeger and Joan Baez, she would rather cover other people's material than her own. On the new release a mere three of the eight songs are her originals. Among the artists she covers include Daniel Johnston, The Bevis Frond and Matt Keating.

The opening track features an all-star cast including Julianna Hatfield and Brian Dunton (ex-Helium) as they rock through a cover of the Bevis Frond song "The Lights Are Changing."

The highlights of the album are the closing two tracks, "His Indie World" and "Speeding Motorcycle." The former sung pokes fun at the indie rock scene, while the latter is a stunning cover of the Daniel Johnston classic.

It is unfair for Lord to be considered anything but a folk singer. Her roots are obviously Dylan — not the Sex Pistols. In an age where MTV Unplugged is the only place where kids see an acoustic guitar, it is a welcome change to hear a true acoustic artist. A- (Mike Burke)

Trax On Trax Off

Cleo's pop magic marred by aggressive audience

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

LETTERS TO CLEO
Pearl Street
Feb. 16

NORTHAMPTON — When Letters To Cleo took the stage last Thursday night it all seemed innocent enough. The five-piece Boston band would play through a set of poppy tunes, the crowd would bounce, and — whallah — instant fun.

Well, it didn't quite happen that way. As positive proof that people will mosh to anything, the pit that accompanied Letters To Cleo rivaled that of the recent performance by Frank Black, and if you're even vaguely familiar with both of these artists, you can understand that there is something intrinsically wrong with that.

Letters To Cleo churned out about an hour worth of tunes, a large amount from their debut CD Aurora Gory Alice. "Mellie's Comin' Over," "Big Star" and "Rim Shak" were some of the highlights of the show, which lead singer Kay Hanley kicked off by discouraging people to mush.

Unfortunately, her words didn't seem to have any effect on the sold-out crowd which got progressively more aggressive as the night went on. The heavy moshing seemed to distance the crowd from the band, as after the first few songs, Hanley said very little and each song became just another excuse for the audience to crowd surf.

The band's college radio hit "I See" and their current single "Here And Now" got everyone in the crowd moving but often times the songs bled into one another and failed to take on any individual identity. The attitude of much of the crowd also ruined the show for those there to enjoy the music.

Another local bunch, Gigolo Aunts, preceded Letters To Cleo. There's was a generic set of rock backed with dada- esque harmonies but without that band's clever arrangements. They filled their set with witty in-between-song banter and 20-second snips of covers, probably hoping no one would notice how boring their originals were. The high point of their set came when they did a dead-on cover of Neil Young's "Cinnamon Girl," if that says anything.

The Gravel Pit opened the show with a lesson in derivative rock that was less interesting than their name.

Write for Women's Issues
Contact Lisa Green-Hall or Carrie Donaldson
113 Campus Center
545-0500

Peace Corps
on-campus at UMASS
Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 22
7:00 pm
Room 911, Campus Center
For more information, call or visit the UMass Peace Corps Office
12 Draper Hall
UMass Amherst
545-2105

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Wednesday - March 1
(repeated on)
Tuesday - April 25
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass Campus
Room Number Will Be Posted By Campus Center Elevators
I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?
If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234
UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES . UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS . AMHERST

MORE TREADMILLS!
MORE STAIRMASTERS!
MORE VARIETY!
$38/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256 0080 400 West St.

BANANARAMA
fabulous frozen YOGURT
HOT Specials on Smooth Nonfat Frozen Yogurt and LEMON CHILL Soft Frozen Lemonade
"It's Better than Dell's"
Nonfat Colombo Frozen Yogurt — Buy 1, Get 1 FREE — Good for a small cup or cone — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
"Lemon Chill" Frozen Lemonade — Buy 1, Get 1 FREE — Good for a small cup only — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
FREE Nonfat Fudge Packet — With the purchase of a large cup of Frozen Yogurt — 1 coupon per person per visit — Expires 4/1/95
One Boltwood Walk (thru the Alley next to Antonio's)
Downtown Amherst • 253-2774

BE A R.A.
HELP SHAPE YOUR
PIECE OF THE WORLD
For more informaiton please contact the Baker Area Office at 545-1333
Applications for Fall 1995 RESIDENT ASSISTANT Positions Now Being Accepted.
Applications Available in Cluster Offices
For PRIORITY CONSIDERATION applications must be turned in to the ORCHARD HILL/CENTRAL AREA OFFICE, B31 BAKER HOUSE, by 5:00 PM WEDNESDAY, MARCH 15, 1995. (Applications will continue to be accepted until all positions have been filled.)
Applicants are encouraged (but not required) to attend one of the following information sessions:
Tuesday, February 21st 7:00pm Field Classroom
Wednesday, February 22nd 12:00pm 165-9 Campus Center
Wednesday, February 22nd 7:30pm Emerson Classroom
Monday, February 27th 7:00pm McNamara lounge

Take a Free Test Drive
LSAT • GRE • MCAT
If you took the test today, how would you score? Come find out.
Take a 2 1/2 or 3 hour test, proctored like the real thing.
Receive computer analysis of your test-taking strengths and weaknesses.
Get strategies from Kaplan teachers that will help you ace the real exam.
Don't miss out on this cost-free opportunity.
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST to reserve your seat today
Tests on campus, call for room number.
KAPLAN

■ women

continued from page 10

after Dayna Smith was fouled while shooting a trey, giving her three foul shots. Smith hit only one of three, keeping the Rams still down by two.

On the next inbounds play, Thomas was fouled immediately with 7.6 seconds left and hit both ends of the one and one to clinch it for UMass.

Tasha King led the Rams with 21 points, including three treys, while Rebecca Bright finished with a double-double, 18 points and 10 rebounds.

"I give Rhode Island all the credit in the world. They played as hard as any team you will find in this whole country," O'Brien said.

***

A relentless full court press and 12 points by freshman Tez Kraft helped the Minutewomen hold the Temple Owls to 12 first half points on their way to a 82–40 shellacking Saturday in the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Owls did not score their first bucket until two minutes into the contest, and did not even get into double figures until there was 5:04 left in the half. UMass' press caused 12 first-half turnovers.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

through a big pile-up in front of Lindsay.

UMass' Mike Gaffney and Basaraba traded goals, Gaffney's first collegiate goal. Neil Donovon had a power-play marker at 5:51 to expand the lead to 5–3 early in the third period.

At 10:24 of the third, defenseman Brad Norton took a shot to the face from Lowell's David Dartsch. Norton suffered a concussion, and was down on the ice for over 10 minutes.

Norton was hospitalized and released the next morning; he remains questionable for next weekend's action against Northeastern, as is Jacques.

UMass could not capitalize on the five minute major given to Dartsch. Instead, Donovan and Concanon (to complete the hat trick) scored short-handed goals to put the game away.

"The emotions were so high, but the bottom line is to win the game," Mallen said.

It's set: UMass–BC Dec. 9 at new arena

While Connecticut and Massachusetts still can't seem to come to an agreement to rekindle that local basketball rivalry, the UMass–Boston College rivalry is apparently ready to be revived.

The old rivalry will take place in a new building. Officials from the Shawmut Center in Boston announced Friday that UMass and Boston College will compete in the first ever college basketball game in the new building on Saturday, Dec. 9. The Shawmut Center is slated to open this September.

Officials added that the game is expected to be nationally- televised, but an announcement will come at a later date.

The game, which is expected to be a sellout, would be the largest audience (19,600) ever to watch a college basketball game in New England.

Massachusetts athletic director Bob Marcum was pleased at the announcement.

"We are excited and honored to be able to participate in the first collegiate event in the Shawmut Center," Marcum said. "We hope this can be the beginning of a long and fruitful relationship between the state university and one of the finest new arenas in the country."

The two teams last squared off in 1990, when UMass defeated the Eagles 83–81 in the Abdow's Classic. The Minutemen have won six of the last seven meetings between the two schools.

The two teams have competed 27 times dating back to 1905. Boston College leads the all-time series 15–12.

"Hopefully this game will go a long way toward renewing a great rivalry. At the same time I think it's great for New England college basketball," Massachusetts Coach John Calipari said. "I'm grateful that we were able to put this together and that it will be televised nationally. It's going to be something special for both schools, their alumni and their fans."

— MATT VAUTOUR

■ hoops

continued from page 10

three pointers. Kellogg (11 points) and Carmelo Travieso buried treys, only to be followed by three-pointers by Kiser (12 points) and Deluan Wheat (team-high 20 points) to make the halftime score 40–34.

The Minutemen started the second half by scoring the first 10 points, capped off by a Donta Bright (13 points) lay-in, to up the lead to 50–34.

Four consecutive made free throws cut the lead to 66–58 with 8:28 to go.

"We played a good basketball game. I'm very pleased with how we played together," Calipari said. "Twenty-one assists means we're passing the ball. You have to admit, that was truly a team effort."

While the loss of Camby in early February hurt the Minutemen, the Cardinals were in a much bigger hole without the likes of Walker.

"I was very proud of my team, I thought they played as hard as they could play," Crum said. "Obviously we were out-manned. Without Samaki Walker, we were hurting in the middle."

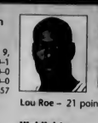
Massachusetts 91, Louisville 76

At the Worcester Centrum

Louisville (18—11)
Kiser 3-6 4-4 12, Rogers 3-10 2-4 9, Osborne 7-14 1-3 17, Sims 4-8 0-1 8, Wheat 6-12 5-8 20, Flynn 2-3 0-0 4, Johnson 0-0 0-0 0, Smith 1-1 0-0 2, Dantzler 1-3 1-2 4. Totals 27-57 13-22 76.

Massachusetts (20—9)
Dingle 3-5 2-2 8, Weeks 2-4 4-6 8, Roe 9-16 3-6 21, Padilla 4-9 0-0 9, Kellogg 4-6 2-2 11, Bright 6-7 1-1 13, Camby 7-10 1-1 16, Travieso 2-8 0-0 5, Norville 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 37-66 13-18 91.

Halftime — UMass 40-34. 3-point— Louisville 9-21 (Kiser 2-5, Rogers 1-1, Osbourne 2-4, Wheat 0-1, Dantzler 1-2), UMass (Padilla 1-4, Camby 1-1, Kellogg 1-2, Roe 0-1, Travieso 1-5). Rebounds — UMass 39 (Roe 8), Louisville 29 (Osbourne, Sims 6). Assists UMass 21 (Kellogg 5), Louisville 12 (Wheat 6). Total fouls — UMass 18, Louisville 18. Attendance 13,758



Lou Roe – 21 points, & rebounds

Highlights...

Led by the inside play of Lou Roe (21 points) and Marcus Camby (16 points), the Minutemen led through most of the game. Massachusetts exploited their size advantage to outscore the Cardinals 69–42 inside and scored 13 more points off of second chance opportunities junior Donta Bright added (13 points and seven rebounds) and sophomore Tyrone Weeks were also strong ... Roe moved into second place on UMass' all-time with 1740 career points passing Lorenzo Sutton.

Camby's presence key in victory

Minutemen back in sync now that star center has returned

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — After George Washington defeated Massachusetts on Feb. 4, in his elation over the victory, coach Mike Jarvis tried to downplay Marcus Camby's absence.

"I don't think that Camby's presence would have necessarily changed the outcome of the game," he said.

If Sunday's 91–76 win over Louisville was an indication of what Camby can bring to the lineup, Jarvis was wrong.

"He means a difference obviously," said Massachusetts coach John Calipari. "People in other programs say, 'They're just missing Marcus. They're still the same team.' Obviously we know that's not the case."

The Louisville game was only Camby's second since returning from his hamstring injury. In his absence, the Minutemen were out of sync, going 1–2, with the lone victory coming against a subpar Southwestern Louisiana team. The team dropped two close games to George Washington during Camby's absence — games that despite what Jarvis said, Camby could have changed.

When he checked into the game less than two minutes in, the Worcester Centrum gave him a standing ovation. Less than a minute later, with the shot clock running out, Camby stepped back and knocked down his first career three- pointer.

"It was spur of the moment," Camby said. "I had it in my repertoire, I just never used it."

Less than five minutes into the second half, Camby hobbled off the floor with tightness in his injured hamstring. "It got real tight," he said. "I almost couldn't walk. I felt like I needed a good stretch before I went back out there."

After stretching, Camby returned and continued his strong play.

Camby was admittedly not at his best, estimating his leg's health at only "90 percent." But what is scary to most opposing coaches is the prospect of facing the sophomore All–America candidate at full strength after seeing what he can do at partial strength.

"Marcus played well," Calipari said. "But we all know that he's better than he played today. When he gets back into playing, he'll be fine."

The game had a chance to be a battle of two talented young centers. Samaki Walker is one of the nations's most talented freshman big men, but a stress fracture to his foot sidelined him. It also left Louisville with nobody to guard Camby, who finished with 16 points, shooting 70 percent from the floor.

Louisville coach Denny Crum said that keeping Camby healthy is crucial to UMass tourney success.

"He's a great player. They don't miss him that much against most people," Crum said. "When they get down to playing in the Final Eight, they would really miss a guy like Camby."

What Camby adds is more than 14.1 and 3.2 blocks per game. His contributions go beyond the stat sheet. Despite the blocks that he does get, countless other shots are altered or sometimes not even attempted because of his presence, according to teammates.

"He changes the entire chemistry of our defense," said senior Lou Roe. "[Our opponents] are more intimidated."

When Camby wasn't in the lineup, opposing teams smothered his teammates in the frontcourt, especially Roe.

Now with Camby occupying his share of defenders, Roe was freed to play his game, scoring 21 points and grabbing eight boards.

Camby put the finishing touches on his afternoon at 5:18, when he exploded from the right corner past two Louisville defenders for a dunk that brought the crowd of 13,758 to its feet.

"Donta Bright flipped it to me," Camby said. "I got a running start and I just went up and ... Whoa."

the TOC
New This Semester at the TOC Lounge...
LUNCH IN THE LOUNGE!
• HOMEMADE SOUPS
• SANDWICHES
• FEATURING HEALTHY CHOICE DELI MEATS!
• SALADS...AND MORE
11AM - 1:30 PM MON-FRI
UMASS STUDENTS ON THE 10, 14 OR 19 MEAL PLAN
THE TOC IS THE PLACE TO BE
EVERY WEDNESDAY DURING FEBRUARY
JUST BRING YOUR UMASS ID AND RECEIVE A $3 LUNCH DISCOUNT AT THE TOC RESTAURANT!
11:30 AM - 1:30 PM
MON - FRI
• 11th Floor Campus Center •

Associated Press Top 25 NCAA Men's Basketball

1. Kansas
2. UCLA
3. North Carolina
4. Connecticut
5. Massachusetts
6. Kentucky
7. Maryland
8. Arkansas
9. Villanova
10. Wake Forest
11. Virginia
12. Michigan State
13. Arizona
14. Missouri
15. Arizona State
16. Mississippi State
17. Syracuse
18. Oklahoma State
19. Stanford
20. Alabama
21. Purdue
22. Minnesota
23. Iowa State
24. Georgia Tech
25. Oklahoma

Rush D.U.
February 21st: Nagleschlaugen - Twice as nice
February 22nd: Open Rush - Free Food
All events run from 8-9 pm
For more info. or a ride call Mike or Jamie at 549-3831 or feel free to stop by our house at 778 N. Pleasant St. ANYTIME
TOTMAN NORTH EAST NORTH PLEASANT ST. GRAD TOWER ΔΥ
Cable T.V. E.S.P.N. Sportchannel N.E.S.N.
Rush Delta Upsilon

On the day of the apocalypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd grade.

Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879 • 25 N. Pleasant St. (above McDonald's)
Has the best selection of 1,2,&3 bedroom Apartments with gas heat.
We begin showing apartments in April and May for June or September occupancy

Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Ireland Ireland Today
In Mexico Spanish Language and Culture
On Nantucket Island Playwriting and Performance
Along the New England Coastline Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island Marine Biology
For information about these programs and over four hundred courses available this summer contact:
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
UMass Boston

Eating Disorder Programs • 1995
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

Learn German This Summer At URI
June 25-August 4, 1995
The University of Rhode Island in cooperation with the Goethe Institute Boston is hosting the Fifteenth Annual German Summer School of the Atlantic. German will be the sole language of communication, and German life and culture the heart of this six week residency program of intensive language study. Earn up to nine undergraduate or graduate credits while living in the beautiful surroundings of our country campus, just minutes away from Rhode Island's magnificent beaches and historic Newport. This program is ideally suited for anyone wishing to enroll in beginning through Master's level German. Take advantage of this rare opportunity to participate in this total German language experience
Contact: Dr. John Grandin or Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors
Dept. of Languages, URI
Kingston, RI 02881
Or call: (401) 792-5911
Hearing impaired: (401) 751-4790
URI College of Continuing Education
University of Rhode Island
199 Promenade St., Providence, RI 02908

Men's gym wins with strong effort

Team records two largest point totals ever in last two meets

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Corespondent

After putting together its two largest point totals in its last two meets, a loss to the Temple Owls (226.65–220.60), and a convincing win over Springfield College (220.7–205.85), the Massachusetts men's gymnastics team was looking to continue the trend. Against the Black Knights of Army, they did just that and more.

With a solid performance across the board, the Minutemen took a hard fought, emotional meet from Army, bettering them by nearly three points (223.30–221.55). The Minutemen (6–2) will travel to Southern Connecticut on Wednesday night to try and continue their success. It is also a tune-up for will be their biggest measuring stick this season as a team, the Syracuse Orangemen, who invade Boyden Gym Saturday afternoon.

For now, coach Roy Johnson is focusing on the present.

"Today was a very good meet for us, but not the best meet we've ever had," Johnson said. "There is some room for improvement. There will be changes in the lineup for Syracuse."

One change in particular Johnson was speaking of will be the return of high bar specialist, sophomore Kiat Oboler, as he hopes to return from a sprained thumb in time to take on the Orangemen. As in most any meeting between Syracuse and Massachusetts, there will be plenty of spirit and emotion.

That same emotion was shown against Army, especially in the competitive nature between the two leading all-around performers, Army's Steve Marshall and the Minutemen's Gabe Columbus. The two trained together at the West Point gymnastics club during the off season and pushed each other all day long before Marshall took the all-around crown with a score of 55.8 to Columbus' 55.65.

Columbus' score tied his personal best in the all-around, as well as scoring two of his personal bests in individual events, the floor exercise (9.75) and the parallel bars (9.40).

On this day there would be more personal bests for the Minutemen. Freshman Kevin Schwartz looked to keep his top national ranking by tying his personal best in the rings with a 9.9.

Also on the rings, sophomore Ruslan Shupak put up a personal best with a 9.75. Senior Jay Santos added a personal best, with a 9.55 on the pommel horse.

"We had a strong showing all-around today," Johnson added, pointing to the strong performances of Mike Sangiradi on the vault (9.25) and the high bar (9.1) as highly impressive.

Also in the high bar, sophomore Chris Funk and freshman Danny Young grabbed a share of third place with a score of 9.3.

Softball plays in Coca–Cola Classic

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts softball team opened up its 1995 season this past weekend in the Coca-Cola Classic at Arizona State.

The Minutewomen played a total of eight games over the weekend and posted a 2–4 record as of press time. Massachusetts' victories came against Utah State, 7–2, and Eastern Michigan, 9–1.

The Minutewomen played a doubleheader against Michigan yesterday, but the results were not yet available.

Massachusetts started off the weekend with two losses on Friday, bowing to California State–Fullerton by a score of 10–0, and Purdue, 3–1.

Senior captain Kelly Daut got the start against Cal State– Fullerton and recorded five strikeouts, while giving up three walks in the loss. The game was stopped after five innings because of the mercy rule.

The score was only 2–0 in Cal State's favor after three full innings. But in the bottom of the fourth and fifth innings, Cal State broke it wide open, scoring four runs in each inning.

The Minutewomen could manage only two hits against Jenn Merkert on doubles by sophomore Sam Cardenas and freshman Kim Gutridge. They also committed five errors in the game.

Against Purdue, the Minutewomen took an early 1–0 lead in the first inning on a two–out home run by sophomore Chris Martens. But Purdue scored three runs in the second to take a 3–1 lead which they would not relinquish.

Sophomore pitcher Dani Ortega struck out four but walked three in the loss that saw the Minutewomen commit two more errors.

On Saturday, Massachusetts defeated Utah State, 7–2, behind Cardenas' game–winning home run. The score was tied after five full innings until Cardenas hit a two–run homer that started a five–run rally in the sixth, clinching the victory.

Utah State jumped out to a 2–0 lead in the first inning but was held scoreless for the rest of the game by Daut, who recorded her first victory of the year.

Cardenas hit a double on her way to a 2–4 day at the plate. Freshman Kelly Buckley also went 2–4 on the day, and Martens had two RBIs.

On Sunday, the Minutewomen were held hitless by senior pitcher Anie Stewart of UNLV, losing 8–0. Ortega gave up 12 hits, including a home run by UNLV's Sara Mallet. UNLV scored a run in the second and third innings, and then broke it open in the fifth when they scored five runs to make it 8–0.

The game was ended after five because of the mercy rule.

In the second game on Sunday, the mercy rule was again a factor, but this time in Massachusetts' favor.

The Minutewomen got all the runs they would need in the first inning when senior captain Heather Dorsey hit a bases– loaded triple to clear the bases and give Massachusetts a 3–0 lead.

The Minutewomen then went on to score one run in the third, three in the fourth and two in the fifth, on its way to the 9–1 victory.

Daut improved her record to 2–1 while striking out three and walking only one. She also went 2–3 at the plate. Gutridge and Martens both went 2–4 at the plate and knocked in two runs.

In the final game of the day, Massachusetts lost to Arizona State, 7–1. The Minutewomen scored its only run in the bottom of the fifth when freshman Tracey Osier scored.

The Minutewomen continued its poor fielding in the tournament, committing a whopping seven errors. Ortega took the loss, her third of the year.

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!
Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law and more...
Call 545-1995
for an appointment
UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

Immigration Law
Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law
1163 Main Street, Springfield, MA, 781-6370
13 Old South St, Northampton, MA, 584-3232
50 Congress St, Boston, MA, (617)722-0043
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty

$5 off any Lift Ticket with this ad and your 5-college I.D.

Free Bus!
SKIER FRIENDLY!
Wed. 2/15 Wed. 2/22 Wed. 3/1
Leaves Boyden 10:30 a.m. & 5:30 p.m.
Leaves Mt. TOM 4:30 p.m. & 10:00 p.m.
Only a 25 minute ride from U. Mass!
This offer not good in conjuction with any other promotion.
Mt. TOM
Rt. 5 Holyoke MA • 413-536-0516

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
Mandarin / Szechuan Cuisine
We Deliver in Amherst 5-9:30 Everyday
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 pm • Sunday Brunch 11am - 3pm
NEW ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children Under 10 $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30 - 3pm $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 chicken fingers, 2 chicken wings or hot & sour soup.
Take Out Service - Full Cocktail Menu
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

ARE YOU TIRED
of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

Anthony's
Wildest Anniversary
All Week Long... Starting FEB 20th
100 Beautiful Girls From USA Appearing This Week
$1.00 DRAFTS
PRIZES TICKETS
STARRING 6 CENTERFOLDS
Register To Win Trip For Two To The Grand Cayman
18 and over welcome with positive I.D.
Mon-Wed 4pm - 2am
Thurs-Sat Noon - 2am
$2.00 SHOT SPECIALS
500 NEW LUDLOW RD • S. HADLEY, MA
413-536-0502

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. FS011

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst! Free info session, Mon. Feb. 27th, Lord Jeffery Inn, at 7pm, or call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX.

Did you get some sun this weekend? Great, but why don't you head down to the Mullins Center at 4:30 today to catch the women's hockey team take on Holy Cross?

The Distinguished Visitor Program is looking for new members! If you are interested in finding out about DVP come to the new members meeting on February 22 at 8:00 in rm 427 Student Union or call 6-0045

UPC- Come get involved in the all student run concert production group on campus! All are welcome to attend our next meeting Tues Feb 21st 8:00pm in CC rm 917. Get excited for our upcoming events including Spring Concert!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice S.W. 107,000 miles automatic transmission. Reliable car and engine. Asking $900 or best offer. Please contact Pastore @ (413) 549 4809

1982 Mazda RX-7 HK, 5 spd, sink sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500 Call 253-3149

1988 VW Jetta 16v GLI 75k Recaro seats. Pullout deck, sunroof, 5 spd, alloy wheels. Silver with black interior $5,000 o.b.o. 665-6604

Ford Granada 1981. Excellent condition Auto air. $1,400 or best offer. 256-3861

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available: waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, ropes course, athletics, arts and crafts. For applications call 609-424-2755.

FOR RENT

250 a month heat inc 2 miles to campus, on bus route Feb free Call Todd 549-7693

Cape Cod: Group summer rentals: waterfront houses. Falmouth area 508-477-0000

Cape Cod Seasonal rentals 1-5 bedroom houses in all towns. Rental rates Honey Scenic 508-394-2857 or 398-8087

Noho 1 br in 4 br apt. Center. 586-7540. Joseph Avibi -immediately

Room for rent in a 2 br apt located in Amherst on bus route $275 + 253-4722 Female preferred

Sunderland, new over lease (March-May), 4 bedroom, pool, laundry, bus, $750+. 665-2311

FOR SALE

Alpine 7517 94 model, full topic detachface, dolby $175. Alpine 6046ED component pair set 4" mids, 1" dome tweeters, $100. Kenwood KAC 624 amp 80 W/2, 160 W/1 $95. Alpine 3531 amp 180W/1 $30. Magnavox 4 head VCR HQ, unified remote. $140. Call 253-3149.

Computer and or printer. Cordata 386 1 mb RAM computer with software (DosLotus,MS Works + more) Canon BJ 200 printer $500 for both Call 665-8387

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $599! Call Chris at 800-398-5685

Mountain bike Bianchi Peregrine 18" STX LX 500 disc Marzocchi XC500 shock 150 256-8977 Dave

Revo sunglasses absolute lowest prices Shades, H20, Classic Traveler Call 1-800-9RSHADES

Save $63. U.S. Air anywhere to March 28 $173 w/res for $110 for male 549-4015

Trek 850 mint apple Mac for sale 256-8991

Want a Macintosh? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Claraworks $490 Christofer 549-7453

Atari, Intellivision, Colecovision games, controllers and systems Buy/Sell/Trade 256-1995, ask for Tony.

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn Single key on Relph Lauren key chain. Call Bill at 6-0704.

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study essence! Credit available! Casa Bios 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512-416-8991

HELP WANTED

Alaska summer employment. Fishing industry. Earn up to $3,000- $6,000+ per month. Room and board! Transportation! Male/female. No experience necessary! 206-545-4155 ext A50012

Babysitter wanted. Area health club seeks babysitter. Limited hours available Monday, Tues, and Thurs AM's a must. Free membership with job! Call Mike at 549-3638

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp. 3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront, + arts. Call 1-800-973-3866. Dn campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring Earn up to $2000 +/month. World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1 206 634-0468 ext C5004

Expanding environmental company needs ambitious self starters immediately. Green opportunity 413-534-6533

Flexible office hours available for general office tasks in our Amherst office. Duties include copying and gathering materials to prepare for large volume mailings. Three hour minimum required. Some evening shifts available located off bus route. Fill out application in send resume to Personnel, NES, 30 Gatehouse Road, Amherst, MA 01002. EOE

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod. Call Molly at 349 6392

Fundraiser exclusively for fraternities, sororities + student organizations. Earn money without spending a dime. Just 3-5 days of your time. A little work + lot of money. Call for info. No obligation 1-800-932-0528 ext 65.

Help wanted. Experienced waitstaff weekends. Apply within! Kai- Chi Restaurant, Mt. Farms Mall.

Live and work in Nantucket for the summer. Call Laurie 545-1301

Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 295-5490 after 2 p.m.

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000- $4,000+/mo. Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5002

INSTRUCTION

Guitar lessons. Enjoy the semester and earn credit. 25 years experience. Beginning/advanced. Peter 256-4641

MOUNTAINBIKE FOR SALE

Paramount series 20, mint, ridden approx 20 on road miles. owner is underwent Richey bars and rims, Sunour XC10 approximately 27.5 Light. Paid $850- will sell for $450. 413-527-8329

PERSONALS

Buddy, I feel like chicken (tikka) tonight! Love, Jenny

Jekie-Poo Thank you for the tape! I hope I can roam the jungle soon. Luv your equestrian

Voyeurs. We look out for students better than any other credit card. Call 1-800-CITIBANK to apply. No freaks.

RIDE WANTED

Need ride to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends Gas $ 753-2929

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo Florida Spring Break. Earn 2 credits. Call Project Deep 1-800-767-3977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1 800 767-3977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Going away? Need your pets to be taken care of? Call Jen 546-6992. Exp. with all types of animals

International students- visitors. DV-1 greencard program, by U.S. Immigration Legal Services, Tel(818) 982-9881 (818) 998-6475 20311 Stagg St. Canoga Park CA 91306. Monday-Sunday 10am-10pm

Modem users? Free Playground 585 256-5085. 19.2 K bps 130 megs online + CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global War1 & 2, Planets!

Photographer head shots $75 546-1618 Perry

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support. 549-1906

You take your writing seriously and so do we! For more information about quality editing by email: write to editing transnational at editfast@aol.com

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski Spring Break '95 skiercollege.ee ski weekends only $309 Includes 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (luxury condos)/5 days unlimited/big-era activities (drinking age 18), sponsors include Lebatts, Molson and Mt. Orford, Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Campus and Greek representatives needed. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

THETA CHI

Theta Chi fraternity spring rush '95. See what our brotherhood is all about. All are welcome Feb 13-16 8:00-21 8:00 - 10:00pm Questions or a ride call Ted Silva 549-4598

TRAVEL

Daytona Beach- Spring Break. First class oceanfront hotel, directly on the beach, pool deck fun, nightclubs, sunshine, parties. Do not miss this trip! Includes on campus pick up and drop off, only $279 (quad occup. Departs weekly in March. Call for free brochure. M-F, 8-6. 1-800-532-3866. See you at the beach!

Spring Break Bahamas cruise 5 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $429! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Ocoee Beach $159! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break 95. Daytona 399, Panama City $149! the best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call Heidi + Andrea 256-6110

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jett at 549-4937

WE LOVE YOU SAM

We love you no matter what you wear! Love Becky and Suzanne

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Classified Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (In the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto For Sale, Entertainment, for Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Wrod Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

REGARDING PERSONALS
1 All personals MUST be presented by Collegian classified employees before payment & acceptance of the classified.
2 Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulatory personals.
3 Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4 Addresses, or dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5 Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6 Profanity may not be used in personals.
7 The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER
Client: Date: Taken By:
Date(s) to run: Headline:
Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:
ADVERTISING COPY
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10
Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

GRAPHIC VIOLENCE IN THE MEDIA
DOES IT GLAMORIZE VIOLENCE? SURE. DOES IT DESENSITIZE US TO VIOLENCE? OF COURSE. DOES IT HELP US TOLERATE VIOLENCE? YOU BET. DOES IT STUNT OUR EMPATHY FOR OUR FELLOW BEINGS? HECK YES.
DOES IT CAUSE VIOLENCE? ...WELL, THAT'S HARD TO PROVE.
THE TRICK IS TO ASK THE RIGHT QUESTION

Dilbert By Scott Adams

RELIABLE SOURCES SAY YOUR PROJECT WILL BE CANCELLED, DILBERT.
YOU SHOULD ABANDON IT NOW AND COME WORK ON MY PROJECT. WHEN MY BIG PROMOTION GOES THROUGH NEXT MONTH, I'LL TRANSFER YOU TO MY GROUP AND GIVE YOU A RAISE.
THAT'S VERY TEMPTING EXCEPT FOR THE FACT YOU'RE A PATHOLOGICAL LIAR.
BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU SAY - I HAVE SUPER POWERS.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

SPIDER-MAN! WHERE'D YOU COME FROM?
YOU NEVER HEARD OF THE BIRDS AND THE BEES?
WE DON'T WANT NO TROUBLE! WE'RE JUST LOOKIN' FER SOMEONE!
SOUNDS LIKE FUN! MIND IF I HELP?

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today I had to clean my kitchen.
I scrubbed out the sink, mopped the floor, and everything
Mr. Peterson watched, but was too scared to get any closer than a couple of yards away.
After I was done, she cautiously stepped into the kitchen, sniffing the floor and the air.

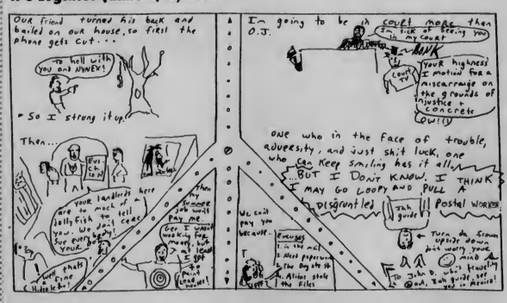
Bruno By C. Baldwin

OKAY, THAT'S OKAY
YOU NEED TO TALK ABOUT IT?
I'M NOT A BIG BOY. I DON'T NEED HELP.
I'M NOT A BIG BOY. I DON'T NEED HELP.
OH, I'M SORRY. I DIDN'T KNOW.
THAT'S OKAY
I'M NOT A BIG BOY. I DON'T NEED HELP.
I'M NOT A BIG BOY. I DON'T NEED HELP.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

Stick-Man By Mattzog Bellucci

It's Legible! (almost) By Gleeson



Our friend turned his back and bailed on our house, so first the phone gets cut... to hell with you and anyway!
So I strong it up!
Then...
I'm going to be in court more than I'm in front of the TV!
O.J.
Your highness I implored for a miscarriage on the grounds of divorce + cruelty!
OUT!!
one who in the face of trouble, adversity, and just shit luck, one who can keep smiling has it all...
BUT I DON'T KNOW. I THINK I MAY GO LOOPY AND PULL A DISGRUNTLED POSTAL WORKER
Turn the Storm upside down, and quit worry your mind

Garfield By Jim Davis

Loold By Roger Salloom

When my cousin Wes was 10 he spend the whole day at the amusement park. Over the big sound system he'd hear:

"WES, PLEASE GO TO THE KILLER LOOP."

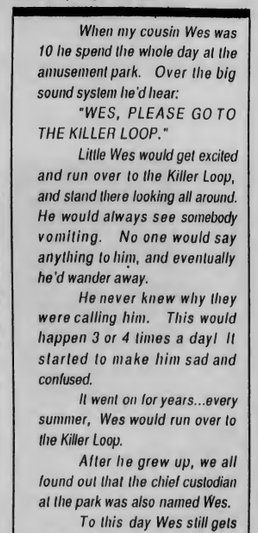
Little Wes would get excited and run over to the Killer Loop, and stand there looking all around. He would always see somebody vomiting. No one would say anything to him, and eventually he'd wander away.

He never knew why they were calling him. This would happen 3 or 4 times a day! It started to make him sad and confused.

It went on for years...every summer, Wes would run over to the Killer Loop.

After he grew up, we all found out that the chief custodian at the park was also named Wes.

To this day Wes still gets an upset stomach when he hears his name over a sound system.



Close to Home By John McPherson

"It can be very dangerous to suppress a hiccup."

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Tracy Monahan
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Paul Bilodeau
Production Supervisor.....Greg Iafrate
Production.....Dave Gleeson
Ken Perry

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
American Chop Suey
Clam Roll w/ Tartar
BASICS LUNCH
Lentil and Tomatoes
Clam Roll w/ Tartar

DINNER
Chix Stew/ Puff Pastry
Quarter Pound Burger
BASICS DINNER
Chix Stew/ Puff Pastry
Oatburgers

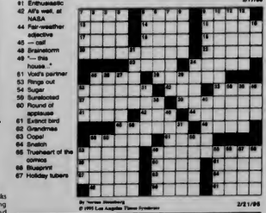
Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 "—to the Chair"
5 Stone
9 Springsteen's nickname, with "The"
13 Therefore
14 Novelist Jaffe
15 To that time
17 Mob scene
18 Gymnast Korbut
19 Pout the doll
20 "Cheers" employee
22 Upper body parts
23 Ridouie
24 Muscular
25 "— parsley, — rosemary..."
26 Where Carson City is capital
30 Shoddy merchandise
32 1440 minutes
33 Movie critic Pauline —
37 Took the commis
38 Plainly written
41 Enthusiastic
42 Ad's exec at NASA
44 Pair-weather adjective
45 — mill
48 Brainstorm
49 "— this house."
51 Vlad's partner
53 Rings out
54 Sugar
59 Sunstruck
60 Round of applause
61 Extinct bird
62 Grandmas
63 Oozes
64 Sheltie
65 Trustworthy of the comms
66 Blueprint
67 Holiday lubers

DOWN
1 Hambone or horsehound
2 Boatie specialty
3 Composer Stravinsky
4 Ronnie of footbal fame
5 Hajj
6 William of "Porno"
7 Riled
8 Carsten's predecessor
9 Battled like rams
10 An original
11 Beginning
12 Actress Spacek
13 August sign
21 Throw out
29 Helen or Rutherford
25 Knits
27 "— wasn't is a room ..."
27 Sooroses-Dehlero movie
29 Actress Harper, to friends
30 Fat farm
31 English poet
34 Up to the task
35 Director Kazan
36 Allow
38 Polka
40 Remorse
43 "Waaaay" star
46 Take the measure of
47 Spanish chaperon
50 Sinad
51 Piranhas or Clios
52 Tricked
53 Capt. Hook's nemesis
54 — all you drop
56 Nervous
58 Mrs. Nick Charles
57 Cheeko choice
58 Pickle pockets

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



2/21/95

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Be careful about going out on a limb; someone may try to saw it off! Luxury purchases should be postponed while you build up your cash reserves. Let your heart down in an intimate conversation.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): Wise moves and investments could boost your prestige along with your bank balance. Well-intentioned friends could give you poor financial advice.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): A good day for reconciliation and compromise. Work at your favorite pace and enjoy every minute! Avoid needless spending. A commitment you made while in a sentimental mood should be fulfilled.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Forget past mistakes and move ahead with confidence. Focus on your short-range objectives. You may have to swallow your pride in order to mend a rift. Do whatever is necessary to promote greater harmony.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Adopting a light-hearted approach will benefit you as well as your loved ones. Treat your mate as a full partner. Ask family members for their cooperation in reducing expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Your imagination could play tricks. Temporarily distancing yourself from a troubling situation will help you gain a better perspective. Be bold in business; others will respect you more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Get together with people who share your interests and launch an ambitious new project. Sharing halves the risks while doubling the returns. Giving your romantic partner a second chance could be your smartest move ever.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): A personal relationship is more rewarding than in the recent past. Guard against making up your mind too quickly. Slow down and think things through. You need to decide on a destination before planning your itinerary.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Get to know someone better before making a commitment. Displaying a crabby attitude could hamper your efforts to get things done today. Pull in your horns and seek your loved one's cooperation. Love conquers all!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Get to work on your usual way; ignoring any distractions. If recent events have hurt your pride, cultivate new interests. Important doors will swing open. Be prepared for some changes in longtime relationships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Co-workers could be testy this morning. Concentrate on projects you can handle alone. Someone gives you fresh insights regarding a work project. Trust your instincts in financial matters. Socialize with new acquaintances this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Do not throw in the towel until you have tried every trick in your bag! Your skills are more valuable than you realize. Resist an urge to splurge on nonessentials. Save for a great vacation.

Quote of the Day

"In America sex is an obsession, in other parts of the world it is a fact."

–Marlene Dietrich

SportsWeekend

Inside this issue:

- Marcus Camby's presence a key in win over Louisville (See story and game box on page 7).
- Massachusetts to play Boston College at Shawmut Center next season (See story on page 7).
- The men's gymnastics team defeats Army on Saturday at Boyden Gym (See story page 8).
- The UMass softball team's season began this past weekend at Arizona State(See story on page 8).

Williams' parents talk to press; Minutemen roll

■ Press conference in Conn.; parents address suspension

By Evan Berland
Associated Press

MANCHESTER, Conn. — Embattled Massachusetts basketball player Mike Williams got an assist from his parents Monday as the clock ticked down on his collegiate career.

Alphonza and Sarah Williams emotionally implored coach John Calipari to reinstate their son after two games into his indefinite suspension.

"We feel that this has caused immeasurable damage to his mental stability, his character and his career," Alphonza Williams said at a news conference called by the couple.

Williams, who did not attend the news conference, was suspended for three games at the beginning of the season for academic reasons.

On Thursday, just before the Minutemen's game against Duquesne, the team issued a statement saying he would again be suspended — this time indefinitely — for violating team rules.

A source close to the program told the Associated Press on Sunday that Williams would not return this season.

Although he disputed details of published reports outlining reason for the suspensions, Alphonza Williams said his son on Thursday wrote a letter to Calipari apologizing and asking to be reinstated.

Williams, a senior guard from Hartford, Conn., was averaging 12.5 points per game.

The Hartford Courant on Monday reported the recent suspension stemmed from Williams' actions after Massachusetts' 94–63 victory Feb. 11 over Southwestern Louisiana.

The newspaper reported Williams and teammate Andre Burks did not return to their hotel until 5 a.m. after the game, although there was no team curfew. Williams then missed a team breakfast called to discuss team rules Wednesday, the day after the Minutemen lost 80–78 to George Washington.

Alphonza Williams said his son did not return as late as 5 a.m. after the Southwestern game and added the team breakfast was not mandatory. He said his son was ill and, after trying unsuccessfully to reach coaches by phone, told teammates to relay that he couldn't attend the breakfast.

The elder Williams called the suspension "harsh and unwarranted."

He said the family is upset with "negative" media attention, which they feel singles their son out, and because they haven't heard from Calipari.

"It is very disheartening as parents for us to watch our son placed under scrutiny," said Alphonza Williams, 52, a yard master for Conrail.

"Sometimes the real story can never be told," said Sarah Williams, 52, an inspector for Pratt and Whitney.

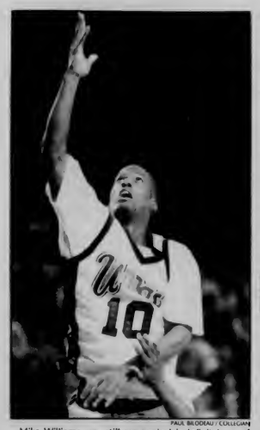
"We have to consider Mike. There are things that one might want to say but we don't want to have any regret as far as hurting Mike."

She did not elaborate. Alphonza Williams said race is not a factor in the suspension of his son, who is Black.

Despite a meeting in Massachusetts Athletic Director Bob Marcum Monday, Alphonza Williams said the couple called the news conference because "we feel we have no other alternative."

He said they reached "a better understanding" with Marcum, but did not elaborate on the meeting.

Although the Williams' retained a lawyer, they said no legal action will be taken against the University even if their son never plays for UMass again.



PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Mike Williams was still suspended indefinitely as of last night, despite a press conference held by his parents to discuss the matter on Monday afternoon.

■ No. 5 UMass rolls over Cardinals at the Centrum

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — Mike Williams was not in attendance, but he was the most thought of and talked about aspect of No. 5 Massachusetts on Sunday afternoon. It's too bad, because the Minutemen who were in action against Louisville should have been the ones people were chatting about.

Though they may not be the same team who sat atop the Associated Press Top 25 poll through the month of January just yet, the Massachusetts squad that took the Worcester Centrum court had the same approach. Relentless rebounding, aggressive defense, diving for loose balls — all of these were factors in a total team effort that resulted in a 91–76 Minuteman win over the Cardinals in front of the 13,758 in attendance.

UMass 91
Louisville 76

"We had to get back to that aggressive style, diving for loose balls, taking charges," senior guard Derek Kellogg said. "Louisville's a good team, and if we didn't do that today, [as well as] shoot 50 percent and rebound, I think it would have been a different ballgame."

While Williams was said to be back at home in Hartford, Conn., serving his indefinite suspension, the low post of Massachusetts took advantage of the absence of Samaki Walker, out with a stress fracture to his right foot.

The Minutemen scored 69 points in the paint, and owned a 10 rebound advantage over Louisville (39–29).

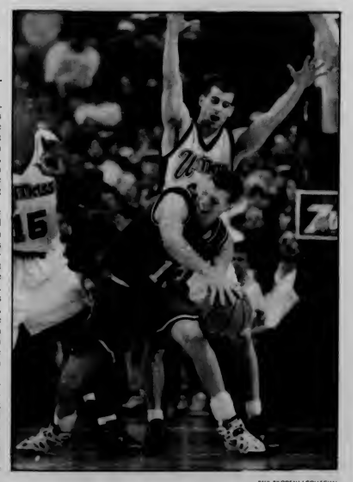
After leading the Cardinals 12–10, Massachusetts went on a 15–4 run, led by 11 points from the frontcourt, to make it 27–14 with 9:56 left in the half. Lou Roe (21 points), Marcus Camby (16 points) and Tyrone Weeks (eight points) scored 23 of the 27 Massachusetts points in that stretch. Louisville then went on their own 14–7 run, capped off by a Brian Kiser 3–pointer, to cut the Minuteman lead to 34–28.

"I think their inside people dominated the boards on us with a small lineup like we had," Louisville coach Denny Crum said. "I didn't know if we could beat them or not [with Walker], but playing with four guards was difficult against a team like Massachusetts."

"We rebounded the ball. We came in with the game plan of posting the ball," Massachusetts coach John Calipari said. "We were going to go inside, and we did that."

The last four baskets scored were all

Turn to HOOPS, page 7



PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen played tough defense in Sunday's 91–76 win over Louisville. Shown is Derek Kellogg (14) and Lou Roe (15) covering Cardinal B.J. Flynn (13).

Minutewomen beat URI on national TV

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

After coming up short three previous times this season, the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team finally won a close one.

In a nationally–televised matchup, the Minutewomen prevailed, 76–72, over the Rhode Island Rams before a crowd of 1,826 in the William D. Mullins Center last night.

UMass was 1–3 in close games heading into last night's matchup.

UMass 82
Temple 40

They came up short against Eastern Michigan (Nov. 26) 56–55, Detroit (Dec. 10) 66–65 and George Washington (Feb. 11) 66–65. Last night, they got one in the win column.

The junior tandem of All–America candidates Melissa Gurile and Octavia Thomas led the Minutewomen. Gurile scored 25 points and grabbed 12 rebounds while Thomas also scored 25 points and pulled down a career–high 15 boards.

UMass 76
URI 72

"Melissa and Octavia really stepped up and did the things that they needed to do," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "Octavia went to the offensive boards and came up with some huge offensive rebounds.

"Melissa was ready. This was a big game for her, she struggled against them in the past, so for her to step out and play this kind of game was important."

Gurile was on fire in the early going, scoring eight of the Minutewomen's first 10 points, including the first six.

With 3:56 left in the half, the Minutewomen went on a 6–0 run to make a five–point game into an 11–point cushion. But the Rams then went on a 10–3 run to end the half only down by four.

The Minutewomen took a 70–66 lead on a Thomas jumper with 2:26 to go, but Ram Kerry Giroux was left wide open and nailed a trey to make it a one–point game. Gurile answered with a jumper off of a pass from Crystal Carroll (11 points) to increase UMass' lead to three, 72–69.

The Ram's Marcie Byrd then hit a jumper while getting fouled by Beth Kuzmeski with 1:29 left. She had a chance for a three–point play to tie

Turn to WOMEN, page 7

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Octavia Thomas (4) grabbed a career–high 15 rebounds to lead the Minutewomen to a 76–72 victory over the Rhode Island Rams last night at the Mullins Center.

Losses to UMass/Lowell develop potential rivalry

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

In the beginning of the season there was much speculation as to which opponent would develop into the first Hockey East rival for the University of Massachusetts.

The weekend series was a penalty–marred, physical, injury– filled intense affair. The Minutemen [5–23–2, 3–17 in Hockey East] came up on the short end of 7–4 scores Friday and Saturday night against UMass–Lowell [14–15–4, 8–10–1], with the makings of a rivalry in place.

UMass/Lowell 7
Massachusetts 4

"Parts of this series became very ugly, to some extent embarrassing. There was a lot of heated aggression," coach Joe Mallen said.

"There was some carry–over from both nights, but it's up to us to take advantage of undisciplined play," Lowell forward Greg Bullock said.

Saturday's crowd of 4,118 fans in the William D. Mullins Center saw the teams rack up 104 minutes in penalties. The River Hawks jumped all over the Minutemen with three first period goals on Brian Regan. Bullock (one goal, two assists) ended the flurry at 13:38 of the first.

Midway through the second period, Jon Jacques was hammered by Lowell defenseman Aaron Kriss, just out of the penalty box. Jacques suffered a broken nose, face lacerations and a concussion.

Lowell put the game away in the second period with three straight goals. Christian Sbrocca registered two assists as Bullock, Ryan Sandholm and Shannon Basaraba scored. The Minutemen scored two late goals to make it respectable as Warren Norris (11th) and Cahill (5th) got third period goals.

UMass/Lowell 7
Massachusetts 4

Craig Lindsay recorded his third win in a row, making 22 saves. Regan took the loss, stopping 37 of 43 shots he faced.

After Saturday's loss, Mallen had an on–ice discussion with the officials.

"The referees have been protecting the old teams in the league, and I'm concerned about our reputation. There was a lot of inconsistency in the calls tonight," Mallen said. "This is something we have to overcome in year one."

* * *

Friday's contest from the Tully Forum began with a Jeff Daw goal at 1:52, beating UMass goaltender Dave Kilduff off a feed into the slot from Ryan Sandholm. The first period ended as it started when Brendan Concanon got his first of three on the night, a power–play tally at 18:09.

Concanon scored again just 20 seconds into the period to make it 3–0. UMass stormed back with two goals as Norris scored at 3:29 of the second off a Chris Fawcett pass. At 4:10 Brian Corcoran netted his second goal of the year on an

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 80 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, February 22, 1995

The Spectrum is it for UMass–Rutgers

The Massachusetts–Rutgers game suspended at halftime on Feb. 7 will be continued on Mar. 3 at the Spectrum in Philadelphia (See Sports, page 14).

Tuning in to radio ads

A UMass marketing professor's new book examines the politics of radio ads, from gender issues to demographics (See story, page 2).

Billy Madison flunks out

Adam Sandler's flick Billy Madison and Blue Sky are the latest movies reviewed for your viewing pleasure (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Today will be sunny and increasingly warm. Thursday will bring much of the same, with cooler temps. Friday will cool down, with a chance of precipitation.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 35	HIGH: 45 LOW: 30	HIGH: 25 LOW: 20

U.S., Mexico sign deal for $20B peso bailout; critics cringe

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States and Mexico signed an agreement yesterday that will unlock $20 billion in U.S. support to stabilize the Mexican peso — but under tough terms that could cause severe economic and political distress in Mexico.

Officials in the Clinton administration and the government of Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo acknowledged that hard times lie ahead for Mexico. But they stressed the situation would have been much worse without the support package.

"Under these agreements, Mexico should be able to take the steps necessary to end its liquidity crisis and in time the Mexican economy, which is fundamentally sound, should stabilize," Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said at a signing ceremony.

Rubin said the agreement had taken political courage by the Mexicans in agreeing to the "kind of stringent economic medicine this program requires."

In order to receive the U.S. support, Mexico pledged to continue a tight–money policy that has already seen interest rates soar to nearly 50 percent, to run a budget surplus of 0.5 percent this year and to move more quickly toward privatizing state–run enterprises.

Already, Mexican businesses and consumers are complaining loudly about the surge in interest rates and private economists are predicting a Mexican recession, at least a short run, is all but inevitable.

Mexican Finance Minister Guillermo Ortiz said negotiators had met virtually around the clock since Thursday to hammer out final details of the agreement. Also signing the agreement for Mexico in addition to Ortiz was Miguel Mancera, head of the Bank of Mexico.

"This program will only work, you know, if Mexicans put all their efforts to overcome this very difficult situation," Mancera said. "We have a strong program and we are committed to its full implementation."

Private economists called the plan bitter but necessary medicine. "This makes a recession in Mexico likely, at least a mild one," said David Wyss, chief financial economist at DRI–McGraw Hill, a private consulting firm in Lexington, Mass.

The slower growth will have an impact in the United States as well since Mexico is America's third largest export market.

Wyss said DRI was forecasting U.S. exports to Mexico would drop by $10 billion this year, translating into a loss of 350,000 U.S. jobs.

The $20 billion in U.S. loans and loan guarantees is part of a $52 billion international package that includes $17.8 billion in commitments from the International Monetary Fund and $10 billion in funds from several European countries.

The $20 billion in U.S. assistance is coming from a fund that was established to support the U.S. dollar.

Burn granted prestigious award

Germany honors Associate provost for aiding relations

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts faculty member was bestowed Germany's most prestigious award granted to a non–German citizen on yesterday afternoon at the chancellor's house.

Dr. Barabara B. Burn, associate provost for international programs, was awarded the Officer's Cross of the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany for promoting mutual understanding between Germans and Americans.

The ceremony was held at Hillside, home of UMass Chancellor David K. Scott and his wife Kathleen.

"The most important...reason that brought us here tonight is the role [Burn] has played for the University of Freiburg and the University of Massachusetts," said Irene Hinrichsen, deputy consul general of the German Consulate in Boston.

The award is bestowed to individuals that have greatly enhanced German–American relations, Burn said. It is a rare occasion that the award is granted.

Burn has played an instrumental role in coordinating and enlarging cultural relations between the five UMass campuses, and the nine universities located in the German state of Baden–Württemberg, one of which is the University of Freiburg, Hinrichsen said.

The award, granted in the name of Roman Herzog, president of Germany, was given to Burn for her special merits in German–American relations, Hinrichsen said.

The ceremony was attended by approximately 75 guests, many of which were Burn's present or former colleagues she cited as being "honored," as well.

"The sense of community is essential in the international community," Burn said. "People here should be proud."

Chancellor David K. Scott, who called himself a great believer in international exchange, introduced Burn and cited her enthusiasm, vision and insights as being integral in the success of the exchange.

Burn, who has been a member of the UMass faculty for 25 years, is the director of the International Programs Office. She gave credit to her staff for the role they have played in helping the exchange succeed.

"I'm overwhelmed, and everybody else deserves it," Burn said. "There are many, many people who contributed to the [American– German] relationship."

Burn also cited the reciprocity that helped make the exchange successful. American students have gone to German universities, while German students have come to American universities, she said.

Since 1982, the number of German students has increased three times in American universities and colleges, Burn said. The number of German students at UMass has increased tenfold.

Burn also gave credit to the enormous faculty input.

"As you can see, we have that with all the people in the room," Burn said.

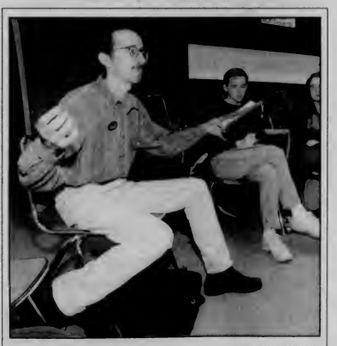
Support from the administration was credited as being an important part contributing to the success of the exchange, Burn said. Current UMass President Michael K. Hooker and former President John W. Lederle were two examples that offered their support for the German–American exchange.

Lederle, whose term was from 1960 to 1970, when Burn earned her tenure at UMass, was in attendance at the ceremony.

"I think it's wonderful," Lederle said. "It's a great honor and she deserves it. It's a boost for the state university."

JUAN JOSE CHACON QUIROS / COLLEGIAN

Dr. Barbara B. Burn (center) received the Officer's Cross of the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany at a ceremony at the chancellor's home yesterday afternoon.



PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

AIDS activist Bob Lederer spoke against GLBT political apathy as part of the "Escape to Planet Q" conference this past weekend.

Activist urges against GLBT political apathy

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

Urging his audience to "raise your rage," activist Bob Lederer led a weekend workshop on AIDS activism in the 1990s. The workshop was part of the "Escape to Planet Q" conference that took place at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Feb. 17 through Feb. 19.

Lederer, a member of the direct action group ACT–UP since 1988, expressed concern that many gay, lesbian and bisexual organizations have "put activism on the shelf" and turned to "service work."

While not directly critical of such work, Lederer told workshop attendees that "service work is not a substitute for political work."

Budget cuts and increasing political apathy are making the fight against AIDS "a lot harder."

"We have begun to see some horrendous cuts in terms of the things that keep people alive," Lederer said.

Lederer cited an example from New York City, where in 1993, Republican mayor Rudoph W. Giuliani proposed budget cuts that would have eliminated an AIDS service program. The Division of AIDS Services is a public agency that helps people with AIDS "negotiate government bureaucracy" and get help with Medicaid, welfare and housing.

40 percent of people with AIDS are on Medicaid and eligible for welfare, according to Lederer. Without the help of an agency like the Division of AIDS Services, many of these people would be too weak to fight for their benefits on their own.

Budget cuts "outrageous" and "threatening"

According to Lederer, when the mayor's budget cuts were announced, people all over the city rose up in protest. These cuts, he said, were "so outrageous and so threatening to people's ability to survive" that people from all

Turn to LECTURE, page 3

Hooker to answer concerns during UM visit

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts President Michael K. Hooker will be available to answer questions faculty and students may have when he comes to visit the University on Thursday afternoon.

Hooker, who previously gave the University a C+ on a mock report card, is scheduled to make an address and conduct a question and answer period when he attends this weeks faculty senate meeting at Herter Hall.

Those who have questions regarding the overchanging vision at UMass, both system–wide and at Amherst, will have the opportunity to have them answered, according to John Bracey, secretary of the faculty senate.

According to Bracey, the University's vision and direction need to be clarified for the upcoming fiscal year and years to follow.

At this point, the University needs a top–down scale of goals to be outlined, as things continue to change and money grows scarce, Bracey said. People at the University need to have the systems initiatives and priorities outlined.

"It doesn't take a genius to see that there are some buildings going down and some that are going up," Bracey said. Faculty wants to know where to expect future cuts.

Faculty held a preparatory meeting last Thursday, at which related issues that may be mentioned at this weeks meeting were discussed.

Such issues included a proposal for an early retirement package and Hooker's stand on Gov. William F. Weld's budget proposal, which would cut $10 million from the UMass system.

Welds refusal of a proposed salary raise for faculty as part of the budget has received criticism, as well as the actual letter explaining the refusal from his secretary, Charles D. Baker.

Baker's letter said that UMass faculty were "underworked and overpaid."

Baker has recently released a letter responding to criticisms of his initial letter of refusal.

In this letter Baker denied referring to the faculty as "underworked and overpaid," but said that he saw no compelling evidence that faculty was underpaid, relative to its peer universities.

He wrote that he would like to further discussion on contract standards, and noted that "faculty pay, tenure policies and teaching schedules were being hotly debated on almost every public and private university campus in the country."

The faculty senate meeting will be held at 3:30 p.m. on Thursday at Herter 227.

Hooker's speech and question and answer period will be the first activity on the senate's agenda.

Union strikers speak on labor, corporate issues

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

Members of two striking or locked out unions spoke of unfair labor situations and corporate greed yesterday at the University of Massachusetts.

The 3 p.m presentation at the Labor Center of Draper Hall opened with Royal Plankenhorn, a member of the United Paperworkers Union (UPIU), who talked of the employee lock out situation in Decatur, Ill.

According to Plankenhorn, A.E. Staley Manufacturing Company locked out almost 800 factory workers from working after the union had disputed unsafe conditions and working without a contract since October of 1992.

In response to the lock out, union members and people from the Decatur community held several protests outside the plant, said Plankenhorn.

"We are committed to non–violence," said Plankenhorn. "Public opinion works."

Turn to UNION, page 3

HRTA career fair successful as 79 corporations participate

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

Yesterday the University of Massachusetts Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration Department held an "International Event" in the Campus Center auditorium.

The department held its 21st annual career day fair which is run primarily by students. Students prepare the whole event from contacting corporations to establishing floor plans.

"This fair is the most professionally run fair by students," said Irene Chase, manager of training for Chili's restaurant chain.

Jason Magoon, chairman and senior HRTA major, felt this year's fair had the best student turnout.

About 79 corporations attended the event ranging from hotel chains such as Marriott and Hyatt, to restaurant chains such as Chili's.

The companies offers students numerous opportunities from post graduate employment to internships and cooperatives.

Chili's offers juniors and sophomores summer cooperatives and internships which may lead to future employment after graduation.

Chicago based Marriott management services offers graduating seniors the opportunity to work as entry level managers in various fields ranging from retirement communities to food services.

Hyatt Hotels Corporation offers students internships and cooperatives based upon their educational needs said Gary Balog, director of human resources.

Many of the companies are looking for energetic people who are interested in management, but are not exclusively HRTA majors.

Marriott is looking for individuals who are interested in a career in management said Steve Strange, human resources manager and UMass alumni.

Chase said Chili's is looking for students who are interested in more then just a summer job.

Balog said students should have a strong backgrounds in the hospitality industry.

"Marriott is much more diverse then people are aware, most people think of hotels with big marques," said Strange.

Strange said the management services division of Marriott is the fastest growing division in the company which offers motivated graduates the opportunity to rise quickly.

He cited the example of recent UMass alumni Kristin Ewald who in three years time rose quickly through the company ranks.

Hyatt is offering interviews today at the Mather Career Center.

Campus Police Log

Assault and Battery

Feb. 17

A parent called to report a previous attack on his son. The alleged victim, who lives in Coolidge Residence Hall, was contacted for a report.

Accident – Property Damage

Feb. 17

A vehicle collided into a PVTA bus that was making a turn. There was minor damage and one vehicle was cited for passing.

Feb. 18

A vehicle lost control on the ice on Field Road and skidded off the roadway.

Feb. 19

A vehicle appeared to have been pushed into another vehicle in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.

Suspicious Vehicle

Feb. 18

A vehicle tipped on its side in North Village Apartments, leaking hazardous material. Environmental Health and Safety cleaned up the spill and the vehicle was towed.

Feb. 19

Robert M. Wolfson, Jr., 25, of Amherst was arrested for obstructing traffic on Dallas Drive, and operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol.

Vandalism

Feb. 17

A group reportedly smashed a Thoreau Residence Hall window with snow balls.

Feb. 17

There was a report of a smoke bomb thrown into a suite in Brown Residence Hall.

Feb. 19

An individual reported that a vehicle had its windshield smashed and other damage done to it in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.

Suspicious Activity

Feb. 18

Staff reported an older individual walking through Washington Residence Hall, drinking beer.

Feb. 19

There was a report of fireworks being set off in a room in Pierpont Residence Hall.

Feb. 19

There was a report of individuals throwing property from the Pierpont Residence Hall.

Burglary – Breaking and Entering

Feb. 19

An individual reported a vehicle broken into in parking lot 49 on Windmill Lane, and property valued at $1200 was stolen. The property included a stereo, cellular phone, radar detector and clothing.

Arrests

Feb. 18

Yasunari R. Ruwan, 18, of Tarrytown, N.Y. was arrested and checked by an ambulance crew after running into traffic on North Pleasant Street. Rowan was charged with disorderly conduct and possession of a Class D substance.

Feb. 18

Andrei Ting Liat Oei, 19, of Norwalk, Conn. was arrested for being a minor transporting alcoholic beverages, speeding and failure to submit to a police officer.

Feb. 18

Jeffrey R. Lockhart, 19, of Holliston was arrested for damaging a PVTA bus stop on North Pleasant Street. Lockhart was charged with malicious destruction of property worth more than $250, disorderly conduct and possession of an altered Massachusetts driving license.

Feb. 19

Douglas D. Clark, 18, of Springfield was arrested for malicious destruction of property in a room in Pierpont Residence Hall.

Feb. 19

Matthew R Murphy, 20, of Melrose was arrested for malicious destruction of property in a room in Pierpont Residence Hall.

Alarm – Fire

Feb. 17

A broken steam pipe set off the alarm at Pierpont Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior

Feb. 19

An individual reported an encounter with a group of intoxicated individuals making derogatory remarks about her cultural background in the basement of Chadborne Residence Hall.

Motor Vehicle Theft

Feb. 19

A vehicle was found in parking lot 13 that had been reported stolen on Friday.

COMING SOON!

The Collegian will be rolling out the red carpet for all students interested in any of the three departments — business, graphics and news at an open house.

Any students interested in knowing how the largest college daily newspaper in New England works should come down. We are always looking for new and exciting staff members.

CHECK THE COLLEGIAN FOR MORE DETAILS. COMING IN EARLY MARCH TO YOUR FAVORITE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT OFFICE

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, C/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Feb. 22

Lecture — "The Return of Stonewall." Part of Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series. Lloyd Pratt, Ph.D. candidate, Brown University. Free. UMass Campus Center room 917, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Theater — You Could be Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College. Movement–oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Forum — A Human Relations Forum to discuss whether is time for another resource network which would increase the sharing of information, resources and support among faculty and staff. UMass Campus Center room 903, noon to 1:30 p.m.

Meeting — Golden Key Honor Society will have a general membership meeting. UMass Campus Center room 803, 7 p.m.

Academic — The College of Engineering will host Freshman Majors Night to help new students choose from one of six majors. UMass Marcus Auditorium, 6:30 p.m.

Thursday, Feb. 23

Film — Yiddish Folksingers on Miami Beach, Joel Saxe. Discussion with the director will follow. Free. UMass, Herter Hall room 227. Part of Jewish Film Series. Information: 549–1710.

Film — High and Low. In Japanese with English subtitles. Thriller. Business executive who is financially ruined when he nobly pays ransom money to kidnappers who mistakenly steal his chauffeur's son. Third film in the Akira Kurosawa Film Series sponsored by the Japanese Foundation. Free. Amherst College, Merrill III, 7:30 p.m.

Film — The Beijing Watermelon. English subtitles. Sharp– witted comedy about a Tokyo grocer who becomes involved with a group of penniless Chinese students, with potentially disastrous results. Demonstrates the keen sense of social satire that characterized the best of recent Japanese cinema. Free. Smith College, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Symposium — "Celebration of Learning." W.E.B. Du Bois symposium. Bill Strickland, Michael Thelwell and David Du Bois will present W.E.B. Du Bois the intellectual, the citizen and the world leader. Followed by a plaque presentation by Graduate Student Senate. Free. UMass Campus Center room 163, 11:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

Theater — You Could be Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College. Movement–oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Homeless Women and the State: Scrambling for resources." Free. Smith College, Seelye Hall 201, 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Can Computers Be Free Agents?" UMass, Skinner Hall Lounge, 5:15 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Call UMass Honor Program if interested in attending: 545–2483.

Lecture — "The Roots of Evil, the roots of Caring: Perpetrators, Bystanders and Heroic Reseuers." In conjunction with exhibition onsite Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block. Free. Amherst College, Converse Assembly Room, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The Grief Survival Group, a support group organized by people who have suffered a loss and talk about grief, will be discussing "Models of Grief." Everyone is welcome. UMass, Tobin Hall in the Psychological Services Center on the first floor, 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Music — Pianist Garrick Ohlsson, recipient of the 1994 Avery Fisher Prize present Chopin program. Music at Amherst Series. $16/$10, discounts for students. Amherst College, Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Reservations: 542–2195.

Friday, Feb. 24

Lecture — "An Oceanic Perspective on the Global Greenhouse Effect: Reconstruction of Paleocceanic PCO," by John Jasper, University of Connecticut, UMass, Morrill 2 South room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — "A Christian Call for Racial Reconciliation." Spencer Perkins and Christ Rice, co-authors of More than Equals and editors of Urban Family magazine are members of an inter–racial household, church and community–building ministry in Mississippi. Free. Amherst College Johnson Chapel, 7:30 p.m.

Theater — You Could be Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College. Movement–oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Film — Strictly Ballroom. Australian film about a young, competitive ballroom dancer who insists on dancing his own provocative steps. $1.75. Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Music — Ethnic Man. Powerful, fast, ethno–cultural related comedy. Free. Amherst College Frontroom, 8 p.m. Information: 542–5773.

Music — Japanese Koto Music. Masayo Ishigure of the Sawai Academy of Music in Japan and artist–in–residence at Wesleyan University presents traditional and contemporary Koto music. Free. Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Information: 542–2195.

Notices

Senior Class gift — Voting for senior class gift will take place on the Campus Center Concourse throughout this week. This is an opportunity to decide where your gift will go.

Yearbook photos — Senior photo session will continue through Feb. 24. Call 1–800–836–0558 to schedule an appointment.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the Umoja Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrone Johnson, 546–6787.

Voter registration — Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center offers voter registration daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. UMass, Student Union Building, room 428. Information: 545–0865.

Prof's new book examines radio ads

By Siobhan Cunningham
Collegian Correspondent

The success of products advertised on the radio depends greatly on the gender of the spokesperson for the ad, according to a new book released by a University of Massachusetts marketing professor.

In Professor Marc Weinberger's book, Effective Radio Advertising, he analyzed studies on the effectiveness of radio ads.

"Good ideas don't have to be very complicated," Weinberger said.

The book analyzed radio ads by separating them through a color–coded system, Weinberger said. The different colors served to categorize different products advertised on the radio.

This kind of separation has never been tried before in the research of advertising, Weinberger said. The technique has proven itself to be effective in examining trends within advertising.

"It was pretty intuitive...advertising for different products should differ. We were able to come up with a pretty novel way to illustrate that with the color matrix," Weinberger said.

Professor Weinberger received his data from Radio Research Recall, Inc. (RRR). RRR has been pre–testing ads for over 20 years.

Experimentation and Call–backs

A 24–hour recall technique was used to test the effectiveness of the ads.

A control group of about two hundred people in different areas of the country were brought in to sample a non–related product. While they were sampling a random product, the radio ad was played between two other ads. The next day the people tested were called to see what they remembered about the ad.

> "It was pretty intuitive...advertising for different products should differ. We were able to come up with a pretty novel way to illustrate that…"
> Professor Marc Weinberger

The ads were coded with such labels as male presenter, female presenter, humor and slice of life, he said. He then applied theories from consumer behavior to divide his products into risky, functional and fun groups.

Weinberger divided his products into "cells," or colors. There are four different cells — white, red, blue, and yellow.

These colors specified the product scaled as a low or high risk for investment, and whether the product is considered tools or toys.

For example, when a female presenter pitched a "blue cell" product, she did significantly better than a male. Blue cell items were labeled as low–risk investments and considered tools.

On the other hand, males did better at selling "red cell" items, which are goods such as sports cars and jewelry.

According to Weinberger, the book also shows how radio can be beneficial for those who are trying to reach very specific audiences. For example, airlines who are offering special airfares to a specific country can advertise on radio stations that broadcast in the native language.

Stop in and Register to win SPRING BREAK VACATION
4 days- 3 nights
BAHAMA PRINCESS RESORT AND CASINO
Drawing Saturday February 25!
No purchase necessary
McDonald's Express
25 N Pleasant Street Amherst 253-2653

Collegian Classifieds. They Work.
113 Campus Center 545-3500

MEN'S OPEN SOCCER LEAGUE
WEST STATE SOCCER LEAGUE, INC.
Founded 1974, Affiliated with M.S.A., U.S.S.F.
COME JOIN OUR LEAGUE
For More Information Contact Skip Clark Today!
1-413-562-2603

"Please Adam... please let me out of this stinky pickle barrel!!!"
"Now Joseph, you know I do not wish to punish you as such...but you will serve this penance!"
"Please Adam, have mercy!!!"
"You will only be released at the time in which you reveal the presence of my coveted Mass Daily Collegian..."

Study Japanese this Summer!
Intensive six–week program at Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon July 18–Aug 27. Study Japanese lang. (all levels) & culture courses in economics, literature and history. Earn 8 sem. hrs (12 qtr. hrs) while living and studying with Japanese students. Outdoor wilderness trip included. Prior language study not required. Scholarships available!
Oregon/Japan Summer Program
222 SW Columbia St., Suite 1750
Portland, OR 97201
1-800-823-7938 opieannb@aol.com

MORE TREADMILLS! MORE STAIRMASTERS! MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

rock bottom prices
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

CAR STEREO JUST DO IT! SUBWOOFERS SPEAKERS SPEAKERS. MOST ... SPEAKERS ...NEATER LOOKING, BETTER SOUNDING, MORE TECHNOLOGICALLY ... HOME THEATER IT'S BIGGER THAN LIFE SPEAKERS ... TURNTABLES CD ... HOME THEATER ... REMOTE STARTS ... CAR STEREO ... CD PLAYER ... THE MOST INCREDIBLE...DON'T BE ... COMPONENTS & THEY'RE ALL ... CAR STEREO ... SPEAKERS SPEAKERS SPEAKERS ... JUST DO IT! CAR ... BEST SALE ON THE PLANET ... HOME THEATER ... CD PLAYER ... HOME THEATER ... CAR STEREO ... DASH FOR THE DEMOS DEMOS ON SALE MON. FEB. 20 ONLY ALL DEMOS 20–50% OFF ONE DEMO AVAILABLE ON EVERY PRODUCT WE SELL DEMO SALE DOORS OPEN 10A.M.
Every Component is on Sale
The Big One!
DASH FOR THE DEMOS MON. FEB. 20
STOREWIDE SALE SAT. FEB. 18–SAT. FEB. 25
Sound & Music
SOUND & MUSIC · GOOD ADVICE & AN HONEST PRICE · 351 PLEASANT STREET · NORTHAMPTON · 584-9547 · MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

STOREWIDE SALE SAT. FEB. 18–SAT. FEB. 25
- Kenwood KRC-101 Car Cassette, removable face $149
- Kenwood KFC-1654 Car Speakers, surprising value $35 pr.
- Clarion in-dash Car CD player, high power x4 $249
- Python insurance-approved Car Alarm, installed $199
- Boston Acoustics HD-5 Speakers, small wonder $115 pr.
- Boston Acoustics HD-9 Speakers, save $100! $239 pr.
- Nuance 1.1 Speakers wistands "amazing image" $329 pr.
- Klipsch 5.5 Horn-type Speakers, 98 dB SPL! $699 pr.
- Denon DRA-365R receiver, an audio gem $249
- Onkyo TX-910 receiver, 90 watts, remote control $195
- Onkyo DXC-211 Six-disc Carousel CD Player $249
- Adcom GFA-555II Power Amp, 400 total watts! $749
- JVC HRJ-610 Hifi/Stereo VCR, ready for surround $299
- Sennheiser HD-435 Headphones save $20 $39
- NAD 302 Integrated Amp., "stunning for the money" $199
- California Audio Labs DX-1 CD Player $469
- Proton 420 Table Radio, dual alarm, line-in $89
- Velodyne VA-1012 Subwoofer, amazing bass $599
- JVC PCX-110AM/FM Double Cassette/CD Boombox $229
- Onkyo TX-SV414 Pro Home Theater Receiver $319

90-DAYS SAME AS CASH WITH YOUR GOOD CREDIT
NO LAY AWAYS, NO CASH REFUNDS
EVERY COMPONENT ON SALE

Holocaust, art examined at Amherst lecture

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — In what he called "an appropriate culmination" of his career, Rabbi Yechiael Lander gave a gallery talk at Amherst College yesterday in conjunction with a photo exhibit "Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block," featuring Holocaust rescuers.

Lander, who is retiring this spring after 28 years as religious advisor at Smith and Amherst College, began his career with another program that integrated the Holocaust and art. Lander said at that time he was told "it was not appropriate for a religious advisor to raise divisive questions."

At the beginning of his speech, "Moral Acts, Immoral Times: The Holocaust Rescuers," Lander said he hoped things have changed.

Lander praised the "righteous Gentiles," including those featured in the exhibit, who saved Jews during the Holocaust. However, said Lander, "There was a pitifully, painfully low level of resistance in the general population."

> While a few people acted courageously, risking their lives to try to save Jews, Rabbi Yechiael Lander said there were "volunteer civilian militia that happily engaged in gathering Jews and murdering them."

According to Lander, Block "thought very hard as to whether she should use black and white" photography.

"She thought that by her use of color we could relate to these people, not as symbols, but as people," said Lander.

Block began a "casual exploration" of Holocaust rescuers, said Lander. She then traveled through Europe, the United States and Canada, with Malka Drucker, a journalist who documented the experiences of the rescuers. Excerpts from the interviews accompany the photographs.

While a few people acted courageously, risking their lives to try to save Jews, Lander said there were "volunteer civilian militia that happily engaged in gathering Jews and murdering them."

The exhibit, "Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block," is on exhibit until Feb. 26 at the Mead Art Museum.

Visiting local engineers offer advice and assurance to UMass students

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

Local engineers paid a visit to the University of Massachusetts yesterday to offer professional experience and to assure engineering students that the information they learn in the classroom has relevance after graduation.

Engineers from Spalding Sports Worldwide, responsible for the production of more than 800,000 golf balls a day, spoke to a crowd of 40 students and faculty at Marcus Hall as part of Engineers Week.

"It was interesting to hear what we're learning in class compared to what is actually going on in industry," said Erik Haugsjaa, a senior electrical engineering major. "It's more than just ideas with no basis in reality."

The speech consisted of advice and insight from Mario Godbout, Spalding's manager of process and Vincent Simonds, Spalding's manager of capitol equipment engineering.

Spalding is the nations oldest full–line sporting goods company. It was started in 1876 by a Boston Red Stockings pitcher and it now manufactures goods that are purchased world–wide.

Both Simonds and Godbout explained how they designed Spalding's "Factory of the Future" with which they increased the efficiency, production and quality of Spalding's golfballs.

Their continuous flow production process along with advanced automation reduced production time and cut electrical bills 21 percent on the manufacturing line, Simonds said.

As a result of the advanced automation 17 engineers were hired by Spalding to keep the mechanics running, Simonds said.

However, this has not been the only result of an increase in technology. The automation also resulted in 400 hourly factory workers losing their jobs, Simonds said.

> "It takes a certain dedication to do it, but [the opportunity] is real."
> –Vincent Simonds

"There has been a shift in the work force to fewer jobs, but with higher pay," Simonds said.

With this forewarning, Simonds also spoke of job opportunities. Currently there are engineers who are former UMass graduates that work at Spalding.

There are still a lot of challenges to be overcome and money to be made in the field of engineering, according to Simonds.

He gave an example of attempting to design a machine which would automatically sew the stitches onto softballs.

"If any of you could invent that, you would be a multi– millionaire," Simonds said.

Spalding has spoken with Joseph Goldstein, dean of the college of engineering at UMass, to form a partnership with the University.

Through this partnership students would be offered tours of manufacturing lines, internships and special engineering projects, said Goldstein.

"There is an opportunity in manufacturing for engineers," Simond said. "It takes a certain dedication to do it, but [the opportunity] is real."

AIDS patient to soon receive baboon marrow

By Daniel Q. Haney
Associated Press

ATLANTA — In a sign of doctors' growing desperation in the fight against AIDS, a patient with the disease will soon receive a bone marrow transplant from a baboon to rebuild his ravaged immune system.

The transplant, described Tuesday at a conference sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, is meant to resupply the human bloodstream with baboon blood cells, which do not get infected with the AIDS virus.

"Given the fact that there is no treatment for AIDS, people have been very comfortable with moving ahead," said Dr. Suzanne Ildstad, who is directing the experiment.

One earlier attempt at the procedure has failed, but animal experiments suggest that this time, the transplant might work, thanks to a new discovery in immunology.

Many questions remain, however, including whether baboon blood cells can carry out the same jobs inside a person as human cells do.

Dr. Fritz Bach, a cross–species transplant researcher at Harvard Medical School, said he doubts it will work.

"I have concern about how long the cells will survive," he said. "I would be surprised — pleasantly — if it fulfills everything we hope it will."

Ildstad said the experiment will take place sometime in the next few months on one of several terminally ill AIDS patients who have been screened for the therapy. The operation will be done at San Francisco General Hospital, where doctors are collaborating with Ildstad.

That doctors would even consider such a seemingly outlandish approach demonstrates their frustration at fighting AIDS.

■ Speaker: 'raise your rage' on activism

LECTURE, continued from page 1

Eventually a coalition formed, and soon the group coordinated a plan of action, said Lederer. Beginning with "zaps," when the mayor's office was attacked by hundreds of phone calls and faxes, the coalition made sure the budget cuts got maximum attention.

The culmination of the plan was when 5,000 protesters marched across the Brooklyn Bridge. The protest was covered by local television and the New York newspapers.

As a result of the campaign, the mayor decided not to eliminate the Division of AIDS services. However, the budget was scaled back considerably and further cuts are expected in the future, said Lederer.

"The division is going to die a slow death," he said. "People with AIDS are starting to fall through the cracks already."

People "don't want to deal anymore"

Lederer also warned that political apathy among GLB groups was making the battle against AIDS even harder. Because these groups have been dealing with the disease for so long, many GLB people "don't want to deal anymore."

During the celebrations at Stonewall 25 in last June, demonstrators from ACT–UP and other groups staged a counter–protest by marching through downtown New York, Lederer said. The 8,000 marchers protested the way that AIDS had been treated by Stonewall 25 organizers and other GLB groups.

"At Stonewall 25, AIDS had a very low profile," he said.

This was not acceptable to people in ACT–UP and other AIDS action groups, who decided it was time to "get militant" and "just do it," said Lederer. Organizers ignored the need for an official parade permit.

"Political apathy" may lead to "tough times"

Although the protest received some coverage on television and in the press, Lederer pointed to the way the GLB magazine The Advocate played down the issue of AIDS.

According to Lederer, this kind of "political apathy" within the GLB community is going to lead to "tough times."

"There are a lot of very serious problems ahead of us, but there are other people in the same boat," he said.

By drawing on people within the GLB community and different ethnic, racial, and class groups, Lederer said, AIDS activists can rise up and fight the disease that has become the leading cause of death for Americans aged 25 to 44.

Without such activism, warned Lederer, politicians in Washington like Speaker of the House Rep. Newt Gingrich (R, Ga.) will institute budget cuts that will cut out large amounts of money for AIDS research, prevention and service.

"These cuts are going to kill people," he said.

■ Presentation highlights workers' plight

UNION, continued from page 1

Workers Fight Back." The video showed several protests by Staley workers and the surrounding community.

One such incident lead to local police using pepper mace on protestors that Plankenhorn said were peacefully demonstrating. The video showed children of the workers getting hit with the deterrent.

"Because of this incident, we no longer talk to the police," said Plenkenhorn. "October of last year 7,000 people rallied. The police didn't come near us because we didn't talk to them — they didn't know what we were going to do."

Plankenhorn said the UPIU had to start campaigning for money to battle the large corporation and the union received immediate support from its members.

"We raised dues from $23 to $100 a month," said Plankenhorn. "Everyone paid."

Plankenhorn said the campaign was successful in hurting Staley, a sweetener manufacturing factory, by convincing the Miller Beer Company to pull out from the corporation.

Plankenhorn asked the audience to write to Pepsi and Coca Cola companies, who are two of the biggest accounts Staley has, to stop using the company who has locked–out its workers.

Gary Garner, a member of the United Auto workers (UAW) union, was next to speak. The UAW is currently in a nationwide strike on the Caterpillar corporation.

According to Garner, Caterpillar workers are on strike for the same reason as Staley workers — unsafe and unfair labor conditions.

Garner, who has been working for Caterpillar for almost 20 years, after his grandfather, father and brothers, said the company is now tempting family members of the striking workers to break through the picket lines and work.

"We've been called stupid for not working and losing money," said Garner. "But we're not doing it for us, there's another generation behind us."

The Caterpillar company cannot permanently replace the striking workers by law, said Garner, but they have been using other workers for nine months now.

"Our jobs are our lives, we put our entire life into that job and now they're trying to throw us out like garbage," said Garner. "We have no other choice to sit out there, wait and let the system work through it."

Alex Rantrowitz, a member of the Western Massachusetts Jobs with Justice, one sponsor of the event, passed a hat to get funds for the two union represented.

Plankenhorn said the donations go to a food bank for the members and their families of the unions.

"One large software company has a slogan that says 'business is the engine of society,'" said Plankenhorn. "Labor is the fuel of that engine."

WOMEN making WAVES

Compiled by Erin Barnes

Foot fetish

Ranya Kelly of Arvada, Colorado, was rummaging through a dumpster for a cardboard box when she hit the mother lode: 500 pairs of new shoes. They were slightly streaked with yellow paint but Kelly knew she could find the footwear a better home than the trash heap.

Since then, she has become known as the "shoe lady," wending her way around Colorado, collecting and distributing shoes to needy people. For her work, the Arvada resident was named one of the 10 Most Caring People in America by the Washington–based Caring Institute.

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton presented the award to Kelly and other community leaders at a recent Capitol Hill ceremony.

First lady

Following a two–month search, the Hampshire Regional School District has selected a new assistant superintendent — the first woman to be named to either of its top two administrative posts. Superintendent William G. Erickson announced the choice of Barbara Thronson, who was one of three candidates.

A native of Montana, Thronson has 15 years of experience as an elementary and special education teacher and has held a number of administrative positions, including elementary principal, teacher trainer, coordinator of special education and superintendent of schools.

Erickson said the 10–member committee who worked with him to fill the post was impressed with Thronson's extensive knowledge of curriculum, her leadership experience, and her familiarity with educational issues.

Who to blame?

If police do not arrest a man although he repeatedly violates a restraining order and continues to harass his wife, and the man then goes on to rape and murder his mother–in– law, is the city liable?

No, says the Eight Circuit Court of Appeals in overturning a $1.2 million jury verdict. The wife of the offender claimed the police violated her right to equal protection because they treat domestic disputes less seriously than other crimes. She offered statistics showing police made fewer arrests in domestic assault cases than in non–domestic assault cases, and that over 90% of domestic assault victims are women.

But the court said her claim failed on two counts: treating domestic disputes differently from other crimes is not sex discrimination, and, she failed to prove the refusal to arrest the husband "caused" the rape and murder.

Virtual parenthood

A far cry from Barbie dolls and Cabbage Patch Kids, a new innovative doll has been created in California that simulates the real–life rigors of baby–hood, and to give mothers and fathers a sobering lesson in infant parenting.

Weighing in at seven pounds, the "Baby Think It Over" doll is made to cry at random intervals throughout the night. To stop the tears and shricking, a "parent" must hold a key in the doll's back for anywhere between five to 35 minutes, thereby approximating the time needed to care for a newborn. After spending three days (and nights) with the doll, one teen remarked that now "you definitely don't want that baby."

Making a splash

Cheers to the Amherst Regional High School girls swimming and diving team for winning the Western mass swimming championships this past weekend!

Compiled from magazine and newspaper sources.

Peace Corps on-campus at UMASS
Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 22
7:00 pm
Room 911, Campus Center
For more information, call or visit the UMass Peace Corps Office
12 Draper Hall
UMass Amherst
545-2105

Collegian Graphics
We spend all day and all night making New England's Newspaper of the year look like a million bucks
Call 545-1864 or come down to 103 Campus Center to get involved

MORE TREADMILLS! MORE STAIRMASTERS! MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

Get Involved! with campus health issues SHAB*
- Sponsor health projects
- Represent student health care concerns
- Review UHS budget
- Serve on UHS Search Committees
- Meet other students interested in health care

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT
Meeting: Wednesday, February 22
Where: UHS Room 302
Time: 6:00 - 7:00 P.M.
*Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971) University Health Services

The One Day Only SALE
Friday February 24, 1995
7:00am-9:00pm
20% OFF All in-Stock Merchandise (5% off ordered items)
-In-Line Skates
-Quad Skates
-Hockey Skates & Equip.
-Skateboards
-All the Accessories
RollerDerby
Rollerblade.
The On Ramp SKATE SHOP
Located at Interskate 91 Fun Centers
Hampshire Mall * Hadley, MA * 586-8344

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hooley Editor-in-Chief
Kelly Sgarg Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager
Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager
Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager
Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Machado Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jessica Taverna News Editor
Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Andrew Bruce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Eric Aberanis Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The appalling automobile

Richard Gilluly

It's hard to say which has done more harm to America, Republicans or automobiles. It's also hard to separate the two; they operate in tandem, like love and marriage — or, perhaps more aptly, like toilets and sewage.

Automobiles? The occasional naive reader may still ask even 30 years into the environmental age. Aren't they the wonderful machines that give us so much freedom of movement and provide so many jobs (well, used to)? How could we do without them?

The answer is easy to find. Just ask the people who do do without them, sizeable percentages of the elderly, the young, the poor and the disabled.

Ask them how they manage without cars and most will tell you — very poorly, indeed. The reason is simple: With the rise of the automobile in America also has come the decline of public transportation. Many of the automobile-less also are immobile.

The decline of public transportation, along with the destruction (or downright absence) of dozens of other needed public services, is a product primarily of the laissez faire economics so beloved of Republicans.

"Business principles" dictate GOP policy and, therefore, Republicans will do away with every form of public service that "doesn't pay its own way" — by their definition — if they can get away with it.

Thus the GOP wants to kill public transportation programs and public TV and a decent level of public welfare benefits. It already has killed health insurance reform for 40 million uninsured Americans. It wants to cut Medicare and Medicaid benefits.

The automobile offers a case study in understanding this slash and burn approach to human need.

Republicans' built-in antipathy to any form of planning of America's infrastructure — especially if business profits are threatened — is one leg of their refusal to deal realistically with the automobile problem.

The other leg is their callous, Calvinist disdain for the needs of ordinary people who, they seem to believe, are to blame if age, poverty or disability makes it impossible for them to buy or drive automobiles.

So the lavishing of vast public subsidies on the highly inefficient trucking industry through construction and maintenance of interstate highways — just one of thousands of forms of "corporate welfare" the GOP supports — somehow is acceptable to Republicans while subsidies for mass transit aren't.

(A few of a dying breed, liberal Republicans, have been exceptions to the judgment above; and many of a growing and execrable, breed, conservative Democrats, side with the GOP on these issues.)

The interstate highways are just one of a legion of unsung subsidies automobiles and trucks get.

Think for a moment of the vast costs to the taxpayer of road networks in cities and towns — and of traffic policemen, traffic courts and traffic accidents.

Think of the immense disruptions in our civic life due to the domination of our cities by trucks and automobiles. Many inner-city children during their childhoods never escape the night-and-day roar of traffic.

Think of the immense amount of space wasted on parking lots and roads — as you also consider the rule of thumb that says that passenger trains can transport 10 times more people in a tenth the space expressways do.

Also ponder the fact that all of Massachusetts, including Western Massachusetts, is an air-quality "non-attainment area," which means the air is not fit to breathe many days primarily because of automobile-generated pollution.

Finally, think of how automobiles dictate our foreign policy, to the extent that GOP President George Bush made a mean little war on a tiny Third World country primarily to keep the oil flowing.

Then think about how all of this is so unnecessary. In Western Europe, for instance, cities are gracious and pleasant due in some large part to curbs on automobiles — while public transportation is fast, convenient and available everywhere.

Western Europeans who visit here are appalled by the raucous, threatening, stupid omnipresence of automobiles in America.

Americans should be as appalled.

Richard Gilluly is a UMass student.

Election '96: Let the games begin

Upon searching the morning newspapers for stories of relevance, there apparently seemed to be nothing of note occurring on the globe today. The New York Times and the Boston Globe were both dominated by stories of eight men and one woman, mouthing jingospeak to a crowd of bait– shop owners in the Granite State. Forget Henry Foster, the Mexican civil war, and the spate of clinic violence. The primaries have begun! There will be no actual news reported for the next 21 months.

Although no real people will vote for a whole year, the 1996 presidential campaign is here. Those in the know estimate that a serious candidate will need to collect $20 million in 1995, just to make it through the primaries. As it stands, about a dozen lagos are plotting career advancement in the two major parties.

Candidates should just come together in one place, cash in hand. Whomever had the most money would be declared poobah for the next four years, and the bills would be unceremoniously dumped into the nearest incinerator. The heat produced could keep a city the size of Worcester warm through the winter.

Unfortunately, we live in a democracy, and so we must suffer the election. Resigned to that, the farce should be examined.

The Republican side is dominated by Sen. Robert Dole and Sen. Phil Gramm. The two are battling over whose resume more closely resembled General Franco's. Three steps to the right, delusional newspaper hack Pat Buchanan and Robert Dornan, a member of the Reichstag from Orange County, are redefining the term "lunatic fringe."

The GOP nominee will most likely be Dole. Gramm or Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson, who has reformed welfare by eliminating it. If from runner Dole is a smart campaigner — which, given his past record, is not a safe assumption — he will pick New Jersey Gov. Christine Todd Whitman for vice-president, creating a gender–balanced, moderate, tough–on–taxes ticket that will crush Bubba, Part II.

That is assuming that Clinton is the Democratic nominee. He may be challenged by Sen. Bob Kerrey or Rep. Richard Gephardt, who believe that Clinton is not conservative enough for a liberal. Sen. Bill Bradley may also run, apparently thinking that the only problem is that Clinton isn't dull enough.

In the past two elections, the Democrats have let the GOP declare liberalism a mortal sin. The Clinton campaign will refuse to argue for a return to the FDR–era principles.

Peter J. Orvetti

The one Democrat who could beat Clinton for the nomination, and Dole for the presidency, is busy doing Doritos commercials with Ann Richards. Clinton will be renominated, and then he will lose the election.

The 1996 campaign will not be ideological. It will be a bout between moderate and conservative. The candidates will argue who hates poor people and welfare mothers more, not whether these victims of America deserve to be hated in the first place. Bubba will appear indecisive and vacillating, while Dole will appear committed. (To what, is the problem.) Voters will go Republican.

In the past two elections, the Democrats have let the GOP declare liberalism a mortal sin. The Clinton campaign will refuse to argue for a return to the FDR–era principles that won the party its following. Voters listened to and believed in liberalism when it was not afraid to speak; the Clintonian "diluted Democrats" have not drawn much attention.

Neither Dole nor Clinton is beloved, and voters are hoping for someone better to come along, running as an independent. Ross Perot is irrelevant, and even Pat Buchanan eventually faces reality. It seems that there may be two other choices next fall, though: Colin Powell, and former Connecticut Gov. Lowell Weicker. You have probably heard of one and not the other, but either one could conceivably beat out Clinton and Dole.

These two new candidates also present a contrast. Should our president be a military figure who has never uttered a word about any political issue? Or should the job go to a Republican senator who was one of the first to indict Nixon, became an Independent governor, banned assault weapons, instituted a progressive tax system, and desegregated Hartford's racist schools? That's for the voters to decide.

Peter J. Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

THE VOTERS WANT US TO MAINTAIN SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE.
AND OF COURSE DEFENSE SPENDING AND PAYING INTEREST ON THE NATIONAL DEBT.
BUT THEY ALSO WANT A BIG TAX CUT.
I THINK WE'VE JUST BEEN GIVEN AN UNFUNDED MANDATE.
TIME TO PUT TERM LIMITS ON THE VOTERS.

The college cocktail

David K. Chan

It's been awhile since I've taken the SATs or filled out college applications. All I remember from those forms is that there were many stupid questions, but there is one that I specifically remember that I think is the stupidest of them all: what's your racial/ethnic background?

It is that very question that is responsible for some of the recent racial controversies. Simply put, if there were no racial labels on SAT exams or college applications, there would be no way for anybody (hello Francis Lawrence) to claim that one race is intellectually inferior to another. Sound familiar? Rutgers? Bell curve?

I wish somebody could give me a good reason why SATs and college applications should be racially labeled. What's next? Height and weight questions? Maybe we'll discover that overweight people are intellectually inferior. Or how about sexual orientation? Or shoe size? I can see it now, normal–weight heterosexual Asian men with a size nine shoe achieve the highest math scores. Wow. I must admit, those can be some real interesting studies! If any college admissions officer or member of the Princeton Review is reading this, drop me a letter to the Collegian office. I have some more ideas.

There's also another thing that I'm wondering. What would the growing number of individuals from mixed ethnicities be classified as? If Blacks are supposedly intellectually inferior, then is a person who's half Black and half White only half as inferior? Does he/she score somewhere between what an average Black and an average White would score on the SATs? From a mathematical standpoint, that should be the assumption, shouldn't it?

Racial labels are not pertinent. If anything, they're detrimental. It's not necessary for them to be college applications either. Without the question of racial background, college admissions will be fair. Colleges should evaluate applicants solely on past academic performances and activities and other related pertinent qualities. An individual's race is not something to be evaluated.

It would be interesting for UMass to delete the question of racial background from its applications. Do you think the student body would be different? Would it be more diverse or less? I couldn't tell you. Nationally compared, UMass is not as diverse as some may think so.

Colleges shouldn't have quotas anyway. Why should there be a certain proportion of Blacks, Hispanics, Asians, etc.? I guess a college could be compared to a mixed drink. Let's see, .75 ounces of Amaretto, another .75 ounces of Kahlua, throw in 1.5 ounces of vodka, add a little cream, and you have a mudslide. We'll be the mudslides.

How about Harvard University? The Yard has arguably one of the most racially diverse student bodies in the world. The last time I checked, I think it was roughly 40 percent minority. But what if Harvard couldn't ask applicants for their racial background? Would Harvard's student body look different? I don't know. I wonder what mixed drink Harvard could be compared to. Probably a Planter's Punch; it's got a lot of everything.

Finally, my case in scenario. What if I filled out a college application, checked off that I was White and somewhere along the line during my sophomore year my school finds out that I'm not White. Would the school kick me out because I'm suddenly not a qualified student that should be attending their school? I'm still the same person. I just thought that I was White. So I messed up their quota. What a crime. I guess I wasn't the vodka that they thought I was but the Amaretto.

David K. Chan is a Collegian columnist.

The advantages of street smarts

Tara Ruelle

A lot of my friends from here seem to think that I'm overly cynical or judgmental of people. I call it street smart. I grew up in a city three miles north of Boston, where the first thing you were taught about the subway system was not to under any circumstances look at anyone.

What I appreciate about this way of life though was the fact that people were pretty obvious when they wanted to hurt you; here they are more subtle and elusive. I like to maintain that edge though that doesn't let anyone get the best of me. Certain circumstances have molded me in this way and I will share just a sample of why I trust no one.

High school was a stupid time of life for me as I imagine it was for a lot of people, a time that I would do anything to defy my parents no matter how absurd it was. One particular area of defiance for me was the whole concept of curfew. I found ways around this though by staying over friends houses whose parents were curfew–free. This was an every weekend challenge for me to see just how late I could stay out.

One particular weekend was not unlike any other weekend in my promerous teenage years except that it made me never want to break curfew again. It was a Saturday night during September which started out as fruitless as any other including my friend Gina and her leach of a boyfriend at the time, who she affectionately referred to as "Bunny."

The three of us always seemed destined to hang out and do next to nothing together, aside from me sitting there listening to them slobber all over each other. For some reason though he actually left that night which made me overjoyed. I decided Gina and I should venture out at 1 a.m. to get something to eat.

Looking back now I cannot believe Gina just didn't refuse to go, neither one of us had a car and she wasn't even hungry. Gina instead made the suggestion that we go somewhere local. I wasn't having it and said we had to go somewhere totally out of the way in the dark.

Chinese food, that was the ticket. Gina was easily persuaded and we were off. We made it there without incident everything looked good. We picked up the food, walked out the door and then I spotted him. A perfectly harmless guy except that he was in his car naked not exactly playing with the radio and calling us over. "Gina, whatever you do don't look over there," I mustered. Too late, she was already gawking and I was halfway down the street.

At that point I realized we needed a plan. Should we try to make it all the way to her house or take a different route? Unfortunately we chose the former and thought we were in the clear. Everything after this point happened so fast but I'll recall it from when I spotted the naked leg behind the tree in front of her house. I saw the leg said "Run Gina!" and ran like I never have run in my life.

He grabbed my shoulder I threw my Chinese food at him, "Take that pork strip buddy," I thought. Luckily my can of Coke tripped up his bare feet, though the food nailed Gina instead. I must not have had my thinking cap on because I then ran in the middle of the street stopped a car full of older guys at a red light, and begged them to drive me home. I figured at least they were clothed. they didn't have a head start.

It turned out that Gina and I both thought the other was missing and called the police when we reached home. My parents were not the least bit excited when I showed up one the doorstep at 2 a.m. just before the police did. The worst part of the ordeal was the police not believing me. They kept asking, "He was totally naked?" What more did he want me to say, "Yes officer he was buck naked, oh maybe he had a watch on."

After the dust had cleared on the naked guy episode Gina and I did have a good laugh about it. My brother wanted to know why I hadn't tried to salvage the food. Speaking of the Chinese cuisine, we discovered the day after that it was gone. That must have been what he was after all along knowing my luck. He could have just asked.

Recalling this event I guess is a way for me to show people why I always suspect people. At least I knew what to expect at home, not to walk around at night, not to talk to random naked guys. I can appreciate that more than people who disguise their psychotic behavior. I like to know exactly what I am up against. In fact I felt right at home this weekend when I saw a guy in HayMarket station talk to and beat himself up. I sat there with my headphones on, laughing to myself and looking straight ahead.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Columnists!

Don't miss your big chance. We'll be taking columnist headshot pictures tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Collegian offices. If you have a problem please contact the editorial desk at 545–1491.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

SEE, FIRST I CALL UP MY ON-LINE PROVIDER. I JUST TYPE IN "GO: HOMELESS."
TAP! TAP!
THEN I ENTER MY PASSWORD. "ROT-OUT"! BINGO! I'M IN! AND LOOK... I'VE GOT ONE PIECE OF E-MAIL! LET'S OPEN 'ER UP, PRONTO!
TAP! TAP! TAP!
To: All readers. Seek homeless male with basic computer skills for well-paid, secure job. Free training and mental health care. Contact writer.
©Trudeau
ELMONT!
OKAY, THAT'S JUNK MAIL. SO I DELETE IT— LIKE THAT!
TAP! TAP!

Arts & Living

Overcast Sky; moronic Madison

By Michael Pessah and Laura Stock
Collegian Correspondents

BLUE SKY
Directed by Tony Richardson
with Jessica Lange, Tommy Lee Jones
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

Blue Sky opens with army Major Hank (Jones) riding in a helicopter over a picturesque Hawaii beach. Carly, a middle– aged woman (Lange), looking uncannily like a Marilyn Monroe drag queen, stands on the shore below. Somehow, the two of them make eye contact and Hank orders the helicopter to fly over her head. The woman, apparently unfazed by the chopper circling above her, flings off the top of her bikini and leans into a lazy backstroke. Hank grins at the spectacle as the pilot mutters "Major Marshall! That's your wife!"

Though that sounds like an outtake from Apocalypse Now, it's the first scene in this "serious" drama. Few things are more awkward that laughing at something presumably funny only to find out that it was done with a straight face. Blue Sky feels like this, and the film is a sad patchwork of cliches strung together with such utter contempt for realism that it blurs the lines between parody and drama.

Blue Sky is set in the early 1960s on a southern army base where Hank supervises secret nuclear tests in order to assure their safety. He's doing a good job, and his life is going well — except for the fact that Carly, his wife, is insane. She isn't merely maladjusted, she's seriously ill. All of her screen time is spent in some elaborate Brigitte Bardot get–up calling Hank "daddy." When she isn't seducing Hank's superiors (or their hunky sons), she's throwing destructive tantrums.

Sometimes a film can get the audience to accept its cast of cliched characters if they are treated respectfully. Blue Sky constantly throws its characters into increasingly preposterous situations. Can you image a 14–year–old girl coaxing her mother into confessing infidelity to her husband? A wife accidentally sending her perfectly sane husband to get a lobotomy? How about this same woman riding a horse like Lady Godiva through a nuclear testing site?

In the right hands, the absurd events in Blue Sky would make for a delightfully wicked black comedy, but the late director Tony Richardson (Tom Jones) treats the material with nothing but deference. Tommy Lee Jones and Oscar– nominated Jessica Lange are willing accomplices, and overact accordingly. Blue Sky distinguishes itself as a painful failure, lacking of all redeeming features. It fails even as a novelty piece. F (M.P.)

BILLY MADISON
Directed by Tamra Davis with Adam Sandler
Playing at Hompshire Six Theaters

With this latest movie and first starring role, comedian Adam Sandler follows in the footsteps of several of his "Saturday Night Live" predecessors. Unfortunately, Billy Madison does not live up to the "SNL"–inspired box office hits, Wayne's World or The Blues Brothers.

Infantile and moronic, Billy Madison's sense of humor is similar to that of Sandler. He plays a spoiled high school graduate whose wealthy father has showered money and toys on him his whole life. As a result, Madison spends his days goofing off and acting like a child. His immaturity leads his father to make Sandler prove his worthiness in order to get his inheritance by repeating his education from the first to the 12th grade, taking two weeks to pass each grade.

Many of Sandler's "SNL" characters come alive in Madison, such as the sloppy–joe–serving lunch lady. What is hilarious in a two–minute sketch, however, is only remotely entertaining and somewhat tiresome in a two–hour flick. The film does a good job at poking fun of its own incredibility and Madison's sappy but long–overdue coming of age. You have to laugh too, at some of the slapstick humor — whether it be out of amusement or shock. C (L.S.)

COURTESY APA INC

Adam Sandler has his first lead role in the new film Billy Madison.

'Voyager' getting back to the basics

By Robert Jablon
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Forget Cardassians, network execs and other bad guys. The fans of "Star Trek"'s earlier incarnations are the real threat to "Star Trek: Voyager."

The fourth live–action series debuted Jan. 17 as flagwaver for the new United Paramount Network. Bets are it will live longer than a Trill.

But only if it avoids ticking off those who, in the course of 30 years, saved the "Star Trek" universe from oblivion, made it a virtual modern myth, and get rabid if the cosmic laws are broken. One fan even turned off the premiere episode because it didn't start with the phrase "to boldly go..." So much for bold innovation.

"The fans are always in our mind. They keep us on our toes," says Rick Berman, who is executive producer of "Voyager" along with Michael Piller and Jeri Taylor.

"We have a whole "Star Trek" technology," Berman says. "It's all made up, but to the fans it's as real as the rules of science."

"Voyager" is the third TV offspring of the original 1966 series, not counting a long–ago cartoon show. Piller calls it "back to basics."

Where the recently ended "Star Trek: The Next Generation" had a cushy behemoth of a ship that seated 1,000 and the current "Deep Space Nine" has a space station with a holo–brothel, "Voyager" returns to the small–boat–in–a–big–ocean theme.

The Intrepid–class starship has a paltry crew of 200 that finds itself snatched deep into uncharted space. The mission: to boldly go — home. Which will take 75 years unless "Voyager" can find a mysterious alien to help.

The idea was to keep the show fresh by creating "a new universe," away from Starfleet and away from the Federation," Berman says.

"Voyager" sets are built on the same Paramount sound stages as those for the defunct "Next Generation," among the most popular syndicated shows ever.

The main bridge is all steel and ribbed paneling. It's a Machine Age, no–nonsense look — as different from the plush pastels of "Next Generation"s" Enterprise–D as a Borg from a bunny rabbit. A dedication plaque lists the late "Star Trek" creator Gene Roddenberry as chief of staff.

Majel Roddenberry, his widow, praises the new series for its glossy special effects — easily affordable on a budget of more than $1.5 million per episode — and its female main character, Capt. Kathryn Janeway.

In the original "Star Trek" series pilot, Ms. Roddenberry was second in command of the Enterprise. NBC rejected the character because it felt audiences would balk at a female in charge.

Now, there's Janeway.

"Oh, am I happy," Ms. Roddenberry says. "The only thing that bothers me is it took 30 years to do it. Which means that Gene, once again, was...before his time."

Actually, "Star Trek: Voyager," like its ancestors, reflects current society more than future prospects. The "Star Trek" of the 1960s put women officers in miniskirts as the freedom–loving Federation fought a Cold War against the Evil Empire of Klingons.

"Voyager's" world is morally complex. The crew includes the Maquis, a rebel group founded after a Federation treaty ceded their colony worlds to the Cardassians. (Read Israel's West Bank and you get the picture).

The captain, played by Kate Mulgrew, is a raspy–voiced Supermom of the '90s transplanted to the stars. Here she is, dealing with renegades, a nasty alien, a warp core breach and a bad hair day all at once (her flowing red locks may become as much a trademark as Jean–Luc Picard's bald pate or James Kirk's sideburns).

She's no powder puff. When Janeway wants a command executed, she snaps "Do it!" Instead of using Picard's courtly "Make it so."

Mulgrew says her character is tough but also compassionate, warm and, well, feminine. She also has a fierce curiosity.

"We are lost in space. We may never see home again," she says. "But I think in myself and my deepest being, there's a quickening of the pulse and I'm thinking, 'Oh boy, the planets I'm going to explore...the stones I will overturn."

Talented children of Youth Exchange wow Noho crowd

By Kerri Waszkiewicz
Collegian Correspondent

YOUTH EXCHANGE '95: THE BEST OF THE BIG CITY
Academy of Music
Feb. 19

NORTHAMPTON — Last Sunday at the Academy of Music Theater, the Northampton Arts Council and the Community Foundation of Western Massachusetts presented "Youth Exchange '95: The Best of the Big City," a performance of truly astounding artistic and musical talent.

Brooklyn's Hispanic Young People's Chorus then graced everyone with their amazing voices as they sang classical Spanish songs. The choir, consisting of 38 children, some as young as five and six years old, was directed by Choir Master Evangeline Oliver Polanco who complimented their voices with a piano.

Adding quite an artistic and cultural exchange to the show, the onlookers were then presented with modern dances by the Harlem School of the Art's Renaissance II Dance Troupe. These dancers, nine girls and two boys, were trained in all dance techniques from classical ballet to jazz and were directed by Stephane Ray Parker, a member of the faculty at the Boston Conservatory.

From Boston we were presented

Turn to DANCE, page 8

Golden Key National Honor Society

ATTENTION

Golden Key National Honor Society Members

There is a mandatory meeting today for all active members.

WHEN: Wednesday, February 22, 1995

TIME: 7:00 p.m.

WHERE: Campus Center, Room 803

We look forward to seeing you there.

Not Everyone is Straight and Neither is the Collegian
Write for GLAS Issues. Let your voice be heard
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

MORE TREADMILLS!
MORE STAIRMASTERS!
MORE VARIETY!
$36/MONTH 12 MONTH E.F.T.
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 West St.

New Location
OOPS!
CARSTAR Collision Repair Centers
Where America goes for Quality Collision Repairs
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Direct Insurance Billing
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst CARSTAR 78 Old Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Road, Northampton, MA 586-4444

Northwestern College of Chiropractic

is now accepting applications for its next three entering classes (April 1995, September 1995, January 1996)

General requirements at time of entry include:
- At least 3.3 years of undergraduate college or a health science or basic science degree program (Inquire for a complete list of specific requirements.)
- A minimum G.P.A. of 2.5 (A more competitive G.P.A. is favored.)
- A personal interest in a career as a primary care physician

Northwestern College of Chiropractic offers a rigorous four year professional education. Our focus on science, diagnosis, chiropractic methods, patient care and research provides our graduates with the tools they need to work as primary care physicians in the health care environment. NWCC is fully accredited by North Central Association of Colleges and Schools and the Council on Chiropractic Education.

Call: 1-800-888-1777 or 888-1777
Writes Director of Admissions
2501 West 84th Street, Minneapolis, MN 55431

Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879 • 25 N. Pleasant St. (above McDonald's)
Has the best selection of 1,2,&3 bedroom Apartments with gas heat
We begin showing apartments in April and May for June or September occupancy

TONIGHT
9:30 til 11 PM
1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS AND NACHOS!
Smoking Section 10 til 1
Retro Night
•Dancing•
•No Cover•
•Cash Door Prize•
Weekly Special
$4.75 Pitcher
$1.75 Bottles
THE PUB
15 east pleasant street • amherst

Black Affairs

Wednesday, February 22, 1995

Controversy accompanies Black History Month

EMILY REILY / COLLEGIAN

Last week's New Africa House reading by poet Samuel Allen was one of this year's Black History Month highlights.

COURTESY LUCILLE TORTORA

Artist Beverly Buchanan's piece, "Low Country Shacks, South Carolina," is featured in her Smith College exhibit.

Historical festivities marred by ongoing racial tensions throughout university communities

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

As February draws to a close, it seems as though student activism at the University is on the rise, due to recent incidents revolving around racism.

Unfortunately, as students have become more deeply involved in these affairs, many of Black History Month's festivities has been overshadowed by the attention given to the turmoil on campus.

Although an incident such as the one that occurred in the Franklin Dining Commons two weeks ago could not be foreseen, it can certainly be said that the subsequent protest has forced this February's festivities at UMass to take a position of secondary importance.

Yet, this is not the first time this school year that controversy and celebration have crossed paths in the Black community.

Shortly before the Black Homecoming Weekend in November, Springfield Union News reporter Brad Smith revealed the grades of Black student-athletes to a Media Criticism, resulting in a heated meeting with Chancellor David K. Scott.

A group of nearly 80 Black students were present in the Whitmore conference room, where the Black Student Union presented a list of demands to the school administration.

Thus, is was not surprising that the two basic factors which served as catalysts for the last major protest (a racist incident followed by the administration's alleged unresponsiveness) would play a major part in the latest story to dominate campus conversation, the D.C. blow-up.

The incident, in which Franklin Food Services employee Emily Tsoloski made a racist remark to student Ronald Dottin, caused enough furor to shift focus away from Black History Month onto the sit-in action taken by many Black students in Franklin two days after the worker's comment.

However, the protest might not have been organized so quickly were it not for the half-time demonstration by Black students at the Rutgers-UMass game days earlier, which probably evoked a mood of activism.

Black Student Union Vice-President Dan Lizana suggests that controversial issues might not be the only reason behind disinterest in many Black History Month activities, many of which he said are "watered down" when planned by the University.

"If Black students got to choose more of the functions, then maybe more people might turn out," Lizana said.

Ironically though, the D.C. demonstration may have been actually born in the spirit of the nation's Black history, if the struggles which African-Americans endured to obtain one month of recognition are taken into

Handling racism in the collegiate

William Bailey-Eisenhower

The voyage of American racism to North America and its subsequent institutionalization and practice is a long and troubling one.

It reared its ugly head in this country and has moved around comfortably for 400 years or so. It remains a legacy that is endemic, costly, and corrupt. To date, there is no clear and viable solution to stopping it altogether. However, the ability to undermine and dilute its ability to damage is a sign of progressive action and hope.

The recent case of racist verbal abuse inflicted upon a University student by a University employee raises some important questions: How responsive is the University to racism? How well does UMass recognize a deficiency in civility and professionalism? The silent response to these unspoken abuses sets a precedent of unresponsiveness and a growing rift between the student population and the vanguard of higher learning.

The University of Massachusetts as a collective body should ask itself how swiftly and surely it answered and rectified the student grievances. Do we need to make formal protest to move from apathy to action? Some say that an establishment will not incriminate itself, but I think a little self-criticism does not constitute institutional suicide.

As a member of the body of affronted and exasperated students of color, I believe we have an obligation to voice strung opposition to institutional and educational racist policies or language.

There is no equivocation of our objective: Any and every offensive racist action, overtly spoken or veiled in policy, will be countered with a planned, logistical and carefully enacted response.

These long train of abuses will be met with clarity, focus and aggressive motivation. We cannot sit idly by and hope, watch or wait for a vague dream of equality to prophetically come to fruition. Many of us have been dreaming so long that we've drifted into an uncomfortable sleep from which we cannot wake. Hence, there comes a time when the virtue of patience becomes an apathy in action.

In summation, but not in finality, I hope this particular incident will bring the University to a new level of commitment and support, guarded by the vested interest of the students of color. In the larger sphere of life, this University can be a leader in countering in racism, thus setting an example to other institutions of higher learning.

Otherwise the University can sit idly by while students become more polarized and provincial in thinking, learning and growing. The Brown v. Board of Education decision to dismantle "invidious discrimination" was a beginning to an end, not an end unto itself.

William Bailey-Eisenhower is a UMass student.

Malcolm X's legacy: Appreciating a Black revolutionary after 30 years

By Chinedu Dean Ogbuike
Collegian Correspondent

Although Black History Month is celebraied in February, it is not necessary to wait until February to recognize the important people who made a difference in the lives of Blacks and other races.

In this month, thoughts of the lives of Black leaders of the past emerge in the minds of many, but few stand out like Malcolm X, whose influence was felt by all races. He was a Black man who stood up for what he believed in, and he made mistakes in life, recognized them, and decided to change for the better.

Malcolm X was born on May 19, 1925. His childhood innocence ended when his father was murdered and his family separated; he soon began living a life of crime until his imprisonment.

While in prison, Malcolm X learned to read and write clearly again and, with the help of Elijah Muhammed, he was able to learn about the religious teachings of Allah. After approximately seven years, Malcolm X was freed from prison and joined the Nation of Islam.

As a member of the Nation of Islam, Malcolm X followed all the teachings he learned in prison and later became Muhammed's number one spokesman; however, tensions began to grow between them through time.

Malcolm X started to become more publicly known and people no longer wanted to hear Muhammed himself speak, instead preferring Malcolm X, despite his efforts to acknowledge his mentor in all his speeches.

Muhammed saw things differently, believing that Malcolm X was drawing all the public attention in order to make him look bad, especially during a time when his health was beginning to fail.

Malcolm X saw that the situation was souring, but made a crucial mistake when he was unfavorably quoted after J.F.K's assassination. Thus, he was suspended by Elijah Muhammed and not allowed to speak to the media as a member of the Nation of Islam.

Seeing the punishment as being unfit, Malcolm X quit and formed his own Black Muslim group comprised of his supporters. This group was seen by the nation of Islam as a rival that needed to be silenced. However, Malcolm X went on with his new followers and preached teachings somewhat different from the Nation of Islam.

Malcolm X taught in his Black Muslim group that Whites were not all corrupt, and that the Nation of Islam was teaching hate and separatism to Blacks. He realized that through his change in feelings towards Whites and his preachings that his life might be in danger since he was speaking against the Nation of Islam.

In all probability, Malcolm X would see the division between Blacks as a problem that needed to be dealt with immediately. He would most likely also try to convince Blacks living the street life to receive an education in order to avoid the same mistakes he made as a young man.

On February 21, 1965, Malcolm X was shot to death, allegedly by members of the Nation of Islam. This tragedy seemed to end his new ideology of positive preaching of Whites and Blacks being able to live together peacefully.

Yet his legacy still lives on today. In all probability, Malcolm X would see the division between Blacks as a problem that needed to be dealt with immediately. He would most likely also try to convince Blacks living the street life to receive an education in order to avoid the same mistakes he made as a young man.

Were he involved in the political scene, Malcolm X would probably take great pains to get more attention focused on minorities in order to improve their general standard of living and community outlook. He would see the portrayal in the media of gang violence and minorities having numerous babies as small issues blown out of proportion. He would try to display some positive aspects in the communities and show that minorities are equal to Whites.

Malcolm X not only proved that one Black man out of many could have a powerful influence on others if he wanted to, but also showed that Blacks tend to sabotage each other when jealous of each other's success.

Malcolm X, as a constantly evolving individual, proved even though that the mind changes constantly, the person is often still regarded in the same light. He tried to show that despite the mistakes you may have made in the past, if people avoid making the same mistakes repeatedly, then they have made progress.

Are you interested in covering your community?

Going to new places, meeting exciting people?
Becoming a campus celebrity?

Come write for the Massachusetts Daily Collegian's Specialty Desks.
Black Affairs, Business, Developing Nations, GLB Issues, Jewish Affairs, Multicultural Affairs and Women's Issues are all looking for new writers.

Come on down to 113 Campus Center Basement or give us a call at 545-1749.

THIS WEEK IS YOUR LAST CHANCE!

GET YOUR FREE
SENIOR YEARBOOK PHOTO
NOW!

Campus Center 901-902

NO
APPOINTMENT
NEEDED!

just walk in just walk in

just walk in & GET SHOT

Be part of the first ALL COLOR yearbook in New England

Book recounts sex throughout history

Tome recounts (im)famous erotic exploits from various eras

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

HISTORY LAID BARE: LOVE, SEX AND PERVERSITY FROM THE ANCIENT ETRUSCANS TO WARREN G. HARDING
Richard Zacks
Harper Perennial

It takes a lot to get people to read these days. In fact, authors are doing everything they can to spark some form of interest in the minds of people. As society slowly gets sucked into the highway and bi-ways of technology, it takes someone like Richard Zacks to tear them away from the computer screens.

Upon first examination of this book, one's first question would be, "why?" Why would anyone choose to dedicate hours upon hours of research just to find some sexual connotation in say, The Gettysburg Address.

But then there's that wacky flip side to the argument that makes perfect (if not odd) sense. Zacks uses historical documents to illustrate the sexual preferences, practices and natures of people throughout history. In its own bizarre way, the book chronicles the history of sexual thought and behavior through time, giving us a sample of the ideology, attitude, sexual preferences and practices of famous and not so famous people in a certain era.

"I've been working on it for about a year and a half," said Richard Zacks. "Although it feels like my whole life."

Zacks searched far and wide for the documents in libraries located in Michigan, England, New York and even Paris.

"I did a lot of my research at the Kinsey Institute. They have an unbelievable sex library there," said Zacks.

Zacks got his idea for the book when he was browsing for books at the Strand. It was a book depicting Napoleon's love life that got him hooked on the idea.

"I saw a book on Napoleon's love life and it was great. There was apart where he described his wedding night with Josephine. They were in bed together and she refused to kick out the dog and it ended up biting Napoleon on the calf. He spent the whole night moaning that he was going to die of rabies — I thought it was great," said Zacks.

Zacks has been a professional writer for over a decade. A native of Savannah, Ga., he now resides in New York City. He wrote a syndicate column for the New York Times and has written freelance articles for Atlantic Life, Village Voice and Sports Illustrated. The writer attended Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism and studied Arabic in Cairo, Italian in Perugia and classical Greek and Latin at the University of Michigan.

Zacks' rather odd way of looking at history through sex is something he felt was necessary.

"I think a lot of people need to reassess their attitudes towards what happened in the past. They have distinct views that our ancestors' attitudes towards sex weren't fun," said Zacks. "History should be entertaining, not boring. Some people may think it's inappropriate to talk about how in 1634 a woman masturbating got a bone needle caught in her bladder. This is interesting."

The author commented that people read the book for different reasons. Whether the reader is truly interested in the topic or just curious he just "puts it in there and lets them decide" whether or not it's of academic value, amusement or what not.

"For my next book I wanted to do a thing on American History, but Harper and Collins weren't [sic] into it. So now I'm working on something like 'everything you're not suppose to know,' like Napoleon having hemorrhoids at Waterloo and having to stay in his tent strung out on opium," said Zacks. "Or about a man who won the Nobel Peace Prize for frontal lobotomy only to discover years later that it just doesn't work."

For anyone who needs a change of pace from their text books, History Laid Bare offers a wide range of reading that may offend you, may titillate your senses, but definitely keeps you reading.

COURTESY PYE

Matt Johnson and his band, The The, fail to impress with their latest release, Hanky Panky.

The The not up to any 'Hanky Panky'

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

HANKY PANKY
The The
550 Music/Epic Records

The The has always been the housefly of alternative rock — never dangerous, but always coming back to buzz annoyingly in your car. For a the better part of a decade the band, fearlessly led by singer/songwriter Matt Johnson, has been brewing up the sort of sterile-sounding '80s alt-rock dribble that was presumed dead when Echo & The Bunnymen decided to hang it up.

Now the group has decided to go out on a limb and release Hanky Panky, a tribute to legendary country & western songsmith Hank Williams, in what seems like both a desperate cry for attention and something to fill the void of empty ideas.

Johnson and Co. pay homage (sort of...) to Williams by covering 11 of his songs that they found closest to their heart and "The The-izing" them in the process. The problem is that during the coarse of re-interpreting Williams' songs, Johnson seemingly forgot (or perhaps never knew to begin with) what made the classic tunes so moving and special in the first place.

Throughout Hanky Panky Johnson works on two different levels — either take one of Williams' songs and alter it completely, or try to more or less stick by the original structure and bring a sense of tradition to it. Unfortunately the ending result is either way overblown productions that virtually suck any emotion clean out of the songs, or Johnson mimicking Williams in a really, really, really bad southern accent (keep in mind Johnson is from London).

The album starts off with a cold, industrial-like version of "Honky Tonkin'," which finds The The missing the point completely. While Williams' song succeeded thanks to its down-home feel and sentiments, the remake leaves the tune sounding hollow and lifeless — bringing out the dopiness of the lyrics rather than accenting them.

Other tracks such as "Six More Miles" and "If You'll Be A Baby To Me," find Johnson embarrassingly trying to recapture the sorrow that Williams pin-pointed with unnerving accuracy.

Basically one could write off Hanky Panky as nothing more than a misguided experiment. Surely, The The's intentions were more than honorable and after reading the liner notes, there is a feeling that Johnson truly does admire Williams' work. The problem is in the execution — by trying to tackle the material of one of music's legends Johnson and his bandmates may have bitten off a little more than there "ho-hum" style of music could chew. C–

■ dance

continued from page 5

with the extremely impressive Tobin Express!, a group of eleven young girls between the ages of 11 and 15 that have learned to blend their street-dancing moves with classical tap for a special style all their own. After showing the audience some classical tap-dancing techniques, they moved on to mix tap with some hip-hop moves.

To keep up the audience's excitement, four young girls from Hartford who call themselves "New, Improved, Nice and Smooth" brought the art/sport of Double Dutch to a new level. The audience watched in awe as these girls incorporated flips and dance routines into the act of jumping rope.

After the intermission, nothing could have been more relaxing than the music by the Harlem School of the Art's Big Band. A 20-person band under the direction of J.D. Parran, fused jazz and classical materials. The music mesmerized the audience and gave them cause for a standing ovation.

The performance as a whole was wonderful. It was almost a relief to be able to take some time to enjoy the amazing talent of the children from the city.

Write for Arts & Living

Interested in writing about the world of entertainment?

Just stop down the Collegian and ask to speak with Matt, Niko, Justin or Tara or call us at 545-1361.

Learn German This Summer At URI

June 25-August 4, 1995

The University of Rhode Island in cooperation with the Goethe Institute Boston is hosting the Fifteenth Annual German Summer School of the Atlantic. German will be the sole language of communication, and German life and culture the heart of this six week residency program of intensive language study. Earn up to nine undergraduate or graduate credits while living in the beautiful surroundings of our country campus, just minutes away from Rhode Island's magnificent beaches and historic Newport. This program is ideally suited for anyone wishing to enroll in beginning through Master's level German. Take advantage of this rare opportunity to participate in this total German language experience.

Contact: Dr. John Grandin or
Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors
Dept. of Languages, URI
Kingston, RI 02881
Or call: (401) 792-5911
Hearing Impaired: (401) 751-4790

URI College of Continuing Education
University of Rhode Island
199 Promenade St., Providence, RI 02908

Because stuff* happens.

*Hey this is corporate America. We have to keep it clean.

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1995

RETURNING TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THIS FALL...
THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NATIONAL BARTENDING SCHOOL PRESENTS ...

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™

- Professional Bartending and Bar Management Training ... at a fraction of the cost at most schools.
- Full certification in as little as six weeks
- Specific programs tailored to your specific needs
- T.I.P.S.™ and Serv-Safe® certification available
- Approved by the National Restaurant Association®

FREE INFO SESSION
MONDAY, FEB 27th
7:00 PM
LORD JEFFREY INN
AMHERST

Shop around and compare! Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited!!

The Deans List Fall 1994

One of the most important, highest priorities of the university is to provide opportunities for academic excellence. I am pleased then to be able to recognize those of you who earned Deans List status for the fall Semester of 1994.

This level of achievement — 3.5 or higher semester average with twelve or more graded credits — is attained by fewer than twenty percent of the undergraduate student body. Such outstanding performance is a source of pride to the faculty, staff, your student colleagues, and, of course, your parents.

Thank you for the credit you bring to the University through your achievement.

David K. Scott,
Chancellor

Press Releases

To publicize your achievement, the University News Office will be issuing a press release to your hometown newspaper if you are a Massachusetts resident. Out of state students are requested to pick up a press release form at 200 Munson Hall (second floor). For further information, please call 545-0444.

Additions / Omissions

The Fall Semester 1994 Deans List is based on grades received and recorded by the Registrar's office as of January 30, 1995. If you had a grade change after that date (including making up an "Incomplete", or had a missing or late grade recorded after that date), and believe you now qualify for the Deans List, please fill out a form available at the Information Data Bank, Whitmore 2nd floor lobby counter, attach Registrar's Office verification, and return it to 236 Whitmore.

Reminder: Only graded credits are calculated in determining Deans List eligibility. Pass / Fail credits are not included.

The Deans List is prepared for publication and paid for by Student Affairs Special Services as a service to the campus community. The cooperation of "The Massachusetts Daily Collegian" is acknowledged and appreciated.

(H) indicates Honors Program

Arts & Sciences – Humanities & Fine Arts

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ASTEAD,DANA V.	96	JOURN
ACKERMAN,JENNIFER M.	95	ENGL
ADAMCZAK,SUZANNE M.	95	MUSC
ADHIA,KRISHNA A.	95	JOURN
AESTIK,MAGGIE M.	97	SPA
ALA,ALMO J.	96	HIST
(H) ALIX,CATHERINE M.	97	THEATR
ALLENDORF,REBECCA T.	95	JOURN
ALMODOVAR,MAYRA.	95	SPA
ANSIONE,JENNIFER-ANN A.	96	ENGL
ANDERSON SISHOP,REBECCA L.	96	ENGL
(H) ANDERSEN,JOSHUA P.	96	PHIL
ANDREWS,SUSAN L.	95	SPA
ATHEY,AMY-JO	97	JOURN
BAGLIO,CATHERINE P.	97	HIST
BAILEY,SARAH E.	96	SPA
BANK,ALISON.	97	MATH
BAMBLE,CARINA J.	95	BIOL
BARRY,JENNIFER J.	95	ASTRON
(H) BARROW,LISE M.	96	SOC
BARTZ,HANA,MONIKA C.	96	BIOL
(H) BASHAW,DIANE M.	93	BIOL
(H) BATES,DAVID M.	95	BIOL
BATES,THOMAS J.	96	SOC
BATTISTA,D.F.	96	PHYSIC
BATTISTO,STEPHEN M.	95	CMPSCI
BAZZ,JAMES J.	95	MICBIO
BLAIR,JOHN.	97	SOC
BLANCHARD,MICHAEL D.	95	BIOL
(H) BELL,KIMBERLY A.	96	ENGL
(H) BERGBOWER,DANIEL A.	94	CMPSCI
BETTENCOURT,BRIDAN D.	95	BIOL
BISHOP,KELLY E.	96	BIOL
(H) BORAWSKI,AMY A.	97	MATH
(H) BOOKSTEIN,DAVID J.	97	MATH
BOSTON,JENNIFER M.	95	BIOL
(H) BOWEN,JENNIFER M.	95	BIOL
BOYD,CHRISTOPHER D.	96	BIOL
(H) BRENNAN,CHRISTOPHER D.	97	BIOL
BRENNAN,MICHAEL J.	96	BIOL
BRONNENTHAL,JARRET A.	96	BIOL
BRZOZOWSKI,MAREK J.	96	CHEM
(H) CAMPBELL,BRIAN D.	95	CHEM
(H) CANALI,KRISTOPHER D.	95	BIOL
(H) CARY,TIMOTHY J.	95	BIOCHM
(H) CARLSON,MELISSA M.	96	BIOL
CARTER,JEFFERY P.	96	BIOL
(H) CARVER,GREGORY A.	96	BIOCHM
COMPANY,COLIN F.	94	HIST
(H) CONKLIN,SUZANNE E.	95	ENGL
CONLEY,THERESA M.	95	ENGL
CONLIN,CRAIG M.	96	HIST
(H) CONNOLLY,ALLISON C.	96	ENGL
CONNORS-MARGARET E.	95	SPA
COOK,JASON D.	95	HIST
(H) CORBETT,MARI A.	96	THEATR
(H) COREY,AMY M.	95	SPA
(H) CORY,JAMES R.	95	JAPAN
CORTESI,BRETT B.	98	SPA
(H) COTE,JANE M.	97	ARTHIS
CURCIO,SALLY.	95	SPA
(H) CURRAN,JENNIFER.	96	NFAMAN
SARPOLIS,ALEXANDRIA M.	97	SPA
(H) SANDERS,ADAM C.	97	ANTH
SARLI,MARGARET C.	97	JOURN
(H) SAWYER,JOHANNAH M.	93	ENGL
(H) SAWYER,MATTHEW D.	96	CLSICS
HEDRIZZI,JESSICA L.	95	ENGL
HELUCA,CRISTINA M.	96	SPANSTD
HENRIS,JOHN D.	95	SPA
HESLAM,GILL,GEOFFREY F.	96	PHIL
(H) HIPACE,ANGELA F.	00	E MUS
HSIAO,SARAH E.	96	SPA
HSIEH,TARA M.	96	HIST
HUNTER,JAMES M.	00	SPA
HUNTLEY,LAWRENCE J.	96	ENGL
HUSSEIN,ABDELLA M.	96	SPA
(H) HUSSEY,DAVID M.	96	JOURN
HUTCHINSON,JOSEPH A.	96	ENGL
HYLAND,CHRISTOPHER M.	96	ENGL
IANNUCCI,RACHEL M.	96	ENGL
IRVIN,PAUL M.	96	ENGL
BURRIS,MICHELLE M.	97	AFRAM
BUSHWAY,THOMAS M.	97	ART
BUSWELL,KIMBERLY C.	96	ENGL
BUTMAN,KRISTIN E.	96	ENGL
BZIDOWSKI,LYNN A.	95	ENGL
CHARLES,JENNIFER C.	97	CLSICS
CAMPBELL,BRIAN.	97	ENGL
CANNON,KATHLEEN A.	96	ENGL
CANTOR,JR.,ROBERT L.	97	SPA
CARLSON,MELISSA M.	96	ENGL
CARPENTER,JEFFREY P.	96	ENGL
CARVER,GREGORY A.	96	BIOCHM
CHAMPAGNE,LAURA M.	96	ENGL
CHAMPAGNE,MICHAEL J.	96	ENGL
CHAMPAGNE,NICOLE L.	96	ENGL
CHAMPAGNE,STEPHEN J.	96	ENGL
CHAMPAGNE,TIMOTHY J.	96	ENGL
CHAMPAGNE,WILLIAM

Arts & Sciences Social & Behavioral Sciences

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
(H) WILLIM,KEVIN M.	97 POLSCI
WILLOCH,SARAH E.	95 SOCIOL
WILLOWAY,ALEX M.	95 COMM
WHITE,SILAA A.	96 SOCIOL
WHITMARSH,CLAIRE L.	95 ANTH
WILLIUS,AMANDA V.	95 PSYCH
WINKELS,MARC T.	96 SOCIOL
WOLF,MARK D.	96 PSYCH
WOLFRAM,SEBARD C.	95 COMM
WRIGHT,JONATHAN P.	95 POLSCI
WYLER,DEBORAH M.	96 LEGAL
(H) WYMAN,KYRI M.	95 COMM
YAMAMOTO,NATSUKO Y.	96 STPEC
(H) YOUNG,SEANDDE E.	97 POLSCI
ZABETSKY,LIZA A.	96 PCS
ZIRIN,SUSAN M.	95 LEGAL

Arts & Sciences Undeclared

NAME	CLASS	MAJOR
ADA,JOHN LUCIUS E.	96 CAS/P
(H) ADLI,MAHMUT	97 CAS/P
AHN,SUNG H.	96 CAS/P
ALBERT,TARIQ	96 CAS/P
ALI,ALI	97 CAS/P
ALSOBROOK,MICHELLE M.	96 CAS/P
(H) ALSTRAD,AMY E.	96 CAS/P
ALVAG,JESSICA L.	96 CAS/P
ALZUA,KARA A.	97 CAS/P
ALTORFER,JULIE T.	97 CAS/P
ALVES,ELAINE D.	97 CAS/P
AMANDA,TIPPARETH D.	96 CAS/P
(H) AMELIANA,BIRSTEN M.	96 CAS/P
AMERSBON,JILL A.	96 CAS/P
ANDERSON,JOHN J.	96 CAS/P
(H) ANDERSSON,KARL M.	97 CAS/P
ANDREWS,CHRISTINA M.	97 CAS/P
APARICIO,DANIEL G.	96 CAS/P
APPLEBAUM,MARLENA A.	96 CAS/P
ARCESE,ERIC E.	96 CAS/P
ARMS,EDWARD P.	96 CAS/P
ARMSBURY,STEPHEN P.	96 CAS/P
(H) BAILEY,JASON A.	97 CAS/P
BAKER,MARALI E.	96 CAS/P
BARRIT,KARL L.	96 CAS/P
BARRETT,MELISSA A.	96 CAS/P
BARON MICHAEL B.	96 CAS/P
BARUCCI,CHRISTOPHER J.	96 CAS/P
BASILIO,KRISTA E.	96 CAS/P
BASILIO,MARIA E.	96 CAS/P
BEAUCAGE,SHERIE M.	96 CAS/P
BEIBBE,CHLOE C.	97 CAS/S
BELOW,JENNIFER L.	96 CAS/S
BENNER,AARON J.	97 CAS/S
(H) BERGEN,ERIC R.	97 CAS/P
BERBERICH,AIMEE P.	99 CAS/P
BERG,ANDREW C.	96 CAS/S
BERGER,LAURIE A.	97 CAS/L
BERTHIAUME,KENNETH C.	96 CAS/S
BESSEY,DALE A.	95 CAS/P
BLAKE,CAMERON E.	97 CAS/P
BLUE,TOSCA R.	97 CAS/P
BOARDMAN,ERIC J.	97 CAS/P
BOEHRINGER,KELLY L.	97 CAS/P
BOFOS,KRISTIE Y.	97 CAS/P
(H) BOLDUCK,NATHANIEL	97 CAS/P
BOLLINGER,NICOLE M.	97 CAS/P
BOUTOTTE,ELIZABETH M.	96 CAS/P
BRADLEY,JASON T.	96 CAS/P
(H) BRADY,MARIO T.	97 CAS/P
BRANNEN,TAMARA E.	96 CAS/L
BREEN,JILL M.	96 CAS/S
(H) BRIDGEFORD,TIMOTHY J.	96 Gr. S
BRIZZI,TRISTANA J.	96 CAS/P
BROWN,SHYNDA L.	95 CAS/P
BROWN,TRACY L.	96 CAS/P
BRUCE,ERIN J.	97 CAS/P
BURGER,JEAN E.	97 CAS/P
BURKE,WILLIAM F.	97 CAS/E
(H) BURNS,CATHERINE M.	96 CAS/P
CAFFELLI,MICHAEL J.	96 CAS/D
CALVANESE,CARLA M.	96 CAS/P
CAMISE,DEATHER L.	98 CAS S
CAPODIANCE,MICHELLE M.	96 CAS/P
CAPPAS,MYRSA M.	97 CAS/P
CARBONE,MELISSA D.	97 CAS/P
CARLSON,LARISSA N.	97 CAS/L
CARTELLI,CHRISTINE L.	97 CAS/P
CARTELLI,JENNIFER/YNN P.	96 CAS/P
CASSIDY,CHRISTINE A.	96 CAS/P
CELLA,DAVID B.	96 CAS/P
CHARAM,JEFFREY M.	96 CAS S
CHAPLE,DAVID M.	96 CAS S
CHAPRON,AMY E.	98 CAS S
CHASES,KELLY A.	97 CAS/P
CHEK,ALLISON W.	97 CAS S
CHUNG,JAE HONG	97 CAS S
CIADY,DANIEL S.	99 CAS S
CLARK,CHRISTINE L.	97 CAS/P
COLLIER,MICHAEL S.	97 CAS/P
COLLINS,REBECCA E.	97 CAS S
COMMANDRE,NICOLE N.	96 CAS/P
CONBOY,BEATRIX M.	96 CAS/N
CONLIN,STEVEN M.	96 CAS/P
(H) CONNON,JENNIFER A.	96 CAS/L
CONNON,KARIE J.	97 CAS S
CROK,AMANDA J.	96 CAS S
CORREIA,CAROLINA F.	96 CAS/P
CORVELEYN,AMY C.	96 CAS/J
COUNE,DR.JANICE M.	95 CAS/P
COX,ANDREA D.	97 CAS S
(H) CRAIG,CHRISTINE	96 CAS/P
CRAVEN,JOSEPH	96 CAS/P
CRAVEN,BRIAN P.	97 CAS/P
CRONIN,SARAH E.	96 CAS/P
CUNNINGHAM,JENNIFER 9.	96 CAS S
CUSTODIO,KATHRYN A.	96 CAS/P
(H) CURTIS,EMILIE L.	97 CAS/D
CUSHING,ANNE J.	97 CAS/P
DACOSTA,JEFFREY M.	99 CAS S
DAGOSTINI,GREGORY R.	96 CAS/P
DALESSIO,CATERINA.	97 CAS/J
DANTZ,CHRISTOPHER M.	97 CAS/P
DEFOND,TRACY L.	97 CAS/S
(H) DELSPINA,PETER H.	96 CAS/P
DEMPSEY,WILLIAM P.JR	96 CAS/S
DENETTE,DANIELLE M.	95 CAS/P
DEPINA,MICAH M.	97 CAS/P
DEPPISH,WILLIAM L.	96 CAS S
DEVERTIAN,ALISHA P.	95 CAS/P
DEVLIN,JOHN J.	96 CAS S
DEPPLE,MARIA L.	96 CAS/P
DEVLIN,KELLY A.	95 CAS/P
DEVLIN,MARY E.	97 CAS/P
DEVLIN,MICHAEL J.	96 CAS/P
DIAZ,GERALDINE M.	96 CAS/P
DICKINSON,CAITLIN E.	96 CAS/P
DIEHL,JENNIFER L.	96 CAS/P
DIETZ,ANDREW J.	96 CAS/P
DIETZ,JENNIFER L.	96 CAS/P
DIETZ,MELISSA J.	96 CAS/P
DIGIOVANNI,MARK	96 CAS/P
DILLON,MICHAEL C.	97 CAS/P
DIMAIO,JOSEPH	97 CAS/P
DIMAIO,MARK	97 CAS/P
DIMAIO,MICHAEL	97 CAS/P
DIMAIO,MICHAEL	97 CAS/P
DIMAIO,MICHAEL

Men's gym has focus for tonight's meet

Kevin Schwartz still No. 1 in nation on still rings for UMass

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Correspondent

After three straight meets where they improved their best team scores of the year each time, the No. 15 University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team returned to practice on Tuesday to prepare for tonight's meet against Southern Connecticut State.

Coach Roy Johnson felt there were two keys in this particular meet to focus upon.

"We would like to put up a big score to help our national ranking, but more important is to use this as a springboard for Saturday's meet against Syracuse," Johnson said.

Overall, Johnson is pleased with his team's recent success and is pointing towards Saturday's home meet against the No. 13 Orangemen as a test. He likes the shape his team is in and is confident that they can put it together for the weekend.

"This is a good time for us," Johnson said. "We're all in good shape and healthy for the most part. We took two days off to build up our strength for the upcoming meets. I think the team will come out and with good performances [tonight] and Saturday."

Johnson is looking for consistently strong performances from team members across the board. Freshman Kevin Schwartz is one of those performers whose continued success will be key to the improvement of the team. He maintained his number one ranking in the country this week on the still rings with a score of 9.9.

The nation's No. 1 ranking has been owned by Schwartz for five consecutive weeks.

"Kevin has hit his ring routine," Johnson said. "And if he can hit his dismount, you could see the judges put a ten up for him."

> "We're all in good shape and healthy for the most part. We took two days off to build up our strength for the upcoming meets."

Another standout member of the team has been sophomore Gabe Columbus, who this week was acknowledged not only by his coach but by the ECAC for his performance this past week.

Columbus, who scored a 55.65 in all-around competition (tying his personal best), was voted as both the ECAC and UMass Athlete of the Week. Columbus is currently ranked 25th in the nation in the all-around.

Columbus says that a lot of his inspiration comes from the performance of his teammates and he attempts to draw from their enthusiasm and strong performances.

"It definitely helps when everyone is hitting their routines," Columbus said. "I want to hit for the team because everyone feeds off of everyone else's emotions as emotions run high. It gives everyone a good feeling."

"All I try and do is hit my routine hard and they (the judges) will give you the score," Columbus added. "They give you what you deserve."

■ Brunson

continued from page14

9-0 Temple run that cut the Massachusetts lead to one point late in the game.

The Owls had the ball down by one point late in the game and came within a Marcus Camby blocked shot of upsetting the then No. 1 Minutemen, who came away with a 59-58 victory. Coming as close as Temple did to upsetting the Minutemen, in what might have been Brunson's final game in his home state, frustrated the senior guard.

"It's tough as a senior," Brunson said. "I don't think I've ever won [at UMass]."

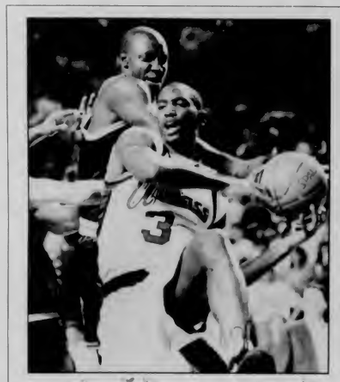
Since the one-point loss, Brunson is ready for another shot at UMass in what could be his final chapter of the rivalry (tomorrow night at McGonigle Hall in Philadelphia).

"It's tough. Every game we play is tight," he said "It's always a good game when you come to see Temple-UMass. It's been going on forever. It's always going to be a great rivalry."

"[The game] will mean a lot. They're definitely beatable. Everybody puts their jocks on the same. They're a good team. They play hard. I respect them, but I don't [sic] fear no one."

COURTESY OF TEMPLE SPORTS INFORMATION

Temple's Rick Brunson has carried much of the load this season on a young Temple squad, and leads the Owls against the Minutemen on Thursday.



EMILY REILLY / COLLEGIAN

EMILY REILLY / COLLEGIAN

COLLEGIAN FILE

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, women's basketball team, and the hockey team are all heading into the final stretch before postseason. The men's hoop team looks to wrap the Atlantic 10 regular season title, while the women's basketball team have three important games left that will affect their seed in the conference tournament. As for the hockey team, they are currently 5–24– 2 in their first season in the Hockey East, and will hope for an upset in the tournament like the one they had against Maine (4–2) on Jan. 28.

■ college basketball

continued from page14

Kittles is very similar to Anfernee Hardaway, can play inside and outside, and is a game-breaker. Just think if Lawson, who is as talented a big man inside as they come, could stay out of foul trouble. Kittles and Lawson are two players who could be dangerous in the Big Dance.

Parting Shots

Some teams no one is going to want to draw in the NCAA tournament — Mississippi State, Florida, Georgia Tech, George Washington, Michigan ... Top five candidates for Player of the Year — Maryland's Joe Smith, UConn's Allen, UMass' Roe, Michigan State's Respert, Carolina's Wallace ...

Here's hoping Duke doesn't turn it on in the ACC tourney, shock people and earn the automatic bid to the Big Dance ... Don't look now, but here comes Arkansas, going on four in a row and getting stronger as the magical grid approaches ...

I told you to watch out for Erick Dampier and the Bulldogs of Mississippi State. Dampier is quickly becoming a productive star in the SEC ... Stanford's backcourt of Dion Cross and Brevin Knight is going to impress many in the Cardinal's run in the NCAAs ... Maryland keeps winning close games. One problem — the more close games you play, the greater the chance of an upset in the tournament ...

Massachusetts will sweep the Philadelphia series against Temple and St. Joe's for the first time in history, solidifying at least a No. 2 seed in the Big Dance ... My college hoops colleague and I now have the Minutemen heading to Baltimore and somewhere along the line meeting up with No. 3 seed Virginia and No. 1 seed Connecticut. Until the next poll, that is ...

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

ALANA Christian Alliance presents a message "Homosapien" concert/social Sunday March 5, 1995 Campus Center auditorium featuring a live college mass choir. If you would like to sing with the mass choir on this one time event contact Chuck S. (582) ASAP.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion — private sector grants and scholarships is now available for students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income Let us up Call Student Financial Services 1 800 263 6495 ext. F5011

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst Free info session Mon Feb 27th Lord Jeffreys Inn at 7pm or call 1 800 U-CAN-MIX

UPC- Come get involved in the all student concern production group on campus! All are welcome to attend our next meeting Tues Feb 21st 8:00pm in CC rm 917 Film excited for our upcoming events including Spring Concert!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice SW - 107,336 miles automatic transmission Reliable car and engine Asking $900 or best offer Please contact Fausto (H) at 549-4909

1982 Mazda RX-7 5 Stk. 5 spd tra sunroof metallic dark blue must see/drive a must-have! $1,500 Call 253-3749

1992 Subaru wagon 55,000 miles, maintained right exc. very good condition. $7,300. 253-3844

1988 VW Jetta 16v GLI 75K Recaro seats Pioneer deck, sunroof, 5 spd alloy wheels Silver with black interior $5,000 o.b.o. 665-5004

Ford Granada 1981. Excellent condition Auto air. $1,400 obo 268-3851

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine Positions available waterfront, horseback riding gymnastics dance, tennis nature/ropes course athletics arts and crafts For applications call 609 424 3755

FOR RENT

250 a month Rent inc 2 miles to campus, on bus route Feb free Call Todd 549 7693

Cape Cod Group summer renters waterfront Routes, Falmouth area 508 477 9663

Cape Cod Seasonal renters 1 5 bed room houses in all towns Rental rates Hosley Specs 508 394 7857 or 398 9167

Nobo 1 br rm 4 to get Center 586 7540 Joseph Avbr immediately

Room for rent in a 2 br apt located in Amherst, on bus route $275 + 253 4177 Female preferred

FOR SALE

Alpina 7517 Ski model, full logic system face, dolby $175 Alpina 6046D component spr arr 4" meds, 1 dome headers, $100 Kenwood KAC 624 amp 80 W/Ch 160 W $80 Alpina 3531 amp 18W/4 $30 Magnavox 4 head VCR HQ, unshed remote $140 Call 253 3149

Computer and or printer Cordata 286 + mb RAM computer with software (DosLotus MS Works + more) Canon BJ 200 printer $500 for both Call 665 8787

Condoms by mail. Top quality brand names $2 0 condom sampler $8/12 condom sampler $21/36 condom sampler Send money order check, or cash to Healthy Concepts Box 52 Amherst MA 01004.

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $588 Call Chris at 800 789 5685

Mountain bike Bianchi Peregrine 18" STX LX 500 obo Maroon XC500 shock 150 756 4007 Dave

Revo sunglasses absolute lowest prices Shades, H20, Classic Traveler, Call 1 800 8804685

Save $63. US Air anywhere by March 28 $173 value for $110 For more 549 4015

Trax 950 mint apple Mac for sale 256 6893

Want a Macintosh? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Clarisworks $450 Christoffer 549 7453

Atari. Intellivision. Odd/random games, controllers and systems Buy/Sell/Trade 256 1995 ask for Tony

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn Stop key on Ralph Lauren key chain Call Bri at 6 6704

GUATEMALA

Guatemala Study espanol Credit available Casa Bos 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512 416 8991

HELP WANTED

Babysitter wanted. Area health club seeks babysitter Limited hours available Monday, Tues, and Thurs A M s a must Free membership with job! Call Mike at 549 3538

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mountains Pennsylvania Excellent residential coed summer camp Looking for caring counselors to help teach all land and water sports, mtn bikes motorcycles, arts + crafts, climbing wall, ropes course, radio newspaper, waterskiing, all skiing, and much more Summer season 6/20/95 thru 8/18/95 Call 800 837 8778 for an application

Camp Taconic Prestigious coed Massachusetts camp loving motivated team oriented undergrads and grads who love working with kids General counselors and instructors in swimming, watersports, team/individual land sports, tennis, ropes/camping, arts/crafts, jewelry, photography, video, newspaper, musical theatre, dance, science/archistry Competitive salaries Rewarding enjoyable work! 800 753 2626

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp 3 hours from NYC General, sports, waterfront, + arts Call 1 800 973 3866 On campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring Earn up to $2000 +/month. World travel Seasonal + full time positions No exp necessary For info call 1 206 634 0468 ext C50014

Dancers wanted No experience necessary Earn $1000 $1500 per week 532 1427

Expanding anvironmental company needs ambitious self starters immediately Great opportunity 413 534 6533

Flexible office hours available for general office tasks in our Amherst office Duties include copying and gathering materials to prepare for large volume mailings Three hour minimum required Some evening shifts available located off bus route Fill out application or send resume to Personnel NES, 30 Gatehouse Road Amherst, MA 01002 EOE

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod Call Holly at 349 8292

Live and work in Nantucket for the summer Call Laurie 545 1300

Part time marketing/sales Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers Excellent commissions, good training Will be a great addition to your resume Local no car necessary Call (401) 295 5490 after 2 p m

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000 $4,000/mo Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or s Korea No teaching background or asian languages required For information call (206) 632 1146 ext J50012

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 6 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $479! Panama City $179! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1 800 678 6386

Spring Break 95. Daytona $99, Panama City $149 The best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call Herb + Andrea 756 6110

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more Call Jaff at 549 4937

SCUBA DIVING

Diva Key Largo Florida Spring Break Earn 2 credits Call Project Dive 1 800 257 0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday 7 10pm 1 800 782 0977 Project Dive

SERVICES

Going away? Need your pets to be taken care of? Call Jen 546 6992 Exp with all types of animals

Modem users! Call the Playground 885 256 6089, 19 2 K bps 130 megs online + CD ROM Registered online games include Lord, BRE (Usurper Global Wars & Planets)

Photographer head shots $75 546 1618 Perry

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549 1906

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski Spring Break '95 intercollegiate in weekends only $209 Includes 5 days lift tickets 5 nights lodging (luxury condos) 5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age 18), sponsors include Labatts Molson and Mr. Dillard Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border) Group leader discounts Campus and Greek representatives needed Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1 800 999 SKI 9

THETA CHI

Theta Chi fraternity spring rush '95. See what our brotherhood is all about. All are welcome Feb 13 16,20,21 8 00 10 00pm Questions or a ride call Ted Silva 549 4598

TRAVEL

Daytona Beach Spring Break First class, oceanfront hotel directly on the beach, pool deck fun, nightclubs, sunshine parties Do not miss this trip! Includes on campus pick up and drop off only $259 quad occup Departs weekly + March Call for free brochure, M F, 8 6, 1 800 932 0866 See you at the beach!

Spring Break Bahamas cruise 6 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $479! Panama City $179! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1 800 678 6386

Spring Break 95. Daytona $99, Panama City $149 The best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call Herb + Andrea 756 6110

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more Call Jaff at 549 4937

TYPING

Data entry and word processing Reliable and fast Call Andy 586 0876

MOUNTAINBIKE FOR SALE

Paramount sarlas 26, mint, ridden approx 25 on road miles owner is mechanic Richey bars and rims, Suntour XCLtd approximately 2715 Light Red $850 will sell for $700 413 527 8079

PERSONALS

Jakia-Poo Thank you for the tiger hope I can roam the jungle soon Luv your equestrian

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends Gas $ 253 7809

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Classifed Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard listings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto For Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/Word Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

REGARDING PERSONALS
1. All personals MUST be submitted by 4 o'clock on classified employees before payment is acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthdays & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or street/room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards In accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

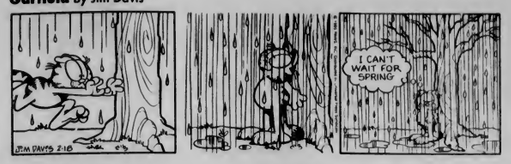
1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

AHH. WHAT COULD BE BETTER THAN A SATURDAY 6 MILE RUN AT DAWN IN 20 DEGREE WEATHER...
...FOLLOWED BY A BIG BOWL OF GUMMY OATMEAL AND SOME DRY TOAST.
HOW ABOUT SOME DRIED UP PRUNES AND A ROOT CANAL?
DRIED PRUNES? DO WE HAVE SOME??

Garfield By Jim Davis



Jim's Journal By Jim

I was woken up today by the phone ringing.
It was somebody I didn't recognize saying, 'Al—you slept in, huh, ace?'
After that, I tried to get back to sleep, but couldn't.
Mr. Peterson was scratching the wall, something was tapping on the ceiling—every little noise seemed extra loud.

Loold By Roger Salloom

Life is just totally tough. It's a bear.

I meet my ex-girlfriend and she says, "How are you?"

I say, "Fine." Actually, I felt so nervous and upset to see her that "Fine" described the tiny particles my brain had broken into when I saw her.

She was stading there looking fragile, lovely, hair by Warner Bros., lips by Renoir, and gentle vocals by Lee Remick.

I said, "How are you?" She started to cry.

That made me feel much better.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"For 25 bucks I'll shovel a path to your snow blower."

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

SPIDEY IS THE LAST PERSON THE MUGGERS WANTED TO RUN INTO...
SO TELL ME, GUYS, WHAT'S HAPPENIN'?
NOTHIN'! WE WERE JUST--LOOKIN' FOR A FRIEND!
FRIENDSHIP! WHAT A WONDERFUL THING!
PLUS 'IM NOW! IT'S OUR ONLY CHANCE!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DOGBERT, I NEED YOUR HELP DEALING WITH A PATHOLOGICAL LIAR AT WORK
YOU'RE IN LUCK. I HAPPEN TO HAVE A PH.D. IN LIATOLOGY FROM THE MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY
I'D LOVE TO SEE YOUR DIPLOMA.
I'LL MAIL IT TO YOU

Bruno By C. Baldwin

YEAH GIRL, DON'T YOU FIND FREE-FLOWING CREATIVITY SUCH SO GREAT? IT'S LIKE SCHOOL WAS TOO CONFINING AND TAKES AWAY FROM YOUR NATURAL INSTINCT. YEAH BEANIS, WE KNOW WHAT IT'S LIKE TO BE ARTISTICALLY FREE.
WE'RE LIKE SISTERS IN THAT WAY OF THINKING, AREN'T WE
I DON'T EVEN KNOW THERE IS THAT DIBBLE DEFINITION DISCREPENCY BETWEEN THE WORDS SELF-EDUCATED AND UNEDUCATED UHH... ANY TURKEYS?
GO FRIGGIN' FISH, BABE!

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat

WHAT'S THIS WORLD COMING TO?! RACIST LUNCHLADIES? SHE SHOULD BE MADE AN EXAMPLE OF AND FIRED!
FIRED?! HELL, SHE SHOULD BE REALLY PUNISHED! THEY SHOULD FORCE HER TO EAT THE SCROD!
MAINE

Coolio Is as Coolio Does By Gleeson

SCHEDULE CONFIRMATIONS FOR SPRING 1995

Starting Tuesday, February 21, the Registrar's Office will be mailing to your local address your course schedule for Spring 1995. It will be accurate as of Friday, February 17 and it will include any five-college registrations as of that date.

If you have any questions about the courses you are registered for or do not receive your schedule by Friday, March 3, please contact the Registrar's office to verify your schedule.

If you have registration problems and/or never attended certain classes, please contact your Undergraduate Dean's Office as soon as possible.

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A good day to catch up on correspondence and accounting matters. Give more thought to where your career is heading. Travel is best postponed. Someone who lacks experience deserves your help.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Be diplomatic when dealing with difficult people. You will learn something valuable by listening attentively. A marital relationship could be strengthened by a decision you make today.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): A lucky day lies ahead. Ask for favors and loans; someone may make an exception for you. Review contract negotiations. A job could come through a friend's recommendation. Overdue checks arrive.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Business associates may be difficult to reach in person. Contact them by voice mail or fax. Emotional outbursts are best avoided today. A major financial victory is possible if you can overcome someone's bias.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): The big pay–off will come when you learn to separate business from pleasure. Get financial offers in writing; you cannot afford to be too trusting. Compromise with your mate if you want your relationship to endure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Surprise yourself by making a bold career move. Forget about fringe benefits and concentrate on landing promotion. A former supervisor or client may recommend you for a cushy job.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): A career or business problem will prove less serious than you thought. Good luck and money go hand–in–hand now. Consult financial experts on ways to build your savings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Your luck will change for the better if you give it a nudge. Avoid distracting people or situations. Learn the supreme art of mental concentration; without it, you could flounder.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Returning to your old goals and interests will put you on the path to lasting success. Relationship questions could create confusion; avoid making snap decisions. Opt for short business trips.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Actions you take today could pave your path to the executive suite. Become more adventuresome; influential people admire bold moves. Scale down your social life in order to focus on career and business aims.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Using new methods will make a complicated project less time– consuming. Redouble your efforts to find more rewarding employment. You need to review your personal finances before making a new commitment.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Make this a day of intellectual pursuits. Inside information or new clout will help you negotiate with others. Romance concessions are featured. Discuss your plans with your mate.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Copy Editor ..... Matt Audette
Photo Technician ..... Juan Jose Chacon Quiros
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Art Stapleton, Jr.
Wendy Rae Nutter, Marni E. Hellner

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Sesame Noodles	Chicken Stew/Puff Pastry
Tacos	Quarter Pound Burger
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
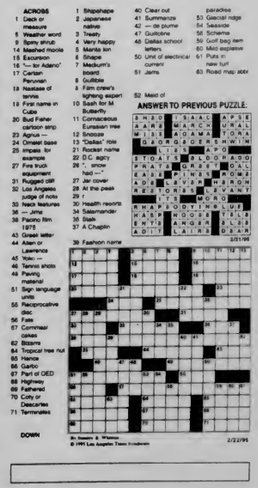
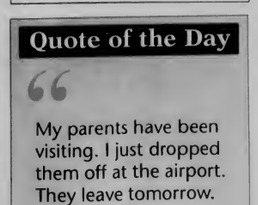
Sesame Noodles	Chicken Stew/Puff Pastry
Vegetable Tacos	Oatburger

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Joffe



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



Quote of the Day

My parents have been visiting. I just dropped them off at the airport. They leave tomorrow.

–Margaret Smith

Sports

Location set for Massachusetts–Rutgers tilt

■ Source says Calipari will remove Williams

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

The destination of the Massachusetts–Rutgers game that was suspended at halftime on Feb. 10 has changed many times. Just as much as the speculation has on if and when an announcement is going to be released on the future of the Minutemen's suspended guard Mike Williams.

One decision has been finalized, and the other reportedly will be announced in the next couple of days. The contest between the Minutemen–Scarlet Knights will resume at 4 p.m. on Friday, Mar. 3 at the Spectrum in Philadelphia.

"I'm glad we were able to resolve this situation to the satisfaction of both parties," said A-10 commissioner, Linda Bruno. "Both coaches and athletic directors voiced their opinions that it was important for this game to be played to maintain the integrity of the Atlantic 10 regular season, and I was in full agreement with them.

"I would like to thank the people at the Spectrum for their help in this matter. They were very cooperative in making the building available on such short notice and I appreciate everything they did for us."

The game was initially suspended when a halfcourt sit-in was staged during the intermission of the game by approximately 150 students. The protest was done because of racially inflammatory comments made by Rutgers President Francis Lawrence.

The game, which the Scarlet Knights were leading the then No. 4 and now No. 5 Minutemen 31–29, was then rescheduled to be finished on Mar. 2 at the Palestra, also in Philadelphia as well as the site of the Atlantic 10 tournament. This was done due to the fact that the A-10 tourney would start just two days later.

But, the Palestra idea was shelved due to preparations for the tournament. So, the Spectrum landed the 20 minutes of action between the two A-10 teams.

As for the Mike Williams ordeal, it looks like the long- awaited announcement will be made. A source close to the Massachusetts basketball team said that Coach John Calipari is expected to announce in the next couple of days that Williams will be removed from the team.

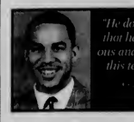
Williams, who was suspended prior to the Minutemen's game against Duquesne on Feb. 16, has not played since the Feb. 14 game against George Washington. And the coaching staff and players have danced around the questions about Williams since then.

After each of the two games since the Hartford Conn.– native has been suspended, however, the players have talked about starting a "new season" and "stepping it up a notch." They didn't address what the Williams situation entailed, but talked about how they would play without him.

On Sunday afternoon, Alphonza and Sarah Williams, Mike's parents, held a press conference in Manchester, Conn. on Mike's behalf to address the suspension. Alphonza Williams called it "harsh and unwarranted," while Sarah said they held the press conference because "we felt we had no other alternative."

COLLEGIAN FILE

Tyrone Weeks (34) and the No. 5 Minutemen will now play the second half of their suspended game with Rutgers at the Spectrum in Philadelphia on Mar. 3.



"He doesn't have the players flanking him that he's had before. He can't be overzealous and try to create opportunities because this team is only playing from a script."

— Temple coach John Chaney on Rick Brunson

Brunson leads Temple in last game against UM

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

A year ago, he had what every point guard dreams of.

When Temple guard Rick Brunson led the Owls down the court on offense, three decisions were presented to him. He could pass the ball to Atlantic 10 Player of the Year Eddie Jones and let the him take care of business inside. He could feed the Owls seventh all–time leading scorer Aaron McKie, or shoot the ball.

The combination led John Chaney's squad to 22 wins and a trip to the NCAA tournament.

This season has not been so rosy for the senior captain. While Jones and McKie have taken their talents to the NBA, Brunson has an inherited inexperienced Owl squad.

Chaney has tried to keep him from doing too much.

"He doesn't have the players flanking him that he's had before," Chaney said. "He has to be a little patient. He can't be overzealous and try to create opportunities for these guys, because the team is only playing from a script."

"They can't innovate. They can't create. We don't have nobody to stop the bleeding for this team."

Brunson came to Temple after a storied career at Salem High School, highlighted by a state title in his junior year.

He played in the 1991 McDonald's high school All–American following his senior year, where he was named MVP of the East squad.

After playing a limited role in his freshman season, Brunson stepped into the starting role in his second year.

Whether it was dissatisfaction with Temple or a twinge of homesickness, Brunson came close to transferring to Boston College following his second season in Philadelphia. He had a change of heart and remained at Temple, a move that benefited him and the Owls.

He returned to have a stellar junior season in which he led the A–10 in steals (83) and was fourth in assists (142) while averaging 12.6 points per game. He was named the team captain, despite the presence of Jones and McKie. There is a black mark on that season, however, that being three losses to UMass.

The rivalry between the Owls and the Brunson's home state university weighs heavily on the Salem native. Yet, in the Jan. 21 match-up between Massachusetts and Temple, Brunson found himself watching most of the first half from the bench with two fouls, scoring no points.

"It's a team rule if you get two fouls in the first half, you automatically sit down," Brunson said. "That's always been coach's rule. I thought it was good for me, cause I got to sit there and watch what was going on out there. In the second half, I got to do some things I wanted to do."

Those things included leading Temple's second half comeback after the Owls were down by 11 points at halftime. Brunson played the entire second half scoring 15 points, including six points in a

Turn to BRUNSON, page 12

North Carolina among teams with 'dynamic duos' in college hoop

Art Stapleton on College Basketball

It's nice to have one superstar on your team when you are heading to the NCAA tournament. When the game is on the line, you know the superstars are going to get the ball. Michigan State has Shawn Respert, Arizona has Damon Stoudamire, Connecticut has Ray Allen. Most teams aren't lucky enough to have one stud at the college level, yet the following clubs have two.

Here are the Batman and Robins of college hoops, the Dynamic Duos, if you will:

North Carolina's Jerry Stackhouse and Rasheed Wallace. The best combo in the nation, but not by far. It was a coup for Dean Smith to bring one of them to Chapel Hill, let alone both. He may be sorry — by playing together, they've developed so quickly that they're most likely jumping ship to the NBA.

Massachusetts' Lou Roe and Marcus Camby. Power and finesse. Roe will do just about anything he can to get the ball and push his team to the next level. It helps when he has Camby in the paint with him. Dump the ball into Camby, he'll find Roe somewhere on the baseline for the jam. Vice versa for this tag team, which can compete with the best of 'em.

Arkansas' Scotty Thurman and Corliss Williamson. They'll kill you inside and out. Thurman will fire up threes from long range and Williamson can man the blocks like few others in the college ranks. If they heat up, watch out America.

Georgia Tech's Travis Best and James Forrest. The Yellow Jackets' main men are Best and Forrest; another inside, outside combo that evokes memories of Stockton and Malone.

UCLA's Ed O'Bannon and Charles O'Bannon. Ed can carry his brother to the promised land, yet Charles won't need much help. The elder O'Bannon has been simply awesome this season, and the Bruins appear headed for a No. 1 seed in the Big Dance.

Wake Forest's Randolph Childress and Tim Duncan. Duncan is a shot–blocking specialist and Childress is a superior point guard with ice in his veins. There is no doubt that this tandem will be even better during Wake's tournament run.

Kansas' Jacque Vaughn and Raef Lafrentz. Nicknamed Jacque and the Beanstalks, the Jayhawks have two stars in Vaughn and Lafrentz. Only a freshman, Lafrentz has made an impact for Kansas in every big game they play. Vaughn is the best point guard in the nation and can shut down anyone he has to in order to get the job done.

Villanova's Kerry Kittles and Jason Lawson.

Turn to COLLEGE BASKETBALL, page 12

Hockey East stars honored for '94–95 season

Ted Kottler on Hockey East

We weren't so good at predictions, so we thought we'd try our hand at awards. We know, we know, the season's not quite over, but our editors needed some filler and that's our specialty. And we're a little like UMass: we've been around the block once. So without further adieu, we proudly present the First Annual Collegian Hockey East Awards. The envelopes, please:

Player of the Year: Greg Bullock, UMass–Lowell sophomore forward. He took the conference by storm last season, winning the scoring title, so what did he do for an encore? As of Saturday he was leading the nation in scoring. Simply a dynamic offensive force, he may soon be an NHL team's prize free agent signee.

Honorable Mention: Mike Grier, Boston University sophomore forward; Eric Flinton, New Hampshire senior forward.

Most Valuable Player: Rob Bonneau, UMass sophomore forward. An enduring image of the once–unheralded sniper was his tearful display of sorrow after a heartbreaking loss at Providence. He scored a goal and an assist, but his only real concern is for the team. He logs so much ice time but rarely seems tired; he scores many points but often does his best work defensively. Completely indispensable.

Honorable Mention: Martin Legault, Merrimack sophomore goaltender; Chad Quenneville, Providence senior forward.

Freshmen of the Year: Casey Kesselring, Merrimack forward; Scott Parmentier, Maine forward. This one's a toss up. They're in a two–horse race for the HE lead in freshman scoring, and it's scary to think what they might do in the next three years. Kesselring (Anthony's choice) is a poised, flashy passer, while Parmentier (Ted's choice) is a terrific skater and two–way player.

Honorable Mention: Tom Noble, BU goaltender; Mark Mowers, UNH forward.

Goaltender of the Year: Legault. He posted fine numbers a season ago that were enhanced by another year in the HE cellar for Merrimack. So, the redhead improved in every statistical category, and the team is the league's most improved. Rest assured there is a direct correlation; Legault has fulfilled UMass Coach Joe Mallen's goalie objective (giving the team a chance to win) on more occasions than anyone.

Honorable Mention: Blair Allison, Maine senior; Mike Heinke, UNH senior.

Defenseman of the Year: Kaj Linna, BU senior. Opponents devote much of their strategy to thwarting the Terriers' super–skilled blueliners, for whom Linna is the poster boy. Sometimes stereotypes are fitting descriptions, and Linna is the quintessential European (Finland) hockey player: graceful, finesse–laden and classy.

Honorable Mention: Chris Imes, Maine senior; Ted Russell, UNH senior.

Comeback Player of the Year: Sal Manganaro, UMass junior forward. He never really disappeared, but he did sit out last season after transferring from Boston College. Then he injured his knee in UMass' first game (his year, only to return ahead of schedule. Since that time, he has proven to be one of the most dedicated players anywhere who boasts a wealth of skill and speed. Never satisfied with himself, he maintains an exemplary attitude.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Minutemen Rob Bonneau (18) was one of the most valuable players to his team in the Hockey East this year.

Honorable Mention: Imes; Todd Hall, UNH junior defenseman.

Most Underrated Player: Jeff Daw, UMass–Lowell senior forward. Bullock gets all the ink (see above), but it would take a lot of space to detail everything Daw does in just one shift. The Riverhawks captain has blossomed into a prolific goalscorer (26 this season, the most of any HE player) after scoring only six times last year, and he's one of HE's top penalty killers.

Honorable Mention: Tom Ashe, BC junior defenseman; Jamie Thompson, Maine sophomore forward.

Most Improved Player: Grier. He was a novelty who skated on his ankles a year ago, but has become a frightening terror who scores. Now he's flying all over the place, and at 6–foot 2–inches, 242 pounds, can you think of an NHL coach he could please more than St. Louis' (Grier is Blues' property) Mike Keenan?

Honorable Mention: Jeff Tory, Maine junior defenseman; Eric Royal, UNH senior forward.

Coach of the Year: Shawn Walsh, Maine. Hey, coaches, were you trying to inspire the Black Bears when you picked them fourth on HE Media Day? If so, it worked. Maine has only lost once in conference this year en route to a No. 1 national ranking.

Hon. Mention: Dick Umile, UNH; Joe Mallen, UMass.

Anthony Guido also contributed to the selections.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 81 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, February 23, 1995

Mike Williams out for the season

Before heading to this weekend's game against Temple, John Calipari announced that Williams will not rejoin the this season (See story, page 14).

Not even Newman can save this Fool

Paul Newman is the only bright spot in the otherwise precocious Nobody's Fool, reviewed this week (See Arts & Living Weekend, page 7).

What is there to know about the dating game?

From first dates to breaking up, take a look at the highs and lows of dating and relationships in the '90s (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast

Rain today may start as snow with temps around 40 and southwest wind. Overnight lows in the 30s, chance of sprinkles tomorrow morning then mostly sunny with temps falling to 30s.

	Today	Friday	Saturday
	HIGH: 40 LOW: 35	HIGH: 35 LOW: 30	HIGH: 35 LOW: 15

EMILY RILEY / COLLEGIAN

Three–month–old Tux is temporarily in hiding to evade a room sweep searching for illicit pets — like chickens — in her dormitory.

Pets sharing in dorm comforts

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

Seeking companionship or a pet away from home, many University of Massachusetts students keep animals in residence halls around campus. From puppies to ferrets, owners house these pets despite University rules but sometimes with the acceptance of residence staff.

According to the Student Handbook, students in residence halls, unless they are visually or hearing disabled, are not allowed to have any animals in their room except for fish in tanks of less than 10 gallons.

The handbook rules don't seem to have dissuaded many students from turning their rooms into animal shelters. Most owners claim they keep the pets for company and attention.

From chickens to puppies

One student who wished to remain anonymous has kept a chicken in her room for about three months because she said it was going to be killed soon after its birth at a local barn.

"I raised it from a chick," she said. "There's not a lot of room here — it's going to have to go to a barn soon."

The owner, who also houses a mouse and used to have four rats, said there was a room sweep because someone had seen the chicken and informed the resident assistant. She didn't run into any problems, however.

"The R.A. warned me about the room checks," she said. "The R.A. just told me to hide it during the sweep."

The chicken, now at another room on campus because of the sweep, has proven to be a bit of a problem because of the size of the student's single, she said.

"It's not exactly toilet–trained," said the owner, "and if it's a female, it may start laying eggs soon."

Another on–campus student who owns a dog said he keeps the pet in the hall only about three times a week because he doesn't feel it's fair to the animal.

"I don't think it would be healthy to keep a dog locked in the dorm permanently — animals need to be outside," he said. "He'll stay in the dorm over the weekend, but I'll have someone stay with him if he stays with me on the weekdays and I'm at class."

He said the dog, which stays at an off–campus house when not in the residence hall, is well known to the R.A. and the students have kind of adopted the dog as the dormitory pet.

"Everybody all loves him because some people have dogs at home, they get excited," he said. "It's kind of a shock to see a dog in the dorm."

Because the dog is quiet, the owner said he hasn't gotten any complaints from fellow residents, even his roommate. The chicken, however, did cause some disturbance.

"When it was a chick, it made a lot of noise and some neighbors complained," she said. "They weren't really mad, it was more in fun."

Concern for animals' health

Environmental Health Services Manager George Reed, who in sometimes called to deal with animals in the residence halls, said the current problem is not bad.

"The last few years have been pretty quiet," Reed said. "It's not as bad as it was 20 years ago."

Regardless of violations that happen when animals are in the rooms, Reed said the real problem is the animals' health.

"People think they have the right to have pets, but it's just not fair to the animals," said Reed.

Claudia Beaudet, the director for communications at Placement Education and Treatment Shelter (PETS) and a dog officer at the Amherst Dog Pound, said they are kept busy with pet violations from the UMass community.

"[PETS] get a number of calls in the dorm with cats and puppies who get caught and [the resident] wants us to get rid of them," said

Turn to PETS, page 3

SGA votes down motion to condemn BSU, frat

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Staff

Tension hung in the air last night and the senate was called to order several times while a vote was called on a motion to condemn the actions of the Black Student Union and Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.

The motion, presented by Senator Jaime Resnick, moved that the Student Government Association (SGA) condemn the actions of the two groups for "continually inviting" anti– Semitic speakers to the University of Massachusetts in the past three years.

The motion failed, 24 to 10 with eight abstaining votes.

"I am not condemning the Black community, I am condemning the actions," Resnick said. "[The BSU's] actions have hurt me and other Jewish students."

The motion was raised at the suggestion of Chancellor David K. Scott to fight anti–Semitism, according to Hillel representative Alan Weinfeld.

Before Resnick presented his motion, Daniel Lizana, vice president of the BSU and member of Phi Beta Sigma, asked the senate to remember that the University is a "marketplace of ideas."

"I came to express concern and to let the SGA know where we stood," Lizana said.

Relations between the BSU and the SGA have been good in the past and he said he would like the positive ties to remain, Lizana said.

In his motion, Resnick pleaded for the Black and Jewish communities to work together.

"[Louis Farrakhan, Tony Martin and Leonard Jefferies] with their hateful messages have harassed and demoralized Jews," he said. "I don't know if I have done something wrong."

A heated debate opened after the motion and speakers from both the Black and Jewish communities addressed over 60 senate members and students who gathered for the meeting.

"Do we have the right to condemn groups on campus?" SGA chair Kevin Clark asked. "Bring other speakers who speak your beliefs. Don't get rid of hate by hiding it."

The issue is not free speech but the hate–mongering speakers bring to campus, said Weinfeld.

"We need leadership to stand up and to fight anti– Semitism," Weinfeld said.

Dror Niv, former treasurer of Hillel, said after the meeting there is a double standard between the two communities.

"We feel we can't say anything about minorities — the untouchable community," Niv said. "People excuse Farrakhan because he is working for Black empowerment."

A goal of the BSU is to aid cultural experience, Lizana said. "When we spark interest, we have done our job."

According to Lizana, SGA supported some of the forums.

"The motion is almost hypocritical," he said. "How can the SGA condemn us when they gave us money? It is obviously something personal — if you had a legitimate lead you would have started with the SGA."

Gun taken by UMass police; two arrested at the scene

Two individuals were arrested Tuesday for on firearm and traffic violations after their vehicle was stopped on the University of Massachusetts campus. The two were arraigned in Hampshire District Court in Northampton yesterday.

A 14–year–old juvenile and Miguel M. Reyes, 18, of 149 Summer St., Amherst, were both charged with the possession of a firearm and numerous traffic violations, according to police documents.

The firearm was not licensed for home or use in the workplace, according to Phil Cavanaugh, UMass police court officer.

The juvenile was charged with operating a vehicle without a license and in violation of the seat belt law. The vehicle was uninsured, unregistered and lacked an inspection sticker. It had defective equipment and license plates had been attached, according to police documents.

Reyes was charged with allowing an improper person to operate his unregistered, uninsured vehicle that lacked an inspection sticker. He was charged with attaching or allowing someone else to attach license plates to his vehicle, according to police documents.

The juvenile was released on $1,000 cash bail, and Reyes' was released on a $2,000 personal surety, pending his trial scheduled for March 23, according to Cavanaugh. A personal surety insures the court the defendant will show up for trial.

— Jessica Taverna

Hampshire workers dispute unionization

By Reid R. Frazier
Collegian Correspondent

NORTHAMPTON — The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) may have cleared the way for a victory on the side of management in a labor dispute between Hampshire College and its Physical Plant employees.

NLRB Regional Field Lawyer Pamela Westmoreland presided over a hearing yesterday on whether to annul the deciding two votes cast in an employee election. The election was intended to decide whether the employees are going to unionize.

The election, held in January, resulted with 15 in favor of, 14 against and two votes contested by pro–union employees, according to Tom Pelissier, carpenter for Physical Plant. The two votes, known to be "no" votes, would swing the election against unionization.

The votes were contested because they belonged to employees who did not share a "community of interest" with other workers, according to David Cohen, a union representative for the employees.

Westmoreland stated at the hearing she would not allow a "garden variety discussion" over whether a community of interest was shared. Instead, she decided to debate only whether the two employees were supervisors.

Ralph Abbott, counsel representing the college, argued that neither Robin Kopec, Physical Plant secretary, nor Frank Niemec, service desk coordinator, hold supervisory positions and therefore couldn't be included in the election pool.

Neither Kopec nor Niemec, he said, could transfer, suspend, layoff, terminate or discharge other Hampshire College employees.

The two workers hold jobs with minimal manual effort while the rest of Physical Plant hold positions performed with physical effort, according to a pro–union employee worksheet.

"[Westmoreland] restricted the information we could present in the case," said Pelissier, who testified on behalf of the employees.

Cohen agreed with Pelissier, saying Westmoreland "gave us the narrowest possible parameters for our case."

A Feb. 28 hearing is set to determine whether the college committed unfair labor practices by discouraging workers from forming a union prior to the Jan. 12 election, according to Cohen.

Conference called to rebuild Earth Day

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

In preparation for the 25th anniversary of Earth Day, University of Massachusetts students will convene this weekend at an emergency conference being held at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

More than 30 members of Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) will join approximately 2,000 other students from organizations around the nation for the Emergency Campus Environmental Conference.

The conference intends to devise ways of eradicating corporate involvement so Earth Day can return to how it originally was in 1970, according to Robin Eiseman, MASSPIRG campus organizer for UMass.

"If the polluters are sponsoring Earth Day, it defeats the purpose. We want to get corporate sponsorship away from Earth Day," said Justin Dolci, a freshman history major and coordinator of the Free the Planet campaign. "Earth Day was formed to make sure that polluters own up to what they do."

Highlights of the conference include panel discussions on how to deal with local, national and international environmental problems.

"I think it's a very valiant effort," said Steve Marcil, a senior construction management and environmental administration major who will attend the conference. "We're going to bring Earth Day back to the way it was, without the corporate involvement."

The newly–elected Congress is threatening to roll back much of the pending legislation on environmental protection, Dolci said.

This includes the Clean Water Act, the Clean Air Act, the Endangered Species Act and the National Environmental Policy Act, which created the Environmental Protection Agency, he said.

The Penn Environmental Group, the Sierra Student Coalition, Student Environment Action Coalition, Campus Green Vote, Green Core and Rainforest Action Network will all attend the conference, Dolci said.

Dow Chemical Company, Browning–Ferris Industries (BFI), Texaco Incorporated, Exxon and General Electric (GE) are some of the international corporations that still pollute the environment, Dolci said.

"[Plastics] don't biodegrade, and if they do, it takes a couple thousand of years." Eiseman said of the Dow Chemical Company's production of plastics. "When plastic is incinerated, toxic chemicals are emitted into the air."

General Electric has a plastic producing plant in Pittsfield, Eiseman said. In the middle of their company was Silver Lake, which is now full of toxic fumes.

Members from the UMass MASSPIRG chapter will leave for Philadelphia tomorrow.

YURI KASNYSKY / COLLEGIAN

Study break

Students from Hampshire College and the University of Massachusetts savored their long weekend on the patio of the Montague Book Mill.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Feb. 23

Film — Yiddish Folksingers on Miami Beach, Joel Saxe. Discussion with the director will follow. Free. Herter Hall room 227. Part of Jewish Film Series. Information: 549-1710.

Film — High and Low. In Japanese with English subtitles. Thriller. Business executive is financially ruined when he nobly pays ransom money to kidnappers who mistakenly steal his chauffeur's son. Third film in the Akira Kurosawa Film Series sponsored by the Japanese Foundation. Free. Amherst College, Merrill III, 7:30 p.m.

Film — The Beijing Watermelon English subtitles. Sharp- witted comedy about a Tokyo grocer who becomes involved with a group of penniless Chinese students, with potentially disastrous results. Demonstrates the keen sense of social satire that characterized the best of recent Japanese cinema. Free. Smith College, Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Symposium — "Celebration of Learning," W.E.B. DuBois symposium. Bill Strickland, Michael Thelwell and David DuBois will present W.E.B. DuBois the intellectual, the citizen and the world leader. Followed by a plaque presentation by Graduate Student Senate. Free. UMass Campus Center room 163, 11:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

Theater — You Could be Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College Movement-oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Homeless Women and the State: Scrambling for resources." Free. Smith College, Seelye Hall 201, 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — "Can Computers Be Free Agents?" Skinner Hall Lounge, 5:15 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Call UMass Honor Program if interested in attending: 545-2483.

Lecture — "The Roots of Evil, the Roots of Caring: Perpetrators, Bystanders and Heroic Rescuers." In conjunction with exhibition entitled Rescuers of the Holocaust: Portraits by Gay Block. Free. Amherst College, Converse Assembly Room, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The Grief Survival Group, a support group organized by people who have suffered a loss and talk about grief, will discuss "Models of Grief." Everyone is welcome. Tobin Hall in the Psychological Services Center on the first floor, 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Music — Pianist Garrick Ohlsson, recipient of the 1994 Avery Fisher Prize, presents works from romantic composer Frederic Chopin. Music at Amherst Series. $16/$10, discounts for students. Amherst College, Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Reservations: 542-2195.

Friday, Feb. 24

Lecture — "An Oceanic Perspective on the Global Greenhouse Effect: Reconstruction of Paleoceanic PCO," by John Jasper, University of Connecticut. Morrill 2 South room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — "A Christian Call for Racial Reconciliation." Spencer Perkins and Christ Rice, co-authors of More Than Equals and editors of Urban Family magazine are members of an inter-racial household, church and community-building ministry in Mississippi. Free. Amherst College Johnson Chapel, 7:30 p.m.

Dance — Michael Moschen, dancer, juggler, shaper of space, magically dexterous, illusionist. $11.50/$9.50. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

Theater — You Could B Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College Movement-oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Music — Five College Choral Festival. Works by various composers and choirs perform Robert Stern's "Through my Song." Free. Smith College John M. Greene Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Theater — Roger Guenveur Smith in Frederick Douglass Now. Words from the 19th century African American orator but cadences from angry Black poets of the '60s and rap artists of today. $6/3.50. Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Film — The Color Purple. Whoopi Goldberg's screen debut. $2.50. Mount Holyoke College Hooker Auditorium, 7 p.m. and 9:45 p.m.

Cultural — UMOJA talent show. Campus Center Auditorium, 7 p.m.

Notices

Senior class gift — Voting for senior class gift will take place on the Campus Center Concourse throughout this week. This is an opportunity to decide where your gift will go.

Yearbook photos — Senior photo sessions to continue through Feb. 24. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule appointments.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the UMOJA Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrone Johnson, 546-6787.

Voter registration — Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center offers voter registration daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. UMass, Student Union Building, room 428. Information: 545-0865.

Community Service — The Viva Community Service Council is asking groups and individuals on campus to submit the number of community service hours they have completed since the beginning of this academic year. The Council is tallying up the total number of service hours this campus has contributed to the community. For information, contact Lori McKinney, 545-3368.

Opinionated? People tell you to mind your own business? Then come submit your thoughts to the Ed/Op Desk. Contact Tracy Monahan, 113 Campus Center, 545-3500

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian
Write for GLB issues. Let your voice be heard.
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

THE SPOKE
THE SPOKE AMHERST, MASS
ADVOCATE "BEST OF THE VALLEY" HOLYOKE-PHD 1994
A DRINKERY
TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD POUNDERS
$2.00
Drink of the Week
RUM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

Mike's Westview Cafe
SPECIALS OF THE WEEK
$1.00 Shots of Schnapps
Busch Bottles $1.25
Thursday Night: Free Appetizer 9:30-10:30 p.m.
Friday Night buffet for $1.00
Menu Includes Roast Beef, Baked Ham, Veal Parmesan, Baked Stuffed Mushrooms, Macaroni and Meatballs, Roast Chicken, Au Gratin Potatoes, and Assorted Salads!

PAWSS
The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies
presents
" BOSNIA: THE COUNTRY BETRAYED "
A Lecture by:
KEMAL KURSPAHIC
Editor-in-Chief of OBLOBODJENJE, Sarajevo's Independent Newspaper, and Neiman Fellow at Harvard University
Thursday, February 23rd
7:30 PM
Thompson 106
University of Massachusetts
This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. For information please callPAWSS at 582-5519.

GET YOUR FREE
SENIOR YEARBOOK PHOTO
just walk in just walk in NOW! NO APPOINTMENT NEEDED!
Campus Center 901-902
just walk in & GET SHOT
Be part of the first ALL COLOR yearbook in New England
the INDEX
THIS WEEK IS YOUR LAST CHANCE!

Abandonment, health major issues with dorm pets

continued from page 1

SHINICHIRO SUZUKI / COLLEGIAN
Ferrets are among the animals barred from the dormitories, and are considered illegal if they are unlicensed.

Beaudet. "We can't always house the animals [in foster homes] because we're often out of space."

She also said there is a major problem with students abandoning pets, especially at the end of the semester when they realize they cannot bring the animal home.

"We get calls towards the end of the spring semester about stray cats on campus — it's a major problem," Beaudet said. "The students abandoning the animals think they will be taken care of, but most of them die slow and painful deaths."

A past R.A. who is now living off-campus and requested anonymity agreed there is sometimes a problem with students who leave animals in the dorm over break.

"At the end of the semester at least once a year, we'll find a pet with lots of food and water left in the dorm room and [the resident] thinks it will make it," she said. "They bought this kitten or puppy and they don't want to face mom and dad."

According to the former R.A., one incident five years ago in Southwest Residential Area ended in tragedy.

"Somebody had left all this food and water for a puppy, and it must have hidden under the bed [during room sweeps] because they didn't see it," she said. "It ran out of water and they found it dead at the beginning of the next semester."

She said she also agreed with Beaudet about the stray cats, especially in Southwest.

"People just don't know what to do, either they leave it in the room, or let them out," she said. "Then we have this huge population of wild cats."

Another UMass resident said he keeps a ferret in his room because he was never allowed to have pets when he lived at home with his parents.

According to the Massachusetts Code of Regulations, a person cannot own a ferret without a license. The fine for violating this code is a misdemeanor: $100 fine, and/or 30 days in jail. The owner said he was aware of the regulation but not the punishment, and does not have a permit.

"Sis, R.A.s in my dorm know about [the ferret], everybody loves her," he said. "I have never been asked to remove her."

Lenient enforcement

Shulamit Gershenson, an R.A. at Chadbourne Residence Hall, said they usually do not kick a student out of the dorm when a pet is found, but they do warn the owner to remove the animal from the building.

"Pets are not allowed in the dorms, but I don't go prying into people's rooms," said Gershenson. "If I see a pet in the hall though, that's no good."

Gershenson said there are sanitary and allergic concerns, but some R.A.s are a lenient with pets that live in small cages, like mice and hamsters.

Students whose animals are removed from dorms may face impounding fees, Beaudet said.

Although they only house dogs, the Amherst Dog Pound will be raising its fees to $15 for impoundment and $10 for each additional day. After 10 days the dogs will be put up for adoption, said Beaudet.

Beaudet said she wants students to think twice before bringing a pet into the residence halls. But if they do, there are options for the animal other than setting it free if it is caught.

"There are a number of shelters in the area," said Beaudet. "I know most people think, 'Oh, they're just going to kill it,' but we try to use foster homes. It is certainly better than putting the animal on the street."

Hadley Tire and Performance Center
Route 9 • 439 Russell St., P.O. Box 608
Hadley, Mass. 01035
Tel. (413) 253-9911
Used Tires:
13" $9.95
14" $12.95
15" $14.94
Guarantee 100s In Stock
FREE BRAKE INSPECTION!

Collegian Graphics
We spend all day and all night making New England's Newspaper of the year look like a million bucks
Call 545-3864 or come down to 101 Campus Center to get involved

All I need is my fork, my serrated edged Ginsu© knife and a few good friends. Now there is a real meal!!!
DAILY COLLEGIAN ...we know a good meal when it looks us in the face

ARE YOU TIRED of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

IF YOU WANT TO MAKE IT IN THE REAL WORLD, SPEND A SEMESTER IN OURS.
Walt Disney World Co. representatives will be on campus to present an information session for Undergraduate Students on the WALT DISNEY WORLD Summer/Fall '95 College Program.
WHEN: MONDAY, FEB. 27 at 7:00PM
WHERE: ROOM 132 MARSTON
Attendance at this presentation is required to interview for the Summer/Fall '95 College Program.
Interviews will be held Tuesday, February 28.
The following majors are encouraged to attend: Business, Communication, Recreation/Leisure Studies, Hospitality/Restaurant Management, Travel & Tourism and Theatre/Drama.
Lifeguards are needed to work at our many Water Parks and Resorts. Students with ANY major are eligible to apply. You need to hold lifeguard certification OR be a strong swimmer and we'll provide the training needed for an exciting experience this summer or fall!
For more information contact Jeff Silver – Field Experience Office
Phones 545-6265
Where students spend a semester getting ready for the rest of their lives.
© The Walt Disney Co. An equal opportunity employer

HOW TO SAVE A FEW BUCKS.
(YOU CAN'T LIVE OFF PSYCH EXPERIMENTS ALONE.)
Buy pizza at closing time.
Haggle for slices they'd otherwise just throw away.
Eat Ramen noodles.
Make friends with a Senior.
Come June, they'll be more than glad to give you their old Poly Sci books and couches.
Donate blood.
Save a life and get a free lunch to boot.
Pick up a Citibank Classic card.
There's no annual fee.
WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOU.™
To apply, call 1-800-CITIBANK

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
LONDON $122 $244
PARIS $199 $398
AMSTERDAM $201 $402
SAN JOSE COSTA RICA $238 $476
TOKYO Roundtrip $774
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs, immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
340 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*In NYC

HOWARD HUGHES
SUMMER UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS
University of Massachusetts
Molecular & Cellular Biology
Chemical Biology
Neurobiology
JUNE 5 - AUGUST 11, 1995
The ten-week program will include:
A Weekly Stipend of $250
Housing Allowance of $500
Fellowships are available for talented college sophomores and juniors to participate in a summer program of research and scholarly activity. Applications are now available at:
MCB Office-435 Morrill North
NSB Office- 337A Morrill South
Biology Undergrad-348 Morrill South
Biochemistry Undergrad-913 LGRT
Chemistry Undergrad-149 Goessmann
Microbiology-203 Morrill North
All application materials must be received by March 15, 1995.
Women and minority students are encouraged to apply.

The Distinguished Visitor's Program
Proudly Presents
Rebecca Walker
"The Third Wave of Feminism"
Monday, February, 27th
8:00 p.m.
Bowker Auditorium, UMass
Free to UMass Undergrads with valid I.D.
$2.00 for public

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darlenne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Peppas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the In-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Students shouldn't bear burden of deficit

Unable to find any meaningful cuts in the federal budget, the Republicans have set their sights on the politically weak students to trim the $250 billion deficit for fiscal year 1996. Under this proposal, students would be forced to pay interest on their student loans while still in school.

If a student took out a full Stafford loan of $5,500, with the current interest rate of 7 percent they would have to pay $385 in order to cover the interest. If a student took out a full Stafford loan each of their first three years in school, by their senior year they would have paid $2,310 in interest alone.

According to the United States Student Association, the proposal would save the government $13 billion over five years. That amounts to barely 2/10 of 1 percent of the federal budget — hardly worth the sacrifice starving students would be forced to make.

A national student lobby day is planned for March 20, and students from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst should take action. Public higher education has been under increasing attack and is becoming less accessible. While many students are hard pressed to take action, the proposal would have an immediate effect in the upcoming school year.

In a technologically advancing world, trimming money given to students at public universities is not the answer. The only way to prevent this injustice is to let your representative in Congress know that this proposal is unacceptable. Students shouldn't have to shoulder the burden of a swollen federal budget.

Nightly news within the walls

Erin Barnes

"If it bleeds it leads" on the evening news. Thisdrives our present-day media circus. Journalism has become a glitzy, fast-paced race for high ratings characterized by the capitalization on a high body count. Like other facets of American society, prime time news coverage has succumbed to the profit-driven pitfalls of big business. What is lost in this race is responsibility on the part of the media. Somewhere between the drive-by shooting at 10 and the news at 11, we have traded conciseness and compassion for flashy graphics and headlines with exclamation points.

The media tells people what they think they need to know. There exists a disparity between the value of the information conveyed and the magnitude of the pain inflicted.

In journalism, we assume certainty. Sadly, we are moving these days into areas of great uncertainty.

The media's distortion of an apparent crime wave is the perfect example. Violent crime spots on television news have increased 240 percent between 1992 and 1994. Actually, violent crime is down 5 percent from last year, and the crime rate itself has been relatively stable since 1973. When viewers witness repeated violent crime coverage on the nightly news, they tend to forget about the causes associated with crime and focus on punishment rather than prevention.

More importantly, there is concern we are creating a public insensitive to violence because of the gross amount of news coverage. This pushes diverse groups of society into isolation, leading them to believe that if we separate the bad people from the good, that we are in a sense, made safer.

Roughly one-third of the coastal city of Dana Point, Calif., is sealed off behind 17 walled communities. Robert and Eileen Krause chose to live there. Eileen says they wanted to be near the beach, and the house just happened to be in a walled community.

Her husband differed. "I looked at it from a safety standpoint — there's much less risk."

As many as four million people watch their nightly news from within walled communities. Their isolation will increase as generations of children grow up behind walls and accept their reality. Alma Valladeras, a waitress in Dana Point, believes. "The reason [the rich] go gated is because they feel safe. To me, they're afraid to learn. They're afraid to realize the truth — the truth that we are all human and we all have to stick together. You can't have for just for you only, because you'll be stuck with you and you only at the end."

Walls are a result, not a cause of society's problems — at least for now. In Third World countries, we have seen how the rich have lived behind walls for generations. Removed from reality, they can't see why wars are started against them.

Journalists, like politicians and academics, look at extremes. On subjects like race, crime and multiculturalism, a centrifugal force flings the debate to the outermost edges. Sometimes it never returns to the center. These extremes push public policy. As viewers, we have the responsibility to affect what we read and watch in public mediums. As consumers of media coverage on violent crime, for example, we influence what goes on or off the air and should be held just as blameworthy as those actors that drive the media circus.

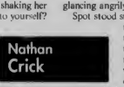
For example, when CNN interrupted coverage of the infamous Bobbit case for a meeting between President Clinton and Russian Prime Minister Boris Yeltsin, viewers wrote in to CNN and complained about the intermission. What does this say about American society?

The media serves as a vital link between citizens and events in their communities. And more times than not, this goal is abandoned in the ratings game that, as passive observers, we perpetuate. Wake up, America. If you don't trust the messenger, then you shouldn't trust the message.

Erin Barnes is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

Heaven beyond our steel fences



Nathan Crick

Big Spot the cow stood in the middle of the Field, absently chewing on some grass beneath her and feeling the sinking sensation of her hooves in the mud. The Fence seemed distant from where she was, a thin thread outlining the Field and creating a silver horizon to what was beyond. The greyness was beginning to cover the sky, dulling the reflections of ice on the ground.

"Whatcha thinkin' Spotto?" asked Long Nose, lumbering up beside her and nudging her neck.

Spot bit off a few more blades of grass and chewed them slowly. "It would be beautiful to run out there," she said, staring our into the hills.

"Oh, will you stop already!" said Long Nose, shaking her head. "When are you going to stop doing this to yourself? You are not a Walker yet," she exclaimed. "If we ever left the Field we'd be somewhere we wouldn't belong. Zapped out of existence! That world is for the next life."

"You don't know that for sure," Spot said softly.

"I don't have to know," she said indignantly, raising her head high with pride. "I just have to listen to the words of Bessie Mae, who told us of the Fence and the Outside before sacrificing herself for all of us by departing the Field and being struck down for it. She died for us, and I am not about to waste all of her efforts for these frivolous dreams you have."

Big Spot swayed her head and look at the ground.

"Hey now, Nosey," called Black Feet, a younger cow, as she came trotting over to them. "Why do you have to always be spouting off about Bessie Mae this and the Outside that? Why don't you go off and preach to someone who cares?"

"Every cow should care, Black Feet," Nose said. "Because otherwise we will live like worms. No soul. No future."

"Oh get real! Everyone should realize what is going on here!" cried Feet loudly, causing many of the herd to look up at her curiously. "We are being controlled and manipulated by the Walkers with the help of these fools! They only want to keep us down and kill us slowly! They are scared of our power if we organize and rise up against them! We must unite and tear down the Fence! Down with the Fence! Down with the Walkers!"

The herd looked at her for a moment, and most of them flicked their tails and went back to grazing.

"What is wrong with all of these cows?" Feet grimaced. "Why can't they see this life is killing us all off? Why can't they see we have the chance at something better out there?" she said, looking outside. "Where fields run forever and our freedom is truly ours and the sun shines upon our backs instead of this ice and mud."

"Because they know it is a lie," said Nose. "They know that Bessie Mae said our chance is at the next life, where we will be raised to a new form of consciousness, a new form of cow, that will walk upright through the world with our eyes open and our mind free."

"What do you think about this Big Spot?" asked Feet, glancing angrily at Long Nose.

Spot stood still, and looked at two Walkers far away as they moved slowly outside of the Fence, talking to one another. The light broke through the greyness for a moment, and made the Field look clear and wide. "I wonder what they are speaking of. I wonder if we had a chance to understand, if we would really learn something about our world."

Black Feet scoffed. "They are only monitoring us, planning new ways to hold us down. They would be better off trampled into the ground."

"You will die a lonely death thinking that way," Long Nose said. "Can't you see their wisdom? Can't you see the peace in their stride? And that is what we will become if we follow the word of Bessie Mae. That is us when we rise up on our feet after losing this body formed in mud."

"Hmmm," Big Spot said, and began walking away from both of them, the soft suction and release of the mud of the field felt like a massage on her legs. She passed through tufts of grass and over melting piles of ice, until she stood beside the fence, gazing beyond into the outside. The Walkers were approaching, rhythmic steps on the stone and elegant motion of their soft hooves. Big Spot wanted to ask them to know of the world she could not feel, but she could only listen to the gentle sounds of their incomprehensible voices as they moved.

"Oh shut up, Eustacia. The cow is not following us, and I am not petting it," said Kent, wincing as Eustacia punched him in the arm in frustration.

Big Spot watched the Walkers disappear down the road. "Mooo," she sighed.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Music column out of tune

To the editor:

I just finished reading the new "Liner Notes" column by Matt Audette and Justin Faerber in the Dec. 10 Collegian, and I am left with the distinct impression that the authors know very little, if anything, about their subjects. Not only did they display a vast ignorance of music and the current music industry, but also of writing.

I'm not even going to get into the personal opinions expressed by the authors because they are just that, opinion, and thankfully they have every right to write whatever they want and to criticize whomever they want. However, one would think that if they were going to take the time to write a column, they would want to write in a way that would clearly convey what they were talking about and would not make them seem completely ignorant of the English language.

Fortunately, the same freedom that allows the authors to openly voice their opinions and criticize other people allows other people to do the same.

First of all, what's so bizarre about Sonic Youth being on Rhino records? Rhino does a lot of re-issues of out of print albums, and both of the Sonic Youth albums mentioned in the article are out of print. Next, the quote from Jane Wiedlin (of the Go-Go's) which the authors included in the article, assuming it was reprinted correctly, is not claiming that the Go-Go's are punk, but simply that they are a part of the history and the road that led to many of today's newer bands like Bikini Kill.

It is also disgusting that these authors would have the audacity and misinformation to deride Living Colour, one of the most respected, influential, powerful and popular bands of the last 10 years and one of the most technically accomplished bands in the history of the entire genre of rock and roll.

Finally, if Audetie and Faerber feel that they know so much about contemporary music and the "music world," then why in the hell did they or whoever is responsible for the caption below the pictures say that J. Mascis was on the right of the picture when it was Mike Johnson, the six-foot- four, blond bass player for Dinosaur Jr. who was on the right and Mascis was on the left? I mean, I know the resemblance is frightening, but you'd figure they would do a little research. Well, at least they got the band name right.

The column also seems to be lacking in another area: the main point or reason for writing the article is completely unclear. The article was called "a biting new look at the music world" on the front page of the Collegian. What is the column saying about the music world? Nothing, if the first paltry installment is any indication. Why is this billed as a "new column" when it is just the same misinformed, mistake-ridden dribble that has been written in the music section for years? "A biting new look." I don't know about that, but it sure does bite.

Jordan Weeks
Sunderland

Interracial dating decreases conflict

To the editor:

The term interracial dating is clouded by connotation and misdirects most debates. What is necessary for a fair and well-rounded discussion is an inclusive and denotated definition of the term. Interracial denotes "within or between races," including all cultural variables. If any single ethnic variable is neglected it distorts any objective analysis and any valid conclusion. Therefore it is essential not to fall into the trap of simply envisioning Blacks and Whites holding hands, a common bias insulled by uneven media attention.

Dividing society is not always successful when its citizenry possesses multiple group identities. When this exists, who will decide what criteria are pertinent and by what order they will be prioritized? One naturally decides that establishing a complicated conflicts's uniformity serves only as an unachievable theoretical possibility.

This is why interracial [illegible] and not isolationism appears [illegible] present a more viable solution toward building a conducive community. However, my main intent of this letter was to have people re-examine the way we perceive specific social phenomenon like interracial dating and to conduct a more thorough analysis before making a judgement that scarimly places peoples' physical, mental and emotional states in jeopardy.

Kaisar Khatlak
Southwest

Is a photo worth all these words?

Andrew Bryce

Look at my picture.

Look at it again, and don't be afraid to make fun of it. When the idea arose that pictures were going to be printed with the columns, I was just not down wit' it. Not that I was afraid that my picture would be there for some 20,000 readers to look and laugh at; I just thought that the mystery of what the writer looks like adds to the column.

For instance, some woman can read one of my columns and figure I look like, say, Tom Cruise. In reality, though, there wouldn't be too much difference (this picture doesn't show it, but in the right light, and if there's a bunch of smoke in the room, and the eyes are a bit weary, there's definitely a resemblance between me and that Cruise guy).

With the picture the mystery is gone, the face is seen. And whether you like it or are disgusted by it, my picture to the right is what you happily or horrifically see when you read my stuff each week. Instead of the vision you could conjure up in your wild imagination, you see me.

Speaking of pictures, yesterday I had to retake my identification card photo. What a beaut. The lady working there, when seeing me with the tired, irritated-to-be-spending-the-money-when-I-know-the-old-ID-will-show-up-within-days look on my face, joked that she "wasn't going to shoot me," and busted out this evil laugh. I smiled politely out of fear after the frightening sound of her laugh, and she snapped it right then.

Though my pictures on both my column and my ID are not Mona Lisas, I have had worse. My parents thought it would be nice to get a pic of me wearing a pair of rabbit slippers, a pair of briefs, a matching T-shirt, and rabbit ears made out of paper we made in my first grade class, all while holding an Easter basket filled with candy. Describing it is not seeing it. I wish you could see it, but I'm glad you can't.

Another photo of me was taken during my First Communion. I was in second grade wearing the suit my mother made for me. The suit was fine. My dental frame, on the other hand, would scare many. You could fit wrenches through the spaces in my teeth back then. What is not said in the picture is the fact that my new shoes gave me the worst blisters ever. I wish I had a picture of myself grimacing in pain, with my jack-o'-lantern teeth for all to see, as I was walking in those damn shoes.

I can then turn the photo album pages and see an old staged picture of me as a baby taken by one of the local photography studios. I have to admit, I did look cute — but I had this long string of drool hanging off my bottom lip. I guess my mother asked the man to retake the picture because of the hanging drool, but he refused. So, the drool one it was.

Then there was the pic of me hitting a piñata on my 15th birthday — with a fluorescent pink shirt, a fluorescent pink and black striped pair of shorts and a fluorescent pink hat. What was I thinking? Probably about something that had to do with the color fluorescent pink.

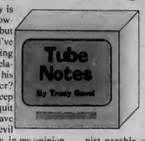
Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Welcome, Elmont! --Helen.
THAT'S HELEN! SHE'S A REGULAR IN THE HOMELESS CHAT GROUP!
Helen, let's meet in Vegas and get married. --Elmont.
ELMONT! YOU CAN'T MARRY HELEN!
TAP! TAP! TAP!
I CAN'T! GOOD LORD! WHY ON EARTH NOT?
WE'VE BEEN OVER THIS A MILLION TIMES. YOU'RE ALREADY MARRIED TO ME!
Helen: Bad news. I've been living a lie. --Elmont.
Elmont: Me, too. I'm actually fully clothed.
TAP! TAP! TAP!
2-23

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday February 23, 1995
Weekend Edition • Volume CIV Issue 81

Superman soars; Cybill crashes



You know, I don't think that Puck guy is so bad. I mean, I haven't really been following MTV's cult hit, "The Real World," but after seeing a couple of reruns recently, I've come to the conclusion that (considering the misfortune of his name) he seems relatively well-adjusted. So what if he sticks his fingers in other people's peanut butter? Really, it's worth the rudeness just to keep somebody around who can tell Cory to quit whining once in a while. But it must have hurt the show when he left. A strong evil character is worth 10 boring ones any day, in my opinion.

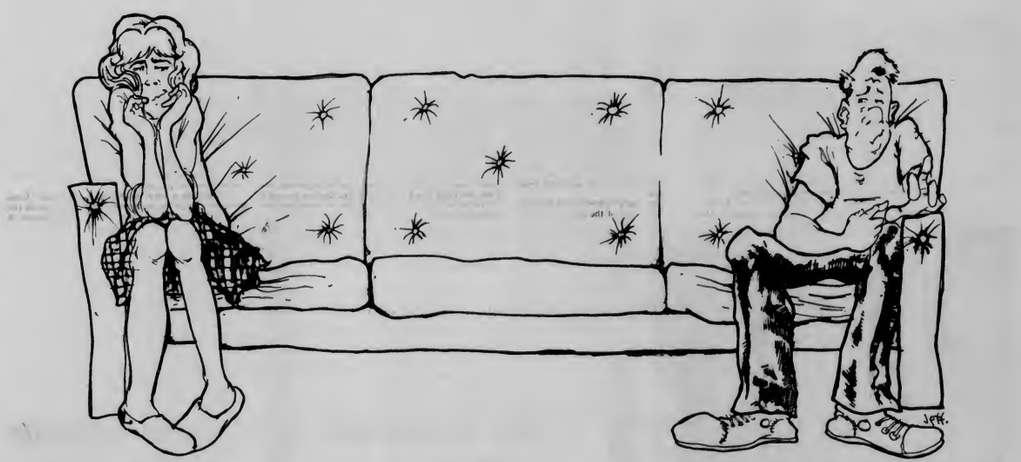
Oh, and speaking of crushing bores, I caught part one of NBC's pretentious 6-hour miniseries, "A Woman of Independent Means." I know Sally Field is supposed to be this wonderful actress, but despite all of her theatrics in this production, she barely managed to upstage her lavish turn- of-the-century apparel. In fact, the whole cast spent an awful lot of time mincing around in decorative duds, while an annoying voice-over narration provided some painfully melodramatic commentary.

I've always been somewhat leery of TV projects that involve lots of elaborate props and set design, because I begin to suspect somebody's just trying to cover up for a weak script or hammy acting. With this mess, my suspicions were confirmed, and what should have been an involving feminist parable ended up as nothing more than an all-star costume party.

Fortunately, there were several shows on this week that served as amusing alternatives to the latest miniseries debacle. Among them was ABC's "Lois and Clark: The

turn to TUBE, page 8

Don't Kiss, Don't Tell



From dating to sex, relationships are more a minefield than ever. But is it still possible to find love in the '90s?

Dating for many cultures is like a rite of passage from childhood into adulthood. It is through dating we "try on" different people in order to find a good fit.

By Tara MK Connelly • Collegian Staff

Relationships in the '90s. What is it all about and how does it all begin? First dates certainly aren't going to the drive-in for a dollar or hanging out at the local sock hop bopping to Buddy Holly. Most assuredly the beginnings of a relationship aren't chaperoned visits in the front parlor with Mom and Pop on Sunday or squiring your loved one to a country dance.

If anything, relationships in the '90s are all that and a little bit more — a peculiar mixture of old and new traditions. And if dating is an obstacle, relationships are even harder. From chaste pecks to back seat groping on Lover's Lane and wondering if this is "the one," dating and relationships have come a long way and in today's society with many sides and issues that can't be ignored.

Dating for many cultures is like a rite of passage from childhood into adulthood. It is through dating we "try on" different people in order to find a good fit. By dating, people take control of who they inevitably spend the rest of their lives with. Although trial and error can become tedious and often boring, it is the ultimate reward in finding "the one" that makes it all worth while. That is why dating is so interesting and nerve-wracking. Experience is all part of the game and to begin playing you need the dreaded first date.

First impressions are everything

For many people young and old, the first date presents the biggest obstacle. So how do you go about getting one? Pick-up lines are a dime a dozen and so are the places you can use them. Many people are tired of the bar and club scenes where the phrase "meat market" aptly applies. For shy people, personal advertisements in various newspapers and magazines offer a safe and easy way to meet their potential significant other. Still others prefer the "do or die" method beginning with, "So what are you doing…"

During the first date almost everyone will agree that first impressions are everything. Asking may seem to be the hardest part, but once you've got that resounding "yes" something permeates through that love-induced fog — it's the question. Where do you go? Thoughts whirl through your mind, palms sweat, and in the end you begin to wonder if it's even worth the hassle.

The way you walk, talk, eat and even breathe can affect some people's perception of who and even what you are. First dates are perhaps the most awkward situation anyone can be placed in.

"One of the hardest things about first dates is being nervous and not being able to eat in front of them," said Todd Watson, a sophomore business major.

Once you order there is always that lingering time in between appetizer and entree when someone is going to have to say something.

"I hate it when you go on a first date and all the guy does is talk about himself," said Kate Marchant, a sophomore majoring in environmental science. "It's a really big turnoff."

Who pays the check?

Another turnoff and extra hassle is the check. Going dutch is the acceptable way, especially with spare cash being so scarce for students. Others, however, take a more traditional view towards it and let the male pay. In fact, most women today let the guy pick up the bill even though most consider themselves pretty liberal.

"I think both people should pick up the bill because it's the '90s," said Marchant.

"I think that the guy should pick up the tab because that's the way I was brought up," said Watson.

This type of thinking may agree with some people, but letting the male pay can have a flip side.

"Men are raised to believe as men we pay for the dinner and afterwards we get paid back by the woman through sex," said Ben Zeman, a spokesperson for the National Organization for Men Against Sexism. "I'm in a relationship where I'm poorer than my partner and she pays for dates. But then again, she doesn't expect sex afterwards."

Sex in our society has come to take on a negative connotation, especially when it's used as a bartering item and not as a means to become closer to someone you don't remember after the sun rises. From the guy who sticks a condom in his wallet in the hope that he gets "lucky," to Elaine on "Seinfeld" who carries her diaphragm in her purse "just in case," no one can be too careful.

No means no, across the board

"I think safe sex is a male responsibility," Zeman said. "I think there is no such thing as safe sex, but rather safer sex. You can get safer…in the queer community men are doing a very good job of educating themselves. In fact, AIDS contraction for queers has gone down, but for straight people, it's gone up. Queers have learned the lesson and are educated."

According to Zeman, more men are needed working in programs like the National Organization for Men Against Sexism. It is up to them to create positive role models to dispel myths like silence is consent. As a bisexual, Zeman also emphasized that consent goes not only for heterosexual relationships but homosexual relationships as well.

"We as queer men have to realize that no means no' goes for us too. And for bisexuals it means having to be able to read the signals for both sexes," he said.

"Men have all these myths about being macho, but they have to learn that it's time to destroy these myths and learn to respect the women they date," said Meeghan Ziolkowski, Educator Advocate for the Everywoman's Center.

Misconstrued gender roles

Lack of respect often leads to date rape — another problem for both men and women in our generation. Zeman believes that date rape is a result of miscommunication and misconstrued gender roles.

"Men have difficulties with the respect problem, which basically means they don't understand the need for consent," he said. "The media and society really gives men the wrong messages. Look at Gone With The Wind — we see [Rhett Butler] carry [Scarlett O'Hara] up the staircase, the screen fades, and in the morning she wakes up all happy and smiling. But what they don't see is that she is struggling to get free and he rapes her. And then they go and have it like she enjoys it."

Victims of date rape often feel alone and even embarrassed. The staff at UMass Health Services knows this and strives to make it known that help is available.

"There are many resources available that date rape victims can use," said Gloria Difuñeo, a health educator with Health Services. "They can go to Health Services for an exam and a check up for [sexually transmitted diseases]. These are really the first things that come to mind."

Ziolkowski believes that men and woman need to talk more.

"Because of the traditional gender roles for men and women, there is a lot of miscommunication between men and women. And this leads to rape and the effect is really devastating," Ziolkowski said. "At the Everywoman's Center there is the 24-hour hotline staffed by students and community members. It's free and confidential. Health Services also offers a lot of good programs. They keep everything confidential and in a separate file from the person's medical records so a nurse or someone can't bump into them by accident."

Also available at the Everywoman's Center are workshops on dating violence, an issue young and old people often ignore. These workshops make people aware of date rape and dating violence — making sure many of the myths society has created are dispelled.

More testing before promising

Many times dates and dating lead to commitment and many people are willing to make it more than women according to a survey in Self magazine. However, more and more people are choosing to run "forever" through a crucial test — co-habitation. The premise: If you can stand living with him/her through unpaid bills, morning breath

Turn to DATING, page 6

Collegian Art By Jeff Wilson • Layout & Design by Andrew Davidson & Matt Audette

SHORT CUTS

Quotes of Note

Demi Moore

ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Now that I think of it, I entertained my first thoughts of being an actress with the 'Bionic Woman,' I wanted to be the bionic girl." — Demi Moore

"I'm away six to nine months of the year, and it's nice to be taken care of, to not come home to a cold place. I have my mother and my Rottweiler here, and I can kiss 'em both." — Leonardo DiCaprio

"I never thought that being obnoxious would get me where I am now." — Billie Joe Armstrong

"It is better for a woman to succeed in spite of a hairdo than because of it. — Jane Pauley"

People and Pop Culture in the News

The onslaught of snow and ice have many people heading for the hills to enjoy some downhill skiing. In Aspen, Regis Philbin took his hip self snowboarding and bruised his ribs a scant 20 minutes on the mountain. Also present were Johnny Depp and Kate Moss, who got booted from a local bar because she wasn't 21 yet, proving that in some places stars don't always get preferential treatment...sometimes.

Sofia Coppola has her own clothing label and "talk show," called "High Octane" and airing on Comedy Central. She has yet to get the general public hooked on either. Is Janeane Garofalo quitting "Saturday Night Live?" She said only temporarily due to a lead in the movie The Truth About Cats and Dogs. Adam Sandler recently denied a quote printed in TV Guide that he said "SNL's" writers "suck," saying since he was a writer for the show, it is hardly an accurate statement.

Pee-Wee Herman maybe making a comeback. Fox is tempting Paul Rubens with a sitcom and a movie deal. If you caught him in Buffy The Vampire Slayer, it's clear he needs some help getting back on his feet.

Who will Sharon Stone be getting naked with in her next film Casino? According to director Martin Scorsese the winner is Joe Pesci. Plus, the film's steamy scenes are almost guaranteed an NC-17 rating — makes quite a mental picture.

And speaking of steamy, Anna Nicole Smith was seen getting cuddly with party boy Judd Nelson at the Playboy Mansion in Los Angeles. Wonder where her 90-year-old husband was. Robin Williams can't seem to get enough of those wacky roles. His next movie is Jumanji, about a man who spends 25 years in the jungle and then moves to New Hampshire.

George Washington did in fact grow hemp, a.k.a. marijuana, on his plantation, but some people want to make sure everyone knows this fact. Dollar bills are being stamped with an "I grew hemp" logo, making historians and anti-drug groups very unhappy. However, U.S. Treasury officials have still to make a call on its legality. It's estimated that three million people smoke the drug daily and in 1994 pot production grossed $24 billion.

Remember all that talk about the Stealth Bomber, that multi-billion dollar piece of espionage machinery? Well, enter the Flarecraft, a hybrid plane and boat that speeds a few feet above the water on air pockets. The plane can reach 75 mph, take off on land and water and is virtually undetectable by sonar. And finally, a recent Details poll recorded that 61 percent of today's women would rather see a man wash dishes than dance naked — what a message.

Material from this column has been compiled from various news and wire services.

Editors' Cuts

Record — Rancid

The times they are a' changin'. Two years ago the very thought of the fine lads in Rancid's ugly mugs gracing the screen of MTV would have been unbelievable if not...wrong.

But welcome to the punk-loving '90s where anything can and probably will happen — including having Rancid's almost year-old album Let's Go begin to make a splash in the mainstream. Not that it seems too surprising — Let's Go is chock full of Offspring frat-punk anthems like the gritty, sometimes vulgar, attitude that once made punk such a delicious threat. It really is just the next logical step in punk rock's slow but sure digestion by the mainstream.

Tracks such as the Buzz Clip hopeful "Salvation" and the all out fury of "Gunshot" are filled with enough hooks and cartoon angst to fill the required status quo, making Let's Go the perfect candidate for the next bubblegum-punk guilty pleasure.

— Matt Audette

Book — O.J. Simpson

I Want To Tell You: My Response To Your Letters, Your Messages, Your Questions by O.J. Simpson is a poignant plea for people to see the man behind the sports figure, and the prisoner behind the bars. Cheesy? Yes, but like Nicole Simpson's diary excerpts, this is being sucked up fast.

Co-written by Lawrence Schiller, the 205-page book is broken into three parts. Of course he talks about his "100 percent not guilty" plea and how he dreams of Nicole at night — happy and radiant. Simpson also extolls the virtues of his fans and supporters, making sure that everything they say and do for him does not go unheard. He describes sitting in his tiny eight-by-five cell, surrounded by mail addressed to O.J. number 4013970, down but not out.

Even if you're tired of the trial, analysis and general hoopla, the book takes you into a quieter corner, away from the cameras for a brief glimpse at a man who may or may not be guilty.

— Tara MK Connelly

Show — Zeke Fiddler

For those who complain there is no local music scene, tonight Pearl Street will host an event designed to showcase local talent. The show will be headlined by Zeke Fiddler, who area fans may have caught opening for Frank Black last month at the nightclub. Zeke Fiddler, who will perform with a newly saddled line-up, has become well known for their combination of lurching rhythms and addictive melodies. The band's latest album, Waterproof, was released on the New York-based Spin Art label.

Also appearing on the bill will be local favorites Home. Recently, this Westfield trio's intelligent song writing and honest live performances have made them one of the Pioneer Valley's most popular acts. Rounding out the bill will be UMass bands Cameron's Way and Vic. So instead of complaining about the lack of good local music, head down to Pearl Street tonight and check some out for yourself.

— Justin Faerber

Do you love movies? Do you want to write about movies?

The Collegian Arts & Living desk is looking for a Film Reviewer. Must have knowledge of film history, the industry and contemporary criticism.

Come down to 113 Campus Center for an application. Call 545-1361 for more information. Ask for Jon Lupo.

Dating

continued from page 5

and shower solos, it must be love – or is it?

"I would want to live with a person first because you want to know what it's like living with them before you commit to living with them for the rest of your life," said Dawn Richards, a sophomore with a double major in sociology and English.

Unfortunately good things don't always last, and true love has many pitfalls and, for some, many different faces. Relationships make or break a couple, some shun it, others embrace it, but both sides will agree that when it's over it's over and someone always ends up getting hurt.

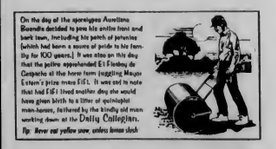
"I think the hardest thing about breaking up with someone is trying to remain friends with them afterwards. Even if you both have the best of intentions in the world it's still really really hard," Richards said.

As seen with the case of UMass graduate Tara Hartnett, long-term relationships aren't all wine and roses, and they sometimes end with more than a lost friend.

According to the Everywoman's Center, a woman is beaten every 15 minutes and a woman who leaves her batterer are at a 75 percent greater risk of being killed by the batterer than those who stay.

"A lot of talk shows and what-not feature topics on self- defense for women — stuff like carrying a key, not walking alone or at night by yourself," Ziolkowski said. "And these are all very good pieces of advice, but I have a problem with them. My problem is that they never talk about what men should do to avoid rape. No means no, in fact, anything that isn't 'yes' is rape. That's the law."

It is clear that dating and relationships in the '90s is a mix of traditions and new ideas that have created a delicate web of do's and don'ts that may complicate issues, but has definitely made it more than just a tool for accumulating a marriage status or pegs on a board. Although sex and physical attraction enters prominently into the dating configuration, love, tenderness, respect and equality balance it out to keep it emotional. Relationships are never easy, although it's nice to know that when you find that special someone you'll never have to go through the fiasco of dating again – or at least not for a long, long time.



On the day of the apocalypse Aurelius Buendía decided to pass his entire toxic and bark town, including his patch of privates (which had been a source of pride to his family for 100 years). It was also on this day that the police apprehended El Flotsky de Castpecho at the horse farm juggling Magic Lotion's prize mares Fifi. It was said in note that had Fifi tried another drug she would have given birth to a litter of quintuplet man-horses, fathered by the kindly old man working down at the Daily Collegian.

Tip: Never eat yellow snow, unless lemon sherb

THE TOC

Sports Bar & Lounge

11th Floor Campus Center

Tonight

UMass v. Temple 9:30

$2 Pre-Game Buffet 8:00 - 9:00

Tomorrow

Winter Warm Up

10¢ Wings 4-7pm

This Weekend

Hockey & Hoops

SATURDAY 11:00 AM

Join us for the

COACH MALLEN SHOW

with Ted Baker & Brock Hines (WHMP)

Chance for prizes!

At Noon...

UMass v. St. Joe's

99¢ Nachos / 3 Hot Dogs $2

Miller Lite $1.50 / 16oz Bud $2

Positive I.D. Required

Spirit Haus

Specialty Beverage Center

Grolsch	12 pack bottles $8.99	Kahula	750 ml $13.99
Molson (Golden & Ice)	12 pack bottles $7.99	Jack Daniels	750ml $11.99
New Amsterdam (Amber, Ale, Black & Tan)	$4.99/six	Absolut	750 ml $12.99
Gritty McDuff's Best Bitter	$5.49/six	Gordons Gin	750ml plastic $7.49
Guinness Pub Draught Cans	$4.79/4 pack	Popov Vodka	1.75 liter $9.99

Open M-Sat 9am - 11pm

Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses

FULL REDEMPTION CENTER

Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384

one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

4 SEASONS

MON-SAT 9:00 TO 11:00 • RTE 9 HADLEY

VISA · MASTERCARD

SALE THRU 3-1-95 • NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOS

DISCOUNT LIQUORS • KEGS • BEER • ICE

LOWENBRAU 24-12 OZ BOTT $12.99 + Dep	BUD 30-PKS. 30-12 OZ CANS $14.99 + Dep	COORS EXTRA GOLD 30-PKS. 30-12OZ CANS $12.99 + Dep	BUSCH & LT 24-12 OZ BAR BOTT. $9.49 + Dep	MEISTERBRAU & LT. 24-12OZ CANS $7.29 + Dep	AMERICAN 24-12 oz cans $7.29 + Dep	10+ CASE! BEER DISCOUNTS
1/2 KEG NATURAL LT $32.99 + Dep	1/2 KEG BUSCH 6.99 + Dep	1/2 KEG BUD & LT $39.99 + Dep	1/2 KEG ICEHOUSE $39.99 + Dep	1/2 KEG LOWENBRAU $39.99 + Dep	1/2 KEG BUD ICE $39.99 + Dep	Keg of the Week MICHELOB LT. $36.99 + Dep
ICE! 10lbs...$1 50lbs...$5 100lbs...$9		PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS $6.99 .750 ML	SMIRNOFF VODKA $7.49 .750ml	MONTEZUMA TEQUILA $6.99 1.0 L	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75 ML	PEPPERMINT SCHNAPPS $6.99 .750ML	HOT DAMN SCHNAPPS $6.99 .750ML
We Deliver! 584-8174 "Off Campus"		FRANZIA Chablis, Burgundy White Grape. $7.99 5.0 L	MARCH MADNESS IS COMING!		ANDREA CHAMPAGNES $2.99 750ML	BOONES FARM WINES $1.99 750ml	M-D 20/20 $1.99 50ml

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst presents

CROSSWORLDS

Maya Angelou & Elie Wiesel

IN CONVERSATION

Tuesday, March 28, 1995

7:30 pm, Mullins Center

Tickets are: General Public:$20; $15; $10. Students-$5

Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office,

All TicketMaster Locations or charge by phone at (413)545-3333.

This event made possible in part by Bonducci's and BayBank

Arrangements for Elie Wiesel made through the Harriet Lerner Bureau

Foolish films give crowd no Cause to view

Newman shines among lackluster cast; Connery predictable in basic thriller plot

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

NOBODY'S FOOL
Directed by Robert Benton with Paul Newman, Bruce Willis
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

Paul Newman has a reassuringly well-worn, pleasurably ramshackle charm in a movie full of false charm. His character's life is in the pits — as is the chilly town in which he lives — but Newman's richly cobalt eyes are still formidable enough to signal that everything is going to be alright. Which is probably too bad for him and us.

At first, writer/director Robert Benton (Kramer vs. Kramer) seems to be dabbling in Bill Forsyth/Local Hero territory — the townsfolk are certainly quirky enough, and the humor and pathos seem striving to be the same thing. But while Benton has a steady, assured hand (the kind that looks like it's doing something quietly remarkable, when it really isn't), he lacks any of Forsyth's gentle irony.

If anything, Benton tries too hard — this is the most assertively disarming movie I've ever seen — it keeps poking you in the ribs to announce how wise and observant it is. The denizens of the town are a good example. They include a hapless lawyer with a prosthetic leg (which he loses in a strip poker game), the unhappy wife (Melanie Griffith) of Newman's lecherous boss (Willis), and even Newman's estranged son. In many ways, they're all filled with dreams tarnished by the world-weary realities of their lives — but they're the kind still spunky enough to deliver folksy one-liners with craggly self-awareness. Ugh.

Newman keeps his head high and escapes with his dignity preserved, if not a bit enhanced. Unlike other method actors, he still lives the paradox — ethereal yet distinctly earthbound, dreamy and tangible all at the same time. (It's a promise Brando once owned in spades — now he's too busy smooching Larry King.) And even if the characters (and the story, and the ending...) are a bit too precocious for their own good, Newman alone makes it worth a look. Just a fleeting one, however. B-

JUST CAUSE
Directed by Arne Glimcher with Sean Connery, Laurence Fishburne
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

Complete with an appropriately ambiguous legalese title, Just Cause meanders along familiar thriller lines, delivers a genuinely neat plot twist, then returns to business as usual. It's a remarkably unsatisfying movie, led by yet another lame performance by Sean Connery (who hasn't been in a good movie since 1990's Hunt for Red October and The Russia House — and no, Rising Sun doesn't count) and filled with countless steals from other films.

Connery plays a Harvard law professor who returns to practice to investigate the case of a death row prisoner (Blair Underwood of "L.A. Law") who says he's innocent of a rape and murder. Furthermore, he says his confession seven years earlier was coerced by the small-town sheriff (Higher Learning's Laurence Fishburne, whose good performance is in vain) who beat him up and played Russian roulette in his mouth.

Connery and his wife (the dismal Kate Capshaw) travel down to Florida where Connery tangles with Fishburne and opens the wounds of the killing. And yet he finds justice, courtesy of a Bible-quoting psychotic prisoner (Ed Harris) — a second-rate Hannibal Lecter — whose riddle leads him to new evidence. But it's all a bit too convenient and soon Connery, Capshaw and their cute-as-a-button daughter are in jeopardy.

While the aforementioned plot twist is certainly appreciated, especially after what amounts to nothing more than a "Matlock" episode with swears, it's disappointing to return to a standard car chase and killer/hero showdown — this time set in a Cape Fear-esque Florida swamp. It's hard to get worked up when you know nothing is ever, ever going to happen to these people, so why are they bothering to go through the motions? Just Cause ends with the family huddled together as the police arrive. It's an appropriately predictable conclusion to this tired exercise in thriller cliches. C-

University faculty members shine in clarinet & piano concert at Bowker

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Correspondent

MICHAEL SUSSMAN, NADINE SHANK
Benzanson Recital Hall
Feb. 20

Melodious sounds wafted throughout the air at a sold out clarinet and piano concert at Benzanson Recital Hall this past Monday.

Clarinetist Michael Sussman and pianist Nadine Shank are professors in the University Of Massachusetts' Department of Music and Dance. Sussman performed works that spanned four centuries worth of musical talent and genius, intriguing the audience with his musical finesse.

Sussman and Shank opened with a "Sonata in F major," a piece from the late Baroque era by Jean-Xavier Lefevre which warmed up the audience and set the tone for an outstanding performance.

The first movement, "Allegro Moderato," was light and reflected a pleasant feeling, in contrast with the second movement, "Adagio," which set a wistful and pensive mood.

The piece closed with an allegro played with a lot of energy and flair.

Next was "Gra," written by Elliot Carter for solo clarinet. The title is Polish for games, and it certainly evoked a playful feeling.

This piece was different from the previous "Sonata" in that the notes were disjointed, discordant and frantic — an altogether different sound than the usual elegant and smooth notes people are accustomed to hearing from the clarinet. This modern composition showed off the clarinet's musical range as well as Sussman's versatility.

Robert Schumman's moody and romantic "Fantastiestucke" brought the concert back to a decidedly more traditional sound.

A dark undercurrent from the piano as well as a melancholy sound from the clarinet characterized the opening movement, "Zart und mit Ausdruck." The concert concluded with Brahms' "Sonata in F minor, op 120, #1, for piano and clarinet."

Both Sussman and Shank responded emotionally to the music which showed both in their actions and their playing.

There were several moments in the performance when the performers seemed almost unconscious of the presence of an audience.

The music flowed beautifully from beneath their skillful fingers making for a very clean and sharp performance.

STUDENT FARES

LONDON	$250
AMSTERDAM	$430
PARIS	$438
FRANKFURT	$458
MADRID	$498
BRUSSELS	$430
MOSCOW	$518
ZURICH	$478
PRAGUE	$458
EURAIL FROM	$255

FARES BASED ON RT FROM BOSTON. TAXES NOT INCLUDED. STUDENT ID MAY BE REQUIRED. DEPARTURES THRU 3/31. FARES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.

Council Travel

79 S. PLEASANT ST. 2ND FL AMHERST, MA 01002

413-256-1261

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS

Discount 18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441 Discount

Featuring, "NATURAL LIGHT" cans $8.49 case

Oldenberg Bock $10.99 cse. bott. Great Stuff

Genuine Draft & Draft Light $10.99 cse. bar botts.

Lionshead $7.99 Cse. Botts.

"The 6/PK. Bonanza"

Catamount - Amber, Gold, Porter

Sam Adams - all flavors

Black Dog - Ale, Pale Ale

Dos Equis - Amber, Regular

Sarnac - Black & Tan, Amber, Pale Ale

American Beer $7.19 CSE. CANS

Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks... $9.95

Miller "High Life" $9.99 CSE. CANS

All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD Delivery Available

Come watch the exitment at...

CUTTY'S

55 University Dr. Amherst 549-5700

UMASS vs TEMPLE

Bud Fat Boys 16oz $1.50

IF YOU WANT TO SET THE WORLD ON FIRE,

WE HAVE A PERFECT MATCH.

You've got ideas, ambition, and energy. You know you can manage your time, a staff, and a minor crisis, all as part of a day's work. And, most of all, you've got a burning desire to grow.

MEET YOUR MATCH!
The Caldor Store Management Executive Training Program.

Caldor is a $2.8 billion upscale discount retailing giant. As one of the Northeast's fastest growing retailers, we offer opportunity to equal your ambition, challenges to test your talents, and all the training, support and wide open career paths you need to make the most of your exceptional abilities.

If you're ready to graduate to one of the hottest opportunities in retail...

We'll be on campus interviewing March 9, 1995.

Please drop off your resume at The Career Center by February 28, 1995.

Committed to equal opportunity employment, Caldor prizes individuality, applauds diversity and recognizes achievement.

CALDOR

Our People Make The Difference

tube

Continued from page 5

New Adventures of Superman," a quietly charming romantic comedy starring newcomers Dean Cain and Teri Hatcher. Cain is fine as a contemporary Man of Steel, and Hatcher gives a particularly refreshing portrayal of Lois Lane — integrating Lois' ambitious nature with an engaging sense of vulnerability. After seeing Margot Kidder characterize Lois as so harsh and self-absorbed in the 1978 movie, it was nice to view the character in a more positive light here.

Over on NBC, "Frasier" got an unexpected visit from old pal Sam Malone, resulting in a cute episode centering of Sam's increasingly complex problems with women. Now if only Frasier could solve Ted Danson's increasingly complex problems with typecasting, that would really be something.

PBS' "Frontline: The Begging Game" gave a sad but provocative look into the lives of New York City's panhandlers. Focusing on a 64-year-old woman who took to the streets after her husband died, the program documents how several homeless panhandlers formed a supportive community — a substitute family of sorts — after they became alienated from mainstream society.

While the filmmakers attempted to maintain an intimate perspective on the day-to-day lives of the homeless, I wish they had gone even further in documenting the drug addiction and health problems that plagued their subjects, and ultimately prevented many of them from improving the conditions of their lives. Despite these flaws, however, it was still a fascinating segment.

Less enthralling is CBS' new sitcom "Cybill" starring Cybill Shepherd as a divorcee who stays in unnaturally close contact with her three ex-husbands. The plots generally revolve around all of the stupid, stupid things that supposedly happen once a woman turns 40. According to this show, what apparently happens is that the woman and all who come in contact with her turn into eggplants and other assorted inanimate vegetables. Hearing Cybill wearily recite this drab dialogue, it's tempting to forget how energetic and funny she was on "Moonlighting." Better still to forget this series and to keep our more pleasant memories of Ms. Shepherd intact.

Anyway, despite CBS' overall unimpressive prime time lineup, its "Late, Late Show with Tom Snyder" is shaping up to be an intelligent addition to the talk show circuit. A veteran of TV and radio, Snyder exhibits a certain wry, laid- back charm that sets him apart from the cynical sarcasm of Letterman and the often clownish antics of Conan O'Brien. But I doubt many young viewers will choose to stay up with Snyder — because while Dave excels at the frivolous, witty banter that has made him popular with the twenty- somethings, Tom is at his best when interviewing more serious, politically oriented guests. While the mellow atmosphere and unusual interview topics may drive the hipsters away, I bet Snyder will ultimately do well among the intellectually minded insomniacs and consistent "Nightline" watchers.

Tracy Gavel is a Collegian staff member.

Festival showcases choral talents

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

There is nothing like the sound of a voice raised sweetly in song, whether it be a grade school soloist or a world famous diva. The Pioneer Valley will experience this powerful music medium Saturday night when Smith College hosts the biennial Five College Choral Festival.

Choral groups from the five colleges will have a chance to dazzle the audience with their vocal skills and talent. About 15 choirs including the University of Massachusetts jazz ensemble will serenade the audience with a melange of musical styles.

"The concert is held biennially and it is a great chance for choirs and choir directors from each campus to perform their own special style of music," said Elizabeth Loudon, assistant coordinator for programming and development for Five College Inc.

Glee clubs, woman's choirs, concert choirs and the Five College Early Music Collegium are just a few of the groups that will be performing. The coup de grace of the show is when all the groups from the colleges — 800 people strong — raise their voices together in a special closing composition.

This year, the closing piece is one composed by UMass faculty member Robert Stern. "Through My Song" will also be the setting of a poem by UMass professor and fellow composer Frederick Tillis.

"I think the highlight of the performance for the audience will be the special piece at the end," said Loudon. "I don't think many people get to hear 800 voices at once and I expect that together they will really raise the rafters."

The Five College Music Festival begins at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Smith College's John M. Greene Hall. It is free and open to the public; early arrival is advised. For more information call the Five College Office at 256-8316.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru Thurs. Feb. 24 - March 2/Separate Admission
Daily 7 p.m./Tickets 6:30
Academy Award Nominations
Nigel Hawthorne
THE MADNESS OF KING GEORGE
Daily 9:15/Tickets 8:30
Alan Rudolph's view of the most notorious table in N.Y.
"A REMARKABLE MOVIE!"
LEIGH SCOTT BRIDGERICA
MRS. PARKER AND THE VICIOUS CIRCLE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treats 584-8435

Race St. Pub
Open Sundays! 5 pm - 1:30 am
Wet 'n' Wild Shower an Hour
The only one in Western Mass.
2GR Race Street, Holyoke
On Rt. 116 East 532-1922
Monday - Wednesday 4 pm-1:30 am
Thursday - Saturday 12 pm-2:00 am

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS* OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA

RETURNING TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THIS FALL...
THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NATIONAL BARTENDING SCHOOL PRESENTS ...
UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™
•Professional Bartending and Bar Management Training ... at a fraction of the cost at most schools
•Full certification in as little as six weeks
•Specific programs tailored to your specific needs
•T.I.P.S™ and Serv-Safe® certification available
•Approved by the National Restaurant Association®
FREE INFO SESSION
MONDAY, FEB 7:00 PM
LORD JEFFREY INN AMHERST
Shop around and compare! Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited!!

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Tues. 2pm - 10pm
Wed., Thurs. & Fri. 2pm - 10pm
Sat. 10am - 6pm
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7am - 10pm

summer
Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Ireland
Ireland Today
In Mexico
Spanish Language and Culture
Along the New England Coastline
Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island
Playwriting and Performance
On Nantucket Island
Marine Biology
For information about these programs — and over four hundred courses available this summer—contact
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
UMass Boston

Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
3 Bedroom • 1½ baths
Heated Basement
New Gas Heat and Hot Water
•1/2 mile to campus
• On Bus Route
Lincoln Real Estate • 25 N. Pleasant St • 253-7879

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathon Reid
for a great selection of men's suits
for professional service and attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

WANTED
Assistant Finance Manager
EXPERIENCE
is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...
We are looking for:
Ambitious • Responsible • Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills
Business Majors Preferred
Applications are available at the Collegian 113 Campus Center and must be submitted by Thursday March 9 @ 4:00 p.m. !!

SPRING VALUES ARE ALREADY IN BLOOM AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS
Budweiser 30-PACK $14.49 +DEP
LÖWENBRÄU $12.49 +DEP
Bud Dry $9.99 +DEP
WOODCHUCK AMBER CIDER $4.79
HALF-KEGS $39.99 +DEP
CATAMOUNT BOCK $4.99 +DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
MG VALLEJO $3.49
Almaden $6.49
COLUMBIA CREST CHARDONNAY $8.99
SUTTER HOME $5.99
GEORGE DUBOEUF $5.99
JENKIN'S VOKDA $6.49
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN $8.49
JAMESON $13.49
CLUNY SCOTCH $9.49
GOLDSCHLÄGER $13.99
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 2/23/95 THRU WEDS. 3/1/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

GILBERT NEVER TOLD THE GUYS HE DIALED HIS GIRL 1-800-COLLECT FOR FEAR THEY'D ACCUSE HIM OF BEING THE SENSITIVE TYPE.
1-800-COLLECT®
Save The People You Call Up To 44%.

Trudell's message conveyed through music

Native American activist mixes spoken word and song, tells of struggle for freedom

By Hernán Rozemberg
Collegian Staff

The Native American struggle for survival in the United States, or Turtle Island to others, has been one of pride, dignity and self-determination. Many voices have symbolized and personified this constant uphill climb throughout the years.

One of these many voices roared during the 1970s, the climax of the Indian civil rights movement. His name is John Trudell, and he will bring his Band Bad Dog to the Fine Arts Center on Feb. 28.

But Trudell's talents are not confined to music; his profession is multifaceted. "John Trudell has been identified as a poet, a fighter for Native American rights, an agitator, and lots of other things," according to his biography.

However, Trudell himself cannot pinpoint his position. Rather, like the leader that he has always been, he says all he has done is just that — things that he has done, literally being himself.

Born on a Santee Sioux reservation in Nebraska, Trudell never had it easy. He lived in the midst of racial injustice and economic depression, a common experience for the indigenous people in modern America. If the youth were not taken away by means of force to boarding schools to be "civilized," a practice begun by the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), then they were left with nothing from which to prosper.

The U.S. military offered an option for young minorities who had little to spare besides their own lives. Trudell joined the Navy in 1963 and was sent to Vietnam. He returned to the States five years later with the whole war experience on his mind. The Rykodisc biography says his "heritage sensitized him to the racism he saw during the war, whether by Americans toward Asians, or the U.S. military toward its own minority troops."

Upon his return, he found himself in utter confusion about himself, his people and the myth of the "American Dream." He began to straighten out by joining the freedom revolution that peoples of color were waging not just in America, but throughout the entire world. Be it in the African continent, in the South American continent or in Asia, the world's majority was on the move toward liberation.

Trudell thus joined and enhanced the Indian movement. In late 1969 he became a spokesman for the Indians of All Tribes occupation of Alcatraz Island, home to the renowned high-security prison, then abandoned. Four years later, in 1973, he was elected national chairman of one of the most recognized organizations partaking in the nationalist struggle — the American Indian Movement (AIM). The latter group quickly reached the top of the list of "subversive groups" which the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) targeted with their Counter Intelligence Programs (COINTELPRO).

"[The FBI] waged war against us. They hunted us down. They killed, jailed, destroyed — by any means necessary," Trudell said.

The artist in Trudell appeared in 1979, after his wife and children were killed as his house on the Shoshone Paiute reservation was set afire. The incident was labeled as an accident by the FBI, although no official investigation was ever conducted. This tragic incident drew Trudell into unleashing his feelings through a poetic catharsis. In 1981 he published a book, a compilation of poems titled Living in Reality. Shortly thereafter, Trudell wanted to give his artistic talents a new face, and by way of friendship with singer Jackson Browne, he entered the musical world.

Speaking of the cause for this change Trudell said, "To me, it was important that [the music] remain spoken word. I wanted to mix those two identities, music and poetry. I wanted those identities to be distinct, yet together."

In 1985 Trudell connected with Indian singer Jesse Ed Davis and formed a group called The Graffiti Band, producing their first recording, A.K.A. Graffiti Man, the following year. This album received great praises from many known musicians, including Kris Kristofferson and Bob Dylan.

Since then, Trudell has participated in two more albums, Heart Jump Bouquet and Fables and Other Realities. He also starred in Michael Apted's film Incident at Oglala and the nationally acclaimed Thunderheart, also by Apted.

John Trudell and his Band Bad Dog will perform at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall on Feb. 28 at 8 p.m. For further information and tickets, contact the Box Office at 545-2511.

COURTESY BETH HERZHAFT

Native American activist and musician John Trudell will perform Feb. 28.

Moschen's art show to amuse FAC crowd

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

When Michael Moschen comes back home to the Fine Arts Center Friday night for a display of movement art, the physical world will become his playground.

Incorporating body movement with the manipulation of props such as hoops, rods, balls and stage sets, Moschen's art creates a display that can harness chaos and achieve a tranquil balance. Moschen's style has been described as everything from startling to virtuoso.

Growing up in Greenfield, Moschen was influenced by the time he spent training with the University of Massachusetts gymnastics team. That experience was never forgotten even after he picked up juggling and became a street performer.

Since his beginnings on the street, Moschen has gone on to appear on screen and with various groups throughout the world, including the Big Apple Circus, festivals in Hong Kong and Barcelona, in the movies Hair and Annie, as well as on "The Tonight Show," "The David Letterman Show" and "L.A. Law."

Moschen is a recipient of many grants and fellowships and recently received the MacArthur Foundation Fellowship. His talents have enabled him to have time to create many of his own performances as well as easily find places willing to showcase his work.

In 1991 he starred in his own PBS special entitled "In Motion with Michael Motion," and in the Jim Henson movie Labyrinth, the crystal ball work done by what looked like David Bowie's hands was choreographed and performed by Moschen. Recently he was commissioned to create a work for a permanent theatrical circus at the Treasure Island Hotel Casino in Las Vegas.

But don't expect any ordinary juggling show Friday night, for Moschen avoids many of the standard tricks employed by other jugglers. He prefers to work less with objects, allowing him to incorporate more body movement and usage of other props and stage settings.

Michael Moschen will perform at the Fine Arts Center Friday at 8 p.m.; tickets are $23, $18 and $13 with half- price tickets available for Five College students. For more information call 545-2511.

Pub Street

• WEDNESDAY •
GAY NIGHT
MUSIC BY SPIN, INC.

• Thursday •
18+ DANCE PARTY
HOSTED BY WHMP'S NICK DANGER
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Music by Spin, Inc

• Friday •
RETRO NIGHT
Dance Music From the 70's, 80's & 90's
Fri. Feb. 24 -
"The Back in the Day Jam"
w/a Fashion Show
9:00pm - 1:00am

• Saturday •
ALL NEW! ALL REQUEST
TOP 40 DANCE PARTY
WITH DJ DAVE
SATURDAY NIGHT DINNER & DANCE PROMOTION -
One anywhere in Northampton on Saturday Night, bring your receipt, and receive Free Admission to the Dance Club
Limousine service courtesy of Michael's Limousine of Chicopee, 533-8470

TEEN DANCE PARTIES
Sun Feb 19 & Tues. Feb 21 / Ages 16-20
8:00 - 11:30 pm

LIVE MUSIC
Thur., Feb 23 - 7:30 pm/All Ages
Colorfest Productions,
HOME
Vic / Empty
Cameron's Way
Sat., Feb. 25 - 8:30pm /WRSI
Folk/Rock,
MARY KARLZEN
Amy Fairchild
Thur., Mar. 2 - 8:30pm /18+/
Reggae Dance Party,
SISTER CAROL
New Horizon
Fri., Mar. 3 - 8:30pm /18+/
Record Release Party,
SYNAESTHESIA
Fossil
Sat., Mar. 4 - 8:30pm
Led Zeppelin Tribute,
PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
Thur., Mar. 9 - 7:30pm /All Ages/
SLOW POKE
Gratitude / Product
Tribal Fiction / Pulse
Fri., Mar. 10 - 8:30pm /18+/
ART STEELE
BLUES BAND
Tues., Mar. 14 - 8:00pm /18+/
AQUARIUM
RESCUE UNIT
Milo 7
THUR., MAR. 16 - 8:30pm /18+/
CHUCKLEHEAD
Coming...
3/17 Big Bad Bolloc'ss
3/18 Boomtsil of Blues
3/23 Black 47
3/25 Graham Parker
4/3 Widespread Panic /18+

Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office, 586-8686, The Record in Amherst, 38 Pearl Street Northampton, 584-9223

Summer break...
Winter break...
ISRAELBREAK!
Fly to Israel FREE on a special fellowship program
If you are an undergraduate college student and permanently reside or attend school in the five boroughs of New York City, Westchester or Long Island and have never been to Israel, call the hotline at 212-696-0248
and say:
GIMME A BREAK!

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Lunch and Dinner Buffet
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-9800

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
Home of the 18 Oz Fresh Fruit Margaritas
"This is Margaritaville"
Cantina Now Open til 1 a.m. Thurs., Fri. & Sat.
95¢ Drafts
$2.75 Pina Coladas
Assortment of Mexico's Finest Brews
Free Chips & Salsa from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. Thurs., Fri. & Sat.
Tuesday - Sunday 11:30 - 9:30
Mondays - Gone to the Running of the Bulls
41 Boltwood Walk / Amherst (Behind Antonios)
413-253-4040

International Students
CALL HOME!
BEST INTERNATIONAL LONG DISTANCE RATES AVAILABLE
Sweden .41 /min
Russia .85 /min
U.K. .35 /min
India .99 /min
China $1.40 /min
S. Africa .79 /min
Call For Rates To Other Countries
For More Information Call:
Anytime! Any Day!
STARNET COMMUNICATIONS
1-800-STAR-081 / STAR-063

BUY BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS
from Noon to Six
Montague Mini Mart
•Microbrews•Foreign & Domestic Beers•
Wide Selections of Wine
All at Competitive prices
from Amherst: 10 miles north on Rt. 63 to Rt. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles I-91 north to Rt. 116 to Rt. 47N
(Follow signs to Montague Center • Proper ID Required)
Open Mon-Sat 9-9 • 367-9551
Sorry no kegs or beer balls

Mikari's
Springfield's Hottest Dance Party
Thursday Night
Rock & Roll Shows
February 23...
Max Creek
(18 and over)
March 2...
Ritchie Havens
(21 and over)
270 Cooley St.
Springfield, MA
(413) 796-7127
Free Cover Before 9 on Saturday Nights with this ad. Not valid on any show with Admission $5.

Celebrate Georges B-Day with these Specials from Scotts
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m
Tel: 549-2692
RED DOG 12 pack bottles $6.99 +dep
ROLLING ROCK 24-12oz Bottles $12.99 +dep
BUSCH 1/2 Kegs $34.99
CHECK OUT OUR FOR'S FOR WINE SELECTION
BUDWEISER 24 - 16oz bottles $13.99 +dep
COORS EXTRA GOLD 30 pack cans $12.49 +dep
Clan McGregor Scotch 1.75liter $13.99
POPOV VODKA 1.75 liter $10.49
COLUMBIA CREST CHARDONNAY 1.5 liter $9.99
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games

Cyrille to jazz up Magic Triangle concert series

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

COURTESY CHEUNG, CHING MING

Andrew Cyrille will perform in Hampden Theater tonight as part of the Magic Triangle Series.

Tonight the Magic Triangle jazz series will bring Andrew Cyrille to the Hampden Theater stage. For over 30 years Cyrille has been playing his own distinctive form of percussion derived from such influences as be-bop and avant-garde.

Cyrille began his music career at the age of 11 when he joined a drum and bugle corps at his grade school in Brooklyn. Through the corps Cyrille found he had a natural ability to absorb and play rhythms. The performer is also a student of world percussion from India and Africa, adding a multicultural aspect to his music.

Although best known for his 11-year musical association with avant-garde pianist Cecil Taylor in the late '60s and early '70s, Cyrille has also worked with such leading musicians as David Murry, Muhal Richard Abrams and the late John Carter. Over his 30-year career Cyrille has been heard on 77 albums, including his latest releases My Friend Louis and X-Man.

"I'm there to make an event, a happening within that organization. If it's not an event I feel as though I haven't arrived," Cyrille said in a recent interview with Modern Drummer magazine.

Taking the stage with Cyrille are well known musicians Oliver Lake on the alto saxophone and Fred Hopkins on bass. Adegoke Steve Colson is the rookie of the band playing piano.

"It's an all-star group," said Glenn Siegel, executive producer of the Magic Triangle series.

Siegel, also the organizational advisor for WMUA, started the Magic Triangle series more than five years ago with other WMUA staff. This is the sixth season of the Magic Triangle series. The series is intended to give UMass students access to lesser known jazz artists.

Tickets are $5 for students; $7 general public; advanced tickets available through the Fine Arts Center Box office. For more information call 545-2511.

Write for Arts & Living
Interested in writing about the world of entertainment? Just stop down at the Collegian and ask to speak with Matt, Mike, Justin or Tara.
113 Campus Center
(at UMass)

AMHERST CINEMA
Downtown Amherst
PULP FICTION
7:30 PM Each Night
Students $4.00
253-5426

the hatch
T-MEX
(Totally Mexican)
Tacos & Soft Tacos
Chicken 99¢
Beef 75¢
Bean 75¢
(includes lettuce, tomato, cheddar & picante sauce)
Burritos
Bean 99¢
Veggie 99¢
Chicken $1.50
Beef $1.35
Chicken & Beans $1.50
Beef & Beans $1.35
(includes lettuce, tomato, cheddar & picante sauce on a 12" tortilla)
And Introducing The Hatch Pizza Club
Ask for your card at The Hatch Pizza Counter

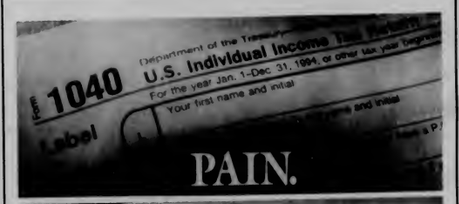
TONIGHT
1/2 Price Appetizers And Nachos
9:30 - 11:00
Weekly Special
$1.75 Bottles
Lite BEER
$4.75 Pitchers
• Cash Door Prize • Free T-Shirts
• Music By D.J. Pete Free
• Smoking Section 10-1
Beat the cover in before 10:00 and no cover
Beat the cover in before 10:00 and no cover
Fun food. Spirits.
THE PUB
15 east pleasant street
amherst

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Wednesday - March 1
(repeated on)
Tuesday - April 25
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass Campus
Room Number Will Be Posted By Campus Center Elevators
I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?
If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234
UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - AMHERST

Stop in and Register to win
SPRING BREAK VACATION
4 days- 3 nights
BAHAMA PRINCESS RESORT AND CASINO
Drawing
Saturday February 25!
No purchase necessary
McDonald's Express
25 N Pleasant Street
Amherst
253-2653

Anthony's
PRESENTS
Week of March 9-10-11
The Hottest Duo Act In The Country:
The Ray Sisters
Also the Week of March 16-17-18
Super Star America's #1 Adult Film Star: Ginger Lynn
Don't miss these two great performances!
18 and over Welcome with proper I.D.
Mon-Wed 4pm - 2am
Thurs-Sat Noon - 2am
Closed Sundays
500 NEW LUDLOW RD • S. HADLEY, MA 413-536-0502

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING



Form 1040
Department of the Treasury
U.S. Individual Income Tax Return
For the year Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1994, or other tax year beginning
Your first name and initial
Label
PAIN.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pre-tax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, we offer a wide range of allocation choices—from TIAA's traditional annuity, with its guarantees of principal and interest, to the seven diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity. What's more, our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call our planning specialists at 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide-calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

Call today—it couldn't hurt.

TIAA CREF
Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

*Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analyses, 1994; Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., Lipper-Directors' Analytical Data, 1994 (Quarterly). CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 5509 for a CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send us any money.

© 1995 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund

■ NBA

continued from page 14

weekend was Pippen for forward Dan Majerle, rookie swingman Wesley Person and draft picks. You could tell by the expressions on the faces of coach Paul Westphal and Majerle, when they both heard the news, that something was just not right.

Especially for Majerle since he has put in seven solid years for the Suns as one of the premier three-point shooters in the league, and a reporter telling him the news is just salt in the wound.

It is not enough for Pippen to cause dissent on his own team, but venting his fantasies on the account of both team's chemistry is asinine. But you have to admit, that is nothing compared to his stunts in the past (do I need to mention last year's playoffs?).

For the Suns themselves the return of star point guard Kevin Johnson from the injured list is a much needed shot in the arm. With a few games under his belt, one of the best penetrators to the basket in the league (ask Hakeem Olajuwon) will make everyone quickly forget about injured forward Danny Manning. But for the playoffs, the problem of lack of height in the paint for Phoenix is still apparent. I don't know if it is me, but having ex-Celtic Joe Kleine and Danny "forever average" Schayes as possible Robinson- Olajuwon stoppers scares the hell out of me. If they play their game, like two years ago, they will be one of the teams to stop in the playoffs. But if not, expect the disappointment of last year and the end of the season retirement of Charles Barkley.

Speaking of the twin towers of the Western Conference, the MVP chants can already be heard in San Antonio and Houston, but my dark horse pick for the Most Valuable Player this year would be Mitch Richmond of the Sacramento Kings. Mitch who? Let me explain...

Granted, both Robinson (27.6 ppg, 10.8 rpg) and Olajuwon (28.2 ppg, 11.1 rpg) are in the top ten in both rebounding and scoring, but who has done the most with what they got? The Spurs and Rockets have been at the top echelon of the league for the past few years, and with quality role players like Dennis Rodman and Otis Thorpe (now with Portland), they have had their success.

But with the Sacramento Kings this franchise player has finally begun to emerge from the pit of mediocrity, and the quality character and work ethic of the ex-Warrior is paying dividends. Just looking at his MVP award from the recent All-Star Game is another reason to give him the prize. It is more than an obvious fact he was being fed the ball by his teammates — both to showcase him in a national spotlight and because he is just plain good. His 22.1 points per game average this season attests to that, and with a strong team finish helped by forward Walt Williams and rookie center Brian Grant, you never know. Seriously though, in the larger context of the numbers game concerning MVP voting, I doubt it will happen.

As the Orlando Magic sit atop the Eastern Conference with the best record (40-12), the laurels have already been passed to All-World superstars Anfernee Hardaway and Shaquille O'Neal for the team's sudden rise. But what is going to hold the key for the Magic for the rest of the season and playoff time is the play of forwards Horace Grant and Nick Anderson. Anderson was the All-Star for Orlando before they had any bona fide All Stars, and Grant is the man when it comes to legit post season experience. Horace has always made his presence on the boards, his field goal percentage is once again in the top five in the league (.563) and, of course, three NBA Championship rings does not hurt.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian staff member.

■ hoops

continued from page 14

right now, that are showing me some things.

"I'm looking for growth and character in this ball club. It has nothing to do with wins and losses. It has everything to do with character."

The Owls come in with a 15-8 record (8-5 in the Atlantic 10), and need a strong performance in their final three games and the conference tournament to have a chance at making the NCAA tournament.

"I really think there are three parts to everyone's season," Chaney said. "Along the way, you have to overcome injuries, overcome the lull kids run into and re-energize yourself and realize that it is so important to finish strong. The coach must make sure the kids are prepared. There is no such thing as fatigue. You must be excited about this time of year."

Chaney is also quick to extol the virtues of the UMass team.

"They're a great ball club — perhaps they're the best ball club, the most balanced ball club there is in the country, " he said. "They do what they have to do to win. When it comes time to win, they win."

If Temple is going to stop Massachusetts, it will have to be successful in containing Marcus Camby, a player Chaney thinks is the key to UMass, both offensively and defensively.

"He is a positive on that team. I don't know anybody that is any better rebounding," Chaney said. "He gives them punch. He is the guy who fills the blanks on that ball club. If Camby is running well, then he will be the punch that UMass needs."

Temple will counter with the inconsistent William Cunningham, who did play well in this year's previous meeting.

"I thought [Cunningham] played very well," Calipari said. "I haven't seen him play that well. He was above the rim. He was tipping balls in, making free throws and doing things I haven't seen him do."

■ NHL

continued from page 14

price on the tutelage he'll give rookie Jamie Storr.

Forgive me for not including Edmonton's Roman Oksiuta on my list of gifted rookies. This mammoth winger (6 feet, 5 inches and 229 pounds) can keep anyone from taking runs at Jason Arnott and Oksiuta even has more goals: 7 to 5.

There's only three Winnipeg Jets on the positive side of the plus/minus ledger, and Dave Manson isn't one of them. He's a league low -16. It's time we all admitted this guy's nowhere near the league's top defensemen as he was once thought to be.

This is more of a commentary on thequirks of Sega Genesis' NHL 95 than the Bruins' fortune, but once I used the "Create Player" option to revive Mats Naslund, the next thing I knew he had 80 goals.

Don't look now, but those standings in the Atlantic Division have been completely reversed. If you hold onto this column for a week and then read it, the same holds true. One thing remains the same: everyone's at or below .500.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
They Work!

家鄉園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
Mandarin / Szechuan Cuisine
We Deliver in Amherst 5-9:30 Everyday
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 pm • Sunday Brunch 11am - 3pm
NEW ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children Under 10 $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30 - 3pm $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 chicken fingers, 2 chicken wings or hot & sour soup.
Take Out Service - Full Cocktail Menu
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

TAKE SAFETY INTO YOUR OWN HANDS!!!
Protect yourself with 007 Safety Products'
RED PEPPER MACE
Quick Release Key Chain - Black Only - Only $7.00
Canister w/ Leather Case & Key Ring - Only $6.00
Massachusetts Law - Mace Carriers Must Possess A Fire Arms Identification Card - Apply at Local Police Department.
• CHECK, MONEY ORDER, OR C.O.D. •
CALL NOW & FEEL SAFER! 1-800-784-3007
007 SAFETY PRODUCTS
61 East Main Street
Norton, MA 02766

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

ALANA Christian Alliance presents a heritage mini-gospel concert/social Sunday March 5, 1995 Campus Center auditorium featuring a five college mass choir. If you would like to sing with the mass choir for this one time event contact Chuck 5-0950 ASAP

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available! All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up Call Student Financial Services (800) 263-6495 ext. FA9511

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools. night/ new semester. Free info session: Mon. Feb. 27th, third Jefferson Inn at 7pm. or call 1-800 U-CAN-Mix

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice S-W 107,000 miles automatic transmission. Reliable car and engine. Asking $900 or best offer. Please contact Fausto @ (413) 549-4809

1982 Mazda RX-7 5 spd. 84k, sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500 Call 253-3149

Ford Granada 1981. Excellent condition. Auto, ext. $1,400 ono 268 3861

Ford Tempo 1984 light blue (automatic) 56,000 miles only. Runs like new. Excellent condition. Asking for $2300 or b/o Call Ries at 549-6133

Mercury Topaz 1987 Engine totally rebuilt: less than 30,000 ago, new front end, (wheel bearings, struts c.v. joints, brakes etc.) All work can be documented. This car has been babied. Moving must sell. $2,000. 413.367.0186 leave call

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities! Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available: waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, roces course, athletics, arts and crafts. For applications call 800 474 2705

FOR RENT

250 a month (cat ok) 2 miles to campus on bus route Feb free Call Todd 549 2093

Cape Cod Group summer rentals: waterfront houses. Falmouth area 508-477 6000

Cape Cod Seasonal rentals 1-5 bed room houses in all towns. Rental rates Hovey Cenco 508 394 2857 or 398 9367

Noho 1 br in 4 br apt. Center 586-7540 Jessica Anti immediately

Room available in sorority house. One block from campus. For more information call Robin 549-1783

Take over lease. Studio apt. on bus route 310 mo. incl all utilities 253 4880

Two rooms available! 230+ a month. Off rt. 9 Amherst. Killer house w/ yards, on bike path + bus route. Right near Stop + Shop. Sorry no phones yet call 549-0884 leave name + number with Tim

FOR SALE

286/386 computer system. CPU monitor, keyboard $235. Steve 549-5181

Alpine 7917 96 watts, full keyp, detachface, dolby $175. Alpine 80/6EQ component spkr set 4" mids, 1" dome tweeters, $100. Kenwood KAC 824 amp 80 W/2, 160 W/1 $95. Alpine 3531 amp 10W/4 $30. Magnavox 4 head VCR HQ, untried remote, $140. Call 253-3149

Amp. Roland Jazz- chorus $250 wah pedal $50, couch $50 253-3609

Condoms by mail. Top quality brand names $7/3 condom sampler, $8/12 condom sampler $11/36 condom sampler. Send money order, check, or cash to: Healthy Concepts, Box 52, Amherst, MA, 01004

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $599. Call Chris at 800-289-5685

Mountain bike Bianchi Peregrine 18" STI 12.500 obo Marzocchi XC500 shock 150. 256-8977 Dave

Reva sunglasses absolutely lowest prices Shades, H2O, Classic Traveler Call 1-800 985HADFS

Save $$$ U.S. Air anywhere by March 28 $173 value for $110 For more 549-4015

Tom Petty tix Albany March 21 14th row center Good prices great seats Call now 584-8392

Atari, Intellivision, Colecovision games, controllers and systems. Buy/Sell/Trade 256-1995 ask for Tony

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn. Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain Call Bill at 8-0094

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol. Credit available Casa Box 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512 416-8991

HELP WANTED

Babysitter wanted. Area health club seeks Babysitter. Limited hours available Monday, Tues., and Thurs. A.M.'s a must. Free membership with job! Call Mike at 549-3638

Camp Conadessia, Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Looking for caring counselors to help teach: all land and water sports, mini bikes, motorcycles, arts + crafts, climbing wall, ropes course, radio, newspaper, waterskiing, jet skiing, and much more. Summer season 6/20-8/5, thru 8/18/95. Call 800 837 8278 for an application

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp--3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront + arts. Call 1-800-973-3866. On campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $2000 +/month. World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50014

Dancers wanted No experience necessary. Earn $1000 $1500 per week 537 1422

Expanding environmental company seeks ambitious self-starters immediately. Great opportunity. 413-534-8833

Fill your resume - Intl. your writing. University Directories, the nation's largest publisher of campus telephone directories, is hiring students to sell advertising for the University of Amherst student telephone directory. The summer internship begins with an expense-paid, week-long training program on the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus. Gain experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings are $2,860-$5,250. College credit may be available. Travel opportunities exist in university markets across the U.S. Interview date: Tuesday, February 28th. Sign up at the Visitor's Center, weekdays 9:00am-4:30pm

Flexible office hours available for general office tasks in our Amherst office. Duties include copying and gathering materials to prepare for large volume mailings. Three hour minimum required. Some evening shifts available (access off bus route.) Fill out application or send resume to: Personnel, NES, 30 Gatehouse Road, Amherst, MA 01002. EOE

Full time. live in nanny needed for the summer in Westfield on Cape Cod. Call Holly at 346-6392

Live and work in Nantucket for the summer. Call Laurie 545-1303

Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 295-5436 after 2 p.m.

Summer camp on Cape Cod. Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program, competitive salaries. Call Rob at 549-8417 for info and application

Travel abroad and work! Make up to $7,000 $4,000+/mo Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

Typist wanted. I need someone to type my papers. Rob 545-3452

INSTRUCTION

CPR training. Train for basic CPR or for your CPR Instructor. Only takes 8 hrs. Call Janet at 6-1944 for info.

PERSONALS

Annie, Congratulations on AEPhi. Get ready for an awesome semester! Phi love, Your Phi friend

Brian. Remember me at Jodie's wedding in Feb? I look for your face all the time. I think you live in Washington. Where are you? If you remember me, place a person ad too!

Congratulations to the new Sigma Kappa pledges: Stephanie, Braschen, Kathy, Amy, Allison, Sarah, Jen, Cara, Leeanna, Beth, Carla, Lillian, Shannon, Bethany, Elizabeth, Kristen, Robyn, Becky, Kerry, and Courtney!

Deena. I know you but, you don't know me! Welcome to AEPhi. We are all so happy. Guess who?

Erica. Congrats new member! Can't wait to get to know you! Phi love, A

Happy Birthday Keri Sylvia 21st! From Adam Scott Roberts

Joey baby, Sorry is all that we can say because this is the only present for your 21st birthday! N pig it! And remember Agata says: Go up your dude and sing! Heeheehee! Love, The Polish and Irish goddess of lust

Lauren A., Get psyched for a great semester! We have a lot in common. Guess who?? Phi love, Your Phi friends

Lauren May Congrats and welcome to AEPhi! I'm a Phi friend for you, with brown eyes and brown hair, too. Guess who??

Marcy, Here's your clue #1: I'm tall, I'm blonde, I have brown eyes but who knows this could be a disguise. Get psyched! Love your Phi friend

Melissa. Get ready for an incredible semester. I like to talk alot but then again everyone does. Guess who??? Phi love, Your Phi friend

Thanks to all my friends who made my 21st birthday so special! It was a blast from what I remember!! Love ya all, Rachael

The sisters at SDT would like to welcome our new inbbonettes: Megan, Amy, Danielle, Suzanne, Sheri, Leigh, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julie, Terri, Samantha, Kim B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lea

Tovah, Welcome to AEPhi! Get ready for an awesome semester. Phi love, Your Phi friend

RIDE WANTED

Need rides in Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends. Gas $. 253-7699

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Large Florida Spring Break! Earn 2 credits. Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800-282-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Modem users? Call the Playground BBS 256-6085, 19.2 K bps, 130 megs online, CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Photographer head shots $75 546 1618 Perry

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

SHERRY GINSBERG

Get psyched for a Phi-nomenal semester. Congratulations and welcome to AEPhi. Love your Phi friend

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski Spring Break '95 intercollegiate ski weekends only $209! Includes 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (luxury condo)/5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age 18), sponsors include Labatts, Molson and Mr. Dirford, Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Campus and Greek representatives needed. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-5618

TRAVEL

Daytona Beach- Spring Break. First class, oceanfront hotel, directly on the beach, pool deck fun, nightclubs, sunshine, parties. Do not miss this trip! Rides on campus pick up and drop off, only $250 quad occup. Departs weekly in March. Call for free brochure. M-F, 8-5, 1-800 952-9868. See you at the beach!

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 6 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $479! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $198! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break '95. Daytona $99, Panama City $149. The best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call Heidi + Andrea 256-6110

Spring Break. lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Data entry and word processing Reliable and fast. Call Andy 586-0976

Thanks to all my friends who made my 21st birthday so special! It was a blast from what I remember!! Love ya all, Rachael

The sisters at SDT would like to welcome our new inbbonettes: Megan, Amy, Danielle, Suzanne, Sheri, Leigh, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julie, Terri, Samantha, Kim B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lea

Tovah, Welcome to AEPhi! Get ready for an awesome semester. Phi love, Your Phi friend

RIDE WANTED

Need rides in Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends. Gas $. 253-7699

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Large Florida Spring Break! Earn 2 credits. Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800-282-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Modem users? Call the Playground BBS 256-6085, 19.2 K bps, 130 megs online, CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Photographer head shots $75 546 1618 Perry

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

SHERRY GINSBERG

Get psyched for a Phi-nomenal semester. Congratulations and welcome to AEPhi. Love your Phi friend

SKI SPRING BREAK

Ski Spring Break '95 intercollegiate ski weekends only $209! Includes 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (luxury condo)/5 days intercollegiate activities (drinking age 18), sponsors include Labatts, Molson and Mr. Dirford, Quebec, Canada (just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Campus and Greek representatives needed. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-5618

TRAVEL

Daytona Beach- Spring Break. First class, oceanfront hotel, directly on the beach, pool deck fun, nightclubs, sunshine, parties. Do not miss this trip! Rides on campus pick up and drop off, only $250 quad occup. Departs weekly in March. Call for free brochure. M-F, 8-5, 1-800 952-9868. See you at the beach!

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 6 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $479! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $198! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break '95. Daytona $99, Panama City $149. The best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call Heidi + Andrea 256-6110

Spring Break. lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Data entry and word processing Reliable and fast. Call Andy 586-0976

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Classified Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through campus mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto For Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Word Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

REGARDING PERSONALS

1. All personals MUST be printed on the 7 official Classified coupons exclusive payment is acceptance of the classified.
2. First names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or down town numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

RATES

$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

| | | |

Sports

Next Season's A-10 line-up

East	West
Fordham, Massachusetts,	Dayton, Duquesne
Rhode Island, St. Bonaventure	George Washington, La Salle
St. Joseph's, Temple	Virginia Tech, Xavier

Williams gone as UMass heads to Temple

■ Calipari upholds suspension for rest of season; rivalry sparks enthusiasm from both teams

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts coach John Calipari announced yesterday that Mike Williams' suspension will be upheld for the remainder of the season.

Calipari declined comment on the reason for the suspension but said he wished Williams well.

"This is one of the hardest things I've had to do as a coach," Calipari said in a statement released yesterday. "Coaching is about teaching life skills, not just basketball. Mike will retain his scholarship and have the opportunity to finish his education here at UMass. We wish him the best."

Calipari was unavailable for further comment, as he and the team had left already for this weekend's games in Philadelphia.

Williams was originally suspended just prior to last Thursday's game against Duquesne for what Calipari termed as "breaking team rules."

Williams and his parents met with Athletic Director Bob Marcum, Calipari and the rest of the Massachusetts coaching staff on Tuesday. Following the conversation Calipari decided to continue the suspension through the end of the season.

WLVI reported Monday that the suspension may have been the result of a post game altercation between Williams and Lou Roe, but representatives of the University denied the report.

• • •

The 1994-95 University of Massachusetts men's basketball team this weekend will try to do something none of its predecessors have accomplished: go undefeated in Philadelphia.

To do it UMass (20-3, 11-2 in the Atlantic 10) will have to defeat rival Temple tonight at 9:30 p.m. and then a talented St. Joseph's team at noon on Saturday.

A year ago, Massachusetts beat Temple for the first time ever in McGonigle Hall on a Mike Williams three-pointer, en route to a UMass three game sweep over the rival Owls and the Atlantic 10 title.

The Minutemen, who had never beaten Temple until the 1991-1992 season, have now beaten John Chaney's squad six straight times, including a 59-58 nail-biter earlier this season.

Despite UMass' recent success, both coaches know the rivalry between the two schools will continue to provide for some great games.

"The rivalry takes it up a little notch," Chaney said. "[UMass] knows going in that they're going to have a tough game. I don't care where it is. It's going to be a tough game because of that unwritten element that's there."

Calipari agreed.

"We're playing a team that knows the importance of this game," Calipari said. "This rivalry is up there with any in the country. This kind of game brings out the best in people."

"We've coached against them enough that we know how they play. They always play the same way. They just change the numbers on the shirts. They play that style and they're good at it."

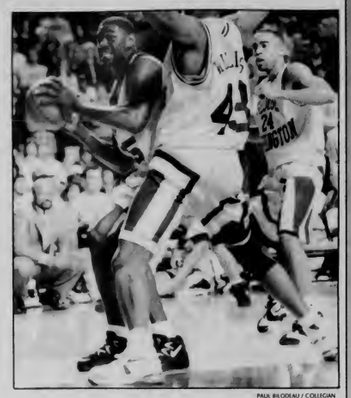
Massachusetts guard Derek Kellogg, who has been involved in the UMass–Temple rivalry for four years now, appreciates what the rivalry means as well.

"It's one of the bigger games we play," Kellogg said. "The crowd really gets into it. It's more intense than the usual game we play."

While his team's performance against UMass in January was an impressive one, Chaney knows that after losing stars Eddie Jones and Aaron McKie to the NBA last year, this is a rebuilding year for the Owls.

"We can't shoot. We play good defense, but we can't shoot," Chaney said after the first game against Massachusetts. "I'm not challenged by losses or wins. I'm trying to develop a team for the future. I got kids that are growing

turn to HOOPS page 12



PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Lou Roe and the UMass men's basketball team hope to continue their recent success against Temple.

Game Preview

No. 5 UMass Minutemen vs. Temple Owls

At McGonigle Hall
Philadelphia, Pa.
9:30 p.m.

Derek Kellogg

Rick Brunson

Probable Starters

Dana Dingle	F	Lynard Stewart
Tyrone Weeks	F	Jason Ivey
Lou Roe	C	William Cunningham
Derek Kellogg	G	Rick Brunson
Edgar Padilla	G	Levan Alston

On the Air

TV: ESPN

Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM Brian Perillo, Anthony Guido
WHMP 99.3 George Miller and Jack Leaman

Quebec improves; defense to thank

Last time I ended with a plug for Quebec's Joe Sakic, but the real story of the Nordiques is their newly adopted team concept instituted by first-year coach Marc Crawford and general manager Pierre Lacroix.

As Quebec was piling up losses in the late '80s, top slots in the entry draft came along. Then-GM Pierre Page used them well, selecting core personnel such as Mats Sundin, Owen Nolan and Jocelyn Thibault.

Then Page grabbed the reigns behind the bench and Quebec grabbed a fifth-place finish in the Northeast Division. The Nordiques totalled just 76 points, marking the second poorest dive from the previous season (-28).

Ted Kottler on the NHL

Even when Quebec was tremendously successful earlier in the Eighties, it was not a tough team. Page merely allowed the Nordiques to soften and they were hit hard by the new breed of rough-and-tumble NHL rosters.

Enter Crawford and Lacroix, who made the necessary move in dealing Sundin to Toronto for Leafs' tough guy Wendel Clark. Any team would miss Sundin's scoring, but Quebec sorely lacked an aggressive leader such as Clark. Clark's offensive renaissance sweetened the deal for Quebec, which also acquired defenseman Sylvain Lefebvre in the deal in exchange for Garth Butcher.

But Crawford has molded the entire team into a hustling, back-checking machine that hasn't forgotten how to score goals. The presence of Sakic, Nolan, Mike Ricci and Valeri Kamensky made it easier to part with Sundin.

Yet Crawford's greatest contribution has been his success in getting the best defensive effort from players unused to going near their own blue line, namely rookie Peter Forsberg. Many pundits picked the young Swede to win the Calder, but they did so knowing he could put the puck in the net and give others the same opportunity. They had no idea what he could do defensively until Crawford and Forsberg did either until he ran into Crawford. Quebec was 13-3 through Wednesday.

Along with Sundin and Butcher, Quebec sent Canadian Olympic forward Todd Warriner to Toronto for Landon Wilson. That may have been Quebec's only error. Wilson might not make it, but with Toronto's Ken Baumgartner, Bill Berg and Mike Gartner all out indefinitely, Warriner got the call and made his debut with the Leafs.

Dumb trades: Philadelphia's Josef Beranek for Vancouver's Shawn Antoski. Beranek: 28 goals in 1993-94. Antoski: one goal and 190 penalty minutes in 55 games. You tell me, did Philly really need another goon? Dave Brown is worshipped on Broad Street — this is an atrocity.

Trade that originally seemed dumb but may yet prove to be smart: the Mark Recchi deal. He was far and away the best player in the exchange, but John LeClair loves his new home and Eric Desjardins has proven to be the stabilizer the Flyers' defense needed.

Billy Ray Cyrus, er, Barry Melrose, coach of the Los Angeles Kings, had to tear out Kelly Hrudey's achy-breaky heart. After expressing total faith in Hrudey, the Kings dealt for Grant Fuhr. Hrudey started the first few nights Fuhr was in L.A., but Hrudey was shellacked by the struggling Canucks Monday, which means the time is now Fuhr's. That's faith, alright. Whether Fuhr plays or not, you can't put a

turn to NHL page 12

Minutewomen set for match-up with Dukes

Beth Kuzmeski needs only one three–pointer for career record

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Beth Kuzmeski needs only one three-pointer tonight to be the UMass career leader

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will be in the A.J. Palumbo Center in Pittsburgh tonight for an Atlantic 10 contest against Duquesne.

Freshman Korie Hlede leads the Lady Dukes and the Atlantic 10 in scoring average.

The Croatian native has taken the nation by storm in her first season of college basketball, pouring in 24.1 points per contest.

That average is almost five points a game greater than the A-10's second leading scorer, All America candidate Debbie Emery from George Washington, who is averaging 19.3 ppg.

It is also good enough to place Hlede seventh in the nation in scoring average.

Despite Hlede's heroics, however, the Lady Dukes have only been able to muster a 10–13 record, 6–8 in A–10 play. The Lady Dukes are in sixth place in the league, two games behind the University of Rhode Island.

The University of Massachusetts, on the other hand, has bounced back, winning their last two games after dropping two in a row.

The Minutewomen, 15–8, are coming off a 76– 72 win over URI at the William D. Mullins Center, a game that marked the first time a women's basketball game was televised live from the UMass campus.

The game was important for another reason as well. With the win over the Rams, the Minutewomen picked up their 10th league win (against three losses), marking the most A- 10 wins ever by the UMass women's basketball program.

The previous record was set by the 1986–87 squad who finished 9–9 in the conference.

UMass now stands in third place in the Atlantic 10, one half game behind St. Joseph's, and one full game behind league leading George Washington in the log jam at the top of the conference.

UMass' 15 wins are the second most victories in the history of the UMass women's basketball program. The most wins is 18, collected twice. The Minutewomen have at least four more games left (three regular season and a minimum of one game in the A–10 tourney), and need three wins to tie the record.

Other than Hlede, the Lady Dukes do not have much scoring punch. No other player on the Duquesne roster is averaging over double figures in scoring.

Seniors Erin Popovich and Chris Chandler are both averaging 8.7 points per game, while Popovich's 7.3 rebounds per game is second only to Hlede's 8.2.

Hlede is also the team's leading three–point shooter (32 percent) and paces the team with 92 steals (seventh in the nation).

The Lady Dukes have won three of their last four contests, including a 77–68 win over West Virginia in their last game.

Hlede poured in 29 in that contest, while grabbing 15 boards.

The Minutewomen are led by junior Melissa Gurile. Gurile, who scored 25 in the win over URI, is leading UMass with 16 ppg and is second with 6.8 rpg.

Junior Octavia Thomas is right behind Gurile in scoring (15 ppg) and leads the team with 7.9 rebounds per contest.

Sophomore Beth Kuzmeski is currently one trifecta away from the all–time career three–point mark at UMass. Kuzmeski has hit 97 three–pointers in less than two seasons as a Minutewoman, and is already tied with Sue Serafini (1987–90) for the career mark. UMass' shooting guard already has the single game and season records for three– pointers made.

Massachusetts defeated the Lady Dukes 73–47 a month ago in Amherst. Gurile had 19 points and eight rebounds for UMass.

Three soccer recruits signed for 1995

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Sara Hill, a left–footed midfielder from Castleton, N.Y., will join Amanda Thompson and Karen Johnson, who both have signed letters–of–intent to attend and play soccer at Massachusetts for the 1995–96 academic year.

The Feb. 3 Collegian reported Thompson and Johnson had verbally committed, which was confirmed yesterday.

The three new players should help the Minutewomen deal with the losses of All–American defender Heidi Kocher and forward Melissa Mitchell.

Thompson, a defender, comes from Houston where she starred on the prestigious Klein Challenge Soccer Club. She was an All–State Olympic Development player at the Under– 14, Under–16 and Under–19 levels, and played on the Under– 16 team when she was just 13 years old.

She was also a member of the U.S. Soccer Association and the South Regional Olympic Development Program team in 1993 and 1994, and was a Top 30 player for the U.S. National Youth Team.

"Amanda is a very clever, resourceful defender," said University of Massachusetts soccer coach Jim Rudy. "She's a tall, slender kid with some skill. In her first year, I don't think she'll attack like Heidi [Kocher], but she's a nice level of player to bring in considering Heidi's leaving. She's a steady sort of player, like Heidi. She's done some playing with Erin Lynch, Rebecca Myers and Danielle Dion, so that's a nice plus for us."

Johnson, a midfielder–forward, had 25 goals and 16 assists her senior season at Sutton High School and was named a 1994 All–New England, All–Central Massachusetts and All–Dual Valley League selection, in addition to being named Player of the Year in the league. She led Sutton High to three state championships from 1991–93.

Johnson was also a member of the Sutton Fuller Hamlets Soccer Club and a graduate of the UMass Advanced Girls Soccer Camp, where according to Rudy, she shined.

"Johnson, I think, will do very well here at UMass because she's my type of player," Rudy said. "She has a very high work rate. She hates to lose, and she likes to work very hard. She's the type of kid we want to have here at UMass. She's fairly quick, she's got a good shot with both feet, and she's a smart player."

Hill hails from New York were she was named first team All–State and captured Section II Class C Player of the year honors. Current UMass player Nicole Roberts won that same honor her senior season.

Hill was named Maple Hill High School's team MVP in 1993 and 1994, and was also was a first team Patroon Conference selection, and a Troy Record All–Star.

"Sara Hill is a very pleasant surprise. I'm so happy this kid's coming here, because it was very late in the recruiting game," Rudy said. "We're just so pleased to be able to have a person of her potential at this stage. She's a very dynamic, high work rate player who has a sweet left foot. She's a tough kid who really wants to work hard."

The Minutewomen could also have two transfers on their team next season. Vikki Linton from Australia and Kim Chula from Fairfield University. Rudy said that they are still working on Linton's eligibility but that Chula should be eligible for the fall.

"[Linton] has trained with us and is very steady. Chula is a very quick, powerful from runner," Rudy said.

Rudy also announced that sophomore goalkeeper Nancy Kiesar has retired from the program.

Gugliotta travels again; Richmond may be MVP

Our weekly tour of the National Basketball Association begins with a familiar name, but in a unfamiliar place.

Once again the talented forward Tom Gugliotta has to get out his Rand McNally road atlas, as last Saturday he was dealt off to the Minnesota Timberwolves for the ex–UConn forward Donyell Marshall.

Jorma Kansanen on the NBA

The fourth pick of last year's NBA draft has not even come close to playing up to his potential, and contrary to the trade that brought Gugliotta to Golden State, this looks good for both sides involved. What Marshall needs at this point is to start on a new foot, and the system new coach Bob Lanier has instated was unfriendly (in more ways than one) to the multi–dimensional talents of the North Carolina State grad. Expect the long–awaited departure of Christian Laettner at the end of this season if "Googs" goes on a tear.

Is it my imagination or has Marshall never been the same since those missed free throws at the end of last year's NCAA loss to Florida?

Why am I not surprised to hear that Scottie Pippen is the one who started the trade rumors with Phoenix? The rumor circulating around All–Star turn to NBA page 12

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

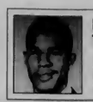
Volume CIV Issue 82 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, February 24, 1995

String quartets join forces at Bowker

The Alexander Quartet and The Angeles Quartet will play at Bowker Auditorium on Feb. 26. Check inside for more details (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Du Bois honored with symposium

W.E.B. Du Bois was honored by over 50 members of the community at a special symposium yesterday (See Multicultural Affairs, page 5).



Brunson helps lead Temple to victory

Senior Rick Brunson and the Owls continued their dominance over the Minutemen at McGonigle Hall with their win last night (See Sports, page 10).

Weekend Forecast

Chance of rain early this morning, changing to snow before noon. Chance of precipitation 50 percent. Cold overnight, lows near 10. Sunny tomorrow, highs near 30.

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 40 LOW: 8	HIGH: 28 LOW: 10	HIGH: 30 LOW: 15

Angelou, Wiesel to speak together about their lives

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

One survived a rape that left her mute until she was 6 years old. The other survived the Holocaust. Both will be speaking at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst next month.

Maya Angelou and Elie Wiesel will appear at the William D. Mullins Center on March 28 in a speech titled "Crosswords: Maya Angelou and Elie Wiesel in Conversation." It will feature the two speaking on the trials and tribulations in their lives and how it affected the path their lives took. Tickets went on sale yesterday.

Angelou is an African American poet, author and professor at Wake Forest University. Among her works are "Just Give Me a Cool Drink of Water 'Fore I Diiie," which was nominated for a Pulitzer prize in 1971 and the 1993 autobiographical work "Wouldn't Take Nothing for My Journey Now."

She has won several awards including the Langston Hughes award, a Grammy for Best Spoken Word Album and the American Academy of Achievement's Golden Plate Award. She read a selection of her poetry at the inauguration of President Clinton in 1993.

Wiesel is a Jewish writer, human rights worker and professor at Boston University. His works include Night, which details his experiences in Auschwitz. He also established the Elie Wiesel Foundation for Humanity and has spoken extensively on behalf of victims of war and prejudice in the former Yugoslavia, Cambodia, South Africa and Nicaragua.

Wiesel won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986 for his human rights work.

Angelou and Wiesel are appearing at the invitation of Chancellor David K. Scott.

According to Delphine Quarles, the director of Campus Activities Advising Center, she and Yehudit Heller, Hillel's assistant director, came up with the idea. "We thought it would be a wonderful opportunity for the campus," said Quarles. "We shared our thoughts with Deputy Chancellor [Marcellette] Williams, and she was very very supportive. It is one of the most wonderful events we could have worked on."

Karin Sherbin, a member of the Chancellor's Planning Committee who worked on the plans to bring the two speakers, said that both are "fantastically creative people that have lived through incredible times, events and experiences."

She added that she hoped everyone would listen to the thoughts there, and that the speech would be an education to many people.

Sherbin, also an University spokeswoman, was unsure what format the speech would take, but said that it would be as informal as possible, and that it was unlikely either would spend "much time in front of a podium."

The committee is sponsoring a writing contest to give away four tickets to the speech. Entries will be put into four age groups: seventh to eighth grade, ninth to 10th, 11th to 12th, and college students from the five college area.

The committee is soliciting one–page essays or poems of less than 250 words on "Building Understanding: Dreams and Reality." The winners' pieces will be printed on the program at the speech.

The deadline for the entries is March 15, and they should be sent to Joseph Tolson at the Campus Activities Office at 416 Student Union Building.

Tickets are available at the Mullins Center box office. They cost $5 for students.

Hooker lays out planned cuts in order for UMass to survive

JUAN JOSE CHACON QUIROS DE QUETZACOATL / COLLEGIAN

University President Michael K. Hooker spoke to a packed auditorium filled with students and members of the faculty yesterday about his future plans for the University.

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

"Compacting," collaboration and cut–backs will all play a necessary role in any future plans made for the University of Massachusetts to insure that it thrives despite economic hardships, according to University President Michael K. Hooker.

Hooker presented his plans for the University in front of a jam–packed auditorium in Herter Hall last night. Three trustees, one of whom was chair and another vice chair, attended as well.

Hooker, initially greeted by a small group of student demonstrators, answered questions from angry faculty members and outlined his plans for better assessing efficiency within the University.

"It's never going to be like it used to be," Hooker said. "Responsibilities and demands have shifted."

According to Hooker, reallocating funds internally would help to reduce budgetary figures and drop the ax on programs that do not serve their worth.

This kind of compacting goes on all the time at UMass, according to Bob Wolff, a professor in the Afro–American Studies Department for the past 25 years. Faculty are constantly changing and updating the curriculum — without having to be asked.

Hooker said he will also be seeking collaboration between the five different UMass campuses as a means to make the University systems budget leaner and more efficient, as a whole.

There are tremendous infrastructural problems throughout the state that are causing everything to be cut back, according to Robert S. Karam, vice chair of the Board of Trustees.

"We are doing the very best we can," Karam said. "We have to work at this compact and we'll go from there."

Hooker spoke of Massachusetts Gov. William F. Weld's "matching plan" as a positive means of attaining funds. Under Weld's initiative, money raised by the University through fundraising would be matched by the state.

"He's not accepting responsibility for getting more money from the legislature," said Kenneth Miller, president of the Alliance for Student Power. "What makes a public university public is the fact that it doesn't accept money from private companies — we're only accountable to democracy."

Expenses and Expenditures

In cutting down expenses through Hooker's "Action Plan for the Year 2000," more money could go toward run–down facilities and deferred maintenance problems, Hooker said. He noted that the condition of the seats in the auditorium was so poor that Chancellor David K. Scott was "nearly falling out of his."

Increased expenditures on salary, however, is an issue that still remains unresolved, Hooker said.

Audience members blamed Hooker and the C+ report card he issued to the University for the lack of faculty support.

The report card, according to Hooker, was a performance measure of the administration, not the faculty. Hooker graded all of the five campuses cumulatively on a curve, in comparison to public universities across the country, he said.

"I regret the damage done, but I do not regret the report card," Hooker said.

He said, in turn, that it would be politically unwise to draw up another proposal for faculty raises at this point in time. According to Hooker, Weld did not accept the faculty raise proposal because of other political activity taking place throughout the state.

Faculty are the number one highest paid employees in the state, according to Daniel Taylor, chair of the Board of Trustees. If their salaries are raised, other state employees who are paid less and also have contracts that are pending, would demand increases, as well.

According to Leo Richards, spokesperson for the Massachusetts Society of Professors, the trustees had a good approach. "I hope that people take that seriously in the administration," he said.

"These meetings should happen on an ongoing basis, not as a reaction to circumstances and events," said Student Trustee Al Lizana.

Haitian hopes high as Carter returns

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Former President Carter returned yesterday to the country where his last-ditch negotiating averted a U.S. invasion and where the American troops that landed peacefully are now getting ready to leave.

"We are very happy to be back in Haiti," Carter said after arriving at the Port-au-Prince airport, where he proclaimed his dedication "to peace, human rights and democracy."

U.S. Ambassador William Swing greeted Carter, who was accompanied by his wife Rosalyn, but no representative of the Haitian government came to the airport.

Many Haitians resent Carter, feeling he let their oppressors off too easily. The city was bedecked in red graffiti telling Carter to go home, but a threatened protest at the airport didn't materialize.

Although Carter's September negotiations likely saved thousands of lives, Haiti's military rulers were allowed to stay in power for almost a month before leaving — unpunished — for exile.

Carter said he planned to "explore ways in which we might be helpful in reinforcing a free and fair electoral process." Also on the agenda during his three-day visit is a review of the international aid effort in Haiti.

The next major democratic test for Haiti is scheduled for June 4, when the first round of legislative and local elections takes place. Presidential elections are set for December.

Carter landed in Port-au-Prince this afternoon. He will be joined Friday by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and retired Gen. Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. All three were instrumental last October in inducing the departure of Haiti's military leadership, leading to the unopposed arrival of the U.S.-led multinational force.

They will meet with President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haitian government officials and political party leaders, among others. The Haiti intervention is viewed as one of the Clinton administration's most significant foreign policy achievements. Some analysts wonder, however, whether Haiti's democratic roots are too shallow to head off a return to authoritarian rule.

"Haiti is a country on the edge between a tragic history and a hopeful future," said Robert Pastor, director of the Latin American and Caribbean Program at the public policy center Carter heads in Atlanta. "A visit by a delegation of this stature will be a symbol of the support of the international community for Haitians who want to make their hopes for a democratic society real." Pastor is a member of the delegation, as is a former Prime Minister George Price of Belize. He and Carter will be traveling as members of the Council of Freely Elected Heads of Government, with headquarters in Atlanta.

Earlier this week, U.S. officials said Aristide struck a blow for democracy by engineering the departure of all four of Haiti's army generals and 39 colonels and majors. A generous buyout program, especially for the most senior officers, ensured a peaceful exit.

U.S. officials said a majority of the retiring officers were disreputable and potential dangers to democracy.

Last fall, under the protection of the multinational force, Aristide was able to return to Haiti three years after his ouster in a military coup. In about a month, that force will be replaced by U.N. troops who will remain on duty until a new president is sworn in next February.

Failed motion brings discussion on tense Black-Jewish relations

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Staff

A failed motion to condemn the actions of the Black Student Union and Phi Beta Sigma fraternity Wednesday evening has sparked awareness of tensions between the Black and Jewish communities at the University of Massachusetts.

Whether or not the bill passed was not the issue, according to Student Government Association (SGA) senator Jaime Resnick, who presented the motion.

"I had to use extreme action to bring Black and Jewish leaders together," he said.

The controversial motion proposed to condemn the actions of the Black Student Union (BSU) and Phi Beta Sigma for "continually inviting" anti–Semitic speakers to UMass in the past three years.

"I do not feel the meeting was positive — it slandered the Black community," said Shomwa Shamapande, BSU president. "I am ashamed that one group of college students would try to silence another group."

"The 3,700 Jewish students will continue to fight anti– Semitism and work with the administration," said Alan Weinfeld, Hillel Foundation representative. Chancellor David K. Scott urged leadership to stand up and fight anti–Semitism, according to Weinfeld.

James Waire, member of Phi Beta Sigma, said he was displeased with the recent actions of Scott.

"I find it weird that he's not minding his own business with the students," Waire said, "and when someone on his own staff calls someone a nigger, she can keep her job."

Efforts to reach the chancellor were unsuccessful. "The outcome was positive and it will strengthen our relationship, but there needs to be a rest period," Weinfeld said.

Discussions between Black and Jewish leaders continued outside after the meeting adjourned, according to Resnick. "Everyone began to talk and tell their side of the story," Resnick said. Phone numbers were exchanged in order to continue conversations and set up dialogues, he said. "In my opinion it was truly a beautiful sight."

SGA house speaker Mercedes Betanco said she felt the meeting went well. "It was beneficial and healthy to hear ideas and opinions from both groups," she said.

Shamapande said he hopes he can work with the Jewish community in the future. "If programs are set up, I would love to participate," he said.

"I did not lose, and the members of the Jewish Community and the Black Community did not lose," Resnick said. "We all won, because everyone is beginning to have a mutual understanding."

"I still think today as yesterday that the color line is a great problem of this century. But today I see more clearly than yesterday that back of the problem which obscures and imprisons it, and that is the fact that so many civilized persons are willing to live in comfort even if the price of this is poverty, ignorance and disease for the majority of their fellowmen and to maintain this privilege men have waged war until today war tends to become universal and cataclysmic, and the excuse for this war continues to largely be color and race."
W. E. B. Du Bois
Dusk of Dawn, 1940
Preface to the Jubilee edition
The Souls of Black Folk

JULIO A. CORDERO / COLLEGIAN

A decorative plaque honoring W.E.B. Du Bois was presented yesterday at a special symposium that commemorated the life of the Black leader (Story on page 5).

Christopher to try to help discussions in Middle East

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Warren Christopher plans to return to the Middle East in March to try to revive peace talks between Israel and Syria and to give Palestinian self-rule a boost. Administration officials said the schedule was still in preparation. The likely stops are Egypt, Israel, Syria and Jordan, and also Gaza for a meeting with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat. Without confirming the contemplated five-day trip, Christine Shelly, the State Department spokeswoman, said Christopher intended "to try to move the process forward." She said Israel, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization were all committed to making headway despite the slowdowns.

Christopher was last in the region in December.

Initially, Christopher planned to send his senior Middle East adviser, Dennis Ross, to take soundings. But, switching signals, he has decided to go himself, said the officials, speaking on condition of anonymity. An announcement of the trip is expected today.

Israel and Syria have not held negotiations for two months, while Israel's talks with the PLO to extend Palestinian self-rule on the West Bank are snagged in a spiral of terrorism that has dampened public support in Israel for a pullback.

Peace talks between Israel and Syria began in October 1991. Since then, Israel and the PLO reached a self-rule accord and Israel and Jordan signed a peace treaty.

But Israel and Syria still have not overcome the basic hurdles: the kind of peace Syrian President Hafez Assad would extend to Israel and whether Israel would be willing to surrender the strategic Golan Heights in exchange. Tough security questions also have not been resolved.

On the Palestinian front, meanwhile, at least the immediate goals have been established: a commitment to give the Palestinians control of Gaza and of much of the West Bank, with the Israeli army withdrawing to a few strategic positions.

On Wednesday, the PLO executive committee said negotiations with Israel were in danger of breaking down. Envoys were to be sent to the United States, Russia, China, Japan and Europe to try to push Israel to set a date for a withdrawal of troops from most of the West Bank and for holding Palestinian elections.

But Arafat's inability to curb attacks by Palestinian militants on Israelis — more than 50 have died since October — is making it hard for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to implement his agreements with the PLO. Polls show Rabin's popularity in sharp decline and that of the opposition Likud leader, Benjamin Netanyahu, on the rise.

Coming Soon!

The Collegian will be rolling out the red carpet for all students interested in any of the three departments — business, graphics and news — in an open house.

Any students interested in knowing how the largest collegiate newspaper in New England works should come down. We are always looking for new and exciting staff members.

Check the Collegian for more details.

Coming in early March to your favorite Campus Center Basement office.

Kaplan offers practice tests free to students

A nationally renowned test preparation company will be offering students practice tests tomorrow at no charge that will prepare them for entry to graduate school.

Kaplan, one of the nation's largest test preparation companies, is offering GRE, GMAT, LSAT and MCAT tests to students as part of Student Preparedness Day.

In mid-January, Massachusetts Gov. William F. Weld proclaimed Feb. 25 as Students Preparedness Day, when students are encouraged to do their potential best in preparing for an exam, according to Dean M. Graziano, director of Amherst Kaplan.

It is a nationwide effort, locally endorsed by Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Students who take the free tests are under no financial obligation to Kaplan, Graziano said.

Performance results will be computer analyzed to appraise the student's aptitude for graduate school, according to Josh Harmon, enrollment coordinator of Amherst Kaplan.

"Students have the opportunity to see how they'll score without having the results count against them," Graziano said.

"I encourage interested students to call our office on Friday to register for the exam they would like to take on Saturday," Harmon said.

The results of the computer analysis will be provided to the students a few days after the test day, according to Graziano.

—Henry J. Brier

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Feb. 24

Lecture — "An Oceanic Perspective on the Global Greenhouse Effect: Reconstruction of Paleoceanic PCO," by John Jasper, University of Connecticut, UMass, Morrill 2 South room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — "A Christian Call for Racial Reconciliation." Spencer Perkins and Christ Rice, co-authors of More than Equals and editors of Urban Family magazine are members of an inter-racial household, church and community-building ministry in Mississippi. Free. Amherst College Johnson Chapel, 7:30 p.m.

Dance — Michael Moschen, Dancer, juggler, shaper of space, magically dexterous, illusionist. $11.50/9/6.50. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

Theater — You Could be Home Now, Too. Theater and dance production created and directed by Anne Kenney, Amherst College. Movement-oriented drama concerning the notion of "home" and how we separate the "inside" from the "outside." Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Film — Strictly Ballroom. Musical about a young, competitive ballroom dancer who insists on dancing his own provocative steps. $1.75. Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Music — Ethnic Man. Powerful, fast, ethno-cultural related comedy. Free. Amherst College Frontroom, 8 p.m. Information: 542-5773.

Music — Japanese Koto Music. Masayo Ishigure of the Sawai Academy of Music in Japan and artist-in-residence at Wesleyan University presents traditional and contemporary Koto music. Free. Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Information: 542-2195.

Festival — "Fiesta de Carnaval." Part of the Dominican Independence Week Celebration. Dominican dinner and merengue dance. Presentation of Dominican Band Oro Solido and Concepto Latino. $8. Student Union Ballroom, 7:30 p.m.

Saturday, Feb. 25

Music — South Indian Classical Music. Pankajam Narayanan, accompanied by Gordon Korsntange and Rajesh Ranganathan. Music of the Whole Earth Series. Free. Amherst College Stirn Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Music — Five College Choral Festival. Works by various composers and choirs perform Robert Stern's "Through my song." Free. Smith College John M. Greene Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Theater — Roger Guenveur Smith in Frederick Douglass Now. Words from the 19th century African American orator but cadences from angry black poets of the 60s and Rap artists of today. $6/3.50. Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Film — The Color Purple. Whoopi Goldberg's screen debut. $2.50. Mount Holyoke College Hooker Auditorium, 7 and 9:45 p.m.

Cultural — UMOJA talent show. Campus Center Auditorium, 7 p.m.

Sunday, February 26

Music — The Alexander String Quartet and the Angeles String Quartet. Admission fee. Bowker Auditorium, 2 p.m.

Theater — You could be home now, too ... Free. Amherst College, Fayerweather Studio Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Independence Day." Part of the Dominican Independence Week celebrations. Latin American Cultural Center, 3 p.m. For more information call COAP at 545- 3600.

Notices

Volunteer Work — WFCR Public Radio seeks volunteers to assist the station with Spring fund raising, scheduled to begin March 29. For information contact 545-0100.

Senior Class gift — Voting for senior class gift will take place on the Campus Center Concourse throughout this week. This is an opportunity to decide where your gift will go.

Yearbook photos — Senior photo session will continue through Feb. 24. Call 1-800-836-0558 to schedule an appointment.

Talent show — Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, Inc. will be hosting the Umoja Spring Talent Show Feb. 25. For information, contact Darrone Johnson, 546-6787.

Voter registration — Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center offers voter registration daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. UMass, Student Union Building, room 428. Information: 545-0865.

Community Service — The Viva Community Service Council is asking groups and individuals on campus to submit the number of community service hours they have completed since the beginning of this academic year. The Council is tallying up the total number of service hours this campus has contributed to the community. For information, contact Lori McKinney, 545-3368.

Volunteer Work — If you are interested in becoming a lifeguard, Amherst Leisure Services is offering training. The course will run April 5 to May 24. For information call the Department at 256-4065.

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible.

All submissions must be type written with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Feeling your community is left out by the University?

Come down and say so! Write for the Multicultural Affairs desk. Contact Hernán Rozemberg at 545–1851.

EXPRESS YOURSELF!

CROSSWORDS

Maya Angelou & Elie Wiesel In Conversation

Tuesday, March 28, 1995
7:30 pm, Mullins Center

Tickets are: General Public: $20; $15; $10. Students: $5
Tickets Available at the Mullins Center Box Office.
All TicketMaster Locations or charge by phone at (413) 733-2500
This event made possible by Bonducci's and BayBank
PLEASE NOTE CHANGE IN PHONE NUMBER

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. thru Thurs. Feb. 24 - March 2/Separate Admission
Daily 7 p.m./Tickets 6:30
Academy Award Nominations
Nigel Hawthorne
THE MADNESS OF KING GEORGE
Daily 9:15/Tickets 8:30
Alan Rudolph's view of the most notorious table in N.Y.
"A REMARKABLE MOVIE!"
LEIGH SCOTT BRODERICK
MRS. PARKER AND THE VICIOUS CIRCLE
ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treats 584-8435

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday A.M.
Starting at $49.95
-Cars -Mini Vans -Trucks -Cargo Vans
-Direct Billing to Insurance Companies
-We Rent to All Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR 70 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA 549-RENT
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Rd., Northampton 586-4444

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
SUNDAY BRUNCH $5.99 Regular Menu Available
COMEDY SHOWS Every Fri & Sat
BUFFET LUNCH $3.99 Mon-Sat 11-3
BUFFET DINNER $6.99 7 Days a Week 5-7pm *Includes fruit & salad bar
VISA/MASTERCARD • FREE PARKING
RT. 9 IN HADLEY • 586-1202 北京

LEARN & ENJOY:
Five-College Art Museums
Bartending
Estate Planning
Fundraising—a certificate program
Past Life Regression
Jitterbug/Swing
ESL
EMT Training
Spanish, German, Portuguese, French, Polish
Horticulture as Recreation
Woodworking
Microcomputer workshops
Environmental Journalism
over 100 inexpensive noncredit workshops for you and your friends
Pick up a catalog on campus or in town or call 545-0474 for more information.
Adventures in Lifelong Learning Workshops
Division of Continuing Education

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, March 1,2,3
Open house at the North Fire Station, March 3 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

Northwestern
Summer Session '95
Cooler near the lake.
If you're thinking about summer school, consider Northwestern's Summer Session. At Northwestern you'll find yourself on our beautiful campus on the shores of Lake Michigan with students from all over the country. Where else can you earn a full year's credit in eight or nine weeks and relax on a private beach? Summer Session at Northwestern makes summer school cool.
Noteworthy in '95: Field schools in archaeology, environmental studies, ethnography, and urban studies and a six-week program in Prague.
For more information, please call 1-800-FINDS NU.
For a free copy of the Summer Session '95 catalog, call 1-800-FINDS NU (in Illinois, call 708-491-5250), fax your request to 708-491-3660, e-mail your request to summer95@nwu.edu, or mail this coupon to Summer Session '95, 2115 North Campus Drive, Suite 162, Evanston, Illinois 60208-2650.
Send the catalog to m my home m my school.
Name
School Address
City State Zip
Home Address
City State Zip
Northwestern is an equal opportunity, affirmative action educator and employer.

Allocation plan still up in the air

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

The Campus Center/Student Union (CC/SU) Commission embarked upon devising a fair space allocation procedure during their weekly meeting last night.

The two-plus hour meeting, which was at times tedious and meticulous, ended with members of the commission voting down a motion to require the approximate 67 University of Massachusetts groups to complete an interview as part of the process of attaining office space.

Had the motion passed, the commission would be required to interview each Registered Student Organization (RSO), Graduate Student Organization (GSO), and agency.

"The point of this commission is to give out space in a fair way," said William Stevens, CC/SU Commission facilities officer. "We have a job to do, and we've got to get it done."

Stevens' vote on the motion was in the minority and unsuccessful. Colin Cavell, a graduate student commissioner member, voted with the majority on the motion.

"Why make a lot of work for ourselves?" Cavell asked.

The purpose of developing the space allocation policy is so that fair and reasonable criteria are considered when office space is granted to the different RSOs, GSOs, and agencies, according to a memo distributed at the meeting. The memo outlines the proposed procedure in allocating office space.

While discussing different aspects of the proposed policy, the commission often digressed and became immersed in debate over usage of certain words that conveyed multiple meanings or were unclear.

"I would not try to finesse this too much," said William M. Harris, faculty member of the commission and director of the Campus Center. "We've got to move this process into place. It would be a good experience for all of us."

The proposed policy requires that RSOs, GSOs and agencies that have been in their current space for at least five years, or were allocated space within the past two years, need not apply for office space, according to the memo.

After the groups have applied for office space, a tentative scoring system will be implemented in assigning space, according to the memo.

Groups will be granted points depending upon size of membership, their outreach efforts and their hours of accessibility, according to the memo.

Matthew Auger, chair of the CC/SU Commission suggested essays or interviews as a part of the application process.

In addition to group interviews, the CC/SU Commission could not come to agreement on other aspects of the proposed space allocation procedure, and agreed that discussion would continue at subsequent meetings.

Early female composers lauded

Grad student examines how music can express femininity

By Laura Schmidt
Collegian Staff

Ellie Hisama examined how the music of Marion Bauer and Ruth Crawford Seeger expressed their situations of being female.

A graduate student from City University of New York, Hisama, spoke Tuesday night at Mount Holyoke College as part of the Five College Women's Studies Colloquium series.

In her lecture entitled "Gender and Modernism in the Music of Marion Bauer and Ruth Crawford Seeger," Hisama proposed feminist ways of listening to the music of the two American women.

Hisama explained that as an undergraduate English student at the University of Chicago she learned of musical contributions made mostly by men.

"The gap in my knowledge about women musicians greatly troubled me because women had made music, experienced it, and savored it," said Hisama.

It was at this time Hisama said she became interested in the works of Bauer and Seeger, both successful musical composers.

"I was relieved and proud to learn that women could compose such wonderful musical pieces such as Crawford's string quartet," she said.

Hisama offered background information about Bauer and Crawford in order to draw from their experiences.

"My argument is to use my knowledge of their experiences as a stimulus for hearing and accounting for their music," Hisama said.

Crawford, who lived in South Hadley for a period of time, became interested in exploring music that was pertinent to society.

In 1932, Crawford composed a musical piece called "Chinaman, Laundryman," which described the harsh working conditions of a Chinese laundryman.

Hisama explained that during this time period, Asian laundrymen were viewed as being feminine or lower class because they were associated with the stereotype that doing laundry is women's work.

Bauer, who taught at Julliard for some time, aspired towards a life in which women did not achieve either lasting recognition or financial security, said Hisama.

Bauer, said Hisama, faced many prejudices as a woman which she expressed through her well-known, 1930, piano works.

"Crawford composed musical narratives that were subversive, and Bauer constructed utopic musical narratives of power and domination," said Hisama.

"Composing provided these two women the opportunity to express their voices which otherwise would have been muted," said Hisama.

Hisama concluded by reciting a quote once said by Seeger: "We should not seek to be greater than others but to discover the greatness in ourselves."

Photo Staff Meeting
Thursday Night
at 7 p.m.
Anyone interested in joining the Collegian photo staff, come on down with an empty stomach.
Pizza, pizza, pizza.

Women have issues & we need you to help us address them!
Come down and write for the Women's Issues section of the Collegian.
Contact Lisa or Colleen at 545-3500 or come down to our office in the Campus Center Basement.

Stop in and Register to win
SPRING BREAK VACATION
4 days- 3 nights
BAHAMA PRINCESS RESORT AND CASINO
Drawing
Saturday February 25!
No purchase necessary
McDonald's Express
25 N Pleasant Street
Amherst
253-2653

STUDENT FARES

LONDON	$250
AMSTERDAM	$430
PARIS	$438
FRANKFURT	$458
MADRID	$498
BRUSSELS	$430
MOSCOW	$518
ZURICH	$478
PRAGUE	$458
EURAIL FROM	$255

FARES BASED ON RT FROM BOSTON. TAXES NOT INCLUDED. STUDENT ID MAY BE REQUIRED. DEPARTURES THRU 3/31. FARES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
Council Travel
79 S. PLEASANT ST. 2ND FL
AMHERST, MA 01002
413-256-1261

RICHARD'S ARMY & NAVY
UP TO 50% OFF WINTER CLEARANCE
EVERYTHING BUT THE DOG!
Next to the Iron Horse
Center St.
Northampton
586-0275

AMHERST CINEMA
Downtown Amherst
PULP FICTION
7:30 PM Each Night
Students $4.00
253-5426

ARE YOU TIRED
of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

GREAT EXPERIENCE
GREAT PAY
ADVERTISING REPRESENTITIVES
Needed
Train
Immediately
The Collegian Advertising Staff is now looking for ambitious self starters who aren't afraid to "beat the pavement"
Applications are available at:
THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
Deadline: March 10, 1995
GREAT JOB!

The T.J. Maxx Corporate Executive Training Program
Impact The BOTTOM Line Of A $2.7 Billion Company.
T.J. Maxx, the leading off-price retailer in the nation, can offer you an exciting opportunity: to make an impact on our business -- as we train you for a professional merchandising career in our Corporate Executive Training Program.
You'll work in our fast-paced Home Office, the headquarters and support site for our more than 550 stores nationwide. Here, you will begin as a Merchandise Analyst directly affecting the merchandise mix in our stores by utilizing your:
• analytical ability
• strong problem-solving skills
• creativity
As you work your way through the career path, you will also benefit from the following:
• a variety of informative seminars
• valuable on-the-job training
• individualized mentor support
When you join T.J. Maxx, you'll receive a comprehensive benefits package with tuition assistance, and enjoy access to such amenities as on-site fitness and day-care facilities. Our Home Office is conveniently located off the Mass Pike.
Find out what the T.J. Maxx Corporate Executive Training Program can offer you. Stop by and meet our representative at our information session on Monday, February 27th from 7pm-9pm at the UMASS Campus Center 165-169.
We also offer paid summer internships.
We are an equal opportunity employer committed to workforce diversity.
T.J.maxx
© The TJX Cos. Inc., 1995
maxximize your potential

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gunley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Hoffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1934 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Finding boredom in church

I hope God isn't reading this.

I stopped going to church shortly before I came to college. I had no great revelation, awakening or denouncement of God. I just got fed up and bored with church. As far as I'm concerned, I can get more religion out of watching a sunrise or holding a new born baby than I can by going to church.

Dave Copeland

We've heard about the assorted problems contemporary religion is facing, but my problems with church are simpler. For example, take old people.

I have no problem with old people in general, in fact I think I might want to be one someday. But generally speaking, most of the people who go to church are old. This is because old people know that their time is coming soon, so they are trying to make one last impression on God. The thought of spending eternity in hell can be particularly frightening when the only pleasures left in life are sipping prune juice and playing Bingo.

So like I said, there are a lot of old people in church. Many of these old people have yet to discover that wondrous invention called Miracle Ear, so what sounds like a whisper to them is actually a loud confession to a severe bladder problem during a silent prayer.

I also have a problem with any organization that forces people to sing, even if these people have voices that sound like chainsaws. My family is no Partridge family, yet my parents are convinced that if they don't belt out the Doxology as loud as everybody else they will have a miserable afterlife.

Maybe that's why people call our house on Saturday nights to see if we're going to church the next day. Nobody wants to hear my Dad sing "Onward Christian Soldiers" on an otherwise glorious Sunday morning.

"Forgive me, father, for I have sinned. I have not been to church for three weeks."

"And why is that?"

"Well, to be honest, the Copelands were in church and I really can't stand hearing them sing."

"You are forgiven, my son."

If I were in charge of the church, I'd try to make it a bit more appealing to people my age. In a recent poll people my age said that the number one reason why they did not attend church is because they were too hung over on Sunday mornings.

And who wants to go church with a hangover, especially if they're going to make you drink wine and eat stale bread?

If I were in charge, the standard fare for communion would be changed from wine and bread to coffee and pain killers. If they're really hung up on keeping the alcohol as part of communion, then make it Bloody Mary's. But wine at 10 a.m. on a Sunday morning just doesn't sit too well.

And they should do something about the music in church. Speaking of hangovers, I'd take a loud and obnoxious jazz brunch over organs and clanging bells any day of the week, especially on a Sunday. Sunday mornings are the one time of the week where I can actually tolerate Muzak, and would actually prefer it over loud organs and my father's singing.

I shouldn't complain too much. I was brought up as a Protestant, which means that I am allowed to sin as much as anybody who doesn't believe in God, as long as I do not enjoy it. You Catholics have had it rough — CCD, eternity in hell if you even think about doing something wrong, and AIDS roulette every time you have sex.

But us Protestants got off easy. Sin, and the assurance that sin isn't all that bad, seems to be the backbone of our faith. So what if our church services are just as boring as everybody else's? We don't have that mandatory attendance rule that is punishable by excommunication.

Of course someday I'll get old and I'll have to start going to church again to make up for all the nasty things I have done. Actually, I'm kind of looking forward to "whispering" about my gall bladder removal during some kid's baptism.

Dave Copeland is a Collegian columnist.

Going through the motions

In my junior year of high school, my soccer team was pretty bad. With about five games to go, we all finally faced the reality that there would be no spot for us in Western Mass. postseason play. Our coach, whom we all loved and who was retiring after 25 years on the job, talked to us about the sad fact that we had to just do our best and play out the season. Now, in the home stretch of my college career, I find myself in a strangely similar position.

Caleb Cochran

As I was sitting in class just prior to writing this column, a million thoughts were running through my head, and none of them had to do with the novel that lay open in front of me. I thought about the deadline for this column. I thought about my plans of going to Rafters for the Temple game. Would I have time to eat before I went? What the hell would I write my column about? Why had I rushed to finish this book just so I could sit here and contribute nothing to the class?

It was then that I discovered the reality of my situation — I am playing out my college career in much the same way I played out my junior season of soccer.

My classes this semester seem so secondary compared with the other things I have to think about. Barring a major catastrophe, I'm going to graduate in May. And when that happens, I'm going to have a lot more important things to think about than my next HRTA quiz. Mentally, I'm already gone. I'm just going through the motions, and it's about time I faced it.

People have been asking me for a while what my feelings are about leaving UMass. I have an honest answer for them: I love it here and I'll be sorry to leave, but when I think about what it would be like to sit through another semester of classes, my stomach starts to turn.

I had planned to take the GREs in April. Forget it. I don't want to go to grad school, so I should stop pretending that I might go someday so I should probably take the test.

For some unknown reason, I find myself taking five classes this semester. I thought it was some kind of unwritten rule that you only had to take six credits in your last semester, but I guess I missed the briefing on how to go about doing this. I need 15 credits to get out of here, so I find myself with two classes in my major and three 100 level intro classes.

I don't think I could sit through one more semester of English classes if you paid me. But to tell you the truth, I don't think the problem lies in the classes. I could take a class on modern television sit-coms and probably find a reason to bitch about it.

The problem is that I'm coming to grips with the fact that college is over and I don't know what's going to happen next. No idea. I'd like to think that I'll be employed at this point next year, but who knows? I'd like to think I'll be doing something other than living at home and teeching off my parents, but again, who knows?

So, I'm left to ponder what I'll do over Spring Break, or what I'll do this weekend, or what I'll do tonight, conveniently putting off the thought of what I'm going to do for the rest of my life.

Last week, something happened which just about summed up how I'm feeling about college right about now. I wrote a paper for an English class which, admittedly, was not the best thing I've ever written. When I got the paper back, the professor commented that it seems like I have no idea of how to write an essay.

Well, since I'm an English major in my final semester of school, I could do nothing but throw up my hands. If I have learned by now, I have a feeling I'm never going to. Just pass me so I don't have to take a summer class.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance.

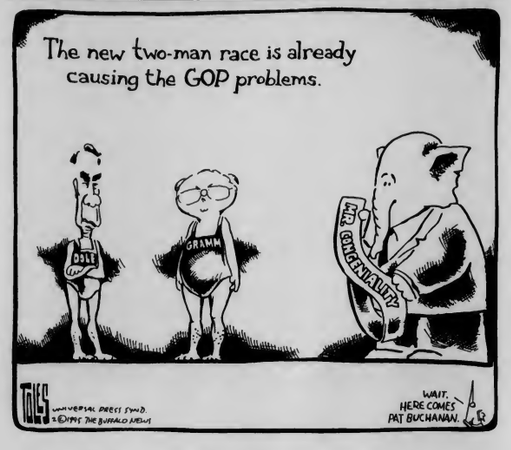
All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

ALMOST FINISHED, DUCKS?
COULD BE! NOT SURE! I'M JUST TAKING IT ONE STEP AT A TIME!
EL, THEY'RE ABOUT TO CLOSE...
THEY CAN'T CLOSE! I'M ON OFFICIAL BUSINESS!
WHAT SORT OF OFFICIAL BUSINESS, DUCKS?
WHAT'S IT LOOK LIKE? I'M DOWN-LOADING THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS!
ALL OF IT?
OF COURSE NOT. JUST THE BEST-SELLERS.

Opinion/Editorial



Evil beast of inflation awakens

Matt Wurtzel

The evil beast of inflation is once again rearing its ugly head upon us. Meanwhile, the president and Congress are proposing programs which the monster can feed upon, and criticizing the Federal Reserve for trying to tame the beast.

Recently the producer price index which is a gauge of prices that producers pay for resources began to rise in the month of January. Many economists believe that the producer price index is an indicator for the consumer price index which affects you and me. The consumer price index gauges the fluctuation in prices of consumer goods such as electronics, food and clothes.

Although the consumer price index did not rise in the month of January it is expected to rise in February because of the rise in the producer price index.

Despite the potential inflation, Congress and the president have proposed income tax cuts. Tax cuts traditionally increase inflationary pressures because consumers use tax cuts to buy more rather than save for a rainy day.

Meanwhile Alan Greenspan, the chairman of the Federal Reserve, has continually raised interest rates in fear of inflationary pressures. Greenspan is trying to slow the economy's growth, so the cancerous inflation will not swallow the economy up.

If the president and Congress want to help fight against the monster of inflation, they should leave the income tax alone. If they desire to cut taxes for political popularity, they should consider cutting or eliminating taxes on unearned income such as taxes on interest. The American public does not save enough of their income, and cutting out taxes on unearned income may foster a greater interest in savings rather then spending.

However, the president and Congress are interested in doing what is currently politically popular, rather than what is good for the economy. Although tax cuts may be popular today, the cuts may lead to unpopular outcomes in the future which may or may not be foreseen. The income tax cut's effects seem obvious to economists, and the effects could be disastrous.

The Federal Reserve is an economic body which is fairly autonomous from the rest of the government. Greenspan does not have to answer to an angry public if he does what seems unpopular, so he is free to do what is economically sound unlike the meddlesome Congress and presidency.

The government should take the lead of the Federal Reserve rather than taking the adversarial role. So long as the government's economic policy is counter to the Federal Reserve's policy, the economy will see rocky roads. The government should get out of the bed of the inflation monster, and assist the Federal Reserve in its efforts to again tame the beast.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Not impressed by Hooker

To the Editor:

President Hooker spoke at the faculty senate meeting yesterday. He is a mouth. The best example of a teflon politician that I have seen in my limited political experience. He has this plan for the public university system in Massachusetts that does not involve getting more money from the legislature. He knows there is not the funding to make public education accessible and competitive — and he is not putting together a democratic movement to get money.

He wants to cut $20 million out of the budget through layoffs and reorganizing. Just like every other large institution in capitalist society — the University should be leaner, leaner and meaner. They all it fitness. Fitness for the institution means laying people off.

Hooker wants to bring in more private funds. He wants us to believe that this is just a terrific idea with no down side. What makes this institution public is that it is supported by public funds. It is accountable only to the democracy. That is the point of public institutions. What if the state legislature was short on funds and solicited money from General Electric to pay the electric bill for the state house? Wouldn't that defeat the point of separating the public from the private?

Hooker is passing all of the important decisions that come with a shortage of funds, that he failed to get, to the faculty and individual campuses. This is called passing the buck, but it is more significant than that. UMass will be fighting with the other universities for funds. There will be no unity between us with which we can confront the legislature ourselves. He is dismantling us as a political force. Hooker is dividing the community by not taking responsibility for the money that he failed to get.

This is insane. Hooker is scum and is going to screw us over. He will screw all of us — unless we refuse to fight among one another and dedicate ourselves to the cause of a truly public and accessible education.

Kenneth A. Miller
Alliance for Student Power

Groups deserve praise for work

To the editor:

The Campus Beautification Committee would like to thank all students, faculty and staff who volunteered their time and energy for the "Have a Heart, Lend a Hand" project on Feb. 14 and 15.

During the two days, areas in Bartlett Hall, Hasbrouck Lab and the Worcester Dining Commons were cleaned and painted.

A special thank you to Al Potter and members of the Physical Plant, Mike Hodges and members of the Minuteman football team, George Parks and members of the Minutcman marching band, and Adam Zimmer and members of ZBT fraternity for their hard work and enthusiasm on behalf of the University.

Future plans are underway for upcoming projects and we look forward to more campus-wide participation from the community.

Felice Cohen
for the Campus Beautification Committee

Senator supports student test drive

To the editor:

I am writing in support of Kaplan's national student test drive on Feb. 25.

It is crucial to the success of the United States that the high quality of our educational system is maintained and improved. Elementary, secondary and higher education institutions train, inspire and challenge our youth to become leaders in the community through their academic and extra-curricular activities. In turn, students must meet the educational challenges in front of them. I urge each student to regularly access your academic standing and continuously work to enhance your overall abilities. Ultimately, it is only through the success of our students that the United States will continue to prosper.

I wish you and all your students every success in all your endeavors.

Massachusetts Senator
Edward M. Kennedy

Chaplain concerned about protest

To the editor:

I am a member of InterVarsity Christian Fellowship and a University Chaplain. I am writing to express my concern regarding the Dining Commons incident and the subsequent events. Two things about the situation concern me. First, I am dumbfounded that the altercation could have taken place at all. I certainly understand the feeling of outrage, anger and frustration the incident has left in its wake. As a White male, I am constantly amazed at the level of ignorance and insensitivity displayed by my Anglo peers, (and by myself, for that matter). The second thing, which concerns me just as much, is that our reaction to it will be only that: a reaction. I understand the desire to see the employee terminated immediately. But I fear this will accomplish little beyond soothing anger and outrage. What is our long-term strategy?

The slur that escaped the lips of the employee not only indicts her, but the society that allowed her to think so little of the old "nursery rhyme." Why did this woman not learn that the rhyme speaks of a not so distant reality of lynchings and perverted justice? Why did I not learn such things until I sought them out? Have we not learned that it takes education, time and commitment to combat racism meaningfully? It is not a disease of the mouth or fist, but a disease of the heart. If we close all the mouths and handcuff all the fists, we have not combated racism, we have not changed people's hearts. Let us not simply terminate this woman. Let us fight against the disease.

We in InterVarsity Christian Fellowship are committed to education and reconciliation. We stand not only against racism, but for education and reconciliation. Will you stand with us?

Jim Martin
University Chaplain

Multicultural Affairs

Friday, February 24, 1995

Symposium honors life of acclaimed Black leader

By Michael Aleo
Collegian Correspondent

Approximately 50 students, faculty and community members were witness to a powerful symposium yesterday commemorating the life of W.E.B. Du Bois. That date also marked the 127th anniversary of his birth. Program Coordinator Vanessa Harris introduced and welcomed the audience to the event.

The occasion began with a presentation from Professor David Du Bois of the Afro-American Studies and Journalism Departments, son of the late W.E.B. Du Bois. David shared with the audience the lessons and principles which he wrought from his father.

"I have learned," he said, "the importance of total commitment to truth and to service of humankind. Our strength lies in our people ... our ordinary citizens." He reinforced his father's belief in the necessity of education and the need for "global consciousness." Finally, he shared his belief in "the inevitability of victory; of victory over oppression."

Professor William Strickland, also of Afro-American Studies, took to the podium in the wake of David Du Bois. With sharpness and eloquence, Strickland offered a brief, but profound, introduction to the life of Du Bois. "How do we measure the man?" he asked.

Strickland proceeded on, citing many of the numerous organizations with which Du Bois worked, such as the NAACP and Pan African Congress. He also referred to, and quoted from, several of the seemingly endless written works of Du Bois.

Strickland would not let the audience forget that all of the great accomplishments of Du Bois were made in the face of great obstacles and fierce opposition. "It must be understood," he said, "[that] Du Bois felt more of a human being, more honored, more free, in Germany than he did in the United States of America."

Du Bois did not let that daunt him though According to Strickland, "he believed in work ... in sacrifice for a cause ... The morality of people at their best ... that was his north star." And such was the integrity, will and strength of W.E.B. Du Bois that Strickland expounded upon.

Michael Tjivikua Ph.D., candidate in International Education, followed with a reading from a personal memoir of Du Bois, written on the evening of his twenty-fifth birthday.

"This I do know: be the truth what it may, I will seek it on the pure assumption that it is worth seeking," read Tjivikua.

Next, Natasha Springer went on to sing, "the Song of the Sparrows." As the loud applause following the song came to a close, Student Trustee Al Lizana addressed the audience and the campus community. He stressed the need to raise the quality of the University library to a statute approaching that of the character of the man after which the building now has the privilege to be named.

The crowd gave applause of recognition and agreement to Lizana as Shomwa Shamapande, President of the Black Student Union rose to make closing remarks. Shamapande saw Du Bois as "an example of what we all wish to be." He saw him as a "freedom fighter" and as "a testimony of inspiration." Shamapande stated his belief in that today's younger generations must share in Du Bois's convictions towards education and growth.

A decorative plaque was then presented by Shyamala Ivatury of the Graduate Student Senate for the newly named W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

In conclusion, Harris invited Chancellor David K. Scott to make a statement. Scott appreciated the offer and immediately wished to thank the student body. "It was the students who had the vision ... [and] the energy to bring this about," Scott said.

Scott then ended comically, but sincerely: "May God bless the W.E.B. DuBois Library and all who learn in it," he said.

Finally, the audience then rose to join Springer in singing the National Negro Hymn (Lift Every Voice and Sing).

JUAN JOSE CHACON QUIROS DE QUETZACOATL / COLLEGIAN

Natasha Springer, professors David DuBois and William Strickland, and Michael Tjivikua (from left to right) all came together to sing the National Negro Hymn.

NATIONAL NEGRO HYMN
(Lift Every Voice and Sing)

Lift every voice and sing
Till earth and heaven ring,
Ring with the harmonies of liberty
Let our rejoicing rise,
High as the listening skies
Let it resound loud as the rolling sea.
Sing a Song, full of faith that the dark past has taught us
Sing a Song, full of hope that the present has brought us.
Facing the rising sun, of the new day begun,
Let us march on till victory is won.

Stony the road we trod,
Bitter the chast'ning rod.
Felt in the days when hope unborn had died;
Yet with as steady beat,
Have not our weary feet,
Come to the place for which our fathers sighed?
We have come over a way that with tears has been watered.
We have come, treading our path thro' the blood of the slaughtered,
Out from the gloomy past,
Till now we stand at last,
Where the white gleam of our bright star is cast.

God our weary years, God of our silent tears;
Thou who has brought us thus far an the way.
Thou who has by thy might
Lead us into the light,
Keep us forever in the path we pray,
Lest our feet stray from the place our God where we met Thee,
Lest our hearts, drunk with the wine of the world we forget Thee
Shadowed beneath Thy hand, may we forever stand.
True to our God.
True to our native land.

A call for united, strong voice: great need is imminent

Charles Lenchner

At a recent retreat for campus political activists, students talked about ways to fight the Republican Contract with America. Educated readers already know why the contract is so bad: it calls for a reduction in financial aid for students, dismantling environmental protections, and assaults on the poor and on women's rights.

These measures harm the least empowered sectors of our society the most, and thus targets those whom America has failed and assigns them blame and punishment.

The University Conversion Project organized this retreat to discuss the ways that students can organize against the far right agenda. The most important point was that the different political forces on campuses will have to work together, in many cases for the first time.

Historically, organizations of White liberals and progressives and groups of ethnic and racial groups have had rocky relationships. For example, when freedom for South Africa was a hot issue on campus, some Black activists heard insensitive Whites accuse them of not really working for that issue, even when that was not the case. White leftists often dominated movements, even when the groundwork was laid by students of color. This process created mutual suspicion that still exists on most campuses today.

Another bone of contention has been the perception of White activists that students should unite around ideas and ideologies, while students of color often choose to unite around race. Nonetheless, the current fragmentation of student politics, nationally and on the University of Massachusetts' Amherst campus, can only assist the conservatives as they seek to destroy the social net of this country, and create a future as bleak as a Dickens novel. Realizing this, students in California and elsewhere have formed campus wide coalitions to fight Proposition 187 (the new law denying education and health services to some immigrants, and fostering a climate of fear for all people of color.)

These new coalitions are bringing together a spectrum of people and groups, who understand that the fightback against racist laws and public opinion begins with the process of uniting with allies. Since last December, there have been hunger strikes, protests, petition signings and guerrilla theater events all across the country. The one major protest in the five college area was weak by comparison: very little outreach was done, student governments were not involved, and most of the participation was from the private schools, instead of from UMass.

We don't have the luxury of letting student activists rule their little fiefdoms to no effect. We either do outreach, collectively, to build up a movement, or we continue to feel self-righteous until the bitter end. If progressives can learn from the errors of the past, and students of color can understand the value of multi-racial coalitions, then we can proudly rejoin the ranks or fighting student bodies. This effort requires that women's rights advocates, groups representing students of colors, the Student Government, and friendly faculty and staff lay aside some of their differences and attempt to get it together.

The Student Government Association and the Student Senate have proven to be a political territory marked by tolerance, high participation of both progressives and students color, and activism.

If that potential for progress is not used in overtly political ways to join the student fightback against the right– wingers, then principled students will find other avenues for meaningful participation. We are now in a moment of crisis, and good people cannot stand idly by.

March 29th is the national day of student action against the Republican Contract on America, organized by the University Conversion Project. For more information, call 546-3714.

Charles Lenchner is a UMass student.

Student conference attempts to expose Asian troubles

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Correspondent

New York. Philly. Boston ...

"Hunched in the shadows of this glitz and glamour is the other side of Asian America; an urban poor suffering from substandard housing, health care deprivation, employment discrimination, inaccessibility to basic education, and racially motivated violence. These Asian Pacific Islanders of inner- city America are in dire need and still very much visible," states a pamphlet from the 17th annual Eastern Coast Asian Student Union (ECASU) conference.

News Analysis

They tried. They made an honest and straightforward attempt to address issues that most Asian–American college students don't see or care to see. It took place at Duke University, Durham, N.C., Feb. 17– 19, when ECASU held its 17th annual conference. Students from universities all across the east coast were in attendance, including contingent from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

The East Coast Asian Student Union, founded in 1977, is the oldest and largest network of Asian Pacific American students in the United States. The goals of ECASU are to promote a sense of unity among Asian Pacific Americans, build and strengthen Asian Pacific American student organizations and networks, and fight for the equality of Asian Pacific Americans in the United States.

This year's Conference theme "Exposing the plight of Asian Pacific Americans in our nation's inner cities," began with a kick-off reception. "Yellow Peril," an Asian American rap duo, provided not only entertainment; this proved that Asians can rap, but can also give a blunt and brilliantly honest commentary on the Asian and Asian American social and political condition. "Wake up Connie Chung. Wake up Pat Morita ..." were just one of the many memorable chants that reverberated across the reception hall.

The next day was complete with informative speakers, discussions and workshops. The morning consisted of speakers such as J.D. Hokoyama, Executive Director of the Leadership Education for Asian Pacifics, INC. (LEAP), Ram Yoshino Uppuluri, a reporter for The Tennesseean and a recent fourth–place runner up for Congress in the Third Congressional District of Tennessee, and Shawn Wong, a novelist and professional drag racer.

Following the opening speakers, a forum was held on the new exclusion laws. Legislation such as the Wards Cove Act and Proposition 187, affects not only illegal immigrants, but all people of color in the United States.

The body of the conference consisted of numerous workshops ranging from such topics as: Anti–Asian Violence, Asian–American Political Participation, The Asian "penis myth" and other stereotypes, The South Asian American experience, Asian Americans in the Labor Movements, Asian American Literature and Writers' Workshop, Defining Asian American Studies on college campuses, The Ghettoization of Asian immigrants, Multiculturalism and the Asian American Movement, Contemporary Asian–Black Race Relations, and many more.

The day ended with a personal and provocative portrayal of the Asian American youth experience through theater. Hereandnow, an Asian American theater company that tours nationally to colleges and universities throughout the United States. Bringing the story of Asian American life from and through the eyes of a younger generation, they were the closing act to the day's events. The cast, made up primarily of college students in the southern California area shared their experiences through their dialogue, ethereal music, and personal narratives.

They brought the audience to life, the performance evoked painful as well as cherished memories of growing up, assimilation issues through the form of "ASIAN MAN" an Asian assimilation superhero, and a wonderful romantic interlude, "proving that Asians do have sex."

To quote a comment that someone from the audience shared, "I just want to say, you guys make me and the rest of us proud to be Asian."

ECASU was an "experience" to say the least. It was the first time a Northerner like me entered the real "south". I realized that there is truly a tremendous amount of power and strength within the Asian American community. We are building networks, and friendships. We are addressing issues that needed to be addressed. We are trying to look beyond the labels that society loves to strangle us with, like "The Model Minority", and see the side of Asian America that is in poverty, on welfare, and in street gangs.

However, the question, "so what can we do as a collective force; after we go home to our respective colleges?" was never answered. Three days included: One real day of content, three 20–30 minute speakers, and two one–hour workshops. The time was too short. It was hard to try to come up with an action plan, and to get students to be motivated enough to follow through.

It was hard because the majority of the students that attended this conference, came from private universities, with their own personal agendas. Issues of our inner cities are important, but when your daily life doesn't resemble the issues discussed, you "tune–out" once you leave the conference. There seemed to be no real collective identity in the eyes of the participants. You can't reach those who don't care. I'm so lucky to have made it into higher education, and to have had the opportunity to attend such a conference. But the bottom line is, more needs to be done. We who are lucky, need to realize that out there, in the real world, there are people just like us, who are suffering. People with our skin color, our languages, and our religions.

The ECASU conference this year made a commendable attempt to deal with these pressing issues. I only hope that those that attended left with an equal amount of passion for activism in their hearts, as they did with passions for particular individuals that they met while they were there.

UM theater group works to get minorities in the act

By Lucy Mae San Pablo Burns
Special to the Collegian

In November 1994, New WORLD Theater received a Lila Wallace–Reader's Digest Fund Arts Program grant of $120,000 to advance the work of one UMass' special programs, the Latin American Theater Project (LATP). New WORLD Theater (NWT) was one of two national recipients of this highly competitive and prestigious award. The Lila Wallace Foundation supports organizations that enhance the cultural life of communities and that encourage people to make arts an active part of their everyday lives.

The LATP goals are to create and/or strengthen meaningful and practical collaborative partnerships with community–based organizations who share the vision of using theater as a tool to reflect, bring together, and stimulate our communities; share with our artistic community the ideas and methods of professional Latino theaters who work from community–oriented models; and explore ways in which New WORLD Theater can facilitate increased Latino theater activity, through workshops, productions, and co–presentations in a variety of traditional and non–traditional venues.

In January 1994, NWT launched an accelerated, highly focused outreach and audience development plan to address the aforementioned goals. LATP coordinators Joshua Fontanez and Norma Rivera, as well as artistic director Roberta Uno, began by approaching community organizations and members in Northampton, Holyoke and Springfield who were interested in becoming partners with NWT to promote Latino theater in the region.

In addition to establishing partners in the community, NWT identified professional artist–partners who have strong backgrounds in theater derived from or related to a strong community base. The two artist–partner groups are Grupo Bridges, a New York–based theater that uses collective creation methods involving music, comedy, and visual spectacle; and El Centro Su Teatro, a Denver–based Chicano company whose works ranges from drama to comedy, based in Chicano theater aesthetics. The two groups spent two–day mini–residencies in the Holyoke and Springfield communities this year. They introduced their work to the communities, involved the participants in active theater workshops and engaged in discussions with the community members.

Like the majority of the Latino population of Western Massachusetts, Grupo Bridges members are primarily of Caribbean, specifically Puerto Rican, descent. In contrast, El Centro Su Teatro is a Chicano theater. Artistic director Anthony Garcia sees this difference as one of the compelling aspects of the collaboration: "We see this project as an important intracultural exchange as Latinos. As Chicanos we don't come from an immigrant experience. this is part of the aesthetic we bring. Nonetheless, we are all Latino — we look forward to exploring our shared and different experiences of cultural identity."

Joshua Fontanez will begin as full–time coordinator of the project in May. He reflects, "It's great that the Lila Wallace foundation and Arts Presenters recognize the worth and value of this project. As a Puerto Rican who grew up in Springfield, I know how important it is for our communities to have our culture embraced by the arts. I look forward to working to bring our community together with the artistic partners."

Although the project year begins in May, NWT outreach staff — Danny Rivera and Chandra Hardy — will serve as liaisons for NWT, the community and artist–partners this spring.

For further information on the Lila Wallace–Reader's Digest Fund Arts Partners Program grant and the groups and activities planned, please contact the New WORLD Theater at 545–1972.

Arts & Living

Acclaimed string quartets come to Bowker

Leading musicians to combine talents

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The Fine Arts Center is presenting two of the nation's finest leading string quartets Feb. 26 at 2 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium. The Alexander String Quartet hailing from San Francisco and the Angeles String Quartet from Los Angeles will meld together, combining style and sound into a unique collaborative performance.

The afternoon will open up with the Alexander String Quartet performing Mozart's "Quartet in F flat major, K. 248." Mozart, who studied under the great composer Haydn, wrote a piece complex in nature, motion and tempo that the group will be able to play effortlessly. This will be followed by the Angeles String Quartet who will follow in their own arresting style with Korngold's "Quartet No. 3, Op. 34," a piece that begins slowly and accumulates into a fast paced "Allegro" finale.

COURTESY PATRICIA RIS

The Alexander Quartet and the Angeles Quartet will combine talents for a performance at Bowker.

After a brief intermission the two quartets will combine forces for Shostakovich's "Two Piece for String Octet, Op. 11." Shostakovich is a fairly modern composer whose works were created during the turn of the century. This is followed by Mendelssohn's "Octet in E-flat major, Op. 2," a four movement long octet guaranteed to test the strengths of the two string quartet's cooperation skills.

The Alexander String Quartet is famous for its innovative playing and fresh perspective on the classics. In 1992 they acquired a new first violinist, Ge-fang Yang who enhanced the group's playing, making them "sound richer and more focused then ever" according to the San Francisco Chronicle. They have performed at the Lincoln, the Metropolitan Muscum of Art, Merkan Hall in New York, Jordan Hall in Boston and the Library of Congress in addition to tours all over Europe.

The Angeles String Quartet was put together in 1988 when four of L.A.'s finest string players were asked to play together for a one-time performance.

The Los Angeles Times hailed the quartet in glowing terms saying, "This ensemble seems to have brought itself to an artistic plateau toward which many ensembles can only aspire."

The group has done extensive touring in the United States and Canada and has played in summer festivals such as the Music Guild, Coleman Chamber Concerts, Music in Historic Sites and at the University of California in Los Angeles.

Tickets for the performance are $25 and $18 with half- price tickets for Five College Students; children 16 and under $10. For tickets or information call 545-2511. Bowker Auditorium is accessible to the physically challenged. The performance is funded in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

All natural Moby talks about life, whales & techno

By Karen Matthews
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The artist currently known as Moby was looking at his shoes, two-tone sneakers made of something that could have come from a cow.

"These are fake suede," he said. "At least, that's what everyone in the shoe store told me. I asked everybody. I was like, 'Are you sure they're fake suede?' 'Yeah, they're fake suede.' 'Is the manager here?' And the manager told me they were fake suede."

Moby doesn't wear leather. He doesn't drink, smoke or drive a car. He doesn't eat animal products. He recycles. He hates consumer culture — not that he can avoid being part of it, when he's about to release his first full-length album on a major label.

"It's really difficult trying to maintain perfect standards in a flawed, imperfect world," he said.

Moby is known as a techno-rave artist, but his new album, Everything Is Wrong, due out in March on Elektra, hopscotches between punk, metal, Jamaican dancehall and half a dozen other musical genres.

"I think it's just as much a classical record as it is a dance record," he said. "I think the only unifying element to everything is that it all has this, sort of like, emotional quality to it."

The artist was interviewed in his studio in a brick building in Manhattan's Little Italy. The narrow room was crammed with electronic equipment — the list of machines on Moby's album credits is a long one — and containers of soy milk and organic peanut butter gave it a lived-in look.

Baggy jeans and a T-shirt hung from the 29-year-old's thin frame, and a stubble of hair covered his head and face. The face, which he obligingly contorted into odd expressions for a photographer, is an arresting one: bulbous forehead, prominent ears.

Moby came by his name honestly. He is a great-great-great-nephew of the author Herman Melville's, born Richard Melville Hall. The novel Moby Dick is one of Melville's greatest works.

"Moby is my nickname that I was given because my mother thought that Richard was too big a name for a teeny little baby. And my father said, same where Berg works) and has Berg to do her bidding, she owns Beston — but it's not exactly a prize. She wants out, especially when her husband finds out where she is, dispatching two private investigators to keep an eye on her. She takes care of them (and boy does she ever), but there's still the problem of her increasingly desperate husband. And then a plan begins to form...

Turn to MOBY, page 7

Film noir legacy reborn in 'The Last Seduction'

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

THE LAST SEDUCTION
Directed by John Dahl
with Linda Fiorentino, Peter Berg
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

Film noir has always been a tough cookie to crack, film- wise. It is just a series of devices — rain-slicked streets, tough-tawkin' dames, hard-boiled private dicks? Or is it a shadowy attitude, a devious state of mind? The addition of the term neo noir has done nothing to clear things up. In fact, critical hyperbole (myself included) is guilty of throwing around the term to mean any number of vaguely related filmic notions.

So then, describing the crafty puzzler The Last Seduction as an intriguing example of successful neo noir seems a bit disingenuous. But it is. Perversely clever with a delicious mean streak, Seduction is a thriller that outdoes Pulp Fiction for sheer noir cheekiness (it's Tarantino without the tired munologues and pseudo-philosophical baggage). It's the kind of film that balances — precariously — on the fears and anxieties of its male characters, while the dangerous woman who pulls the strings sits fearlessly, recklessly and resolutely above (and under) it all.

Our, er, heroine, played by Linda Fiorentino (remember Vision Quest?), splits with $700,000 in cash from a drug deal, she also splits from her partner in crime and husband (Bill Pullman) — after he slaps her when she calls him an idiot. Hell hath no fury, indeed.

En route from New York City to Chicago, Fiorentino gets stuck in the small, upper New York town of Beston because hubby has figured out her plans, he just doesn't know where she is. Strolling into the town bar, an apocalyptic little place called Ray's, she meets a smooth-talking townie (Peter Berg) who comes on to her. Fiorentino soon puts him in his place, grabbing his crotch and probing his sexual history. A few minutes later, they're in the back of her Jeep. He's kind of stupid, and of course, she likes that in a man.

Although she gets herself set-up at a local business (the

One of Seduction's chief pleasures is not only watching how the story plays out — the deceptions, double-crossing and secrets revealed — but also how gleefully writer Steve Barancik and director John Dahl relish the indulgence. This is spiky, amoral fun — where men are weak/dumb/sex objects and the women (or should I say, Woman) is the smart, tough one. You want her to succeed, to go that one step further. In many ways, despite her endlessly cunning nature, she's the most positive character in the film. Disturbed, yes ... but nobody's fool. No one screws with her, unless she wants them to. And that's enough, nowadays, to matter.

Dahl has been making quite a name for himself, single- handedly rescuing the neo noir from becoming a fancier name for the dubious cable "erotic thrillers." It is ironic then, that Dahl got his start with the cable airings of Kill Me Again (1989), Red Rock West (1993) and last year's The Last Seduction. But while Kill Me Again and the more popular Red Rock West had their share of plot-twists and betrayals, the characters always seem to get lost in the mechanization s of the convoluted story.

Not so with Seduction, which brings a new maturity to Dahl's work, and signals a deeper understanding of what made the film noirs of the '40s and '50s so memorable. It's not so much in crafting some dizzying plot twists or terse dialogue, but in showing how the insecurities of these characters (mostly male) manifested themselves in these demonic portrayals of (always) femme fatales leading the "heroes" down a dangerous path of self-destruction.

Here's where the distinction lies between Fiorentino's value as

Turn to LAST SEDUCTION, page 7

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 4 (413) 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
THE WALKING DEAD R
LEGENDS OF THE FALL R
HEAVY WEIGHTS PG-13
WITH OR WITHOUT YOU R
HAMPSHIRE 6 (413) 586-0555
Call Theatre For Showtimes
BEAUTY AND THE BEAST PG
THE QUICK AND THE DEAD R
TIME TO KILL R
WHITE SQUALL PG
SEVEN (BRAND NEW) PG-13
JUDGE DREDD R

OOPS! Free Loaner Cars
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Direct Insurance Billing
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
CARSTAR Collision Repair Centers
Where America goes for Quality Collision Repairs
North Amherst CARSTAR 79 Old Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Road, Northampton, MA 586-4444

Begin Your Career Search By Looking For A Seat.
ATTEND OUR CAREER SEMINAR AND JOIN A WINNING TEAM.
John Hancock, an industry leader, takes pride in helping people realize their goals. As the Official Life Insurance Sponsor of the 1994/96 Olympic Teams, we're looking for hard-working, self-motivated individuals to join our team. You'll receive outstanding support and products. Competitive compensation. And the opportunity to train with some of the best in the industry.
February 28, 7pm
at John Hancock Financial Services
330 Whitney Avenue
Holyoke, MA
Call early to make reservations, as seating is limited.
Michael Shaldone
Associate Manager
1-800-774-6354 Ext. 119
John Hancock
OFFICIAL LIFE INSURANCE SPONSORS 1994/1996 U.S. OLYMPIC TEAMS
John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company and affiliated companies Boston, MA 02117. An equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

Collegian Graphics
We're Up All Night
putting together New England's oldest daily college newspaper

Lincoln Real Estate
Go Where the Action is! HOUSE ISLAND
Apartment Rentals
25 N. Pleasant St.
253-7879

great research...
Kaplan spends over $3 million annually developing products and researching the tests. We've proved that we know the tests inside out.
LSAT In 1992, Kaplan predicted the elimination of an LSAT question type and changed our course in anticipation of the change.
GRE In 1993, the ETS was forced to withdraw a GRE question type because Kaplan "broke the code."
GMAT In 1994, Kaplan research brought to light security flaws in the computer-based GRE tests. As a result, the ETS temporarily pulled the test.
MCAT
SAT
great results.
Kaplan's expertise translates into higher scores and greater confidence for our students. Put our research to work for you on test day.
1-800-KAP-TEST
get a higher score
KAPLAN

KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS
COMPLETE CROSS COUNTRY SKI PACKAGES $79.99
ELAN SRC 797 SKI Intermediate Ski $129.99 $300 Value
COMPLETE DOWNHILL PACKAGES STARTING AT $239.99
President's Day SKI & HOCKEY SALE!
50% OFF OUR ALREADY LOW PRICE All Ski Clothing & Accessories
UP TO 70% OFF LIST PRICE ON ALL SKI EQUIPMENT
GEZE GS7 Binding $49.99 $100 Value
ITECH TH 50 Helmet With Cage $39.99 $60 Value
ALL HOCKEY STICKS, SKATES & EQUIPMENT UP TO 50% OFF
Save 20%-50% On A Great Selection Of Athletic Shoes From Nike, Reebok, Converse, Asics, Fila, Adidas, and More!
Air Mode Leather $69.99 $100 Value
KLEIN'S ALL★SPORTS

TRAVEL SMART! FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $122 $244
PARIS $199 $398
AMSTERDAM $201 $402
SAN JOSE COSTA RICA $238 $476
TOKYO $774
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-Immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420
800-272-9676 in NYC

Jerky Boys ruin promising tunes with bad pranks

By Martyn Bone
Collegian Staff

THE JERKY BOYS SOUNDTRACK
Various Artists
Atlantic Records

The Jerky Boys have already had a revolutionary impact on the history of rock and roll, pioneering the concept of spoken word armchair anarchy. The product of this latest unholy alliance between movies, music and most amusing prank phone calls is The Jerky Boys film and this accompanying soundtrack. By all accounts, the film is awful — but what of the album?

It's not a promising start when Jerky Johnny Brennan contributes "Accordions and Keyboards." Unfortunately, musical instruments are conspicuous by their absence. This is another tuneless phone call which, like all the Jerky Boys' offerings, attains an oxymoronic outstanding quality in the very mediocrity of its humor — i.e., it is utterly unfunny, and you just have to wonder — why are these people famous?

But, this is a film soundtrack, so we get proper musical umises. Collective Soul's "Gel" is essentially fine, but this is followed by Green Day with "Two Thousand Miles Away," who are less the Sex Pistols than the Masturbation Pistols — the abuse, anarchy and sensation of punk being reduced to the self-abuse they are so fond of writing songs about.

More interesting is the slinky style, replete with self- female harmonies, of Coolio and the 40 Thievz' "Dial A Jam," until it is spoiled by samples of the Jerky Boys, gate- crashing the groove with all the grace of Newt Gingrich's mother invading the White House. The telephone theme is tenuously continued by L7's enjoyable cover of "Hangin' on the Telephone." However, the scourge of novelty-songs-on- film-soundtracks is perpetuated by Welsh wizard Tom Jones' cover of Lenny Kravitz's "Are You Gonna Go My Way," and Helmet's Black Sabbath remake, "Symptom of the Universe."

House of Pain's "Beef Jerky" is a tepid piece of rap/hip- hop, whereas the Beastie Boys augmenting their DJ Hurricane on "Four Fly Guys" show Green Day how to infuse the white trash ethic with some style. Perhaps the most unassuming, unrefined nugget is the always pleasant Superchunk's "Shallow End."

The album ends with a "bonus track," The Jerky Boys' "Sick As A Dog," which encapsulates all that is wrong with trying to fuse comedy and rock and roll — scatological humor and repetitive samples dragged over an annoying riff. What the better of these bands are doing associating themselves with the Jerky Boys is perplexing. Ignore this, buy the artists' own albums, and consign the Jerky Boys to the hell of the wannabe film star funnymen where they belong. Answering customer enquiries for AT&T sounds about right. D-

The Film Critic positions have been filled.
Jon Lupo and the Collegian Arts & Living section would like to thank all those who took the time to apply.

Liner Notes predicts Grammy Awards outcome

With the 37th Annual Grammy Awards ceremony coming up on Wednesday, the buzz of who's going to walk away with what has grown louder than ever. Of course the Grammys' track record hasn't always been so good — often giving the awards to the most obvious, or "safest" choice, but then again, it's possible that they may throw a curve ball or two.

Regardless of what the Academy may, or may not decide, we here would like to give our predictions of who should (and who probably will) receive Grammys in certain categories.

Record of the Year: "I'll Make Love To You," by Boyz II Men. The Boyz will probably walk away with this one, considering that every song they put out climbs its way to the top of the charts and stays perched there for what seems like an eternity. "Streets Of Philadelphia," by Bruce Springsteen is also a contender, but it is more likely to pick up awards in the zillion other categories that it is nominated in.

Album of the Year: This is probably the sorriest category of the year. With nominees ranging from Tony Bennett's MTV Unplugged to Eric Clapton's From The Cradle (which is just an album full of covers!), Album of the Year is more of a joke than anything else. It really is hard to predict who will win in this group of musical lame-os, but put bets on Clapton — he's old and established — two traits that have served prior Grammy nominees well.

Song of the Year: This most likely is the category that Bruce Springsteen will walk away with. "Streets Of Philadelphia" is getting a tad on the old side, but it's coming off the soundtrack to a popular movie and has plenty of "social message" working in its favor. It's really too bad considering it's by far one of The Boss' weakest efforts.

Best New Artist: While it would be nice to see mega-platinum punks Green Day (who have actually been around for close to six years) steal the prize, they are probably a little too juvenile and rowdy for the Grammys tastes. Expect either Sheryl Crow or Counting Crows, whose emotional, yet lukewarm, songs are just the musical fodder the Grammys love. Keep in mind that Ace Of Base are also nominated — God help us all.

Best Rock Vocal Performance, Male: If Beck doesn't get this one, for "Loser," it will be a serious injustice. The young slacker is the only nominee in this category that even remotely hints at any originality (except for Neil Young, who has put out some great songs in the past year, but unfortunately was nominated for his worst, "Philadelphia"). Mr. Beck is up against Peter Gabriel's live version of "Red Rain," a song that is centuries old, Bruce Springsteen's "Streets Of Philadelphia," and a Van Morrison medley. Yawn.

Best Rock Vocal Performance, Female: Liz Phair. Period. Phair's stunning debut Exile In Guyville went unnoticed by the Academy, making it a shame if the wah- drenched single, "Supernova," from her follow-up album Supernova also gets overlooked. The problem is that Phair has stiff competition from Melissa Etheridge, who is nominated for her single "Come To My Window." Etheridge emerged from the barren land of critical praise into the mainstream and had her biggest year ever. Her brash style of rock is just the thing the Academy looks for in a performer. Tough call.

Liner Notes compiled by Matt Audette and Justin Faerber

Best Rock Song: This could be the Grammys' big chance to actually pick the most deserving song of the year. The nomination of Nirvana's "All Apologies" in this category represents the first time in recent memory that the Academy has gone so far as to even nominate what is probably the best single of the year. They've come this close, now let's just hope they don't blow it. Unfortunately, even if Nirvana does win, it will probably be for all the wrong reasons. If this nomination truly didn't have anything to do with Kurt Cobain's suicide, why didn't it win in 1993, the year it was released?

Best Rock Album: The incessant retro trend rears its ugly in this category. With the exception of R.E.M.'s Monster, this year's nominations are dominated exclusively by '70s greats (The Rolling Stones, Neil Young) and bands who try desperately to emulate them (Pearl Jam, Soundgarden). If there's any integrity in this world, Michael Stipe and company will get the Grammy for this one. Don't count on it.

Best Metal Performance: Here is a category where little to no thought was put into. It seems like the Academy was a little hard up for nominees. Anthrax was nominated for a live version of their lovely duet with Public Enemy, "Bring The Noise" — a song that is about four years old. Megadeth was nominated for a song that appeared on the Beavis And Butt-head Experience. Enough said. So it looks as if the competition will between Pantera (too heavy), Rollins Band (too annoying) and Soundgarden (bingo!).

Best Alternative Music Performance: While it's no secret that the tired label "alternative" has long since lost any real meaning, this year's nominees in the category should serve as a vivid illustration of just how worthless the term has become. What is the only thing that Green Day, Sarah McLachlan and Nine Inch Nails have in common? How about the fact that they're all immensely successful, multi-platinum selling commercial gold-mines. So what exactly are they "alternative" to anyway? Expect Green Day to walk away with this one. (Typical Academy voter: "The kid's got blue hair, sounds alternative to me.")

Best Rap Solo Performance: Out of all the categories this year, this one is the most interesting. All five of the nominees have put out artistically credible material this past year, making a prediction for the winner an "if-y" subject. Craig Mack's "Flava In Ya Ear" has been the critical favorite of the year but Coolio's "Fantastic Voyage" may be the Academy's choice, thanks to its poppy chorus and radio- friendliness.

Best Rap Performance by a Duo or Group: Looks like the females may take this one, which is refreshing since rap has usually been seen as a male-dominated genre. Salt-N- Pepa, who had a phenomenal year, are nominated for their single "None Of Your Business." It would be nice to see the women win, considering they have been consistently putting out good songs since the mid-'80s.

COURTESY BOSS HARRIS

Beck's "Loser" is nominated for a Grammy in the Best Rock Vocal Performance, Male category.

COURTESY KEN SCHLES

Green Day is nominated in four categories.

COURTESY LAURENCE LE BLANC

Peter Gabriel's "Red Rain" is also nominated for Best Male Vocal Performance, Male.

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Kai Chi
Chinese-American Restaurant
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall Rt. 9 Hadley
We Deliver To Umass
Major credit cards accepted
Sun-Thurs 11:30 am - 11 pm
Fri & Sat. 11:30 am - midnight
10% off All Entrees
with this coupon
Expires 5/31/95
586-2774

LIVE
plus special guests
LOVESPIT LOVE and SPONGE
SATURDAY • MARCH 11 • 8PM
TIX $17 ADVANCE
MULLINS CENTER
PRODUCED BY DELSENER/SLATER ENTERPRISES

■ Last Seduction

continued from page 6

a protagonist (within an antagonist) and say, Demi Moore's wicked boss-lady in Disclosure. Whereas both Fiorentino and Moore are both projections of men's irrational fears of women (specifically powerful women), that's all Moore is — and she's trounced accordingly — returning the movie to the sexist status quo.

While you shouldn't expect a detailed psychoanalysis of Fiorentino in the film (you probably would be afraid to ask), there isn't a glib treatment of her either. It's a tribute to the gritty integrity of her character that she remains such an enigma. (Berg's motives, too, are a puzzle, so much so that he almost seems to deserve what he gets — which is another whole set of issues altogether.)

The Last Seduction deftly redefines the neu noir simply by playing by the rules instead of merely appropriating stylistic conventions. And it helps that Dahl has created the most potent noir heroine in years — Fiorentino scorches the screen with every quip and every twist of the proverbial knife-in-the-back. With Fiorentino's fiercely concentrated performance at the core of this Seduction, the film proves to be most perfect anti-date movie since Fatal Attraction. In any case — see it with someone you want to screw over. A

■ Moby

continued from page 6

'OK, he's white. He's amorphous. Let's call him Moby.'"

The name stuck, and, "In a weird way it kind of makes sense," he said, "because I like what the whale represents in Moby Dick, which is the uncontrollable romantic notion of nature as distinct, separate from humanity. And when humans try to conquer it they get smashed by it."

A man of strong opinions, Moby has used the liner notes to the new album as a forum for them.

"The Christian right is neither," he writes. "God is angry, I think. Here in the United States, vast numbers of politicians and religious leaders (the line between the two being blurry) are masquerading hate, racism, sexism and ignorance under the banner of conservative Christian values." And so on.

Asked whether record buyers might feel he is preaching at them, Moby said: "I'm sure a lot of people will. But I wouldn't be happy with myself if I was just putting out a record without expressing myself. There are 6 billion people on the face of the Earth — how many people get to make records and have liner notes?"

Whatever the number, it's unlikely that many are producing anything as eclectic as Everything Is Wrong.

A couple of cuts on the album — notably the punk-ish "What Love" — sound more like moshing than dancing music, while "God Moving Over the Face of the Waters" suggests Debussy.

Temple 72, Massachusetts 63

At McGonigle Hall
Philadelphia

Player of the Game

Johnny Miller, Temple – 25 points, seven three-pointers.

Massachusetts (20-4)
Bright 2-8 1-2 5, Roe 4-9 8-10 16, Camby 11-20 3-6 25, Padilla 0-9 0-2 0, Kellogg 2-8 0-0 6, Dingle 1-2 2-2 4, Weeks 1-2 2-4 4, Travieso 1-7 0-2 3. Totals 22-65 16-28 63.

Temple (18-8)
Alston 1-5 4-4 7, Ivey 2-3 0-1 4, Cunningham 1-4 1-3 3, Miller 8-21 2-2 25, Brunson 6-15 7-9 21, Stewart 2-6 0-0 4, Battie 2-4 1-4 5, Futch 1-4 1-2 3, Adams 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 23-62 16-25 72.

Halftime:
Temple 32, Massachusetts 31. 3-Point goals-Massachusetts 3-19 (Kellogg 2-7, Travieso 1-7, Padilla 0-5), Temple 10-26 (Miller 7-15, Brunson 2-6, Alston 1-3, Stewart 0-1, Futch 0-1). Fouled out-Ivey, Battie. Rebounds-Massachusetts 54 (Camby 13), Temple 41 (Cunningham 8). Assists-Massachusetts 12 (Padilla 6), Temple 14 (Brunson 7). Total fouls-Massachusetts 23, Temple 24. A-3,900.

The Minutemen finish 2nd in Rhode Island

The Minutemen return to action tomorrow at noon when they take on St. Joseph's at Hawk Hill.

A combination of a UMass loss in its last two games and two wins by George Washington will give the Colonials the No. 1 seed in the A-10 tourney. The Minutemen face the Hawks, then URI and the competion of the Rutgers game; GW plays Temple on Sat. and Rutgers on Tues.

■ horn

continued from page 10

how to hit.

For 15 years, he terrorized American League pitchers, putting up Hall of Fame numbers. That's right — Hall of Fame numbers.

It was an absolute disgrace when the Hall of Fame voters snubbed Rice and didn't vote him in. He should have been voted in on the first ballot. No questions about it. I thought players were voted on how they played, on what kind of numbers they produced, not on how they acted towards the media. Obviously, not.

So what if Rice was a private person and only wanted to talk about baseball, that's how it should be. Compare his numbers to some of the players already in there, and you'll see that he deserves to be in there.

He is a Hall of Famer.

• How much the loss of Mike Williams will affect the Minutemen will not be known until they are in a game where they are down by two with 10 seconds left and in need of a clutch shot.

When that happens someone else on the team will have to step up and make the clutch shot. I'll put my money on Donta Bright. The former Baltimore Sun Player of the Year always steps his play up a notch when needed.

Oh, and by the way, I love Bright ... as a player that is.

• Congratulations to UMass field hockey player Kyri Sparks, who was featured on ABC this past Sunday after the North Carolina-Virginia men's basketball game. Sparks was honored in the "Women's Profiles" segment as being one of the top female student athletes in the country, a great honor.

Candice Flemming is a Collegian staff member.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

rivalry. I told John [Chaney] it was another war. We tried to fight back, but you can't shoot as poorly as we did from the floor and win a game."

The Minutemen return to action tomorrow at noon when they take on St. Joseph's at Hawk Hill.

A combination of a UMass loss in its last two games and two wins by George Washington will give the Colonials the No. 1 seed in the A-10 tourney. The Minutemen face the Hawks, then URI and the competion of the Rutgers game; GW plays Temple on Sat. and Rutgers on Tues.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

the team's leading scorer. Senior defenseman Francois Bouchard, HE's top scoring blueliner of a year ago, has seen his production drop, but not substantially (6–14–20).

The Huskies have another pair of excellent Boston-bred defensive forwards, Somerville and Matignon High's Dan Lupo, a junior, and Burlington's Eric Petersen, a sophomore. Lupo has two shorthanded goals this season.

What NU lacks on the power play (19.1 percent, eighth in HE), it makes up for in penalty killing (82.5 percent, third in HE). Those numbers should help and hurt UMass — a struggling power play will not test UMass' inconsistent penalty killing, but the Huskies' tough defense may keep UMass' perpetually languished power play down.

NU coach Ben Smith goes with the hot hand in goal. Senior Todd Reynolds started seven of eight games before Mike Veisor started the last four. NU is just 1–1–3 its last five, including its 1–1 showing at the Beanpot (a 6–2 loss to BU and a 4–2 defeat of Harvard in the consolation round).

Rink notes: UMass is locked into the 8–9 game of the Hockey East tournament, but Providence, currently eighth, has a golden opportunity Sunday to move up when it hosts Boston College.

Ten Eagles, including their top two goaltenders, Greg Taylor and Josh Singewald, will not dress for the game for patronizing a local bar they were banned from. A win for the Friars (5–11–5, 37 points in HE) will vault them over BC (7–12–2, 40 points). Unfortunately for BC fans, this one will be televised live by NESN, which is also televising Friday night's BU–Merrimack game.

Women set for NE championships

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

This weekend the University of Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team will compete in the New England Championships at the University of Rhode Island.

The team will be led by senior Kelly Liljeblad who will compete in the 5,000 meters and the mile.

"Kelly should win easily," Massachusetts coach Julie LaFreniere said.

"She has the third fastest time in the country [in the 5,000 meters]. She's looking to upgrade her time by 20 seconds. They only take the Top 10 to Nationals."

The NCAAs will be held March 10–12 in Indianapolis, Ind.

Senior Julie Moreau will also be running the 5,000 meters. Sophomore Katie Greenia, who was also scheduled to run the 5,000 meters, will not compete this weekend due to the flu.

Another top performer for UMass will be senior captain Janey Meeks. She is an ECAC qualifier and holds the school record in both the high jump and triple jump.

Meeks will also run a leg of the distance medley relay and the 4x400 meters.

Freshman standout Rosemarie Bryan holds the top scores in the triple jump and long jump. She also holds the fastest times in the hurdles.

An ECAC qualifier, Bryan will be busy this weekend, competing in the 55-meter hurdles and long jump on Friday, while competing in the triple jump and two more hurdle races on Saturday.

Freshman Rebecca Donaghue will run the 800 meters in spite of having the flu. Donaghue is an ECAC qualifier and is still expected to do well in this event.

Junior Nicole Roberts will compete in the 200 meters, 4x200 meters, and the 55-meter dash.

Junior Jen Waeger will run the 1,000 meters and should make the finals. Waeger is already an ECAC qualifier.

Sophomore Anya Forrest has one of the top four times in the 55-meter hurdles and is also an ECAC qualifier. As a freshman, Forrest finished second at the New England Championships. She hopes to have a repeat performance this weekend.

The top throwers this weekend will be junior Christie Martin, freshman Shana Mitchell, and sophomore Stephanie Townson in the 20-pound weight throw. In the shotput, Martin and Townson will throw.

In the 4x200 meters, the team will consist of Roberts in lead, Bryan, freshman Emma Gardiner, and freshman Silifia Kenku as anchor. The 4x400 team will be Meeks in lead, junior Megan O'Neil, Kenku, and Roberts as anchor. The 4x800 team will be senior Kerry Aker in lead, Waeger, Donaghue, and Liljeblad as anchor.

The distance medley relay team will be Aker running the 800 meters, Meeks running the 400 meters, sophomore Kim Hargrave running the 1,200 meters, and senior Cheryl Lyons running the mile. UMass also hopes to score in the pentathlon with Megan O'Neil.

"This has been a long season," LaFreniere said. "This meet will wrap it up for most of our runners. It's their last chance before the ECACs next weekend in Syracuse."

■ gym

continued from page 10

For the Minutewomen to knock off West Virginia, the all- arounderswill have to perform well in all four events, especially the balance beam.

According to Kuzara, if the combination of Tolhurst, Keels, Laing, Swartz, and the rest of the Minutewoman gymnasts can be "on" during any one particular meet, the team can compete with some of the top teams in the nation, notably the Mountaineers.

In preparation for Sunday's 2 p.m. match-up with West Virginia, the Minutewomen have been put through some of the most gruelling practice sessions of the year by Kuzara and assistant coach Rene Lyst.

"The last two weeks were probably the hardest they have worked in practice all year long," Kuzara said. "I think the team has picked up their stamina a notch or two."

That extra stamina will be needed to combat the top two performers for the Mountaineers, sophomore All–American Kristin Quackenbush, who won the all-around ahead of Swartz and Tolhurst during the Feb. 11 meet, and freshman Umme Salim, who is slowly becoming a force in the A-10.

The last Massachusetts victory over the Mountaineers came at the 1990 Atlantic 10 Championships held at UMass, a 184.90–183.10 decision.

"We have a great opportunity to grow as a team during this upcoming meet," Kuzara said. "It is certainly possible for us to have a great meet and beat West Virginia."

FRIDAY & SATURDAY
1/2 Price Appetizers And Nachos
9:30-11:00
Weekly Special
$1.75 Bottles Lite BEER $4.75 Pitchers
• Cash Door Prize • Free T-Shirts
• Music By D.J. Pete Free
• Smoking Section 10-1
Beat the cover in before 10:00 and no cover
Beat the cover in before 10:00 and no cover
Fastfood-pizza THE PUB
15 east pleasant street
amherst

Gerry's Music
80 Lamp Street Rt.116 South Hadley
Phone 534-7402 • 1-800-724-7402
NEW FOR '95
• Instructional videos for all instruments featuring today's best musicians.
• Hottest instrument cases and gig pace at the lowest prices.
• Electronic pickups for clarinet, flute, sax, brass, and guitar.
• Area's most complete percussion department featuring: Pearl, Ludwig, Gibraltar, Yamaha, C.B., Remo, Afro, L.P., and Toca
• 100's of new and used band instruments including Selmer saxophones.
Conveniently located at the junction of Rt. 116 and Rt. 202.
Open Mon.-Fri. 9-6, Thur. 9-8, Sat. 9-3.
Go UMass!

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

ALANA Christian Alliance presents a heritage mini-gospel concert/social Sunday March 5, 1995 Campus Center auditorium featuring a the college mass choir. If you would like to sing with the mass choir for this one time event contact Chuck 8-0950 ASAP

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. 25011

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, night here in Amherst. Free info session, Mon Feb 27th, Lord Jeffery Inn, at 7pm, or call 1-800 U CAN-MIX

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Chevy Caprice S.W. 107,000 miles automatic transmission Reliable car and engine. Asking $900 or best offer Please call Paula @ 413) 549-4809

1982 Mazda RX 7 94K, 5 spd, bra, sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500 Call 253-3149

Ford Tempo 1984 right blue (automatic) 56,000 miles only Runs like new Excellent condition Asking for $2300 or b.o. Call Paul at 549-8133

Mercury Topaz 1987 Engine totally rebuilt: less than 30 000 ago, new front end, brake/ bearings, struts, c-v joints, brakes, etc.! All work can be documented. This car has been babied! Moving-must sell. $2,000. 413 367-9186 - local call

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, ropes course athletics, arts and crafts. For application call 508 424 2756

FOR RENT

250 a month heat inc. 2 miles to campus, on bus route Feb. free. Call Todd 549-7883

Cape Cod Seasonal renters 1-5 bedroom houses in all towns. Rental rates Morey Santos 508 794-7857 or 398-8367

Noho 1 br + 4 br apt Center 586-2540 Joseph Avillo immediately

Room available in sorority house One block from campus. For more information call Robin 549-1353

Take over lease. Studio apt. on bus route 330 mo. incl all utilities. 253-4880

Two rooms available! 230+ a month Off rt 9 Amherst Killer house w/ yards, on bike path + bus route Right next Stop + Shop Sorry, no phone yet call 546 0884 leave name + number, with Tim

FOR SALE

Alpine 7517 5# model full logic detachable, dolby $175. Alpine 6048CD component add-on 4" mids 1" dome tweeters $100. Kenwood KAC 824 amp 80 W/ch 160 W) $95. Alpine 3521 amp 18W/4 $30 Magnavox 4 head VCR HQ unified remote $140 Call 253-3149

Condoms by mail. Top quality brand names $7/3 condom sampler $8/12 condom sampler $21/36 condom sampler Send money order, check, or cash to Healthy Concepts, Box 52, Amherst, MA, 01004

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $599 Call Chris at 800 289 5685

286/386 computer system CPU monitor keyboard $275 Steve 549-5181

Mountain bike Bianchi Peregrine 18" STX LX 500 ebo Marzocchi XC500 shock 130 756 9877 Dave

Save BIG. U.S. Air anywhere by March 28 $173 value for $110. For more 549-4015

Tom Petty tix Albany March 21 1800 civic center Good prices great seats. Call now 584 8282

Alert, Intelligence, Collectivism games, controllers and symbols Buy/Sell/Trade 256-1995, ask for Tony

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan at Bus stop Sunday morn Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain. Call Bill at 6-0704

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol Credit available Casa Box 3275, Austin, TX 78704 512-416-8991

HELP WANTED

Babysitter wanted. Area health club seeks babysitter Evened hours available Monday, Tues, and Thurs AM's a must Free membership with job! Call Mike at 549-3939

Camp Cone dersie. Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania Excellent residential coed summer camp Looking for caring counselors to help teach all land and water sports, mtn. bikes, motorcycles, arts + crafts, climbing wall, mono cable, radio, newspaper, waterskiing, jet skiing, and much more Summer season 6/20-95 thru 8/18/95 Call 800-832-8278 for an application

Counselors for coed N.E. PA overnight Jewish Federation camp 3 hours from NYC General, sports, waterfront, + arts Call 1-800-973-3866. On campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $700 +/month World travel Seasonal + full time positions No exp necessary For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50014

Dancers wanted No experience necessary Earn $1000-$1500 per week 532-1472

Expanding environmental company needs ambitious self-starters immediately Great opportunity 413-534-5533

Fill your resume - fill your wallet- University Directories, the nation's largest publisher of campus telephone directories, is hiring students to sell advertising for the University of Amherst student telephone directory. The summer internship begins with an expense paid, week long training program on the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus Gain experience in advertising, sales and public relations. Average earnings are $3,860- $5,250. College credit may be available Travel opportunities exist in university markets across the U.S. Interview deadline: February 28th Sign up at the Visitor's Center, weekdays 9:00am-4:30pm

Flexible office hours available for general office tasks in our Amherst office Duties include copying and gathering materials to prepare for large volume mailings Three hour minimum required. Some evening shifts available located off bus route Fill out application or send resume to: Personnel, NES, 30 Glenhouse Road, Amherst, MA 01002 EOE

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod Call Molly at 349-8782

Live and work in Nantucket for the summer Call Laura 546-1303

Part time marketing/sales Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local; no car necessary Call (401) 295-5490 after 2 p.m.

Summer camp on Cape Cod. Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program, competitive salaries Call Rob at 549-8417 for info and application

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000- $4,000+/mo Teaching conversation of English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

INSTRUCTION

CPR training. Train for basic CPR or for your CPR Instructor. Only takes 8 hrs. Call Jarett at 8-1944 for info

LOST

All black kitten with green eyes His name is Chubby and was last seen on Tobin on 2/21/95. Please call 253-0858

PERSONALS

Aimee T! I'm full of laughs and smiles and fun I love to dance with everyone I see on campus and have pretty eyes. I'm your Phi friend, you'll be surprised!

Billy Gans, I dream that you will hold me like you did the girl in your movie. Maybe we can make our own movie someday. My 301 address

Christina, Guess who! I am. It's a big surprise I'm a new sister. With dark hair & dark eyes Phi love ?

Deana D'Orannia, Hello and welcome to AEPhi! We're all so happy to have you in the Kappa new member class Get psyched for a great semester, it will be Phrosine! Phi love Guess who?

Doug Weissensus, Happy Birthday!! You're an inspiration to us all! Well, um, uh that's it. Love the giddiness at 119

Hot Hot Hot! Some stuff on this page could be stolen merchandise Be sure to ask for a bill of sale if you buy an item from here Remember, Co-bank's looking out for you

Insomniac party line. Customer service reps are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for your questions and emergencies Call 1-800 Cnbank to apply

Jen Chernoff. It's almost time to find who I am? Phi love, Your Phi friend

Jennifer S. Congratulations! Welcome to AEPhi! I hope you have a great semester Phi love, Your Phi friend

Lauren W. I'm your Phi friend yes I am with brown hair & green eyes Can you guess who I am? I'm one of the newest Phi's

Renee Ginsburg, Congratulations on becoming a new member of AEPhi! Get ready for an amazing semester love your Phi friend

Selina!!! Don't worry Got a good feeling about this semester Mb's will surrender!!! Macgyver

Shawn Cohen positions held can do the trick! Good luck! We're sooo proud of you! Phi love Your Phi friend

Someone to watch over you We look out for students better than any other credit card Call 1-800 Cnbank to apply Now, we won't hit on your dates

The sisters of SDT would like to welcome our new inbbonettes Megan, Amy, Danielle, Suzanne, Sheri, Lynn, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julie, Terri, Samantha, Kim B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lea

To my best friend, You're my reminder to never lose hope and to always find a reason to smile. Happy 20th birthday tomorrow. Love, Michelle

To the Delta Zeta spring '95 new member class: Jen, Jessica, Jessica, Kim, Fran, Zeeda, Jen, Shan, Liz, Melissa, Nicole, Jaffe, Caryn, Brooke, Betsy, Sharon, Erica, Silvia, & Stacey welcome to DZ! We are so excited for all of you. Get psyched for an amazing semester- the best is yet to come! Good luck! Love in DZ, the sisters

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends Gas $ 253-2609

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo, Florida Spring Break Earn 2 credits Call Project Deep 1-800 767-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800 282-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS 256-6085, 19.2 k bps 130 megs online + CD ROM Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Photographer head shots $75 546-1618 Perry

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

TRAVEL

Daytona Beach- Spring Break First class, oceanfront hotel, directly on the beach, pool deck fun, nightclubs, sunshine, parties! Do not miss this trip! Includes on campus pick up and drop off, only $259 quad occup. Departs weekly in March Call for free brochure. M-F, 8-5, 1-800-932-9866. See you at the beach!

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 5 days $279!! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $429!! Panama City $179!! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $198!! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break 95. Daytona $99 Panama City $149 The best hotels! Rooms guaranteed! Call Heidi + Andrea 256-6110

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Data entry and word processing. Reliable and fast Call Andi 586-0976

WANTED

Old Cabbage Patch Kids from the 80's Call Heidi 546-1391

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Classifed Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Anto For Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Wrod Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

REGARDING PERSONALS
1. All personals MUST be printed in the collegian classified coupon. Any extra copy must be a copy/exact of the classified.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

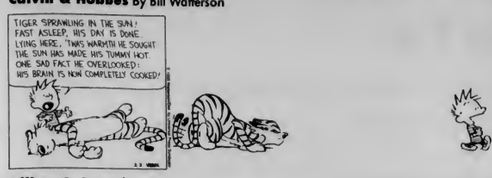
Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



TIGER SPRAWLING IN THE SUN! FAST ASLEEP. HIS DAY IS DONE. LYING HERE, TWAS WARMTH HE SOUGHT THE SUN HAS MADE HIS TUMMY HOT. ONE SAD FACT HE OVERLOOKED: HIS BRAIN IS NOW COMPLETELY COOKED!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

WELL, I GUESS IT'S LIKE THEY ALWAYS SAY, "WHEN IN ROME..."
LIKE WHO SAYS?!!
LIKE THE ANIMALS SAY?!! JUST WHAT DO THOSE CRITTERS SAY?! WAIT! LET ME GUESS
UHM... BRUNO?
THROW THE CHRISTIANS TO THE LIONS?!!
I DUNNA?
NO!! WAIT! WAIT!... I KNOW! PERSEVERE THE JEWS?!!
HEY, WHOA THERE, WE GOTTA TALK
I MEAN CHRIST! WHAT FAILS THE SIMPLE? RAMBUS SYNFIRD ORF A REQUEST SO SIMPLE THE WHOLE GOD-DAMN WORLD?!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

ALICE, I'M ALMOST DONE WITH YOUR PERFORMANCE APPRAISAL GASP!
I HAVEN'T HAD AN APPRAISAL IN FOUR YEARS. YOU MUST BE STARTING A DOCUMENTATION TRAIL SO YOU CAN FIRE ME LATER.
I'LL WORK 24 HOURS A DAY!!
THAT WAS WAY MORE MOTIVATIONAL THAN I'D HOPED.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

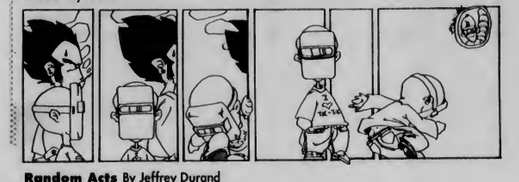
I'M TERRIFIED ABOUT MY PERFORMANCE REVIEW TOMORROW
MEN HAVE IT EASIER. YOU'VE BEEN CONDITIONED BY YEARS OF REJECTION AND GENERAL DISDAIN
WE'RE LUCKY THAT WAY
OVERALL, I RATED YOUR PERFORMANCE AS "SIMIAN."
THANKS!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

HE GRABBED MY PIECE! WHAT DO I DO?
WOW! THIS THING ALMOST LOOKS REAL!
WHADDYA KNOW! IT IS REAL! TSK, CLUMSY ME— I BROKE IT!
WE—WE GOTTA GO! GOT BUSINESS!
NOT YET, LITTLE FRIENDS! YOU FORGOT SOMETHING!
TOMORROW—THE SOMETHING!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

DEAN By edwin



Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

RANDOM ACTS
JAZZ DECIDES TO SCOPE OUT THE BAR SCENE WHEN...
HEY FUNK, I NEED SOME FORM OF I.D.!
NO GIRLIE-MAN I NEED SOMETHING WITH YOUR BIRTHDAY ON IT
HERE'S MY SOCIAL SECURITY CARD
WELL... THEN HERE IS A CALENDER. AND THERE IS MY BIRTHDAY CIRCLED THERE. NOW CAN I GO IN?

Leold By Roger Salloom

We were watching VH1 last night.

Niz asked me,"Is it me, or has Bob Dylan taken a turn for the worse? .....Bob Dylan Unplugged. by whom?.....Dr. Kervorkian?"

Then Gabe said, "He should've stayed home in bed.

He's gonna end up in a petting zoo.

Dylan won't make it to the next century."
Too bad.... I always thought I'd meet him someday. I idolized him.

He's a songwriter of great subtlety and depth.
, Ah....who cares?.....he hasn't called me lately anyway.
At what point do the students teach the master?

Close to Home By John McPherson

After four hours of lugging a 28-pound toddler around a mall, Doug is stricken by a case of Baby-Backpack Syndrome.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Arthur C. Stapleton, Jr.
Copy Editor ..... Jacob W. Michaels
Photo Technician ..... Shinichiro Suzuki
Production Supervisor ..... Marni E. Helfner
Production ..... Jon Lupo, Josh Grey

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Egg Roll/Fried Rice	Chicken Sandwich
French Dip Sandwich	Shells n' Cheese Sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Egg Roll/Fried Rice	Chicken Sandwich
Tomato Cauli, Cass.	Shells n' Cheese Sauce

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Produce a jet stream
5 Entangled fish
9 Heron's cousin
13 — ski
15 Anecdote
16 Tabula follower
17 Hideaway on high
18 Sublime State players
19 Not worth — cent
20 Vain wounding
22 Quilting party
24 Ringlike parts
25 Flabbergast
27 Self-centered
33 Rosinante, for one
37 Lobster coral
38 Trombone muffler
39 Actress Andrew
40 Diagonal
42 Socks and Millie, e.g.
43 Dove's home
44 Dona
46 Magazine number
48 Concert, colloquially
50 Youth gp. set in 1912
51 Baker and O'Dav
55 Spokesway
57 With arrogance
62 "Par and —": Tom Cruise movie
64 Punter's need
65 Club's fin. officer
66 Mindless memorization
67 Puma
68 Double Bostons
69 Kross relatives
70 New Jersey team
71 Buffs with team or tip

DOWN
1 Volvo competitor
2 "Feast", for one
3 Pinh of Clyde
4 Rule
5 One-room apartment
6 Marcus Porcius
7 A Baldwin
8 Lucy's TV mate
9 Mr. Magazine
10 Lucky counterparts
11 Translation of "video"
12 "Kiss of Life" songstress
14 Translations
21 High-school math subj.
22 Nibble for Trigger
28 Mod Minuteboats
29 Demolish
30 Electron
31 Aleutian island
32 — -massey
33 Vaseline
34 In the — savvy
35 Deseggregate
36 Prepares apples for pie
40 "— Loves Me"
41 Bingeing
42 "— Delight" Sherwood play
47 Testing ground, for short
48 Smorgasbord attendees
49 "Wheel of Fortune" buy
52 Young — corporate challengers
53 Take —
54 Schedule
55 Theats of the islands
58 Mil. absentee
59 Above
60 Vogue
61 Cabal
63 North Sea feeder
65 Positive reply

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

T	A	P	E		E	M	O		D	O	O	R	S	A
R	I	A	L		T	O	U	R		P	E	E	L	S
I	N	C	A		T	R	I	P		E	R	I	E	S
M	U	T	T	A	N	D	J	E	F	F	D	U	S	I
P	A	R	E	N	T	H	E	S	I	S		S	T	E
L	A	D	D	E	R		S	T	A	G	E		C	A
A	T	O	M		A	P	P	L	E		P	I	E	S
D	O	G	O	A	T	A	P	E	T	I	R	N	O	N
P	A	L		S	T	E	V	E		B	O	N	O
	C	O	R	E			M	C	D	A	N
C	H	E	R	R	Y		C	A	M	P
H	E	R	O		S	H	A	M		F	I	E	L	D
O	U	T	R	A	G	E		K	O	L	A		B	R	O	D
G	R	E	T	A		S	H	A	T		R	O	A	D
S	P	E	E	D		S	N	O	T		E	N	D	S

Beetles hit 3/23/95

© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/24/95

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A friend's suggestion is worth exploring. Be appreciative of helpful advice. An interesting offer is in the works. Look forward to new financial gains! Remember lessons learned in the past while planning for the future.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Devise a work schedule for next week that will be flexible enough to accommodate last- minute changes. Travel may be necessary to conclude a business deal. Keep a close eye on daily spending.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Pay attention to the quality of sales merchandise; it may not be a bargain. Travel is best postponed while you complete projects already underaway. A friend's or relatives courage is a source of inspiration.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): An unexpected phone call could alter your plans. Remember, an emotional outburst will only slow progress. Opt for team effort. A major financial coup is possible if you can answer someone's questions. Be frank.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Now is the time to get in touch with old business friends. A lost item will surface in the last place imaginable. A telephone call could leave you puzzled. Someone may be trying to manipulate you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Cleaver ideas abound! Get together with people who share your goals and values. Getting involved in a family dispute will drag you down. Look elsewhere for companionship. A newcomer offers an objective opinion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): A golden opportunity to display your talents. Roll up your sleeves and go to work! Fun-minded friends may try to distract you from your duty. Say "no" to temptation. Virtue will be rewarded.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Get better organized and you will be able to accomplish more. Act as a sounding board for someone who comes to you for advice. Your friends admire your good taste and social know-hows.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): You are on the verge of mastering a difficult task. Do not give up! Someone who has a guilty conscience may try to make you feel defensive. Refuse to fall for this person's tricks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): A good weekend to travel near and far. Look for opportunities to make extra cash or acquire property at a good price. Children need more guidance now. A family meeting helps salvage something valuable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): A romantic setting could prompt you to do something you would be better off avoiding. Probe deeper to discover someone's true feeling about recent events.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Give yourself plenty of room in which to operate. Your enthusiasm is contagious. Do not be taken in by an attractive investment offer. Putting all your eggs into one basket would be a mistake.

SCHEDULE CONFIRMATIONS FOR SPRING 1995

Starting Tuesday, February 21, the Registrar's Office will be mailing to your local address your course schedule for Spring 1995. It will be accurate as of Friday, February 17 and it will include any five-college registrations as of that date.

If you have any questions about the courses you are registered for or do not receive your schedule by Friday, March 3, please contact the Registrar's office to verify your schedule.

If you have registration problems and/or never attended certain classes, please contact your Undergraduate Dean's Office as soon as possible.

Quote of the Day

"Too often, the opportunity knocks, but by the time you push back the chain, push back the bolt, unhook the two locks and shut off the burglar alarm, it's too late.

–Rita Coolidge"

Sports

Temple backcourt stuns No. 5 Minutemen

Miller, Brunson shoot lights out for upset victory in Philly

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — On the strength of a tremendous second half, Temple defeated the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, 72-63, last night at McGonigle Hall.

The Owls were led by freshman Johnny Miller, who had 25 points, including 19 in the second half. Sophomore center Marcus Camby led UMass with 25 points, 13 rebounds and eight blocks in a losing effort.

The defeat dropped Massachusetts to 20–4 (10–3 in the Atlantic 10), while Temple improves to 16–8 (9–5 in the conference).

The win greatly enhances Temple's chances for an NCAA tournament bid.

The Owls came out of the gate inspired. Playing in the last home game of his collegiate career, Rick Brunson scored 10 first half points (21 overall) to lead Temple to an early 15- point first half lead.

The Minutemen came to life with just under eight minutes remaining in the first half. Led by Camby's 14 points, seven rebounds and five blocks, Massachusetts went on a 17–3 run cutting the lead to one point (32–31) at halftime.

In the second half, Massachusetts fell apart, and Miller heated up.

After a Camby tip–in gave the Minutemen their only lead of the game (33–32), 12 seconds into the second half, the Owls took over. Miller drained the first of his five second half threes, putting Temple ahead to stay.

Temple coach John Chaney was impressed with his freshman's performance.

"Miller is a guy who is just ice cold," Chaney said. "He doesn't worry about anything but me shouting to him about defense."

"We didn't count on Miller making all those threes," said Massachusetts senior co–captain Derek Kellogg. "And when he did, it seemed to get them going."

Temple continued to extend its lead as the Owls pulled ahead by 15 points with 6:51 left to play.

Comfortably ahead, Temple used the clock to its advantage, holding the ball as long as possible before shooting.

Following the victory, the Temple fans flooded the court, chanting "Chaney ... Chaney ...", as they delayed Chaney's post game interview with ESPN for several minutes.

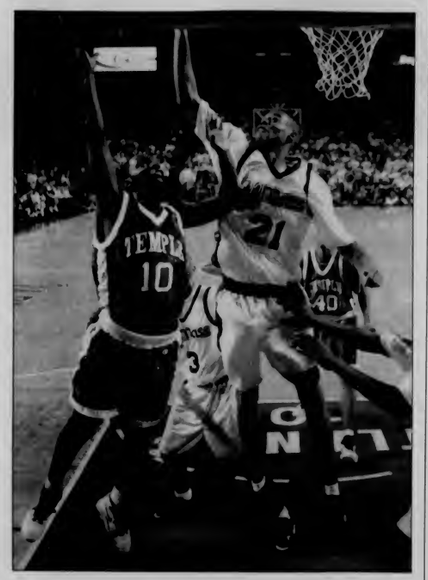
The margin of victory made Chaney relax a little.

"I'm glad it wasn't a one–pointer, because we would've lost," Chaney said. "It's happened to us too many times."

Although Massachusetts coach John Calipari was disappointed with the result, he gave the Owls their due.

"You have to give them credit. It was a good win," Calipari said. "As always, it's a good game and a great

Turn to HOOPS, page 8



PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Marcus Camby dominated Temple last night in McGonigle Hall, but the Minuteman frontline didn't get help from their teammates in the backcourt, losing to the Owls, 72–63.

Minutewomen survive, beat Duquesne Dukes

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

Beth Kuzmeski's clutch performance helped the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team to a 54–51 win over Atlantic 10 rival Duquesne University last night in Pittsburgh.

The sophomore scored only four points all night but they were all clutch. Kuzmeski hit a jumper with 58 seconds left to put the Minutewomen up by three, 52–49, and then hit two clutch free throws with 21 seconds left to make it 54– 51.

A last second trey by the Lady Dukes' freshman sensation Korie Hlede fell short, preserving the win for UMass.

The win improved the Minutewomen's record to 16–8 overall, 11–3 in the A–10, while also clinching no worse than a third place finish in the conference. The Dukes fall to 10–14 overall, 6–9 in the A–10.

The Minutewomen played a poor first half, turning the ball over a whopping 16 times while shooting for only a .286 percentage (6–21 from the field), and were down 25–14 at the break before storming back in the second half scoring 40 points (16–24 from the field for a .667 percentage) compared to Duquesne's 26 (11–34 from the field for a .324 percentage).

UMass was up 12–10 with 10:04 left to go in the half but only scored one more basket after that, an Octavia Thomas bucket with 5:13 left, which made it 18–14 at that point.

The Minutewomen began the second half with a 10-4 run to cut the lead to three, 29-26. But with 13:54 left, the Lady Dukes went on a 5-0 run increasing their lead to eight points on a Erin Popovich layup and a Hlede three-pointer.

The Minutewomen then went on a 16-3 run to take a three point lead.

In that run, with 7:57 left in the game, Melissa Gurile hit a layup to tie it at 40. Thomas then hit a layup of her own with 6:57 left to give the Minutewomen a 42–41 lead.

With the score 48–47, Crystal Carroll hit two free throws with 3:04 left making it 50–47. Duquesne's Chris Chandler then answered with a nifty hook shot to make it a one–point game again, 50–49. From there, Kuzmeski took over, scoring UMass' last four points.

Kuzmeski once again failed to set the all–time UMass three pointers made record going 0–2 from behind the three–point arc last night.

The last time the two teams met, in the Curry Hicks Cage on Jan. 28, the Minutewomen held Hlede to a season–low 15 points. This time, UMass held Hlede to a new season–low point total — 12 points.

Hlede was horrendous from the field all night, hitting only 4–21 shots, including 1–6 from the three–point line.

Chandler, a senior, was the leading scorer for the Lady Dukes finishing with 17 points, marking the first time this season that a player other than Hlede was the team's leading scorer. Popovich finished with a game–high nine rebounds.

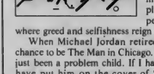
Carroll led UMass with 20 points and two blocks while also grabbing seven rebounds, and Gurile finished with 17 points and a team–high eight boards. Thomas finished with eight points.

UMass, despite shooting poorly (.489 percentage for the game), continued to play stellar defense holding the Lady Dukes to a .333 shooting percentage for the game.

The Minutewomen will go up against West Virginia tomorrow afternoon in Morgantown, WVa.

Pippen should try baseball; Bright could be clutch

Around the Horn
with Candice Flemming



Why couldn't it have been Scottie Pippen who had retired to play baseball?

I certainly wouldn't miss him, and I'd bet money on the fact that his teammates wouldn't miss him either.

Sure, he's a great player, one of the best in the NBA, but all he does is cause problems for the Bulls. He doesn't care about his teammates, the Chicago Bulls' management, or the city of Chicago itself. All he cares about is himself.

The playoff incident last June, the chair throwing episode this season and the way he badmouths management, are all examples of why he'd be perfect for baseball where greed and selfishness reign supreme.

When Michael Jordan retired, Pippen had his chance to be The Man in Chicago. But instead, he has just been a problem child. If I had any say, I would have put him on the cover of Sports Illustrated instead of that crybaby, Derrick Coleman.

Of course, there is no way he could ever replace Jordan anyway, but then again, who could replace the greatest basketball player of all time?

Hey Scottie, why don't you give baseball a shot? And when you get there, tell the real Man to give it up. Since Jordan is not going to cross the picket line, he is giving up the only chance that he has of playing Major League Baseball. It hurts for me to say it, but Mike — you have no chance. Come back to the NBA where you belong.

• Speaking of the NBA, rookie Eddie Jones is the real thing. It just kills me to think that the Celtics passed on him for Eric Montross. I knew last year, from watching him play for Temple, that he was awesome. I figured that since the Celtics held the ninth pick in the draft, they'd grab him. But just like the previous six drafts, they messed up big time.

I can see it now. The Celtics will have another lottery pick come June and once again go wrong picking someone like Bryant "Big Country" Reeves or Greg "Big Ugly" Ostertag. Sure, they're good in college, but so was Acie Earl (sometimes). The NBA is another story.

The Celtics should just forfeit the rest of the season to secure a top pick in the draft so they can get someone like Joe Smith, Jerry Stackhouse or Rasheed Wallace. Actually, they probably won't have to forfeit — they're bad enough already. But knowing them, they'd probably still make a bad pick.

• The Red Sox made a smart move when they hired Jim Rice as their new hitting coach. I thought Mike Easler did a great job — Mo Vaughn wouldn't be the hitter he is today without him — but he did himself in when he asked for more money. If there was anyone qualified to take his place, it is Rice.

Rice was successful in the minor leagues as a hitting insructor and there is no reason why he can't do the same job on the major league level. He knows

Turn to HORN, page 8

Women's ski team finishes regular season

By Teri Klein
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's ski team finished off their regular season last weekend at the Smith College Winter Carnival held at Berkshire East mountain and qualified for the U.S. College Ski Association Regionals.

Freshman Leah Mullero was the sole Minutewoman to qualify for the NCAA Eastern Regionals, which will be held today and tomorrow at Middlebury, Vt.

The Minutewoman placed fifth out of 10 schools in both the slalom and the giant slalom at the Smith College meet with total times of 234.07 in the slalom and 305.35 in the giant slalom. Boston College captured first place in the slalom with a time of 202.72, while Plymouth State took the top spot in the giant slalom in a time of 291.85.

Meire Selby was the top finisher for UMass in the slalom, finishing 18th overall with a total time of 101.77. Right behind Selby was Heather Olsen in 19th place with a time of 102.74.

The third finisher for the Minutewomen was Lori Segel placing 37th in 214.72.

Mullero took second place in the giant slalom in a time of 95.20, just 0.10 seconds behind champion Wendy Dunham of Plymouth State.

The next finisher for UMass was Selby placing 15th at 101.86. Heather Olsen (25th, 108.29), Elizabeth Anderson (26th, 108.35), and Lori Segel (39th, 118.90) were also high finishers for the Minutewomen.

The Minutewomen are looking forward to Feb. 26 and 27 when they will race at the USCSA's in Middlebury, Vt.

Season wrapup: In a year plagued with injuries and tough weather conditions, the women's team finished a respectable fifth place for their 1995 season in a league of 10 schools.

Massachusetts coach Bill MacConnell felt that his team skied well this season despite these factors.

"It's been a good year," he said. "We placed fifth in the league and we raced well."

As a result of injuries to captain Meredith Keach and junior Meredith Kotanchik, it has been up to Mullero to step up for UMass.

"Our women's team isn't that strong due to injuries, but I think our moral has been pretty good and we all work well together," Mullero said.

"I think I had to take more of a leadership role on the mountain because our captain can't be out there."

Mullero leads the women in overall racing, and is having an outstanding rookie season with the Minutewomen.

She placed no worse than fifth place in any meet this season and has captured several first and second finishes.

Among all the women in the league, Mullero rated fifth in total performance for the year.

"I wanted to come in and make a mark on skiing here at UMass," Mullero said.

She has definitely left a mark this season, according to MacConnell, who has been impressed by Mullero's performance and considers her the most outstanding freshman he has ever coached.

Mullero said that she is prepared for the regionals because she has raced against some of her opponents before in high school.

If she does ski well today and tomorrow at the NCAA Regionals, she may qualify for the nationals, which will be held in March.

Women's gym to battle Pittsburgh and West Virginia

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

This weekend the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team (7–2) will face its toughest and most important challenge thus far this season when the Minutewomen square off against the University of Pittsburgh, and more importantly, West Virginia University in a double meet on Sunday in Morgantown, W.Va.

The meet will mark a most anticipated rematch between the Minutewomen and the No. 23 nationally ranked Mountaineers, who own a 6–2 record.

Two weeks ago, the Mountaineers narrowly defeated the Minutewomen in the Curry Hicks Cage, by a score of 191.475 – 190.850.

The .625 winning margin for the Mountaineers marked the second time in as many meetings that the final tally was decided by less than one point.

The previous loss came in the 1994 Atlantic 10 Championships, where West Virginia defeated UMass by .775 to capture the Atlantic 10 crown.

The Minutewomen performed well in the meet against West Virginia, but had problems on the balance beam and on the floor exercise, a traditionally strong event for UMass.

"The beams will be our focus," Massachusetts coach Dave Kuzara said. "We need a strong showing there and if we can do well on that event, we are going to put a lot of pressure on them [West Virginia]."

UMass placed two of the top three all–arounders during the meet on Feb. 11. Sophomore Tara Swartz placed second with 38.800 points and junior J.J. Tolhurst tallied a 38.650 point total.

UMass enters the meet in second place in the A–10, and will try to climb out of that position with a win over West Virginia. With a win, the Minutewomen would be in a tie for first place with the Mountaineers.

Turn to GYM, page 8

Hockey faces off against Huskies

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

If the University of Massachusetts hockey team translated its record onto a graph, it would resemble a bell curve. Beginning tonight at 7 p.m. at the William D. Mullins Center, UMass (5–24–2, 3–18 in the Hockey East) has three opportunities to start the line moving upward again, all against the Northeastern Huskies.

The first series of the season for the two teams resumes tomorrow night at NU's Matthews Arena at 7 p.m.

NU is fighting for home ice in the Hockey East tournament, awarded to the top four finishers in the league. Each team has three games remaining, and NU stands fourth with 55 points, but UMass–Lowell is right behind with 53.

The Minutemen began the 1994–95 campaign an inauspicious 0–13–1 before defeating Notre Dame 4–3 in overtime on Dec. 31, 1994 That win started a 5–4–1 stretch that culminated in a monumental 4–2 upset of No. 1 Maine on Jan. 28.

Since that victory, "the biggest upset in college hockey" according to UMass coach Joe Mallen, the Minutemen have lost seven straight. In the five games prior to consecutive 7– 4 losses to UMass–Lowell last weekend, UMass was outscored 28–6.

A large part of UMass' offensive ineptitude owes to their low shot totals. After outshooting Holy Cross 42–21 in the first loss of the latest streak, an uninspired 3–2 overtime setback in Worcester, Boston University outshot UMass 56– 14 in an easy 5–1 win at Mullins.

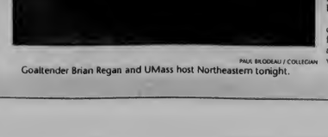
Two nights later, UNH outshot UMass 49–27 in its 7–1 pounding at Mullins.

In UMass' inaugural excursion to Orono, Maine, the Black Bears paid back UMass a 7–0 shutout while outshooting the Minutemen, 36–13.

All told, UMass has been outshot 1,168–856 for the season, a 27 percent margin.

Northeastern (13–13–5, 8–8–5 in HE) finds itself in a similar situation, on the short end of a 1,006–887 shot count. However, the Huskies have outscored opponents 128–125, while UMass has been outscored 155–81.

NU has a pair of stars in charge of the offense, senior HE First–Team forward J.F. Aube (18 goals, 16 assists, 34 points) and junior forward Jordon Shields (18–23–41),



PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Goaltender Brian Regan and UMass host Northeastern tonight.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 8

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 83 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, February 27, 1995

Massachusetts beats St. Joe's on the road
On the strength of a monster effort by Lou Roe, the Minutemen defeated the Hawks Saturday (See Sports, page 8).

Buckling up for safety
Read about two new seat belt advocacy programs sponsored by Safe Roads and the UMass Dept. of Public Safety (See story, page 2).

Trax highlights releases from both sides of the Atlantic
Weekly Trax On/Trax Off column features reviews of and grades for L.A.'s Weapon of Choice, Britain's Waterboys and BMX Bandits (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Gear up for snow, sleet and freezing rain today. Precipitation will turn into rain later and continue for the next couple of days. Keep your umbrella and earmuffs handy!

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
High: 30 Low: 10	High: 40 Low: 35	High: 30 Low: 20

Piracy is addressed, trade war avoided in China-U.S. pact

By Charlene L. Fu
Associated Press

BEIJING — In last-ditch talks that ran past a U.S. deadline, Chinese and U.S. trade officials reached a compromise agreement yesterday on stopping Chinese piracy of American movies, music and other goods.

The agreement appeared to avert the threat of a trade war between two of the world's largest economies.

As negotiators remained in closed-door talks at China's trade ministry, a U.S. official told reporters they were working on the final wording of an accord. No details were immediately available, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Failure to reach agreement would have meant punitive U.S. tariffs on more than $1 billion in Chinese imports. China had promised to respond in kind.

The agreement removed a perennial irritant in relations between the United States and China: complaints that more than $1 billion in U.S. business was being lost each year because of rampant Chinese theft of American copyrights and trademarks.

Without an agreement on protecting intellectual property by 1 p.m. Sunday Beijing time (midnight Saturday EST), the Clinton administration had threatened to impose the tariffs.

In what had appeared to be a sign of progress, China ordered the shutdown of two southern factories that had been producing pirated audiovisual materials, the Xinhua News Agency reported late Saturday.

One was Shenfei, a factory that American movie and music industry officials identified as one of the worst piracy offenders. Shenfei made illegal copies of the movie "Jurassic Park" and audio laser products, Xinhua said.

The United States had been demanding, among other things, that China shut down 29 southern factories turning out an estimated 75 million pirated compact discs per year.

Other countries also have complained about illicit copying of their products but haven't confronted China, for fear of jeopardizing trade with its huge, rapidly growing market.

The United States also wanted China to enact more stringent laws on copyrights and other intellectual property.

China had repeatedly complained that the United States expected too much too quickly, and that Beijing needed to take a more gradual approach to eliminating piracy.

Although the $1 billion represents a small fraction of the $45 billion worth of goods the two countries traded between themselves last year, there were concerns that a trade war could escalate. Much of the trade in 1994 was Chinese exports to the United States, worth $37 billion.

Official media in China have been playing up reports of individual crackdowns on piracy in an attempt to show Chinese officials aren't ignoring the problem.

On Saturday, the Commercial and Industrial Times reported dozens of cases of piracy uncovered this year, including laser discs, software, medicine, fake Levi's clothing and counterfeit Yamaha and Panasonic electronics.

The newspaper did not give details of how the counterfeiters were punished.

UMass groups lobby for increased funding

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

Faculty, staff and students at the University of Massachusetts will be lobbying in Boston for the next two months, in an effort to increase funding.

The Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP) and the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) are two of the bigger organizations that are part of the effort to lobby for a $10.4 million increase, according to Dick Conner, director of state government relations for the Amherst campus.

SCERA's role is to support bills that are in the State House which effect public higher education, according to Michael Hass, the organization's legislative coordinator.

"This [lobbying] is interpreted to make the point that quality education requires adequate funding for the campus," said Dr. Robert A. Rothstein, one of four vice presidents of the MSP.

Rothstein, professor of Slavic languages and literatures, said Massachusetts Governor William F. Weld submitted a budget in which $8.5 million is slashed from the Amherst campus' budget for fiscal year 1996.

According to Conner, the Amherst campus budget is approximately $168 million, nearly half of the $337 million allotted to the entire UMass system.

"We can no longer continue to pass the costs on to students. We're already the second most expensive public institution in the country."

"What we're doing is reaching out to UMass students and bringing them into Boston, having them write letters or make phone calls to their state representatives and state senators," Hass said.

What makes this bid different to those in the past is that the union and faculty have received support for the request from the UMass administration, Rothstein said. A letter of encouragement went out to the faculty signed by Chancellor David K. Scott.

The union wants to provide "access to quality and opportunity" for the University, and alleviate the financial burden from the students, Rothstein said.

"We can no longer continue to pass the costs on to students," Rothstein said. "We're already the second most expensive public institution in the country."

The MSP is affiliated with the Massachusetts Teachers' Association, recognized as the biggest educational union in Massachusetts.

"We want adequate funding for the campus, adequate student aid, and fair compensation for the faculty and staff," Rothstein said. "We want to convince them that supporting public higher education in general, and UMass–Amherst in particular is important and should be a priority.

"We primarily educate sons and daughters of Massachusetts, and our graduates stay in the state and contribute to the economy."

Fair compensation for faculty and staff was attempted in an MSP contract, supported by the union and the administration, but ultimately rejected by Weld's secretary of administration and finance, Charles D. Baker, Rothstein said.

When Weld's cut is added to the $10.4 million increase desired, the result is a nearly $19 million shortfall in the request for the fiscal year 1996 budget, Rothstein said.

The Massachusetts House and Senate will be working on their versions of the budget in March and April, according to Conner.

"The House wants to debate in early April," Conner said. "Recent indications show that they'll pass it over to the Senate in April."

The House and the Senate will then debate the budget and it will be implemented by July 1.

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Tanya Larlino, a UMass student and volunteer at the Amherst Fire Department studies materials about the fire truck that she is on.

Sarajevo newspaper editor speaks, reveals Bosnia war consequences

By Syed Raza
Collegian Correspondent

On Thursday Feb. 23, Kemal Kurspahic, editor–in–chief of Oslobodjenje, a Sarajevo–based daily newspaper, gave a speech at UMass regarding the war in Bosnia. The event was co–sponsored by the UMass Friends of Bosnia, who have their general meetings on every Wednesday 7 p.m. at the Campus Center.

Kurspahic was describing the three–year–old war in Bosnia which has left 200,000 dead and over two million homeless. He described the holocaust being committed in Europe; a holocaust which already has 72,000 rape victims, in which entire towns were ethnically cleansed, mass murders have occurred, and concentration and rape camps exist. All this is in progress, Kurspahic said, while the West enjoys its so called "era of peace and prosperity."

News Analysis

The civil war in Bosnia erupted in March of 1992, when the Bosnian president, Alija Izetbegovic, declared independence for Bosnia. The Bosnian Serbs rejected the result of an internationally recognized referendum held in February 1992, in which 99.3 percent of Bosnia's population voted for independence. The Serbs believed that Bosnia should be a part of the all–Serb state. Clashes erupted in various parts of Bosnia among the rival factions, namely the Bosnian Muslims, Bosnian Croats and the Bosnian Serbs. Three years later, no solution is in sight.

Kurspahic criticized the West on its peace making policies, stating that its basic concept was to divide Bosnia along ethnic lines. This, he said, was not possible without bloodshed, as the population of Bosnia was divided in such a way that no area could be claimed as all Serb, Muslim or Croat.

Kurspahic believes the U.S. leadership role is lacking in the peace making efforts. Praising Clinton on his initial move to lift the arms embargo on Bosnia, he said it was probably the first concrete step towards peace in Bosnia. Unfortunately Clinton was persuaded not to get involved in the crisis of Bosnia on the 50th anniversary of the D–Day by France and Britain.

The editor criticized the behavior of France and Britain saying that they were practicing colonial ignorance. Kurspahic said that certain NATO diplomats from these two countries were ignoring the crisis in Bosnia and refuse to comment on the situation.

Kurspahic said that the ceasefire signed due to the intervention of former President Carter was violated on the very first day by the Serbs when they launched an all–out offensive on the UN–declared safe area of Bihac. Bihac has been under a massive offensive for the past four months. According to Kurspahic, this battle is the most important battle, as it is a battle for the principles on which NATO and UN stand. Surprisingly the UN and NATO aren't concerned.

Kurspahic said that NATO and UN diplomats are actually hoping that it falls to the Serbs, so that the victims of war, the Bosnian Muslims, are brought to their knees for peace. He accused the West of thus rewarding the aggressor.

Kurspahic accused the West of making castles in the air, by expecting the Serbian President, Slobodan Milosevic, to accept the latest peace plan. Kurspahic said that Milosevic was deeply involved in the "greater Serbia" project developed in Belgrade in 1986, and it was useless to expect that he would accept any peace plan.

Lashing out at Randovan Karadzic the self proclaimed "leader of the Bosnian Serbs," he asked how Karadzic can even be a Bosnian Serb let alone their leader when he was from the neighboring all–Serb state of Montenegro.

Kurspahic warned that the situation in the Balkans was very explosive and that the war could spread to the neighboring states as well, thus bring more powerful states in the picture.

Students needed by Amherst Fire Department

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Staff

There is no need for alarm — the fire engine that will be parked outside the Campus Center this week will be looking for volunteers, not flames.

Student firefighters will have gear and airtanks along with a VCR to demonstrate training from March 1–3 for those interested in firefighting for the upcoming semester.

"You are a student one second, but as soon as your pager goes off, you are a firefighter in Amherst," said Travis Roberts, a firefighter pump operator and University of Massachusetts junior.

The student force, Engine Company 3, is a division of the Amherst Fire Department made up of 16 officers, drivers, and firefighters who must be ready to report to the firehouse at any moment, Roberts, a civil and environmental engineering major.

Roberts and Captain Jeff Winn, a UMass senior are two of the eight student firefighters who live at North Station on Eastman Lane.

"Fire–wise we are all trained at the same level," said Winn. "We are student firefighters, and we are trusted as a full– fledged engine company. The captain doesn't look over his shoulder for someone on the permanent force."

The live–ins rotate duty, which is midnight to 8 a.m. seven days a week while school is in session, according to Roberts.

"The students get along fine with the rest of the force," said Assistant Chief Bowler of the Amherst Fire Department. "I get a lot of satisfaction working with them, they are young and want to work," said Bowler, who also trains the volunteers during the week before the fall semester begins.

Training is re–enforced at weekly drills, according to Winn.

"We go out and drill for a full three hours, we don't take a break and then fool around," he said.

The student firefighters are trusted and treated equally because they are trained the same way as permanent force members, Bowler said.

Susan Thibeault, one of the three women on the force said Bowler is very involved with the students.

"He expects the most because he knows we can do it," she said. "We're not a girl or a guy or a student, we are all firefighters."

Training includes actual fire situations like going to burnhouses,

Turn to FIREFIGHTERS, page 3

Jewish affairs position almost filled

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

The search committee has narrowed down "a very good pool of applicants" to four finalists for the position of Coordinator for Jewish Affairs and Anti–Semitism, according to Search Committee Chair Javier Cevallos.

The applicants being interviewed are Larry Goldbaum, Devorah Jacobson, Amy Waldman, and Amy Olson. A fifth applicant withdrew her name from consideration.

The final meeting with the candidates will be Olson's, which will be held on Wednesday at 11:30. It is open to the public.

"I want as much student feedback as possible," said Alan Weinfeld, the Co–chairman of the Chancellor's Taskforce on Jewish Awareness and Anti–Semitism. "Students worked to get this position." He also said he wanted any students to bring their comments to Cevallos.

Creation of the Position

According to University of Massachusetts at Amherst Hillel Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, creating the position involved a long process. "Basically, there were a series of meetings that Jewish students and staff from Hillel held with senior administrators over the course of the year." Discussions began, according to Perlmutter, with former Chancellor Richard O'Brien and then continued with current Chancellor David K. Scott.

"One of the major issues," said Perlmutter, "was to have the University hire staff that would deal with the issue of anti–Semitism and also proactively with helping people understand that what the experience of Jewish students is, in other words, Jewish awareness. A positive awareness of Jewish issues and concerns."

Perlmutter added that one of the requests was that the chancellor "form a task force on anti–Semitism that would make recommendations to him about issues. The first formal recommendation of the task force to the chancellor was to hire the staff position which he agreed to do."

"[We had] been talking about ways the administration can help Jewish students, we figured hiring this person could help institute programs to fight anti–Semitism," Weinfeld said. "A lack of education leads to anti–Semitism. This position will serve to educate the campus about Jewish issues and promote understanding between different groups."

Asked about whether anti–Semitism occurs on campus, Vice–Chancellor Jo–Anne Vanin said, "Well cer-

Turn to SEARCH, page 3

UMass to buckle up for safety

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is buckling down in an effort to get people to buckle up.

There are two different UMass programs aimed at seat belt awareness that have recently received grants from Safe Roads, a state-funded Western Massachusetts traffic safety program, according to Director Robin Riessman.

The psychology department will hold a puppet show for elementary school kids, and the UMass Department of Public Safety is pitching a seat belt awareness campaign, she said.

Riessman said the two UMass projects stood out to her when she looked over the list of grant recipients.

"There was no personal gain or departmental gain for this thing — they just did it to save lives," said Riessman, "These are labor intensive projects and they should be applauded for taking on this issue."

Seat Belt Campaign

Officer Paul Vlach of the UMass department of public safety, who is the departmental coordinator of the campaign, said the intent of the project is targeting two groups on campus — students and employees.

"Students as a whole tend to buckle-up more because they're coming from the outside," said Vlach. "We recognize employees as a population being a unique situation."

Vlach said when workers drive in to work, they fasten their seat belts, but when they are on the job travelling in state vehicles from different locations on-campus, they do not buckle-up because of the short distances.

As part of the project, police will distribute 10,000 bumper stickers with the UMass logo and the slogan, "We're from UMass and we buckle up!" There are also signs around campus donated by the physical plant.

"Hopefully the stickers will be on 300 state vehicles around campus," Vlach said. "They are limited, but we'll be handing them out, maybe at visiting parking, the parking garage and the visitor's center."

In a memorandum from UMass Police Chief John Luippold to University department heads, he asked all department heads in control of a vehicle to attach a small sticker to the dash board that reminds employees to fasten their seat belts.

Vlach said the auxiliary services around campus also donated $1,200 in coupons good for a large beverage or coffee at any of the three snack bars around campus, or the three Campus Center locations.

The coupons, awarded to people who buckle up, will be distributed at traffic stops or when people are looking for information, said Vlach.

"I can even see half of the people in the car getting a ticket [for not wearing a seat belt], and the other half getting coupons for following the law," said Vlach.

Massachusetts State Law

On Feb. 1 a law went into effect in Massachusetts requiring all drivers and passengers to wear seat belts.

According to the law, any person 16 years or older that is not wearing a seat belt is subject to a $25 fine, and anyone operating a vehicle can be charged $25 for each individual under the age of 16 years in the vehicle.

As part of the effort to increase safety, Governor William F. Weld is funding the Safe Roads project.

Of the 13 Safe Road mini-grants given to groups around the Commonwealth, the UMass police department was awarded the highest grant, valued at $1,500, Riessman said.

UMass police efforts to promote the use of seat belts were received with 18,000 other proposals, in search of state funds, according to Riessman.

"People are tired of hearing from Safe Roads [about safety]," she said. "Hopefully it will be more effective from local organizations."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, February 27

Talk — Mohammed Bamyeh from the sociology department at the University of Lowell will talk on "The Coming Age of Ungovernability: The Contract with America' in a global perspective," Campus Center, Room 803, 3:30 p.m.

Lecture — The Distinguished Visitors Program presents Rebecca Walker who will speak on "The Third Wave of Feminism." Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Film Festival — Featuring a variety of distinguished filmmakers and scholars. Abraham Ravett will screen his recent documentary Forgotten Tenor, a tribute to Jazz musician Wardell Gray. Free. Herter Hall, room 227, 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, February 28

Lecture — Ann Gould Rubin, executive vice-president N.W. Ayer Advertising will speak on "Advertising: the Many Faces of Persuasion." Student Union, Commonwealth Room, 7 p.m.

Lecture — "The Idea of the Renaissance in the Age of the Museum," a lecture by Prof. Andree Hayum of Fordham University. Smith College, Wright Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Music — A mini-concert, a panel discussion and an awards ceremony with Jazz violinist Claude Williams as part of the 24th Annual Black Musicians Conference. Free. Bowker Auditorium, 7 p.m.

Forum — Cooley Dickinson Hospital is sponsoring a forum entitled "Food for life: Healing the Body, Mind and Spirit." Cooley Dickinson Hospital, Dakin Conference Room, 6 p.m.

Notices

Fundraising — WFCR 88.5 F.M. Public Radio for Western New England seeks volunteers to assist the station with spring fundraising, scheduled to begin on March 29. For more information call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100.

Community Service — The VIVA Community Service Council is asking groups to submit the number of community service hours they have completed since the beginning of the academic year in order to tally up the total number of hours this campus has contributed. If you have any questions, contact Lori McKinney. 545-3368.

Correction:

In last Thursday's Collegian, an article incorrectly implied Chancellor David K. Scott sponsored a Student Government Association motion to condemn the Black Student Union and Phi Beta Sigma for inviting "anti-Semitic" speakers.

Scott said he has been encouraging students to voice their concerns on issues, including anti-Semitism, but did not suggest any groups to be condemned for their choice of speakers.

The Collegian regrets the error.

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily and we do not accept FYIs over the phone. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions as early as possible. All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Women have issues: we need you to help us address them! Come down and write for the Women's Issues section of the Collegian. Contact Lisa or Colleen at 545-1361 or come down to our office in the Campus Center basement.

The News Department needs writers.

Any students interested in writing for the news section should contact Jessica Tavema at 545-0719 or come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement.

Collegian Classifieds

They work!

Auto Glass Center
American & Foreign
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR 78 Old Sunderland Rd. 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR 141 Damon Rd. 586-4444
CARSTAR Collision Repair Centers

STUDENT FARES

LONDON	$250
AMSTERDAM	$430
PARIS	$438
FRANKFURT	$458
MADRID	$498
BRUSSELS	$430
MOSCOW	$518
ZURICH	$478
PRAGUE	$458
EURAIL FROM	$255

FARES BASED ON RT FROM BOSTON. TAXES NOT INCLUDED. STUDENT ID MAY BE REQUIRED. DEPARTURES THRU 3/31. FARES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.

Council Travel
79 S. PLEASANT ST. 2ND FL AMHERST, MA 01002
413-256-1261

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family

Wednesday - March 1
(repeated on)
Tuesday - April 25
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass Campus
Room Number Will Be Posted By Campus Center Elevators

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

For more information, please call 549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234

UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES - UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - AMHERST

WANTED
Assistant Finance Manager

EXPERIENCE
is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...

We are looking for:
Ambitious • Responsible • Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills
Business Majors Preferred

Applications are available at the Collegian 113 Campus Center and must be submitted by Thursday March 9 @ 4:00 p.m. !!

BRODIE SKIING COUPON - CUT IT OUT ✂ MA-A-MDC

Ski Brodie
Route 7 New Ashford, MA 413/ 443-4752
Nearby, in the Berkshires

Any Day $ 10 Off!!
Monday - Friday? YES! • Saturday - Sunday? YES!
St. Patricks Day/weekend? no. Sorry. (Isn't our annual Irish Olympics week enough?)
One coupon per person per lift ticket. Valid 1994/1995 ski season. All day adult ticket only. $7 off twilight, night, children day ticket. Not valid toward otherwise reduced price ticket. Must complete brief info note at Brodie for redemption

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™
• Professional Bartending and Bar Management Training ...at a fraction of the cost at most schools
• Full certification in as little as six weeks
• Specific programs tailored to your specific needs
• T.I.P.S.™ and Serv-Safe™ certification available
• Approved by the National Restaurant Association®
TONIGHT! Free Info Session 7:00 p.m. Lord Jeffrey Inn
Shop around and compare! Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited!!

The Distinguished Visitor's Program
Proudly Presents
Rebecca Walker
"The Third Wave of Feminism"
Monday, February, 27th
8:00 p.m.
Bowker Auditorium, UMass
Free to UMass Undergrads with valid I.D.
$2.00 for public

UMass prof discusses genocides

By Lisa Greenfield
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday night at Amherst College Professor Ervin Staub discussed the evolution of genocide and the psychology of the individuals and groups involved on both sides of the issue.

"In order to understand the totality of genocide we ought to look at the perpetrators, the bystanders, the people who did these things, the people who tried to help, like the rescuers, the victims and the rest of the survivors," the University of Massachusetts psychology professor said.

Staub focused his talk on the rescuers of the Holocaust, but said it was necessary to look at the psychology of the perpetrators to put the rescuers' psychology into context.

Staub said perpetrators and rescuers went through evolutions, which "came out of ordinary human experiences, but the outcome, what they did with that, becomes extraordinary."

The professor asked how it was possible for human beings to do what the Nazis did, how motivations for their actions arose, how it was possible to passively watch what was happening and how the rescuers could endanger their own lives and the lives of their children.

Staub said difficult life conditions, particularly economic, created "social changes that make life confusing, in which deep human needs arise."

Staub defined these needs as security, positive identification, sense of self, connection with others and an understanding of one's place in the world. He said there are a variety of ways for people to deal with them.

He said that instead of people working together to improve their situation, what usually happens is people "turn to leaders who offer easy solutions."

Two of these solutions he discussed were scapegoating and adopting false ideologies more optimistic than reality.

Staub explained the difference between destructive ideologies and positive visions. According to Staub, ideologies "usually become abstract and don't consider the concrete well-being of everyone," while positive visions "remain concrete" in considering the others' well-being.

Staub said the perpetrators and bystanders justify their harmful actions by excluding victims from their moral universe and believing the victims deserve their suffering.

In their evolution, said Staub, rescuers separate themselves from perpetrators and bystanders because various personal characteristics led them away from adopting false ideologies. Some of these characteristics were empathy, caring, sense of justice, moral parents, or anti-German sentiments.

Staub said in most cases, rescuers are approached for help, but when asked, do not hesitate to accept because of personal characteristics. He said rescuers often respond to the needs around them and therefore circumstance plays a role in their decision making process.

Staub and his sister were rescued by a Christian woman during the Holocaust. He is the author of The Roots of Evil: The Origins of Genocide and Other Group Violence.

This lecture brought to a close the Smith and Amherst College Hillel Rescuers Lecture Series and was presented in conjunction with "Rescuers: Portraits of Moral Courage in the Holocaust," an exhibit by photographer Cay Block.

Cooley Dickinson looks for volunteers

By Rebecca J. Peterson
Collegian Staff

Cooley Dickinson Hospital (CDH) in Northampton is working to increase community participation through recruitment of student volunteers.

The CDH recently held its first "Auxiliary and Volunteer Fair" to introduce opportunities to people who are curious but do not really know how to get involved, according to Phyllis Maggiolino, director of volunteers.

"Because more women are working full time the hospital needs to look towards other groups, students are one of those groups," said Peter Schoenberger, director of public relations. "The more real world experience you have, the better chance you have of getting a career."

There are currently 25 college students who are volunteering their time at the hospital, said Maggiolino. Most of them are biology or pre-medical majors from the University of Massachusetts and Smith College, she said.

"The coffee shop and the gift shop are our big money makers," said Helen Bishop, a volunteer of 15 years and the head of The Infant Car Seat Rental program. "I think many of our activities will interest college students."

Current volunteers work with various hospital programs. Opportunities range from working as Emergency Department Hostesses to transporting patients, Maggiolino said.

The evening transportation program is ideal for many college students because it only requires evening participation, said Maggiolino.

There are many jobs to choose from, everyone is friendly and volunteers leave the hospital with a good feeling, according to Sue Hodgkins, a volunteer of 25 years.

"Those who do choose to commit themselves are very good and we try to work around their schedules and interests," she said.

Any male or female who is 14 or older, and who can donate at least three hours a week of their time is welcome to participate, according to Maggiolino. Most volunteer opportunities do not require experience.

■ search

continued from page 1

tainly, we have issues here as society has issues."

According to Cevallos, no opposition has been raised to the hiring of this position.

Coordinator's Role

According to Vanin, there are several roles the Coordinator will play.

• The individual "will advocate for the need for the community as expressed by students, faculty, and staff."

• The individual "will be someone who can be a resource educational angle."

• The individual "will work with other departments, offices, and faculty, trying to make the campus the best possible model of the ideas of multiculturalism and free of anti-Semitism to the degree that is possible."

Weinfeld added that "I think [the hiring of this position] is a step in the right direction, but I don't think it will solve the problem [of anti-Semitism on campus.]"

Perlmutter felt similarly, saying, "I'm very excited this is happening and I think this is an important step in the University taking responsibility for a situation that affects many of its students and staff."

■ student firefighters are hard at work

FIREFIGHTERS. continued from page 1

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Travis Roberts lays back in his bed watching 'Saturday Night Live,' waiting for a box to come in. Roberts is one of the eight students that live at the fire house.

putting fires out and search and rescue, according to Winn.

Volunteer Candidates

"Fire service and EMT work is not always looked at," Winn said. "We look for candidates who show commitment to a job, sport or school club."

Second semester freshmen are ideal because they can put in three years of service, and they are already adjusted to handle classes, Winn said.

"We have firefighters graduating and leaving, so we will be handing out applications to anyone who is interested, said Roberts.

Although the present company is made up of UMass students, it is not a University organization, Roberts said. Positions are open to students from Amherst and Hampshire Colleges.

The force is looking for dedicated students who are interested in firefighting, and no prior training is required according to Roberts.

Roberts said his pager has gone off in class, but his professors have been understanding.

The announcement of a "box alarm," when smoke and flames are seen, once meant "running out of chemistry lab," said Winn.

The students go through rigorous training to become firefighters, said Thibeault. "I can say now that after training, I can do anything."

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

The student firefighters drill weekly. Here Lee Gianetti, Travis Roberts, and Tim Dorren are pictured at the old power plant off of North Pleasant Street.

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian
Write for GLB Issues. Let your voice be heard.
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

Photo Staff Meeting

Thursday Night at 7:00
Bring an empty stomach — there will be pizza.

The GRE is changing!
You'll see new math topics—like Probability and Statistics. Plus a new question type—"Analysis of Explanations." And there's almost no ETS practice material for them!
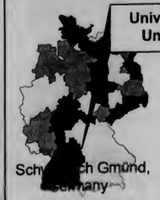
But Kaplan is ready.
Shouldn't You Be?
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST
Classes Starting Now!

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
•Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
•Users of Sikkens paint products.
•Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.
Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

A major American university with a complete residential campus in the heart of Europe



University of Maryland University College
•Small classes
•Instruction in English
•Students from around the world
•Spacious on-campus housing
•Accessible to major European cities
Study abroad for Summer '95, a semester or year, or apply for freshman or transfer admission.
For information or a videotape on undergraduate majors in...
•business and management
•international relations
•German & European studies
•American studies
International Programs
University Blvd. at Adelphi Rd.
College Park, MD 20742-1644
Telephone: 301-985-7442
Fax: 301-985-7959

EATING DISORDERS
A FIVE COLLEGE FILM SERIES • ALL SHOWINGS AT 7:30 PM

FEBRUARY
Tuesday, 21: "Eating." Serious comedy about women talking about food, bodies, each other and life. Campus Center Front Room, Amherst College.
Monday, 27: "Famine Within." Documentary film addressing the socio-cultural forces that impact women's obsessions with their bodies and weight. Women's Center, Enfield House, Hampshire College.
Tuesday 28: "Food Fright" and "Fear of Fat." "Food Fright" is the film adaptation of a musical dramatizing women's obsessions with food, weight, body image, and personal and cultural perspectives. "Fear of Fat" is a film discussing the symptoms underlying psychological problems and recovery of individuals with anorexia, bulimia and compulsive overeating. Smith College, Seelye 106.
MARCH
Tuesday, 7: "Still Killing Us Softly." Jean Kilbourne video examining how advertising portrays women. University of Massachusetts, Campus Center Room 162.
Tuesday, 28: "Famine Within." Hooker Auditorium, Mount Holyoke. (See Feb. 27)
APRIL
Tuesday, 4: "Life is Sweet." Comedy focusing on an enduring couple and their iconoclastic twin daughters- one of whom suffers from anorexia and extreme self-loathing. Smith College, Seelye 106.
Wednesday, 5: "Life is Sweet." Campus Center, Front Room, Amherst College (See Apr. 4)
Thursday, 13: "Eating ." Women's Center, Enfield House, Hampshire College (See Feb. 21)
Wednesday, 19: "Pack of Lies." Jean Kilbourne video examining advertising of the tobacco industry, including the connection between smoking and thinness. University of Massachusetts, Campus Center Room 162.
Sponsored by the Five College Eating Disorders Committee. For additional information call 542-2760.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darlenne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gurley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Casual theories about Hulk dreams

I have a tendency to lose or misplace everything. Keys, my wallet, my glasses, gloves, various forms of ID, pens, socks, you name it, I lose it.

I sometimes forget what food belongs to me in the refrigerator at home, and spend hours in the grocery store studying packages and labels because I forget the fat and sodium counts from one label to another.

I sometimes space out and forget to get off the bus when I am supposed to, and have to write myself notes of "things to do today" almost every day. There are also occasions upon which I have to stop and think about what my phone number is before I give it to someone.

I also have a lousy long-term memory, and could count on two hands the number of events that I remember from my childhood and adolescence.

Recently I have become extremely worried about my absent-mindedness and poor memory. Is it brain-damage, some kind of cognitive disorder, or some kind of genetic thing? Am I unconsciously blocking out some tragic event from my past that prevents me from remembering the majority of my 21 years on the earth?

I considered being hypnotized to help remember something, but decided that a little self-help might be a good way to begin the journey through my memory and mind (or lack of either). I headed to the W.E.B. Du Bois library in search of my past.

What I actually looked for at the library was some information on memory; how it works, how we remember and why we forget. Much of the material was so dry I was glad I had a bottle of water with me, but I did find out a few interesting things.

According to C.B. Martin and M. Deutscher, contributors to Casual Theories of Mind, there are two types of memory, direct and indirect. You can remember the experience of swimming on an occasion (direct), and you can also remember that you went swimming on the occasion (indirect). See the difference?

I thought about how few things from my childhood I actually remember directly. One is a nightmare I used to have about the Incredible Hulk. I can still picture the tiny green, shrieking dot running down the hill my street was on while I stand there, unable to move my feet as the little dot gets bigger and the shriek turns into a deep roar.

According to Martin and Deutscher, my memory of this dream is so vivid that I actually relive it when I remember it, seeing the same images which evoke the same emotions I had as a child having the dream for the first time.

As for indirect memory, I can remember that I used to ride my tricycle up and down our street (the same one the Hulk ran down) with a newspaper in the basket between my handlebars. I would stop at each house on our street and throw the paper onto the lawn, wait a few minutes, and retrieve the paper to "deliver" it to the next home. While I don't actually remember the experience of playing papergirl, I somehow remember that I did it as soon as I was old enough to ride my little red honey up and down the street.

I still had many questions as to why I forgot so many other memories, and turned to Aspects of Learning and Memory for some answers. According to this book, forgetting is due to five factors.

1. Delay between the receiving of the original impression and the recalling of it. Well this does not help explain much, because some 19 years have gone by since my tricycle paper-delivery days. That was a delay.

2. Intervention of other mental activities. Hmm, they might have something here. Maybe I have done so much insightful, critical thinking throughout my life that remembering all these things would be too much activity — my head might explode.

3. Receptiveness of person who remembers, which is influenced by a) innate or acquired qualities or b) temporary or permanent pathological conditions. So what, it's like a genetic thing? A natural ineptitude to remember? Thanks.

4. Environment. This was getting frustrating. In what way is my environment not conducive to remembering? There is no eternal cloud of funny smoke in my house and I certainly am not being brainwashed by any cult to forget my past. I have never (seriously) hit my head. Not that I remember, anyway.

5. Organization and transformation of material. Did they mean the way in which my brain organizes information, or the way I go about organizing things to remember? I can be super-organized when I have to, like when it's time to study for an exam or clean my room when mom and pop come up to visit. Or was it really another crack at genetic deficiency?

It seemed that my research was not helping me to unlock the secrets of my past. I better understood a few things about how the mind remembered, but nobody could tell me why I was so forgetful, even on a short-term level.

I put the books away and thought about what a waste the afternoon had been. Oh well, I would probably forget the whole thing happened in no time at all. At least I was sure about that.

Emily Marino is a Collegian columnist.

Another poor player strutting on stage

Andy had always thought the view was great from inside.

Through his eyes the world played, faces soft and loud performing for him and him alone. His ears would filter sounds of laughter and sighs, and he would store all these away within the recesses of his mind to pull back and play for himself when he was alone.

Nathan Crick

Maybe sometimes he would then be able to use them with others, helping to drift into crowds and strange faces with his ability to change his expression with the passing moment.

Andy was driving is his car when he was thinking of this. A slight coat of water had begun to cover everything outside, and the reflections of light were sharp and glaring. The hum of the engine drowned out the radio.

When he was in Junior High he hadn't grown yet. People he had always disliked now physically towered over him, pointing at his shoes or his hair and equating him with all manners of unfashionable metaphors. He wondered if what he cared about was wrong, and he wondered why all the things he enjoyed had suddenly become obsolete. Maybe he was obsolete. An old form of human that had never really evolved. He learned to smile at the towers, and hide away his feelings, and listen to Bon Jovi.

A red light made him stop, and the music interrupted his thoughts. He nervously pumped the gas, making the engine whine, as sleek metal machines swept by his window.

The halls of High School brought packs of people who roamed about, or stood around, or sat within rooms by themselves. Andy would lean on lockers and make jokes with people who tolerated his presence, and with the towers gone he would peacefully watch the people as they passed. They would talk of parties or fights or amusing sexual anecdotes, and he would remember them all and write stories about them when he would go home alone. These things he was not a part of, he'd tell himself. In this world he did not fit. In this world he did not want to fit.

The highway extended ahead, silver and black and looming shadows of mountainsides beside him. The motion felt like sliding down a hill, or falling through the air.

First nights of college brought late nights with a girl he hardly knew, and returns to a hall with more people he did not know but who seemed to call him "friend." A strange word, Andy thought. His presence seemed liked, maybe even desired. He saw a chance to pull out a new face, his chance to finally live as an actor on this grand stage. Stories, music, poetry, all the talents of his insides he could put on display for the audience so they could call him hero. Hello Friend, play us another! And so he did.

Yet the focus of his vision had remained the same. Outside characters still danced, but this time they danced for him. The power of a director, to manipulate the stage and raise himself to new heights in the actors' eyes. Yet inside of him, the tears and laughter and joy that comes from really caring lay suffocated and dying as his exterior hardened into permanence. Lamenting that people did not understand him, he would ignore the fact that there was nothing outside of him to be understood. Every action was refined to a point where one look would take in all there was to see of him on the outside.

His exit passed by quickly, as his hands would not remove him from the rhythm of the highway. The rain had stopped, and all the sounds seemed crisp and open.

Andy went away for a long time, trying to run away from himself although he did not know it. When he returned, he looked upon the faces of his old friends and all he could see was the characters he had created. He tried to hide inside, but this did not seem to work as well as before. So he let them go, blaming it on them for not understanding.

Then one day, one of them stared through the cracks in the mask and told Andy what he saw.

He pulled off onto a scenic area exit, and climbed up the stone ledge behind it. The pinpoint lights of Holyoke spread out in the valley, and the dark silhouettes of the hills blended into the cloudy sky.

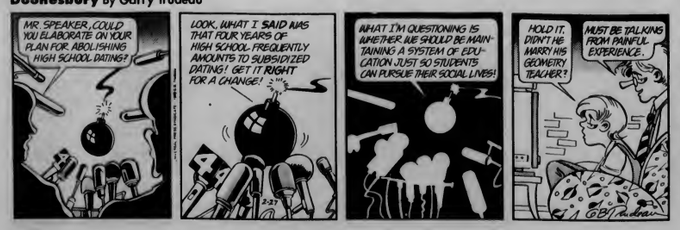
Yet he knew the road, and the sky, and the car that lay below him, only existed as words on a page, and images in his head as he wrote. All of this was another creation of the world and of himself. All of these were just tales and stories, and more mirrors to deflect reality.

I am not a character.

I will not be a character.

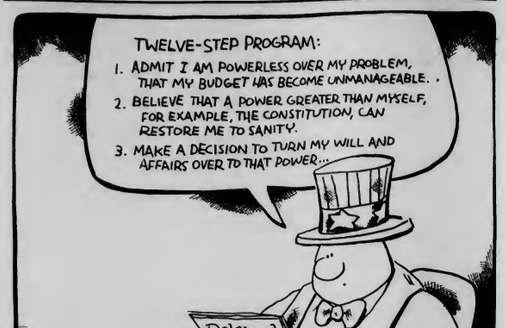
Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau



MR. SPEAKER, COULD YOU ELABORATE ON YOUR PLAN FOR ABOLISHING HIGH SCHOOL DATING?
LOOK, WHAT I SAID WAS THAT FOUR YEARS OF HIGH SCHOOL FREQUENTLY AMOUNTS TO SUBSIDIZED DATING! GET IT RIGHT FOR A CHANGE!
WHAT I'M QUESTIONING IS WHETHER WE SHOULD BE MAINTAINING A SYSTEM OF EDUCATION JUST SO STUDENTS CAN PURSUE THEIR SOCIAL LIVES!
HOLD IT. DIDN'T HE MARRY HIS GEOMETRY TEACHER?
MUST BE TALKING FROM PAINFUL EXPERIENCE.
©1995 GBTrudeau

Opinion/Editorial



TWELVE-STEP PROGRAM:
1. ADMIT I AM POWERLESS OVER MY PROBLEM, THAT MY BUDGET HAS BECOME UNMANAGEABLE.
2. BELIEVE THAT A POWER GREATER THAN MYSELF, FOR EXAMPLE, THE CONSTITUTION, CAN RESTORE ME TO SANITY.
3. MAKE A DECISION TO TURN MY WILL AND AFFAIRS OVER TO THAT POWER...
Balanced Budget Amend.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
©1995 FOR US NEWS & WORLD REPORT
OKAY! I START IN 2002.

President hurting campus image

After attending countless sporting spectacles, including his own wedding reception, University President Michael K. Hooker finally it made past the William D. Mullins Center.

As student protestors gathered outside the hall calling for his resignation, Hooker outlined his plans for the future to our Faculty Senate. Yet many of the problems that he outlined were seen as being clearly caused or exacerbated by the functioning of his own office.

Hooker listed a set of "challenges" that, he claimed, require the University to implement radical and painful changes, although not to his own office which will grow larger and more powerful.

Juan José Chacon Quiros

Asserting that administrative budgets have "grown wildly over the years," Hooker proposed that UMass cut $20 million through administrative efficiencies. However, his hypocrisy emerges from the fact that the millions of dollars drawn away from our campus have gone into creating and maintaining his office, which has only added yet another layer of administrative bureaucracy.

Given the need for administrative cuts, would it not serve everybody's interest to simply abolish the President's office? On this point Hooker said that while he couldn't claim that the creation of his office was good for UMass, the reasons cited at the time were nonetheless still valid. He added that even if he felt that the presidency should be abolished, he would still be forced to remain in office.

Hooker claimed that there was a decline in public confidence in the University, due to what he called "professor bashing books." However, several questioners, particularly Professor Walter Rosenkrantz of the math department, pointed out how Hooker's own "C+" grade evaluation of UMass had done tremendous harm to the University's reputation. "It was a blunder and, as a result, we have lost our confidence in you," Rosenkrantz declared to the cheers of the audience.

The unhappy Hooker at several points tried in vain to disavow the "C+" that he had given the University, suddenly asserting that he meant it only as an "evaluation of the administration and not faculty or students." He tried to claim that he had been misunderstood and misinterpreted by "the press," even though he had later produced a report based on spurious data to back his childish "C+" condemnation.

Hooker claimed that almost all changes at UMass had to be based on "internal reallocations within a given campus," stating that it was impossible to hope for a large increase in state allocations to UMass, or for transfers of cash between campuses. Professor Walter Denny of the art history department rightly pointed out that this was little more than "a scheme for continuing to make rich departments richer and poor departments poorer."

Interestingly, there has recently been a large transfer of resources away from campuses where teaching, learning and research take place, and towards Hooker's office, which is just another bureaucratic septic-tank.

In any case, what good is a Boston-based political president, with spousal connections to the States Legislature, who can arrange his own pay raises very well, but nothing for UMass?

Instead, all Hooker could offer was a Orwellian "University of the 21st Century" in which classes were taught by television and universities "owned no real estate." He backed up the scheme with little more than slick rhetoric and an insulting, comic-book style corporate pamphlet.

Hooker's self-serving political ambitions were on full display, but unfortunately for him, do not merit a passing grade. As for his University leadership, having failed miserably to achieve any legitimate goal for UMass, few will contest that we would all be far better off without the Presidency in general, and especially the man himself.

Juan Jose Chacon Quiros de Quetzacoatl is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Chancellor Scott responds to article

To the editor:

An article published on Feb. 23 quoted someone who wrongly attributed to me the impetus behind an attempt by some Student Government Association members to have the SGA condemn the Black Student Union and Phi Beta Sigma for inviting speakers to campus.

I never suggested that any student group be condemned for its choice of speakers.

I have encouraged people to use appropriate avenues to voice their concerns and thoughts on issues, including anti- Semitism. I would think it appropriate, therefore, for the SGA to discuss a resolution censuring bigotry in any form.

But it would be wrong to censure groups who invite people to speak on campus. That would chill the free exchange of ideas, which is the underpinning of any educational institution.

If there is a speaker on campus who espouses hatred, let us condemn that speech. More importantly, and appropriately for a university, let us use that speech as an opportunity to educate a wide audience about the dangers of prejudice.

David Scott
Chancellor

Quote about protest misinterpreted

To the editor:

Relying on the media for information on racial issues simply leaves us misinformed and divided. When the original article recounting the incident at Franklin Dining Hall occurred a protester was misquoted as saying "The Caucasian workers were looking through the glass so of course we're lower than them." Naturally this caused a great deal of upset for many workers in the Dining Hall. I responded personally to the issue by writing an editorial. Relying on the accuracy of the quote printed in the Collegian, I rejected the protesters efforts. Information regarding the quote in my editorial was cut out.

This left the reader with the impression of a simple rejection of the protester efforts. In response to my editorial, a student reacted to a cut up editorial that did not represent my views. The views I do stick to is that sympathy is all any of us can feel for the incident other than Mr. Dottin and Mr. Ware. I can be angry of the ignorance by the line server, but beyond that I have no right to feel personally violated.

The truth is that few are willing to personally deal with the racial issues. It seems to be enough for many to simply sit back and read the Collegian. Then think about the issue a little, talk to a few friends, and move on. Let's solve the racism problems face to face with honesty.

Can't we learn about one another's concerns directly? We can't expect the University to settle their racial problems what we can't resolve between our own student body. The papers and protests don't depict the true picture of our views. I invite students of all colors to ask one another how they feel about racism. Don't believe everything you read.

Jennifer Stark
Amherst

Student loans should continue

To the editor:

I read the article in the Feb. 21 issue of the Collegian about our Republican friends in the federal government cutting the student loan exemption program that allows students to go interest-free on their student loans while in school. Representative John Kasich, chairman of the House Budget Committee, is pushing for the elimination of the program.

Perhaps, Mr. Kasich has been shut up in our nation's capital for far too long. Long enough to gorget how expensive higher education is these days. The budget committee's press secretary is quoted as saying "Students should have to pitch in." Well, I have a hard enough time pitching in for my very costly books, and I'm sure I'll be pitching in enough when I have a real job after graduation.

Not only will I be paying the interest on my loans, but I'll be paying off the loans while gracefully getting screwed over by every government agency that can get their hands on me. And I'll have 50 or 60 long years of said screwing to look forward to. Maybe, the Feds should be reminded of how expensive higher education is these days, and that us young democrats do, in fact, vote. I'll be glad to pay my taxes (so that Mr. Kasich and others can go on paid vacations and drive nice cars) when I have the education to get a job so I can afford it.

Milcah Roden
Northampton

Got an opinion?

We want to hear it. If you would like to submit a letter to the editor, please bring it to 113 Campus Center. The Collegian reserves the right to edit for grammar, spelling, clarity and length.

Arts & Living

BMX Bandits' latest crashes

BMX BANDITS.
Life Goes On
Creation/TriStar

A couple of years ago, BMX Bandits, friends of the Glasgow natives Teenage Fanclub, were signed to Britain's universally acclaimed Creation Records by the label's legendary Glaswegian supremo Alan McGee in an act of apparent nepotism. In fact, BMX Bandits have been around for aeons, and their sound suggests so, dating back to the C86/shambling scene.

For years, BMX Bandits released pallid but inoffensive records until "Serious Drugs," off Life Goes On, garnered some attention for its gentle, almost ambiguous, admonition of substance abuse. This was considerably ironic given that fellow Creation bands like Primal Scream (yes, from Glasgow), Oasis and The Boo Radleys have long celebrated copious drug consumption in song and lifestyle.

This twee effort is as good as the BMX Bandits get. Their utter lack of originality betrays all that was wrong with white boy guitar music in 1988, let alone in 1995.

It is immediately tempting to say the songs here, with any suggestion of shaking off the torpor of talentlessness ("Scar," "It Hasn't Ended"), sound like tepid Teenage Fanclub. Those who have heard the latter band's hugely disappointing Thirteen LP will know how wretched retro guitar music can sound when executed without any innovative ideas.

The Fanclub's Norman Blake guests on some tracks with no discernible benefit and the final track, "Kylie's Got A Crush On Us," (an obscure Fanclub song only ever released in a version from a soundcheck) sounded better like that than it does here.

With indistinguishable souffle-light tunes, Duglas Stewart's nauseatingly anaesthetic vocals and quite possibly the worst cover art ever (excepting Crosby, Stills and Nash's Live It Up) there is little more to say other than that this was actually released in Britain in 1993.

I don't know what this country has done to deserve such a delayed, undiplomatic offering. After all, it was not America's fault England and Scotland failed to qualify for the 1994 World Cup. F (Martyn Bone)

NUTMEG SEZ "BOZO THE TOWN"
Weapon of Choice
LooseGroove/Sony

A mainstay of the L.A. scene with a resume that includes playing with Joe Strummer of the Clash and Thelonius Monster, Lonnie Marshall is no stranger to the musical community. Marshall's latest band, Weapon of Choice, showcases more of his funk fixations while dabbling in aspects of metal and jazz. The result of this amalgamation of genres is Nutmeg Sez "Bozo the Town," the band's debut album on LooseGroove, the new label formed by Pearl Jam's Stone Gossard.

Although most funk-metal hybrids are dubbed Chili Pepper clones, Weapon of Choice seem more like a P-Funk for the future. With emphasis on lazy, syncopated rhythms and impeccable grooves, Nutmeg Sez takes a more avant-garde perspective on the status of funk and runs away with it.

Musically, the band is pretty much one big rhythm section, making it easy to lock into their groove and unconsciously start to move to them. Marshall and company show they can get down and dirty with freak out jams on songs like "Nutty NutMeg Phantasy" and "Slavedriver" while exploring more sonic possibilities in "Mark of the Feast" and "Iz Funk Aroma Thers P' Utik."

Comparisons to bands like the Chili Peppers and Fishbone are inevitable, yet one listen to Nutmeg Sez clearly illustrates the difference between what Weapon of Choice and their genre-mates are all about. A- (Wayken Shaw)

THE SECRET LIFE OF THE WATERBOYS 81-85
The Waterboys
Chrysalis

In 1985, The Waterboys were spoken of in the same breath as U2, as stadium-rock contenders. Yet, ex-punk Mike Scott rejected this notion, moving his whole entourage to Ireland where he was welcomed like a prodigal son and began hanging out with Irish musicians while absorbing Guinness, Yeats and jigs in equal measure.

The Secret Life, documents Scott's efforts to capture the mysticism of his heroes C.S. Lewis and Yeats. Sure it's pompous and wildly self-indulgent, but at the same time gloriously uncompromising. Unlike most retrospective collections of B-sides, lost and live tracks, The Secret Life bristles with rough diamonds.

The Secret Life serves a good introduction to The Waterboys pagan-soul music as well as a treasure trove for the dedicated fan. Some of the fifteen tracks have appeared on the band's first three releases, but the arrangements and lyrics are so different that these songs are given a new lease on life.

"This Is The Sea" is presented in it's demo form, complete with Tom Verlaine's (Television) guitar scratchings. Similarly, "A Pagan Place" sparkles with a transcendence that transports you to some Stonehenge Druid ceremony. The Secret Life exudes quality. The songs are crafted with precision and the musicianship is impeccable, especially from sax stalwart "Anto" Thistlethwaite and Karl Wallinger's (from World Party) gospel-tinged hammond.

Remarkably, the unreleased songs such as "Out of Control," "Going To Paris" and the Dee Brown-influenced "Bury My Heart," are equally as good as the re-workings of old favorites. Scott has never received the acclaim as a songwriter he justly deserves, but hopefully this album can rectify that. It's time to let the secret out of the closet. A- (Gareth Curtis)

Walker to address feminist issues

Activist set to talk about Third Wave, women's movement

By Maureen Rozanski
Collegian Correspondent

Tonight, the Distinguished Visitors Program will be presenting a speech by Rebecca Walker, founder of the Third Wave Direct Action Corporation. She will speak about empowerment coming from feminism and political activism.

As a writer, speaker, activist and contributing editor for Ms. magazine, Walker advocates the advancement of females and youths worldwide.

"I felt I could not afford to turn my back on the issues I care about," Walker explained in a press release. She became active in fighting for civil rights legislation and women's rights after she graduated from Yale in 1992.

"I believe that economic and political equality for women, and freedom from sexual violence are the first steps toward a more just and humane society," said Walker.

In a project called Freedom Summer '92, the Third Wave registered twenty thousand new voters in cities across the United States. As the leader of this non-profit organization, she travels nationwide, speaking about the power of the vote for women and people of color.

Walker will speak this evening about her insights on personal and political issues, and how to turn anger into action. She will discuss the socio-political aspects of feminism in society today and how women can overcome obstacles in this realm.

The lecture will be tonight at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Admission is free for UMass students with a valid ID and $2 to the public.

Still Interested In Arts & Living?

It's not too late to start writing about what's hot in the Valley in music, art, theater and much more. Stop down the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, and ask to talk to Matt, Tara, Justin or Mike.

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, March 1,2,3
Open house at the North Fire Station, March 3 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

Begin Your Career Search By Looking For A Seat.
ATTEND OUR CAREER SEMINAR AND JOIN A WINNING TEAM.
John Hancock, an industry leader, takes pride in helping people realize their goals. As the Official Life Insurance Sponsor of the 1994/96 Olympic Teams, we're looking for hard-working, self-motivated individuals to join our team. You'll receive outstanding support and products. Competitive compensation. And the opportunity to train with some of the best in the industry.
February 28, 7pm
at John Hancock Financial Services
330 Whitney Avenue
Holyoke, MA
Call early to make reservations, as seating is limited.
Michael Shaldone
Associate Manager
1-800-774-6354 EXT. 119
John Hancock
OFFICIAL LIFE INSURANCE SPONSORS 1994/1996 U.S. OLYMPIC TEAMS
John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company and affiliated companies
Boston, MA 02117. An equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

Photo Staff Meeting
Thursday Night at 7:00
Bring an empty stomach — there will be pizza.

University Barbers
(Campus Center)
549-0123
Hours:
Weekdays
8 am - 4:45 pm
Sat. 8 am - 2:00 pm
No Appointment Necessary

Do You Enjoy Working With People?
CASIAC is hiring for Summer Orientation and Fall 1995.
Qualified undergraduate applicants accepted from all majors. Work-study and non work-study welcome.
Applications Due March 8, 1995
For More Info Call: 545-2191 E-20 Machmer

Lincoln Real Estate

Apartment Rentals
25 N. Pleasant St.
253-7879

CONTACT LENS SERVICE
at the
University Health Services
- We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
- All fittings are done by an eye doctor with experience in contact lens care and in solving contact lens problems.
- Unlimited follow-up visits are available to you under the UHS Eye Care Savings Plan at no additional cost.
- Reduced costs on contact lenses are available to you under the UHS Eye Care Savings Plan.
- If you tear or damage a contact lens within 45 days after receiving it, we will replace it for you at no extra cost.
- Same day replacement of contact lenses in many cases due to our large in-house inventory.
- Contact lenses can be mailed to you at no extra cost for postage.
- Convenient hours and on-campus location.
- Free sample start-up solutions, as available.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over 20 years has been consistently excellent.
"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

uhs
Eye Care Program
University Health Services
Call 549-2671 ext 244
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.

GREAT EXPERIENCE
GREAT PAY
ADVERTISING REPRESENTITIVES
The Collegian Advertising Staff is now looking for ambitious self starters who aren't afraid to "beat the pavement"
Applications are available at:
THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
Deadline: March 10, 1995
GREAT JOB!

Bryce

continued from page 8

Well, last Thursday, Williams was sitting out a suspension that lasts for the rest of the season, Calipari and Chaney were threatening and shouting at only their own players, and the game was not decided in the final seconds. The young, inexperienced Owls, off freshman Johnny Miller's 25 points and seven three-pointers, defeated the deep, talented No. 5 Minutemen, 72-63.

And as the crowd swarmed onto the court after the upset, the realization that this small gym was special came to mind. The upset, the rivalry, the reputation, the significance of senior day, the atmosphere, the tradition — all were powerful contributers to the feeling.

Think about it. Temple University has an enrollment of 32,000 students, and the old-style gymnasium seats under 4,000 people. It is a task for the ones who want to take in a game at McGonigle. But they want to be there.

The whole basketball game atmosphere had an edge, an attitude. The fan who had a t-shirt that had UMass printed above an extended middle finger was part of it. The crowd chanting "UMass sucks" did not surprise me. The rolled-up ball of tin foil from a hot dog that nailed my head as I walked down the aisle was a blatant hint of how everything came into full circle.

It wasn't the Pioneer Valley, and we weren't in the Mullins Center. Calipari was not getting on the microphone to prevent the crowd from storming the court following the game. And Chaney did not comment on having the "classiest fans in America," a la Calipari.

This was Philly, and this was McGonigle Hall; a constricted place in an area with virtually no restrictions. What Amherst is to peaceful, Philly is to a full- fledged warzone. Differences in scenery, reputation and location are just the beginning.

And as I listened to the disgruntled man in the stands shout out vulgarities to the ushers and television crew because he could not stand up in the way of the camera, it put a smile on my face. That's what made last Thursday so special. Not the annoying spectator, but the unique atmosphere. All compressed into a small basketball gymnasium called McGonigle Hall.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Temple coach John Chaney failed to keep the rowdy crowd under control in Philadelphia Thursday.

hockey

continued from page 8

minors at 10:38. After containing the Huskies forwards well on Matthews Arena's 186 by 85 foot ice surface, the smallest in Division I, the resulting 4-on-4 situation did in the Minutemen.

Friday night saw the Minutemen fall 7-3 to Northeastern before a senior day crowd of 4,176 at the Mullins Center.

The team honored senior Brian Corcoran before the game as Mallen and Associate Athletic Director Bob Pickett presented Corcoran with a sweater, hat and their heartfelt thanks on a fantastic football and hockey career at UMass. Corcoran was unable to play, however, due to the league mandated one game suspension that accompanied the game misconduct he received against UMass-Lowell.

After falling behind early 2-0, Sal Manganaro closed the gap to 2-1 just before the first intermission for UMass. Perry threaded a beautiful pass between a pair of Husky defensemen, right onto the tape of a speeding Manganaro, who had a breakaway on Veisor.

From there though, it was all Huskies, as they scored four unanswered goals to extend their lead to 6-1 early in the third. Jason Melong had a hat trick for Northeastern, while J.F. Aube and Jordan Shields scored two goals apiece.

Tom Perry scored late for the Minutemen, as did Judd Smith, who scored his first career goal off of a Jon Jacques feed from behind the net. Rich Moriarty got the start Friday and turned away 28 of the Huskies' 35 shots.

UMass will return to Matthews Arena Saturday night to close out the regular season.

"If we don't win one of the next two games, I know that I'm going to be awful mad here all summer long," Mallen said. "I'm not going to be happy with the end of our season, regardless of how well we play."

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

UMass goaltender Rich Moriarty took the two losses in net for the Minutemen this weekend, as the Minutemen fell to Northeastern.

Massachusetts 77, St. Joseph's 58

At Alumni Field House, Philadelphia

Lou Roe – 24 points, 9 rebounds

MASSACHUSETTS (21-4)

Dingle 3-4 3-3 9, Roe 9-10 6-9 24, Camby 3-6 0-0 6, Padilla 4-12 3-4 12, Kellogg 3-10 0-1 6, Weeks 1-2 1-4 3, Bright 2-7 6-10 10, Travieso 2-6 0-0 5, Nuñez 1-2 0-0 2, Meyer 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 28-59 19-31 77.

ST. JOSEPH'S (15-10)

Worley 5-14 1-2 11, Domani 1-3 0-0 2, Townsend 7-16 0-0 14, Bass 0-7 6-10 6, Blunt 3-13 6-8 13, Johnson 2-3 0-0 4, Bey 0-3 0-0 0, Myers 2-4 3-4 8, Simmonds 0-2 0-0 0, Del Vescovo 0-1 0-0 0. Totals 20-66 16-24 58.

Halftime: Massachusetts 29, St. Joseph's 25. 3-Point goals-Massachusetts 2-12 (Travieso 1-1, Padilla 1-6, Bright 0-1, Nuñez 0-1, Kellogg 0-3), St. Joseph's 2-10 (Blunt 1-1, Myers 1-2, Del Vescovo 0-1, Worley 0-1, Domani 0-1, Bass 0-4). Fouled out-Johnson. Rebounds-Massachusetts 48 (Weeks 10), St. Joseph's 37 (Worley 9). Assists-Massachusetts 18 (Kellogg 6), St. Joseph's 10 (Bass 4). Total fouls-Massachusetts 18, St. Joseph's 25

Technicals-Massachusetts coach Calipari, Roe, Worley. A-3,200.

Highlights...

With Marcus Camby and Inus Norville hindered by illness and injury, Roe and Tyrone Weeks were forced to handle most of the inside game duties themselves. Weeks, playing in the second game of his return trip to his home city of Philadelphia, stepped up grabbing 10 boards and was a physical presence inside ... Derek Kellogg was solid playing 34 minutes handing out six assists, while committing only two turnovers .... Reggie Townsend was solid in the first half for the Hawks scoring 10 points, but cooled off with only four points after intermission.

men's hoop

continued from page 8

means that the Minutemen need to win only one of their two remaining games (tomorrow against Rhode Island or the continuation of the Rutgers game) to capture their fourth straight Atlantic 10 regular season title. After sweeping the season series with the Minutemen, GW was gaining rapidly on the Minutemen in the conference race.

"We haven't had our backs against the wall in a long time," Calipari said. "I'm excited how we responded. This was a huge win. I'm going to enjoy this."

UMass improves to 21-4 (11-3 in the A-10), while the loss leaves St. Joe's at 15-10 (8-7). Unless the Hawks capture the conference title, their chances of making the NCAA Tournament are extremely slim.

Massachusetts returns to action tomorrow night when it takes on Rhode Island in the final regular season home game of the season. Seniors Kellogg, Roe, Jeff Meyer and Jason Germain will be honored as part of the traditional senior night ceremonies.

Sports Notice

There will be an important Collegian Sports meeting Thursday night at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office (113 Campus Center Basement). If you can not make it you must call Andrew Bryce or Matt Vautour at 545-1851.

women's hoop

continued from page 8

The Lady Mountaineers were led by Hargis who wreaked havoc against the Minutewomen all day. The 5-foot-8 freshman guard scored a game-high 21 points, grabbed a game-high tying eight rebounds, dished out a team-high six assists and had a game-high four steals.

UMass improved to 17-8 overall, 12-3 in the A-10, good enough for second place in the conference behind George Washington who owns a 12-2 conference record.

Kuzmeski finally set the career record for most three- pointers made (99) after failing to set it the past two games. Kuzmeski hit two treys on the afternoon and finished with eight points. She also dished out a game-high seven assists which tied her career-high.

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

ALANA Christian Alliance presents a heritage mini-gospel concert/soc-al Sunday March 5, 1995 Campus Center auditorium featuring a live college mass choir. If you would like to sing with the mass choir for this one time event contact Chuck 6-0950 ASAP

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. FS011.

Learn to bartend with University bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst. Free info session. Mon. Feb. 27th, Lord Jeffery Inn, at 7pm, or call 1-800-3-CAM-MIX.

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Mazda RX-7 94K, 5 spd, bra, sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500 Call 253-3149

Ford Tempo 1984 light blue (automatic) 58,000 miles only Runs like new Excellent condition Asking for $2300 or b.o. Call Ilse at 549-8133

Mustang GT 1989 Beautiful shape, alarm, sunroof, 5 spd, burgandy, loaded 785 Call Aaron 546-4327

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, ropes course, athletics, arts and crafts. For applications call 609-474-2756

FOR RENT

Noho 1 br in 4 br apt Center 586-7540 Joseph Avbj immediately

Two rooms available! 230+ a month Off rt. 9 Amherst Kitter house w/ yards, on bike path + bus route. Right near Stop + Shop. Sorry, no phone yet call 546-0884 leave name + number with Tim

FOR SALE

Alpine 7917 3M motor, full logic, detach face, dolby $175 Alpine 80WED component spkr set 4" mids, 1" dome tweeters, $100 Kenwood KAC 624 amp 80 W/Z, 180 W1 $85 Alpine 3521 amp 18W/4 130 Watts/mono 4 head VCR HQ, unified remote, $140 Call 253-3149

Atari, IntelliVision, Colecovision games, controllers and systems. Buy/Sell/Trade 256-1995, ask for Tony

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $589! Call Chris at 800-289-5685

2966386 computer system CPU monitor keyboard $225 Steve 549-5181

Mountain bike Bianchi Peregrine 18" STX LX 500 disc Mavizchi XC500 shocks 150 256-8977 Dave

Save $$$. U.S. Air anywhere by March 28 $173 value for $110 for more 549-4015

Two Petty tix Albany March 21 14th row center. Good prices greet seats. Call now 584-8982

Want a Macintosh? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Claraworks $490 Christopher 548-7453

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain. Call Bill at 6-0204

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol. Credit available Casa Box 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512-416-8991

HELP WANTED

Camp Canadensis; Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Looking for caring counselors to help teach all land and water sports, mtn. bikes, motorcycles, arts + crafts, climbing wall, ropes course, radio, newspaper, waterskiing, jet skiing, and much more. Summer season 6/12/95 thru 8/18/95. Call 800-832-8228 for an application

Camp Taconic: Prestigious coed Massachusetts camp hiring motivated, team-oriented undergrads and grads who love working with kids. General counselors and instructors in swimming, watersports, team/individual land sports, tennis, ropes/camping, arts/crafts, silver jewelry, photography, video, newspaper, musical theatre, dance, science/rocketry. Competitive salaries. Rewarding enjoyable work! 800-782-2820

Counselors for coed N E PA overnight Jewish Federation camp--3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront, + arts Call 1-800-973-3866 On campus interviews available

Cruise ships hiring Earn up to $2000 +/month World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp necessary for info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50014

Dancers wanted No experience necessary. Earn $1000-$1500 per week 532-1422

Fill your resume - Fill your wallet! University Directories, the nation's largest publisher of campus telephone directories, is hiring students to sell advertising for the University of Amherst student telephone directory. The summer internship begins with an expense paid, week long training program on the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus. Gain experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings are $2,860--$5,250. Course credit may be available. Travel opportunities exist in university markets across the U.S. Interview date - Tuesday, February 28th. Sign up at the Visitor's Center, weekdays 9:00am - 4:30pm.

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Westhampton on Cape Cod. Call Holly at 349-8387

Fundraiser exclusively for fraternities, sororities + student organizations. Earn money without spending a dime. Just 3-5 days of your time. A little work--alot of money. Call for info. No obligation 1-800-932-0528 ext 65

Guaranteed 40 hours/week exterior painting in local area during summer. Need hungry hard working people. No experience needed. Potential earnings above $3000. Michael Bulow 413-545-2120

Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 785-5490 after 2 p.m.

Summer camp on Cape Cod. Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program, competitive salaries. Call Rob at 549-8417 for info and application.

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $7,000- $4,000+/mo. Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

LOST

All black kitten with green eyes. His name is Chubby and was last seen in Tobin on 2/21/95. Please call 253-0858

PERSONALS

Aimee TY I'm full of laughs and smiles and fun I love to dance with everyone I live on campus and have brown eyes I'm your Phi friend, you'll be surprised!

Billy Gans, I dream that you will hold me like you did the girl in your movie. Maybe we can make our own movie someday. Mgr. 301 admirer

Christine, Guess who I am. It's a big surprise I'm a new sister. With dark hair & dark eyes Phi love ?

Congratulations to Tri Sigma's newest members: Corrie, Chelsea, Clara, Kelly and Elana! Get psyched for a fun filled semester.

Deena D'Orazio, Hello and welcome to AEPhi! We're all so happy to have you on the Kappa new member class. Get psyched for a great semester, it will be Phinatic! Phi love, Guess who?

Hot! Hot! Hot! Some stuff on this page could be stolen merchandise. Be sure to ask for a bill of sale if you buy an item from here. Remember, Citibank is looking out for you.

Insomniac party line. Customer service reps are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for your questions and emergencies Call 1-800-C-Citibank to apply

Jen Charoff, It's almost time to find who I am? Phi love, Your Phi friend

Lauren W. I'm your Phi friend and I am with brown hair & green eyes. Can you guess who I am? I'm one of the newest Phi's Mollie D. Any guesses as to who has your pants? Well don't lose your shorts over it.

Rexus Ginsberg, Congratulations on becoming a new member of AEPhi! Get ready for an amazing semester. Love your Phi friend

Seinfill Don't worry. Got a good feeling about this semester. MB's will purrrrderrr. Mecgoyver

Shawn Cohen: positions held can do the trick! Good luck! We're sooo proud of you! Phi love- Your Phi friend

Someone to watch over you We look out for students better than any other credit card. Call 1-800-Citibank to apply. Note: we won't hit on your dates

The sisters of SDT would like to welcome our new ribbonettes Megan, Amy, Danielle, Suzanne, Shen, Leigh, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julia, Terri, Samantha, Erin B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lee.

To my best friend, You're my reminder to never lose hope and to always find a reason to smile. Happy 20th birthday tomorrow. Love, Michele

To the Delta Zeta spring '95 new member class: Jen, Jessica, Jessica, Deb, Fran, Zessie, Jen, Sheri, Liz, Melissa, Nicole, Jaffe, Caryn, Bonke, Betsy, Sharon, Erica, Shira, & Stacey welcome to DZ! We are so excited for all of you. Get psyched for an amazing semester- the best is yet to come! Good luck! Love in DZ, the sisters

RIDE WANTED

Need ride to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends Ges $. 253-7809

ROOM WANTED

Want a room for May! Grad student seeks room in house to rent starting in May- would rent for one year. Angela 546-1851

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo, Florida Spring Break Earn 2 credits Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0877

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7:10pm 1-800-282-0877 Project Deep

SERVICES

International students - visitors DV-1 green card program, by U.S. Immigration Legal Services. Tel (818) 882-9681, (818) 998-4425. 2031 Stagg St., Canoga Park, CA 91306. Monday-Sunday 10am-10pm

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS 256-5085, 19.2 K bps 130 megs online + CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Scholarship money is available! I can help you locate and receive it. Call for details. 817-782-8075

You take your writing seriously and so do we. For more information about quality editing by e-mail, write to Editing Translational at editrans@aol.com

TRAVEL

Killington ski vacation. Five nights here, five days lift tickets. Good during any Monday in this season. Worth $1000 just to beat offer. $-2156 details

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 6 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $479! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Data entry and word processing. Reliable and fast. Call Andy 586-0875

WANTED

Old Cabbage Patch Kids from the 80's Call Heidi 546-1381

HOW TO KEEP PEOPLE'S HANDS OFF YOUR MONEY.

- Carry only enough cash to last the day. Anyone who tries to borrow your last five spot isn't a friend, anyway.
- Label your spare-change jar "beetle farm." Then, put your beetle farm in a jar labeled "spare change."
- Mark up every space on checks. Don't leave room for someone to fill in their name and extra zeros.
- Keep your wallet in your front pocket. It discourages pickpockets. So does wearing really tight pants.
- Put your picture on your credit card. A Citibank Photocard is tough for anyone else to use, unless they look just like you.

© 1995 Citibank (South Dakota), N.A.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

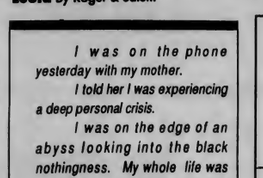
Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

NOW THAT I KNOW I CAN'T FEEL ANY PAIN, I'M GONNA DO EVERYTHING I WAS ALWAYS AFRAID TO DO...
HELLO...I'M THINKIN' YOUR BALL AND CHAIN AIN'T A DRAG THING THIS SOON AS ABOUT IT!
UHUHN!
I THOUGHT YOU SAID CARTOON CHARACTERS CAN'T FEEL PAIN
EVERY GUY FEELS THAT PAIN
SCHNEIDER'BIKE

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

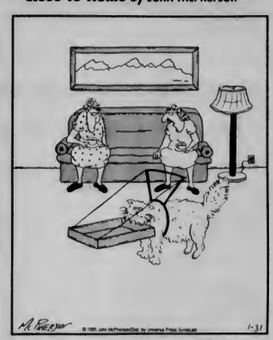
IT'S LATE! WE GOTTA GO!
TOO BAD! YOU'RE REAL FUN GUYS!
COME BACK SOON, SO WE CAN HANG OUT AGAIN!
I'LL BET THE ONLY MUGGING THEY DO FROM NOW ON WILL BE IN THE MIRROR!

Leeld By Roger & Salem



I was on the phone yesterday with my mother.
I told her I was experiencing a deep personal crisis.
I was on the edge of an abyss looking into the black nothingness. My whole life was passing before me like a meaningless parade of failures.
I told her, "Something is missing, mom. I'm going to collapse right here on the phone. I need help. I'm going to kill myself. I'm going to disappear!"
She didn't say anything for a long time.
Finally, she said, "Did you pick up your shoes at the store today?"
I said, "No, but thanks for reminding me. I'll get them later."

Close to Home By John McPherson



The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

PETER, WHAT HAPPENED TO THOSE MUGGERS?
THEY DECIDED I DIDN'T HAVE ENGLISH MONEY FOR THEM TO BOTHER STEALING!
IN THAT CASE, I'LL PAY FOR OUR COFF--
OH NO!
WHAT'S WRONG, HONEY?
MY WALLET! IT'S GONE!

Stickman By Mattzog Bellucci

Bruno By C. Baldwin

LIFE'S THE SHITS HAHN!
NO KIDDING, WHAT'S YOUR POINT?
BASKETBALL TEAMS DEAFEN ME DUE TO ACADEMIC STANDING AND BEHAVE OUTSIDE THE COURT
WHAT THE HELL? THAT GOT TO DO WITH BASKETBALL?
NO SHIT
POLITICALLY THIS DOES NOT PAINT A PRETTY PICTURE
AND WHAT THE HELL SORRY FASCISTS HAVE TO DO WITH IT?
TRUE. I ACTUALLY AGREED WITH YOU, DESPITE MY PERSONAL BIASED INTELLECTUAL VIEW THAT'S SPARES ME PRETTY DUMB
THANKS A LOT, AND FROM AN INTELLECTUAL VIEW, I MOST THAT BOY IS GRATEFUL AND SARCASTICALLY
TOUCHE

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'VE REPLACED THE OLD RATING SYSTEM (WITH A FRIENDLIER METHOD. NOW I COMPARE EACH OF YOU TO AN ANIMAL WITH SIMILAR TRAITS
I RATED YOU "TYRANNOSAURUS REX."
T REX - THE MIGHTIEST DINOSAUR!!
THINK IN TERMS OF BRAIN SIZE.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'M HAPPY TO REPORT THAT THE "EXCELLENCE IN TEAMING" READ-OUT IS NEARLY READY
IT'S TAKEN FORTY PEOPLE FROM A DOZEN DEPARTMENTS TO COMPLETE THE STUDY. WE FINALLY GOT COMPLETE BUY-IN
IS THAT THE STUDY OF WHY WE CAN'T MAKE DECISIONS?
ORIGINALLY, BUT IT EVOLVED INTO MORE OF A DISCUSSION OF SQUIRREL MIGRATION PATTERNS.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Emily Marino
Copy Editor ..... Marni Helfner
Photo Technician ..... Paul Bilodeau
Production Supervisor ..... Mark Mitchell
Production ..... Candice Flemming
Devin Brown

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
Noodle Bake
Chicken Pucks
BASICS LUNCH
Noodle Bake
Ratatouille

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Spaghetti 'n Balls
BASICS DINNER
Veggie Stew
Spaghetti 'n Balls

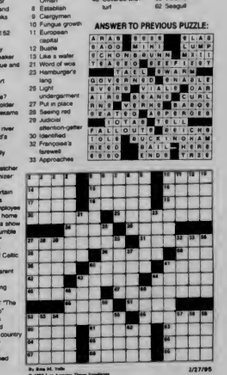
Daily Crossword

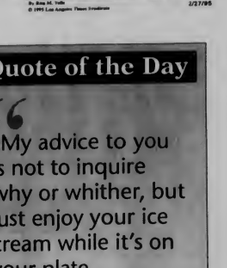
Edited by Truda Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Mop
5 Hold tightly
10 "— in Space"
14 South American capital
15 Employer
16 Panama is one: Abbr.
17 Lemon and lime drinks
18 Let up
19 Roman 152
20 Type of telepathy
22 Loudspeaker
24 Martinique and others
26 Book part
27 Porcine language?
31 Lease holder
35 Cartain exams
38 Alma —
39 Scottish river
39 Tightwad's word
40 Lily-family plants
41 Truth stretcher
42 Sympathizer's suffix
43 More certain
44 Prophets
46 Bank employee
47 Hound's home
49 Puts on a show
51 Take a tumble
52 "Grease" hairstyle
56 Island of Celtic myth
60 Abel's parent
61 Things
63 Rappelling need
64 Williams' "The — Tattoo"
65 Wrinkles
66 Bleached
67 Mideast country
68 Weather forecast
69 Dispatched

DOWN
1 Close with force
2 Broad
3 Exactly!
4 — Day: July 14 in France
5 Home for Heidi
6 Ad —
7 Man from Oman
8 Establish
9 Cargomen
10 Fungus growth
11 European capital
12 Bugle
13 Like a wafer
21 Word of woe
23 Hamburger's lang
29 Light undergarment
27 Put in place
28 Sawing rod
29 Judicial afternoon-getter
30 Identified
32 Francoise's farewell
33 Approaches
34 Taciturn
37 Portunal-leader's card
40 Cuts short
41 Spotted cats
43 Religious group
44 Hood's weapon
46 Non-professionals
48 Covered with turf
50 Protest, in a way
52 Mutuel lead-in
53 Scant
54 Space agcy
55 Jay of TV
57 Legendary knowledge
58 Linclose
59 Salamander
62 Seagull

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:





Fr. Bros. Inc. 1/27/95
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Your chances for a raise or promotion are excellent now. Secret transactions contain pitfalls. Be careful. Drink more whiskey. Use all of your resources to build a stronger financial base.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): The news from afar is encouraging. Return phone calls and answer correspondence while you have the opportunity. A partnership may prove more profitable than going it alone. Always check the reference of job applicants.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Your career and prestige are in the spotlight. Dress conservatively but with style. An emergency may demand more cash than you have on hand. A friend comes to the rescue.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): A close friend passes on confidential information that will help you handle a sensitive business situation. A joint venture produces more interest than you anticipated. Enrolling in computer class will improve your earning power.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Assistance comes from a powerful and successful associate. Your dreams for the future get a big boost. Be a friend to those who are less fortunate. Offer practical help, not platitudes. Romance gradually deepens.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): A very busy day lies ahead. Although you may feel tired by lunchtime, afternoon brings a wonderful recovery. Spend a quiet evening at home with someone who really cares. Discuss shared interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Your rapport with your business associates is much better now. Resist an urge to try to balance the budget by gambling. Romance needs more time to blossom. When a teen-ager talks, offer a sympathetic ear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): An excellent day for traveling and negotiating agreements. Read the fine print on contracts with special care, consulting a lawyer if necessary. Original ideas will impress those in positions of influence. Make long-distance calls.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Behind-the-scenes activities will stimulate new business. Your partner or mate may be in a feisty, competitive mood. Avoid a direct confrontation. Financial backing comes from an unexpected source. Guard against giving up your independence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Higher-ups will applaud your efforts now. Go ahead and ask for favors. Productivity will rise when you offer special incentives. Follow through on weekend romance prospects. Word business memos and letters very carefully; say exactly what you mean.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Unusual events on the work scene liven things up. A lunchtime walk or exercise break will reduce stress. If you do not yet have a regular savings program, start one. You can treat yourself later!

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Creative work will catch the eye of prominent people. Obtain professional advice before taking on additional responsibilities. Romance should develop nicely if you make the first move. Wear something elegant to a formal event.

Massachusetts Finance Society

MEETING TONIGHT FEBRUARY 27, 1995
6:30PM SBA Rm. 109

Speaker:
Professor Richard Spurgin
Experiences on Wall St.

Topics of Discussion:
Society Trips to:
Boston - Meetings with Mutual Fund Managers
Wall St.- Meetings with Investment Bankers

Pizza Will Be Served! Semester Dues Only $5!
Members and Non-Members Welcome

Quote of the Day

"My advice to you is not to inquire why or whither, but just enjoy your ice cream while it's on your plate."

–Thorton Wilder

SportsWeekend

Collegian Sports • Monday, February 27, 1995

Inside this issue:

- Lou Roe lead the Minutemen to a much needed victory over St. Joseph's Saturdy after Thursday's Temple letdown.
- Andrew Bryce tells about the Temple experience as a visiting fan of what is possibly one of the most hated college basketball teams in America.
- Sweet last-second moves by Octavia Thomas saved the minutwomen on the court against West Virginia this weekend.
- Minutemen inexperience and superb play by the Northeastern Huskies caused the men's hockey team to suffer two weekend losses.

An energized Roe leads UMass past St. Joseph's

■ Senior All-America candidate shines, scores 24 points to restore team morale

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — Coming off a disheartening loss to Temple, the University of Massachusetts basketball team turned to its player with the biggest heart on Saturday.

Senior co-captain Lou Roe turned in a spectacular individual effort, scoring 24 points and grabbing nine rebounds as Massachusetts defeated St. Joseph's 77–58 at Alumni Field House Saturday.

"Lou was outstanding," said Massachusetts coach John Calipari. "You saw what he could do today and that was just a small dose. He can do so much more."

What the Hawk Hill fans did see was a near flawless performance by the National Player of the Year Candidate. He shot 9-for–10 from the floor, despite facing two and sometimes three defenders every time he touched the ball.

Calipari pointed to the previous day's practice as the springboard for Roe's spirited effort.

"He had a great practice [Friday]," Calipari said. "He worked harder than anybody. I told him [after the practice], you'll play a great game."

Frontcourt mate Tyrone Weeks said that you could see Roe's intensity just by looking at him.

"He looked like a man possessed, like a great warrior," Weeks said.

The trip was a return home for Weeks, who also had an impressive performance against the Hawks. The Philly native grabbed a game high 10 rebounds.

Weeks' play offset the fact that the usually deep Minuteman frontcourt was unusually thin for Saturday's contest. Marcus Camby, who played a monster game against Temple, was hindered by illness, relegating him to only 15 minutes of action. Inus Norville sat out his second straight game with a hip injury.

"I knew I had to step up to help the team win," Weeks said. "It feels great [to be home] but I wish we could have beaten Temple."

Calipari was pleased with the play of his sophomore forward.

"Tyrone was as big a difference as anyone," Calipari said. He gets 10 rebounds, a block and a steal, and how about him diving for balls."

The Minutemen, who were still reeling from that loss to Temple, came to play against St. Joe's.

The Hawks hung in throughout the first half, led by 10 early points by junior center Reggie Townsend, as the Minutemen could not build a lead any greater than eight points. The score was 29–25 at halftime, but less than three minutes after the intermission Roe came to life, and Massachusetts took over.

Roe drove to the basket, got fouled, and screamed in the face of St. Joe's Will Johnson. The display of emotion earned the All–America candidate a technical foul, but more importantly it inspired Massachusetts. The Minutemen tore off a 9–0 run, and two minutes later, Carmelo Travieso drained a three-pointer put Massachusetts ahead 47–34, effectively icing the game.

After what was clearly its worst performance of the season against Temple, the Massachusetts backcourt play was greatly improved versus St. Joe's.

Derek Kellogg handed out six sssists, with only two turnovers, as the Minuteman co–captain logged 34 minutes. Edgar Padilla (12 points) and Travieso (5 points) also shot much better.

The UMass win coupled with George Washington's loss to Temple

Turn to MEN's HOOP, page 6

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Lou Roe stepped up to Will Johnson and the rest of the St. Joseph's Hawks, playing like a warrior on Saturday. Roe scored 24 points while grabbing nine rebounds.

Temple experience tests UMass fans

Andrew Bryce

PHILADELPHIA — There we were, five confused media persons, trying to find Temple's very own McGonigle Hall last Thursday for the Owls game against Massachusetts.

As we searched, we crossed Broad Street a few times. You know, that same street the Philadelphia Flyers' rough style led to them being dubbed the "Broad Street Bullies." We drove through the area where graffiti-covered buildings graced both sides of the streets. You know, the kind of area where it's the norm to lock the car doors for safety reasons.

After a few unsuccessful stops at gas stations to ask irritated attendants how to get to McGonigle, we decided to ask the people at Temple University Hospital. After making sure we were driving instead of walking, she gave us directions. You know, looking out for the out–of–towners in the heart of a rough Philadelphia district.

And there it was ... McGonigle Hall. The infamous home court of the Temple Owls where, heading into the Massachusetts game, they had won 161 of 184 games since it was built. The place where coach John Chaney became famous over the last 12 seasons. You know, that hard–core educator who has received as much praise for his educating and coaching abilities as he does for his aggressive personality.

Last Thursday's contest had a special feel, as it was senior night for a couple of Temple players. The sold–out crowd of 3,900 went berserk, giving a standing ovation to seniors Rick Brunson and Chris Ozment. Maybe not exactly the atmosphere of last year's tilt, which marked Round II of the infamous John Calipari–John Chaney confrontation that followed UMass' 56–55 victory in Amherst. You remember, the one where the Temple coach exploded with several threats and obscenities to Calipari.

As for last season's game at McGonigle, fans filled the student section by 6 p.m. — for a 9 p.m. game. According to one Massachusetts reporter, "they weren't just there three hours early, they were cheering the whole time." And in a game from which it took another reporter's ear "a day to recover," Mike Williams silenced the stunned McGonigle Hall crowd with a buzzer–beating bank shot three pointer from just inside of halfcourt to give the Minutemen their first–ever victory at Temple's home court.

Turn to BRYCE, page 6

UMass swept by the Huskies

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — The Northeastern University Huskies completed a weekend sweep of the University of Massachusetts, before 1,382 at Matthews Arena Saturday.

The Minutemen's (5–26–2, 3–20 in Hockey East) inexperience enabled the Huskies (15–13–5, 10–8–5) to overcome a 3–1 deficit, late in the second period, and take the game 4–3.

Just 17 seconds after opening up a 3–1 lead at the 14:22 mark of the second, Northeastern's Tomas Persson skated up ice against UMass' Mike Evans and Mike Gaffney. Both Minutemen stepped up to take the puck and collided with one another, leaving Persson with a clean break in on Dave Kilduff. Persson wristed the puck through the five hole, and the Huskies never looked back.

"It was as good an effort as we've had in a while, but it's not good enough," coach Joe Mallen said. "We're not going to get to the next level unless we win games like this."

Kilduff played a phenomenal game between the pipes, making 31 tough saves and was named the game's number two star for his efforts. Still, due to some third period defensive breakdowns his efforts were in vain.

"Kilduff really gave us a good start," Mallen said. "He made some good saves in the first period which allowed us to play [an even game]."

The Minutemen came out of the gate rather apathetically, and might have been down 2–0 early if not for some brilliant saves by Kilduff that kept them from falling behind early.

Northeastern	4
Massachusetts	3

UMass awoke 9:55 into the game as Sal Manganaro broke through the Husky defense, freezing goalie Mike Veisor, before passing to a wide open Mike Evans on the doorstep, who fired the puck into the open net for a 1–0 lead.

The lead doubled five minutes later when a Dale Hooper blast missed the net, but Tom Perry was able to collect the ricochet off of the end boards and put it past Veisor.

UMass came out fired up as the second period opened, but the Huskies would notch the period's first score on a fluke powerplay tally. With the puck caught behind the Minuteman net, Kilduff, Tiger Holland and Jaynen Rissling attempted to tie up the puck, but it managed to squirt loose to the side of the net, where the Huskies' Scott Campbell pulled it out of the scrum and deposited it in the net.

Northeastern	7
Massachusetts	3

Warren Norris notched the Minutemen's third goal at 14:22 of the second. Norris was all alone in the slot after a pair of passes by Jon Jacques and Blair Wagar spread out the Northeastern defense.

After closing the gap to 3–2 on Persson's tally, both teams came out hard early on in the third. An even period took a turn for the worse for the Minutemen, when Perry and Hart Webb were called for coincidental slashing

Turn to HOCKEY, page 6

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen lost two games this weekend to the Northeastern Huskies.

Minutewomen squeak by West Virginia

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team needed two Octavia Thomas free throws with 8.2 seconds left to get by hapless West Virginia, 71–70, on Saturday in Morgantown, W.Va.

When the two teams met up with each other on Feb. 2 in the William D. Mullins Center, the Minutewomen came away with a 89–64 convincing win over the Lady Mountaineers, now 7–18 overall, 4–12 in the Atlantic 10.

The Minutewomen jumped out to a 31–27 halftime lead behind nine points from freshman Tez Kraft (15 total points), who was starting her fifth straight game in place of Thomas. Thomas scored eight first–half points.

UMass started the second half with a 9–2 run to increase its four–point lead to 11. But over the next six minutes, the Lady Mountaineers slowly chipped away at the lead until they finally took their first lead of the second half, 48–47, on a Christie Lambert trey with 10:02 left.

Melissa Gurile (14 points) then hit two free throws to give the Minutewomen the lead once again, 49–48, a lead which they would not relinquish for the rest of the game. UMass went on a 8–2 run to increase its lead to, 57–50.

But West Virginia responded with a 6–0 run to cut the lead to 57–56 with 5:23 remaining. The Minutewomen increased their lead to five, 63–58, with 3:36 left on a Crystal Carroll (13 points) jumper, but the Lady Mountaineers would not quit.

A Talisha Hargis trey with 1:03 left pulled West Virginia within one, 69–68. Beth Kuzmeski was fouled with 15.6 seconds left and had a chance to increase its lead but missed the front end of a one–and–one.

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 6

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Octavia Thomas hit two key free throws with 8.2 seconds left in the Minutewomen's 71–70 win over West Virginia on Saturday.

Connecticut holds off Seton Hall at home

STORRS, Conn. (AP) - Donny Marshall scored 16 points and Ray Allen added 14 as Connecticut put together two runs in the last 12 minutes to win. The victory guaranteed the Huskies (22-2, 15-1 Big East) at least a share of the Big East regular-season title with Villanova (21-6, 13-3).

Brian Fair added 12 points and Kevin Ollie and Doron Sheffer each had 11 for Connecticut, which played its last home game of the season.

Adrian Griffin led Seton Hall with 15 points, John Leahy had 13 and Dwight Brown had 12, all on 3-pointers.

No. 8 Arkansas 122, Montevallo 64

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) - Alex Dillard and Davor Rimac hit five 3-pointers in four minutes as Arkansas' second unit overwhelmed Montevallo. Arkansas (23-5) led the NAIA Falcons (9-18) 62-33 at the half.

Five Razorbacks scored in double figures - none of them starters - led by Landis Williams with 24 and Lee Wilson with 21.

Nate Driggers led Montevallo with 37, breaking the Walton Arena record of points scored by an Arkansas opponent. The old mark of 31 was set Jan. 29 by Tony Delk of Kentucky.

No. 9 Villanova 74, St. John's 70

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Eric Eberz scored 23 points, including all of Villanova's in a 10 1/2-minute span of the second half, and the Wildcats barely held to edge St. John's.

Villanova (21-6, 13-3 Big East) didn't lock up its 13th win in 14 games until freshman Felipe Lopez was called for carrying the ball with three seconds to play.

Lopez and James Scott each had 18 points for St. John's (12-12, 5-11).

Michigan St. 83, Northwestern 60

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) - Shawn Respert scored 20 points and Quinton Brooks led a second-half surge that allowed No. 12 Michigan State to hand pesky Northwestern (5-19, 1-14 Big Ten) its seventh straight loss. Ahead only 32-30 at the half against a team that has been beaten by 30 points by most of its Big Ten opponents, the Spartans (20-4, 12-3) went on a 16-4 run at the outset of the second half to go up 48-34.

CHRIS RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN

Snowbound

A Cherokee Chief sits abandoned on Eastman Lane early yesterday morning, a victim of the surprise snowstorm.

Senior Night this evening at Mullins

The seniors of the men's basketball team will play in the final regular season game tonight at the Mullins Center (See Sports, page 10).

Cultural center provides resources

The Josephine White Eagle Center is named for a woman withities to the Native American community (See Multicultural Affairs, page 5).

Got a case of the blues?

Buddy Guy is the man to see about it when he takes the stage tonight at Smith College, check inside for more details (See Arts & Living, page 7).

Extended Forecast

The yucky ice storms will continue through most of the day. Tomorrow will bring warmer weather with a slight chance of precipitation. Thursday will bring more of the same.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 32 LOW: 24	HIGH: 48 LOW: 36	HIGH: 52 LOW: 38

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 84 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, February 28, 1995

UM union claims increase in reports of discrimination

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

A union at the University of Massachusetts that represents blue collar and service workers claims that there is an increase in reports of discrimination and are asking the administration to take s stand.

According to Dave Mitchell, president of AFSCME local 1776, the union is satisfied with the University's actions for publicly promoting diversity, but the situation in the workplace is different.

"It's kind of a double–edged sword because we have to applaud the University for promoting diversity, but that's what they put on as a public face," said Mitchell. "When you get down to the workplace, a lot of times we find there's not a good response from the managers about members who are discriminated with."

AFSCME is a labor union that represents the workers around campus who do such jobs as ground work, repair buildings and work in the dining commons. There are currently 1,100 members of the local 1776, said Mitchell.

Discrimination in the workplace

James Pennington, an African–American member of local 1776, said he was discriminated against several times when he first started working at the University a year ago as a part–time employee.

"When you get down to it, [work] was a cold atmosphere for many, and management ignored the situation," Pennington said.

Pennington said he started working on the grounds crew, which does such things as landscaping and plowing, in January of last year during the snow crisis.

One such incident occurred one day after a disagreement with a fellow employee. The other employee, who was a White male, threatened him, Pennington said.

"[The other employee] asked if I knew what happened to Malcolm X and Rodney King because it was about to happen to me," Pennington said.

After that incident, Pennington said he went to Affirmative Action office at Whitmore and was eventually transferred from the grounds crew at the physical plant, to work in the Campus Center from midnight to 8 a.m.

"To me, I was being punished for being the victim," said Pennington. "I could not adjust to the new hours."

Pennington said he then tried to work at the Physical Plant again, but was told he would have to reapply for a position. The situation basically meant unemployment, Pennington said.

After dealing unsuccessfully with the management level, Pennington said he went through Whitmore, and eventually directly to Chancellor David K. Scott.

"[Scott] said the way to deal with the problem is not to remove the person — he didn't like it" said Pennington. "He looked into it, I don't know what he said but the chancellor h d me back at work Monday morning."

Currently, Pennington works with the housing department where he said things are good and he has not received any discrimination. But he also said it does not mean the situation does not exist elsewhere on–campus.

"It took a lot of pain — I used to hate coming to work," said Pennington. "The victims are always told to leave it alone and don't raise the issue."

Mitchell said one answer to the problem would be if the University educated its employees about diversity.

"I think the University is capable of doing much better," said Mitchell. "People shouldn't just be fired, you should try to work with people and educate them, it is an educational institution."

Within the union, Mitchell said they have held small classes dealing with racism, but management as well as workers need to be educated.

"All I wanted to do was work, I don't mess with anyone else or harass anybody," said Pennington. "It doesn't happen to me, but I still see [racism] and it hurts to see it happen to other people."

Increase in reports

Mitchell said it is the same in every working environment — people bring their prejudices into work with them.

"It's not epidemic, but there is a rise in complaints of discrimination," said Mitchell. "It seems to be mostly between employee and employer."

The recent incident at the Franklin Dining Commons when a worker used a racist phrase in the presence of an African– American student has shed a little more light on the situation, said Mitchell.

"We just have to send a wake–up call [to the University]," said Mitchell. "When our members feel discriminated against, we think the University has to act with greater haste and not shuffle people around."

In a letter from the union, they stated the University "assigns our members of color to the lowest paid job titles ... A significant number of our members are African– American, Latino or Asian American — many are regularly subject to racist practices."

Paul Page, the vice chancellor for administration and finance, has denied the University intentionally assigning minorities to lower paying jobs.

"The University doesn't assign people to jobs — it hires people who apply for vacancies," Page said.

Fleet, Shawmut merge to form national power

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — Two of New England's largest banks will merge to form one of the nation's largest commercial banks. Last week, Fleet Financial Group Inc. and Shawmut National Corp. approved a plan to merge the two banks to form America's ninth largest banking institution.

The new bank will maintain Fleet's current name and will have combined net assets worth $80 billion.

The new Fleet will have number one market shares in all the New England states except Vermont.

The number one market share has alarmed many people, including the attorney generals of many of the New England states.

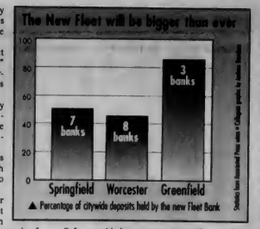
Connecticut Attorney General Richard Blumenthal is intending to block the merger, while Mssachusetts Attorney General Scott Harshbarger's office is investigating the plan.

"We are going to protect Massachusetts citizens," said Ed Cafasso, spokesperson for Harshbarger's office.

Cafasso said the attorney general is concerned primarily with the effects the merger will have on western Massachusetts.

"Western Massachusetts has a few problems with market domination," Cafasso said.

In Springfield the merger would give Fleet 50 percent of citywide deposits in seven banks. In Greenfield, atown north of Amherst, they would have 86 percent of town–wide deposits in only three banks.



Cafasso said the attorney general's office has three options concerning the merger: oppose, support or offer guidelines for the two banks.

"We will probably demand them to divest banks in western Massachusetts," Cafasso said.

Mary Quinn, vice president of communications at Fleet, said she was unprepared to comment on Harshbarger's investigation.

"In three months from now there will be a conversion which will be fairly seamless to customers," said Vin Loprchio, Shawmut's vice president of media relations.

Cafasso said if the United States Justice Department or one of the other Attorney Generals opposes the merger, it may take a long time.

Fleet, which will be based in Boston, plans to lay off about 3,000 of the two banks' 30,000 employees, close some 150 offices and sell off another 75 to 90.

After the details are finalized Fleet plans to have more than 900 branches and automatic teller machines across New England.

Cafasso said the layoffs concern the attorney general as well. He said he hopes Fleet will offer retraining programs and severance packages for the laid off employees.

Wire reports contributed to this story.

UM grad criticizes library renaming

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

A conservative University of Massachusetts graduate visited the Campus Center last night to address the decision to rename the Tower Library.

Dan Flynn, the editor of the Minuteman publication for the 1993–94 school year, presented his opposition to both W.E.B. Du Bois' name adorning the building and the University's multicultural agenda in a program sponsored by the UMass Republican Club and The Minuteman.

Promotional posters for the event pictured former Alabama governor and noted segregationist George Wallace next to Du Bois, with the phrase "Two Shades of Racism" in bold print at the top of the sheet.

Presently a program officer for Young America's Foundation, Flynn, who will soon have an ROTC bill on which he worked proposed by California Congressman Richard Pombo, elaborated on the posters' statement by asserting that Du Bois was "Communist, anti–American and separatist."

After attacking the University for what he viewed as false claims as to when exactly Du Bois became a Communist, Flynn proceeded to condemn Du Bois for his praise of Joseph Stalin, an act which Flynn said was "admiring the single greatest murderer of all time."

"We don't admire Hitler in this country, do we?" Flynn

Turn to LIBRARY, page 2

CHRIS RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN

Guest speaker and former Republican Club president Dan Flynn listens to an audience member.

New board member on campus for visit

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

A trustee recently added to the University of Massachusetts board will be arriving on the Amherst campus this evening as part of a two–day observational visit.

Trustee William E. Giblin of Wareham will be taking tours of facilities and meeting with administrstors, faculty and students in an effort to learn more about the campus, according to Karin Sherbin, spokesperson for the University.

Giblin was appointed to his post in October.

"I'm just coming to listen," Giblin said. "It's an informal way to familiarize myself more with the campus."

After attending tonight's basketball game, Giblin will embark on a full day of observation.

Tomorrow morning Giblin will take a tour of the campus with Paul Page, the vice chancellor for administration and finance, Giblin said.

He is interested in looking at the campus maintenance problems, he said. It is one of his "pet interests."

Giblin will go on to meet with Thomas Robinson, vice chancellor for student affairs, to discuss admissions and financial aid.

After that, Giblin will attend a meeting with seven or eight vice chancellors to brainstorm ideas.

Giblin has two afternoon meetings scheduled — one with students representing the residences and honors programs at the chancellor's house.

The later meeting will involve various department heads to hear about the University from their perspective and try and learn about the problems they face on a daily basis.

"I'm very concerned. We have hard days ahead," Giblin said. "I want to find out Amherst's priorities are."

Appointment of a Businessman

Giblin describes himself as a business man.

His father worked at UMass while he was growing up, so he always stayed involved with the University.

According to Giblin, that is the reason the governor's office called him one day to ask if he would like to be on the board.

"I've already attended two full trustee meetings," Giblin said.

"There's an awful lot of information that I need to catch up on — UMass is huge."

Giblin is the president and chief executive officer of Twease Incorporated.

He is currently a board member of the Carving Studio of Vermont. He is also a member of the American Association of Textile Chemists and Colorist and the American Association of Textile Technologists.

He is the treasurer of the Northeastern Textile Foundation and a member of the textile club.

Giblin is also a member of the Board of Governors of the Northern Textile Association.

He is the vice chairman of the Textile Advisory Council at the UMass Dartmouth campus.

Campus Police Log

Disturbance

Feb. 26

There was a report of 10–15 individuals fighting in parking lot 62 on Stockbridge Road. The individuals dispersed, and one was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Larceny

Feb. 24

An individual reported that his jacket and wallet were stolen. The property is valued at $150.

There was a report of a VCR stolen from an office in Boyden Gym. The property is valued at $280.

Feb. 26

An individual reported cash stolen from her wallet in Greenough Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations

Feb. 24

Mark A. Waldman, 18, of Danvers was arrested on John Quincy Adams Road for transporting alcoholic beverages as a minor.

Police dispersed a large group conducting a round robin party in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Vandalism

Feb. 25

There was a report of a bathroom window being smashed out in Patterson Residence Hall. An individual was treated for a laceration. The individual, who was allegedly connected to the incident, will be summoned to court.

There was a report of a smashed rear window in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue. There was a note left for the owner.

There was a report of a vehicle in parking lot 49 on Windmill Lane being broken into. A cassette player and sunglasses, valued at $300, were stolen.

Feb. 26

There was a report of a vehicle with a smashed window on University Drive. Police tagged the vehicle to notify the owner.

Motor Vehicle Theft

Feb. 25

An individual reported that his vehicle was stolen from Mather Drive. An inquiry led to the vehicle being recovered in Springfield. There was $800 of damage to the car.

Feb. 26

A vehicle reported stolen from parking lot 13 on Olympia Drive was recovered by the Holyoke Police Department.

Traffic Stop

Feb. 25

Thomas J. Stylarek, 18, of Smithtown, N.Y. was arrested for operating a vehicle on Massachusetts Avenue under the influence of alcohol. His charges included a failure to use care when stopping, starting or turning his vehicle.

Feb. 26

A 16-year–old was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for operating a vehicle without a license and attaching license plates to a vehicle.

Richard J. Orozco, 20, of Chicopee was arrested on University Drive for operating the under the influence of alcohol. He was charged with transporting alcoholic beverages as a minor.

Burglary — Breaking and Entering

Feb. 25

Individuals reported that a door lock had been smashed in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall. A fire extinguisher and CDs were stolen. The property is estimated at $300.

There was a report of a vehicle being broken into. A stereo valued at $800 was stolen.

Feb. 26

There was a report of a vehicle broken into in parking lot 49 on Van Meter Road. A radio was stolen.

Annoying Behavior

Feb. 25

Individuals reported a pornographic drawing on their door in Van Meter Residence Hall. Police found homophobic graffiti on the third floor stairwell.

Suspicious Activity

Feb. 26

Two vehicles were found broken into in parking lot 49 on Van Meter Road after police responded to a report of two car alarms sounding.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, February 28

Lecture — Ann Gould Rubin, executive vice–president N.W. Ayer Advertising will speak on "Advertising: the many faces of persuasion." Student Union, Commonwealth Room, 7 p.m.

Lecture — "The Idea of the Renaissance in the Age of the Museum," a lecture by Prof. Andree Hayum of Fordham University. Smith College, Wright Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Music — A mini–concert, a panel discussion and an awards ceremony with jazz violinist Claude Williams as part of the 24th Annual Black Musicians Conference. Free. Bowker Auditorium, 7 p.m.

Forum — Cooley Dickinson Hospital is sponsoring a forum entitled "Food for life: healing the body, mind and spirit." Cooley Dickinson Hospital, Dakin Conference Room, 6 p.m.

Wednesday, March 1

Information sessions — The state Public Interest Research Groups will be interviewing on campus for full time organizing positions on campuses across the country. There will be an information session, Campus Center Room 802, 7 p.m.

Lecture — Dr. Deborah, author and Emory University Professor, will speak on "Holocaust denial: memory and the search for meaning." Memorial Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Notices

Fundraising — WFCR 88.5 F.M. Public Radio for Western New England seeks volunteers to assist the station with spring fundraising, scheduled to begin on March 29. For more information call Karin Obermeier at 545–0100.

Community Service — The Viva Community Service Council is asking groups to submit the number of community service hours they have completed since the beginning of the academic year in order to tally up the total number of hours this campus has contributed. If you have any questions, contact Lori McKinney at 545–3368.

Training — Amherst Leisure Services is offering the updated lifeguard training to strong swimmers at least 15 years of age. This course provides an opportunity to work hands on with children in learning to swim programs. For more information, all 256–4065.

■ library

continued from page 1

said.

Flynn continued by denouncing campus leaders, including Afro–American Studies Professor David Du Bois and University President Michael K. Hooker (whom Flynn mistakenly referred to as "David Hooker"), for their support of Du Bois, on the basis that the Black historian renounced his American citizenship.

"If [Du Bois] hated this country so much, then why name a library after him?" Flynn said. "Their denials have just been another charade."

The ex–student then accused Du Bois of being a segregationist, comparing the turn–of–the–century leader to David Duke and Wallace, as he cited an example from a 1920 issue of Du Bois' magazine, The Crisis, in which the quote featured on the poster appeared.

"Absolutely segregate the races of the world," Du Bois wrote.

Flynn went on to compare the so–called "voluntary segregation" that Du Bois embraced to that of UMass groups such as the Black Student Union and Black fraternities, and said that Du Bois was "the forerunner to Khalid Muhammed and Louis Farrakhan."

"It just goes to show what the University symbolizes," Flynn said in closing, criticizing the fostering of multiculturalism, which he believes creates separatism.

A heated question–and–answer session followed the speech, most notably fueled by controversial suggestions by Flynn.

"During Du Bois' time, a lot of Africans were just emerging from the Stone Age," Flynn said.

Flynn's other responses included a rejection of Jews identifying themselves as an ethnic group and the concept that "human sacrifice" may have been one of the causes of the "sub–First World status" of Native Americans.

Criminal Defense/ Personal Injury
On-campus consultations available
UMASS Class of '87
Atty. Dean E. Goldblatt
413-731-8262
1441 Main St. • Springfield,MA

Do You Enjoy Working With People?
CASIAC is hiring for Summer Orientation and Fall 1995.
Qualified undergraduate applicants accepted from all majors. Work-study and non work-study welcome.
Applications Due March 8, 1995
For More Info Call: 545-2191 E-20 Machmer

Photo Staff Meeting
Thursday Night at 7:00
Bring an empty stomach for there will be pizza.

Participate in the
RUN FOR NEWMAN
Event: Run-A-Thon For Newman Center
Date: April 29
First Organizational Meeting
Date: March 5
Time: 8:00 P.M.
Place: Sunken Lounge, Newman Center
Info: Call Earl Martin at 256-8150 or Joe Vozza at 549-6385
Purpose: A fund raiser for the Newman Center, a non-profit student center serving the UMass community for 32 years... Newman must raise most of its own funds in order to continue its mission. The Run-A-Thon is a chance for UMass students to give back something to a place which has given so much to them.
Corner of Massachusetts Ave. and No. Pleasant St. 549-0300

UPC UNIVERSITY PRODUCTIONS & CONCERTS

Get involved in all aspects of concert production!
EVERYONE is welcome and no experience is necessary!
Look at all the ways you can join in the fun...
• Stage Crew
• Security
• Hospitality
• Advertising
• Promotion
General meetings are held on Tuesdays at 6:00 p.m. in Campus Center room 917. Stop by our office at 406 Student Union or call us at 545-2892 for more information!

Fine Arts Center still leaking

Repairs should be complete by mid–May, according to contractor

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

After receiving millions of University of Massachusetts dollars for waterproofing repairs, the Fine Arts Center (FAC) has shown a great deal of improvement since last spring — but it still continues to leak.

Local contractors A.R. Green and Sons of Holyoke were paid $3.9 million to waterproof the facility last spring. The situation has improved, but certain parts of the building are still prone to leaks, said William Rose, associate vice chancellor of facilities.

"It's very frustrating and I'm sympathetic towards the people in the building," Rose said.

The leaks are a result of expansion joints which have been filled with a waterproof elastic material. Some of the joints continue to leak even after the waterproofing, Rose said.

Despite a sealant applied to the exposed cement roofing, after hours of absorption, small amounts of water do seep through, said Tom Crochiere, A.R. Green's project manager.

The water then collects in expansion joints which can appear as damp spots or actually drip water into the building, Crochiere said.

"It was not a problem we didn't anticipate," said Ronald Michaud, spokesperson for the Art Department. "We were told it would take going through a season to find all the leaks. The problems now are not major and we were told these joints would be a problem."

Finishing up the Job

A.R. Green and Sons are finished with 99 percent of their work on the FAC, Crochiere said. The work was started last March and will be completed by mid–May.

The strategically placed barrels, drainage hoses and plastic sheets which were a common sight at the FAC are now gone, Michaud said.

According to Crochiere, a much more certain, and more expensive, solution would be the installation of a lead–clad copper roof. The office of facilities has considered this an alternative solution, Rose said.

"There's a good chance [the elastic material] won't work but there's a good chance it will," Rose said. "Most of it is working."

Work done by A.R. Green and Sons on the FAC includes new roofing, waterproofing of underground portions, the new plaza deck system, new stairs, new handrails and new skylights and windows in portions of the building, said Crochiere.

Maintenance Problems

The FAC is not the only problem in campus however. According to the University maintenance report released earlier this month, UMass has over $310 million in capitol renewal and deferred maintenance needs.

In one form or another, almost every building on campus is in need of repair, Rose said.

"Any one building will have a number of things that don't work or don't work properly and need to be repaired," Rose said. "It's practically everywhere."

Some of the problems around campus include the heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems, roof and window repairs and cracks in building walls, said Mark Schwinger, acting director of operations for the Physical Plant.

Currently the Plant has a campus–wide policy of conducting service upgrades, including electrical, steam and water lines which must be replaced, Schwinger said. Due to budget constraints, this is done on a limited basis.

Writer remembers Holocaust in lecture

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Staff

Deborah Lipstadt, author of the best selling book Denying the Holocaust: The Growing Assault on Truth and Memory, will speak in Memorial Hall tomorrow at 7:30 p.m.

"The Holocaust is perhaps one of the most well– documented events in history. Yet, the subject of Holocaust denial seems to come up often," said Jay Berkovitz, chair of the department of Judaic and Near Eastern studies.

Lipstadt's lecture is based on her latest book Denying the Holocaust: The Growing Assault on Truth and Memory. The book is the first full length study of the history of those who attempt to deny the Holocaust.

Lipstadt will address not only Holocaust denial, but the larger question of "academic responsibility or academic integrity," according to Berkovitz.

Denying the Holocaust was included by the New York Times on its list of Notable Books of 1993 and received the 1994 National Jewish Book Award.

Lipstadt is associate professor of modern Jewish and Holocaust studies at Emory University in Atlanta.

In 1994 Lipstadt was appointed by President Clinton to serve on the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council and worked as historical consultant to the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum. She helped design the section of the museum dedicated to the American response to the Holocaust. Currently, she chairs the Museum's Education Committee.

Beyond Belief: The American Press and the Coming of the Holocaust, Lipstadt's first book, published in 1986, examined American press coverage of the destruction of European Jewry.

Speaking of the rise of Hitler, Berkovitz said, "If the press had been able to cover these events more effectively, there might have been pressure placed on the U.S. government to intervene, to step up their rescue efforts and permit more Jews to enter the United States under the immigration laws."

"People have to know what's going on in order to act effectively," said Berkovitz. He considers Lipstadt's first book to be a study of this process.

Lipstadt has appeared on CNN, CBS's "60 Minutes," NBC's "Today," ABC's "Good Morning America," National Public Radio's "Fresh Air" and PBS' "Charlie Rose." She is also widely quoted in a variety of newspapers. The talk is sponsored by University of Massachusetts Hillel, UMass Judaic Studies and supported by Harold Grinspoon Charitable Foundation. It is free and open to the public..

Mediators to meet with officials from Peru, Ecuador today

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The four countries mediating the border dispute between Ecuador and Peru this past weekend condemned renewed fighting as a cease-fire violation.

Ecuador claims 13 of its soldiers were killed Wednesday, the highest single-day casualty report of the month-long war.

The United States, Chile, Argentina and Brazil issued a statement saying they "lament having to condemn once again the heavy sacrifice of human lives."

The mediators, meeting in the Brazilian capital of Brasilia, warned Peru and Ecuador to "avoid any initiative which could be interpreted as a threat or provocation."

Peru and Ecuador began fighting Jan. 26 over competing claims to a 40-square-mile section of Amazon jungle. Each country accuses the other of violating a truce reached earlier this month.

The statement confirmed the mediators will meet with Peruvian and Ecuadoran officials in Montevideo, Uruguay, today.

WOMEN making WAVES

Compiled by Laura Schmidt

MHC names 17th president

Joanne V. Creighton, interim president of Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., was selected on Feb. 16 of this year, from a pool of nearly 300 candidates for the position of president of Mount Holyoke College.

Creighton said she was honored to be selected and that she was looking forward to the challenge of advancing the reputation of the college.

"Perhaps the most exciting aspect of my new appointment is the wonderful human capital that exists at Mount Holyoke. I'm already impressed with how the intellectual energy here is fused with the practical challenges to this age. I intend to stretch and grow as Mount Holyoke stretches and grows," said Creighton.

And at Smith. . .

Mount Holyoke is the second local women's college to choose a new head in recent months. In December, Smith College named Ruth Simmons as its new president.

Her term will begin on Jan. 1, 1996, when she returns from a sabbatical from Wesleyan University.

Mount Holyoke Dean of Faculty and Provost Peter Berek will serve as interim president from July through December.

Body and Soul

Black women can now turn to a new book for advice on diet, exercise, sex, depression, diseases and hair and skin care. Executive editor of Essence magazine, Linda Villarosa has written Body and Soul: The Black Women's Guide to Physical Health and Emotional Well-Being.

Worldly Waves

This year's fourth World Conference on Women is expected to draw 30,000 people from 180 countries, compared to 5,000 people from 133 countries at the first world conference in 1975, according to Self magazine. This year's conference will be held this September in Beijing.

Honoring Menstruation

The Museum of Menstruation opened last April to display the history and culture of menstruation. Graphic designer and museum founder Harry Finley said in this month's Self magazine he created it "because menstruation is a taboo subject and there is a naughtiness about it."

In the museum there is a representative sample of menstruation history spanning from the 1880s to the present. Visitors can look at menstruations history in western society, other countries' advertising for feminine hygiene products, ecologically safe products and an exhibit on the biological process itself.

Self reports most visitors have been women and "it is open only at certain times of the month."

Women have issues —

we need you to help us address them!
Come down and write for the Women's Issues section of the Collegian.
Contact Lisa or Colleen at 545–3500 or come down to our office in the Campus Center Basement.

Acts of violence against Muslims upped by Serbs

By Srecko Latal
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs have renewed their campaign of beating and robbing Muslim civilians, creating a new wave of refugees from the north, U.N. aid workers said this past weekend.

U.N. military observers, meanwhile, reported a cache of heavy weapons was discovered in a Sarajevo suburb, in violation of a U.N. resolution barring such arms from the capital.

About 300 civilians, mostly Muslims, fled the area around Banja Luka, a Serb stronghold in northern Bosnia, late last week, said Kris Janowski of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

It was the biggest round of ethnic purges so far this year. "We have reports about attacks with grenades, machine guns and severe beatings," Janowski said.

The UNHCR estimates there are only about 30,000 Muslims and Croats still living in the northern region surrounding Banja Luka, compared to a pre-war non-Serb population of more than 500,000. Janowski recounted a Feb. 15 incident in the village of Dzuba, near Banja Luka, where three armed Serbs broke into a man's house, beat his mother, held his baby at knifepoint and threatened to rape his wife.

"[The wife] continued to scream while her child, who was also in the same room, cried loudly," Janowski said, reading from a UNHCR field report.

The Serbs stole the equivalent of $200, but "still beat up the family afterwards," Janowski said.

A similar incident was repeated at a neighbor's house.

"Before leaving the area, the bandits warned the victims that they will be back shortly," prompting the village's 490 remaining Muslims to ask for U.N. evacuation, Janowski said.

"The atrocities subsided somewhat in the fall and early '95, but now they seem to be picking up," Janowski said. "These are basically the last finishing touches of 'ethnic cleansing,'" in the area.

There were other signs that Bosnia's 4-month-old truce was breaking down.

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian
Write for GLB Issues
Let your voice be heard
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center
545-3500

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, MARCH 17
GRANTS FOR:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
•Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Student Activities Office
or
the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

THE BLUEWALL COFFEEHOUSE
HOMEMADE MUFFINS
COOKIES
CAKES BROWNIES
FEATURING
OMAR GOURMET COFFEES
HERBAL TEAS
ICE CREAM & FROZEN YOGURT
ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
MON-THUR 8AM-11PM
FRIDAY 8AM-5PM

We'll not only change your view from the dorm, we'll change your view of life.
Next semester, what's outside your residence hall window can be more than just an attractive view. When you study abroad with Beaver College, you come to understand another culture in a way no tourist can. Whether you prefer to frequent the haunts of Dublin's famous writers, explore the ancient sites of Athens, sample the plaza nightlife of Guadalajara, devour Sachertortes in Viennese coffeehouses or watch the sun set over Oxford's dreaming spires, the views you'll return with are those you'll remember with your mind, and with your heart. Ask your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs. For the semester of a lifetime, call for a free catalog today.
Study Abroad with Beaver College
1.800.755.5607

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Too little, too late

President Michael K. Hooker served up too little too late when he addressed the 200 faculty and students at last Thursday's faculty senate.

He again tried to clarify that the C+ grade he gave this campus last semester was an evaluation of the administration — himself included — and not the faculty.

But as one professor pointed out, Hooker's approach has done no "incalculable damage," as seen in the Weld administration's rejection of faculty pay raises with the admonition that our professors' don't merit the compensation they already receive.

Hooker could have cut through the administrative rhetoric when he acknowledged that the Amherst campus and the entire University system needs a critical examination of its performance. But his remarks were incomplete and easy to misconstrue.

The frustration evident at Thursday's meeting is another indication that relations between the Boston-based administration and the bulk of this University — the students and faculty in Amherst — are becoming increasingly strained.

If Hooker wishes to actually improve the quality of the University of Massachusetts, he should recognize its strengths as much as recognizing its problems.

Civil war being paid for by U.S.

It looks like we now have a 51st state in the Union.

President Clinton has just forced us to choke down an enormous American payoff to the government of Mexico. Like most such transactions, the deal will allow United States industry to continue to squeeze Mexican labor for all it's worth. To earn its fee, Mexico's PRI government will stop intimidation, rig elections, and keep wages just low enough to keep Mexico profitable for gringo tycons.

Peter Orvetti

Clinton is paving a one-way international highway. Jobs and money travel express from Detroit to Chihuahua, but if any Mexicans try to drive northbound, they are pulled over and charged with a 187.

Just a year after the wonders of free trade were introduced with the two-bit dictatorship down below, Mexico's currency collapsed due to exhaustion. The U.S. government cut a check, and stapled it to a list of demands on the Mexico City government. Our partner balked at the terms, but took the cash anyway.

Fifty-seven percent of Mexican citizens feel that the handout is bad for Mexico. On both sides of the Rio Grande, critics said that the agreement effectively puts the Mexican economy under American control. What these nay-sayers forget is that this was the whole point of NAFTA; this is merely Phase Two.

So the State of Mexico is now part of the Union. As soon as statehood was guaranteed, Governor Zedillo ordered a full-scale assault on the insurgent aboriginals in Chiapas. Apparently, Zedillo noticed Clinton's smiling reaction to Boris Yeltsin's massacre of Chechnya, and sought to curry favor with his new boss.

Zedillo forgot that the American media will only dub a conflict a "civil war" if the combatants are White. So, even though Zedillo's PRI is about as democratic as Yeltsin's regime, Zedillo came out as more a maniacal clan leader than freedom fighter.

Regardless, this obvious misstep will not hurt the Governor's reputation in the White House. Given Clinton's own record with regard to labor, Zedillo's direct response — actually gunning down unarmed citizens who request a fair wage — will seem innovative to the Administration.

The loan agreement means that Americans can no longer ignore Chiapas. When NAFTA was passed it wasjust another piece of legislation that was in the interest of the rich, and there was nothing that could be done about it.

In the same way, when the Chiapas revolt began on January 1, 1994, we could look away because it was in another country.

The loan deal makes it our responsibility. Every action of Mexico's PRI cabal is being subsidized by the United States Treasury. The war in Chiapas is being brought to you by ... you.

Chiapas is already out of the newspapers again. It is funny how the American media stops covering American- sponsored wars so quickly. We can enjoy a pleasant evening watching Bosnia in flames, but please don't make us watch Chiapas.

The war continues in southern Mexico, and you will be sent the bill. Since it is your money on the line, ask yourself, which side are you on?

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Passing through life's constantly swinging door

"You look like you just lost your best friend," I said.

She was sitting by the window staring out at the trees as if wishing she were free to climb their branches. With the tranquility of a cat she turned her head and faced me.

"I think I just did," she said softly. She looked at me for a moment but offered no other words, then turned back toward the window, her eyes withdrawing even farther than before. I sat on the couch next to her and studied the lines in the wooden floor, noticing that the planks were lying in a gentle slope toward the opposite wall, as if the house were tilted.

E.C. Thomas

"Why isn't love enough to hold two people together nowadays?" she finally asked, still looking out the window, her eyes following the darting squirrels playing in the trees.

"I don't know. It doesn't seem like you would need much more, does it?" I said.

"Nope," she responded almost numbly. Another pause of silence entered the living room. I didn't want to interrupt it, so we sat there for a moment.

"It's just not right — it doesn't make any sense to me," she finally offered.

"Life just works that way I suppose."

"Yeah, I guess," she reluctantly conceded. "I just can't understand why I always seem to find myself caught in this revolving door."

"Everyone has one — you shouldn't feel alone." Now my mind began to trace through the years of people who had come and gone in my life. Some with good-byes, others without even so much as a look back.

She picked up her cigarettes lying next to her and lit one. The flare of the lighter echoed off the walls, and for a moment painted her face with an orange glow. After a couple of exhales, she began playing with the lighter as if trying to distract her mind from its train of thought. But her mind obviously got away from her — as it so often did. "I guess what's really hard is that I don't even understand why this is happening — why he's walking away. And it hurts even more that it seems so easy for him."

"Well, have you talked to him?" I still wasn't sure exactly what we were talking about, but I didn't want to offend her by asking for the whole story.

"Yeah, a couple of times, but it doesn't seem to bother him — this distance." She looked back toward the window. Every time she did, I didn't know whether or not I'd lose her, once and for all, to the trees. A prospect that seemed to be becoming a greater and greater reality.

"Well, sometimes people need distance to find out what's really important in life." I tried to steal her stare away from the squirrels. "Sometimes, distance brings people closer together."

She looked back at me with a smile — she wasn't buying it. "No I mean, really, distance can be a good thing."

"Maybe ..." she whispered. "I understand that people need to have priorities in life, but I always thought that friends were one of the most important. Friends are like ... family." She was becoming more animated the more she talked. "It just seems like everyone's running around in a state of apathy nowadays. Caught in their own little world, and missing what's truly important," she took a quick drag off her cigarette and muttered, "I know that sounds like philosophical garbage — but ... it just hurts."

She was looking out the window again, as if following the line of smoke streaming through the incoming light, that was now grey.

"I guess what you need to ask yourself is whether or not you want someone like that in your life anyway. If someone doesn't appreciate you, maybe it's best they do go out the revolving door." I waited for her to answer. Instead, she looked down at the floor. I wondered whether or not she noticed that the boards were tilted. "Look at it this way, that same person may eventually realize his mistake, come back and be a better friend. The revolving door swings in mysterious ways," I smiled at her, hoping to get one in return.

She leaned her body over on me, her head resting on my shoulder. I put my arm around her, thinking that I had won the challenge of the squirrels. "I know you're right. I just wish it didn't have to be this way."

"I think we all do." I began looking out at the squirrels, they looked like they were smiling back at me.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

MR. SPEAKER? I THINK WE MIGHT WANT TO BACK OFF ON THE CRITICISM OF HIGH SCHOOLS AS "SUBSIDIZED DATING".
WHY? THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT IT IS!
DATING IN HIGH SCHOOLS IS SIMPLY OUT OF CONTROL! IF TAXPAYERS KNEW WHAT WAS GOING ON, THEY'D BE OUTRAGED!
LOOK, I SPEAK FROM BITTER EXPERIENCE! I DATED AND MARRIED ONE OF MY TEACHERS!
THEN ONE DAY I WOKE UP AND SUDDENLY REALIZED SHE WASN'T FIRST LADY MATERIAL!
PERMISSION TO CRINGE, SIR.
I JUST DON'T WANT THAT HAPPENING TO SOME OTHER POOR KID!

COLLEGIAN ART BY JEFF WILSON

When I grow up I wanna be ...

I'm going through an identity crisis. With only two months left in my college career, confusion reigns supreme in my life. Where am I going? What am I actually good at? What skills do I possess that separate me from others?

Sometimes I wish I could be someone else and I wouldn't have these problems.

I wanna be like Newt Gingrich. Well, not really, but my mother could use some free press. She's opinionated and would have several choice words for a lot of people. Who wants a name like Newt? Then again, who wants a name like Art?

I wanna be like Eddie Vedder. So little effort, so much power. Radio stations could come to my apartment and broadcast right out of my living room, I wouldn't have to go on a concert tour. Hell, I can mumble and shake with the best of 'em already on any given weekend.

Arthur Stapleton, Jr.

I wanna be like John Calipari. I, too, feared for my life last season when I went to Philadelphia. Whatever I say, whatever I do, students from everywhere will love me. I want the power to grab a microphone and tell raucous students to shut up.

I wanna be like Chancellor Scott. When problems arise around me, I want the ability to sit around and do nothing for a while. My parents would have killed me if I got a C+ for my work last semester, though.

I wanna be like David Justice. I can't hit the curve ball, so that wouldn't be a problem. All I have to do is hold a picket sign and I'd still get to lie next to Halle Berry at night.

I wanna be like Hulk Hogan. I want to walk into parties on the weekends, tear off my shirt and pose for the crowd. I've even put my hand near my ear, begging for applause. However, I will never drop the leg on someone. Well, for a price ...

I wanna be like Jake. Ya know, the guy from Melrose Place. He's had relations with Jo, Amanda, Allison, Amanda again, Sydney and, most recently, Jane. The only guy cooler is Michael, yet I couldn't stand being near Kimberly.

I wanna be like Bruno Matarazzo, the owner of Antonio's Pizza. The man controls the social life of the uptown junkie. Go to a bar, get loaded, but be out by 12:30 a.m. to beat the rush to Antonio's. I'd push back the closing date to 3 a.m., just for kicks, though. And rename the place Arturo's.

I wanna be like David Hasselhoff. Not only would I have a car that talks to me but I'd also get to play with Pamela Anderson on the beach. Ax the Speed-o and I'll be all set.

I wanna be like The Hawk. I really don't. However, St. Joseph's has the best mascot in the world today. No offense intended towards the Minuteman, but this guy must have the strongest arms in the world after incessant flapping. He beat the hell out of the Temple Owl to boot.

I wanna be like Michael Jordan. Sorry, I don't anymore but I can't get that damn Gatorade commercial out of my head. Plus, I can catch a fly ball.

After painstaking thought, though, I'd rather be ...

Arthur Stapleton Jr., who is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Concert review doesn't do justice

To the editor:

I recently attended Letters to Cleo's sold-out concert at Pearl Street on Feb. 16. The following Tuesday, I picked up my Daily Collegian and opened to the Arts and Living page in search of a review article which would relive the highlights of the concert I had seen. What I found instead was a review by Mike MacLean which did not do justice to a night of fabulous live music. And after reading your staff member's pearls of wisdom, I have just one question to ask Mr. MacLean: "Were we at the same concert?!"

While I tend to agree with the writer's critique of the moshing I must say that his review of the band as well as the opening two acts leads me to believe that Mr. MacLean wouldn't know good pop music if it hit him in the "ballah" (sic). With statements like "often times the songs bled into one another and failed to take on any individual identity," MacLean criticizes a small band that may very well be on its way to greatness. Kay Hanley belts out each of Letters to CEO's poppy, fast-moving songs with charm and attitude which culminated to near genius in great new songs like "I See" and "Here and Now." As for the two opening acts of the evening, Gigolo Aunts and The Gravel Pit, I have never been to a concert where I have thoroughly enjoyed both of the opening acts — until Thursday night. The Gravel Pit warmed up the crowd with a set of rock songs that everyone could dance to, while the stage presence and hot new music of the Gigolo Aunts, who are beginning to be recognized by getting air play on certain radio stations, involved the members of the crowd to the point where I almost forgot that I had paid $6.50 to see Letters to CEO, not the opening acts.

Mr. MacLean must try to remember that all great bands must start somewhere, and that these three have certainly started in the right place: the Pioneer Valley. The crowd obviously enjoyed the show, and while their moshing and body surfing did get a bit rowdy, it did not diminish the quality of performance put out by these groups.

Tiffany H. Sprague
Mackimmie

Students must fight back

To the editor:

Many students are concerned about the Republican Contract with America. Even though the "landslide" represented only 52 percent of the electorate's wishes, and the fact that in all races where the Democrats lost to a Republican by a small margin (most races) it big-business PAC money that made the difference, the arrogant mis- leaders who follow Newt Gingrich presume to destroy many important gains the American people have won over the years.

The fact is, most of us do not support items such as raising the military budget, eliminating Stafford loans and Pell Grants, eliminating environmental safeguards in industry, and victimizing welfare recipients and immigrants. The Contract on America embodies the racist, sexist and classist agenda of the far right of this country, and most of us wouldn't want to live in the kind of country the agenda would create.

Students across the country are organizing for a national day of action against the Contract on March 29. The University Conversion Project is facilitating efforts in more than a hundred campuses, and the list is growing daily. If you want to get involved in fighting back and defending our rights, please get in touch with the Alliance for Student Power.

Charles Lenchner
Amherst

Getting to the bottom of the Bursar's office

To the editor:

As the semester begins, a number of us have financial problems to worry about. A part-time job is one option, yet it doesn't pay all the bills. Many of us rely upon a substantial amount of financial aid. Being one of the many, I applied last spring for the full amount guaranteed by the government of $5,500.

During the second week of school I found out differently. The Bursar's Office informed me that I would be getting a $600 check in excess money, money which I needed to live. After waiting in line for more than an hour last fall, I was told that I would not be getting any money and to go to the Financial Aid office to dispute this with them.

The woman in Financial Aid was more than happy to bitch me out about how it wasn't "her problem" and she wouldn't be offering any help. All she said was to fill out another application.

As it turned out this was the root of all my problems. This woman was evidently not accurate in giving me this information. It took until this semester to straighten out the situation with someone who knew what they were talking about and cared enough about students to give them the right advice. It's hard enough dealing with the many offices we have here, and then confront someone who only adds to your problems. Financial Aid as well as the Bursar's Office needs to reroute their offices and be more efficient in dealing with students. In losing their self-righteous attitude maybe they will become more accessible to us as UMass students.

Paul Carrigg
Amherst

Multicultural Affairs

Tuesday, February 28, 1995

Rethinking sexual myths

Gay studies and the attempt of reformation

The popular image of the mainstream gay movement in the west is that of the White European male or female. The reality is that the majority of the gay people of the world are people of color, from a variety of cultural backgrounds.

Built over one thousand years ago, the Khajuraho and Konarak temples in India are adorned with images of homosexual love. The Kama Sutra, the first literary classic on love, compiled by Sage Vatsayana in the fifth Century A.D., has an entire chapter devoted to gay love. The notion of sexual dualism in each individual has been a part of ancient Indian traditions for centuries.

For instance the Ardhanari is a form of Shiva that depicts the lord as half-male and half-female. Emperor Babar, the founder of the great Mughal Dynasty in India in the 16th Century, has written about his love affairs with men in his famous work Tuzuk-i-Babri. Historians have recorded glimpses of gay life in Delhi during the 18th Century. In Sufi literature, gay love was sometimes used as a metaphor to describe the spiritual relationship between god and man.

Shyamala Ivatury

Gender historiography: an untold story

The mainstream gay movement in the U.S. has been riddled with racism and elitism, both with regards to the people they exclude from organizations, and the principles they espouse. However, there are organizations such as Act-Up, who have opposed the barbaric United States military intervention in Iraq and the inclusion of gays in the military so as not to be agents of the imperial order. Thus the exclusion of gay issues from the "multicultural agenda" is a denial that our ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation and class background all go into who we are as individuals. Imposing boundaries and dichotomies based on race and sexual preference will necessitate making schizoid splits in one's personality.

University education purports to promote training critical thought, the pursuit of intellectual inquiry. The fact, however, is that mainstream academe has provided justifications and rationalizations for maintaining the status quo. Until recently, mainstream academe virtually excluded from textbooks the work, lives and the histories of people of color, women and gays, such as, Audre Lorde, Langston Hughes, James Baldwin and many others.

While both Socrates and Plato are a part of the western philosophical canon, little is taught about their incursions into "Greek love." Socrates' call to youth of his time was a critical scrutiny of conventions and norms, and learning the ability to create arguments without the sanction of authority or experts.

Almost three decades later Socrates was on trial for corrupting the youth. Ironically, today his work is an integral part of the Western philosophical tradition. It is this same Eurocentric tradition which on the one hand idolizes Socrates yet, in the same breath, casts aspersions and deems unintellectual that which is outside the traditional canon, and that which attempts a critical analysis of what is portrayed as natural and inevitable.

The modern civil rights movement and the women's movement in the United States resulted in the formation of African-American studies and women's studies departments respectively. The formation of these interdisciplinary departments was an acknowledgement that mainstream history, art, literature and the social sciences had ignored the role of people of color and women through the ages.

Furthermore, it was a recognition that traditional curricula has systematically promoted racist, ethnocentric and sexist stereotyping of groups of people. While this exclusion is not entirely responsible for hate crimes, active discrimination and narrow- minded parochial attitudes, it contributes to a culture that allows for the perpetuation of oppression and exploitation.

The conceptualization behind gay studies

In the past few years, gay studies has burst forth as important field of scholarly activity. There are Centers for lesbian and gay studies at the City College of New York and Yale University. At the Universities of Athrocyte and Amsterdam and at the City College of San Francisco there are undergraduate and graduate programs in gay studies. The pioneer valley has a large number of gay people, and is known to have the largest population of lesbians per square mile. So why does a University that claims to promote "multiculturalism and diversity" namely, UMass, not incorporate a gay studies program? The reason is the usual one — administrative doublespeak, lies and inaction.

The UMass administration has clearly mastered the rhetoric of multiculturalism, the art of symbolic manipulation. At present there must be almost a dozen commitees and task forces dealing with the issues of diversity in some form or another. These committees consisting primarily of administrators have created a number of thick reports, even reports on reports, that are gathering dust. To most students, it appears as though the purpose of these committees is to waste paper and to provide some activity for the chancenor's administrative cronies who would otherwise be twiddling their thumbs at their desks.

To illustrate with an concrete example, the Chancellor's Task Force on Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns was commissioned over two years ago to advise the chancellor on gay issues. In 1993, the task force issued a report that recommended a few concrete steps towards the formulation of a gay studies program. As of yet we have seen no action on the part of the chancellor despite his verbal commitment to do so (it must be remembered that the Chancellors Task Force on Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns has been created by the chancellor explicitly to advise him on these issues).

Additionally, unlike student demands the recommendations of the task force are moderate in nature. The recommendations include the creation of a visiting faculty position to further develop a curriculum for gay studies, providing existing faculty with release time to develop courses related to gay studies and the inclusion of courses in the diversity requirement of the undergraduate curriculum.

The expectations from the administration

Over the years, students have extracted a number of commitments from the University with regards to increasing ALANA student enrollment, increasing the number of faculty, staff and administrators of color in the various offices, increasing the number of police officers of color, curriculum reform and so on. Nonetheless, recent incidents indicate that little has changed.

Whenever the administration is called on its inaction with regards to issues of multiculturalism and diversity they plead "budget crisis." However, funds seem to miraculously appear to fund the pet projects of the chancellor and his cronies. Another hackneyed but age old scheme of the administration is to pit minority communities against each other in the hopes of dividing and conquering so as to prevent progressive forces from aligning. But despite the best efforts of our esteemed educators, students have always seen through the lies and distortion.

The chancellor and University educators continue to evade the question of the purpose of higher education. Is it, as many would argue, the creation of a technical work force for the coming century, or "the training of quick minds and pure hearts" as W.E.B. Du Bois once wrote? The former course will lead us to a Massachusetts Polytechnic, leaving little room for basic research in all fields; the latter necessitates substantial change in the raison d'être of the university. As mainstream curricula continues to silence the voices, work and histories of the "other," the mission of "training quick minds and pure hearts" will continue to be subverted.

Shyamala Ivatury is a UMass graduate student.

The crisis of world population:

How long will the West dominate the rest?

News Analysis

It has been a shocking discovery to learn that the American Friends Service Committee is co-sponsoring the event "Sex, Lies and Videotapes," a public leeture by William Ryerson, executive vice-president of Population Communication International, on April 5. We expect as much from the pseudo-environmentalist and other pseudo- left organizations on the list of sponsoring groups, but not from the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC).

Ultimately revolutionary groups and the AFSC disagree on a number of issues; we are a revolutionary party, while they are a reformist, religious based pacifist organization. But as such we have one important piece of unity that shows up in much of our work: opposition to militarism and imperialism.

In fact, pacifists and revolutionaries have a lot in common in the current stage where almost all of the violence going on in the world is not revolutionary, but reactionary and aimed at the great majority of the world's people. It is imperialism that is the greatest source of violence in today's world, and it needs to be exposed and defeated in all of its realms.

Wrapped in a stated (if not always sincere) concern for the environment, poverty and Third World development, the issue of population control has come to the forefront in American left circles in recent years. The talk two weekends ago by Adrienne Allison, vice-president of the Center for Development and Population Activities and adjunct professor at the George Washington University School of Medicine at Smith College — where the AFSC involvement in the upcoming lecture — is one such example.

Allison's main assumption was that population size was directly linked to poverty, development and environmental degradation. She had a myriad of facts and figures to back her assumption — and her conclusion — which served to further obfuscate the real source of the peoples' oppression.

For example, she showed us how population is growing in Nepal, and how 75 percent of the arable land is already being tilled. Assuming that amount of arable land is finite and that production yields can not be increased (this is incorrect because even capitalism can transform the world around it, and the collective power of the people unleashed under socialism can do no even further) this conception is still bourgeois.

Instead of proposing to eliminate the people — already the sterilization of women in Nepal is at 19.5 percent — as Allison does, why not eliminate the landlords? Or else expel the World Bank, International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the multinational companies? Allison did not mention these things because as far the bourgeoisie is concerned, the only thing on the table is the number of Third World people allowed to remain.

This is where the lecture on April 5 "Sex, Lies and Videotapes" factors in. Population Communication International produces soap opera style radio and television programs to encourage the imperialist (with the collusion of their comprador governments) population control. There are many forms of coercion used to entice Third World women. Some women are paid to be sterilized, or are tricked into doing so. Population Communication International works in the cultural sphere to ease the transformation of the population and its economic base more into line with imperialist interests.

Women throughout the world want greater access to a variety of contraceptive choices, but oppressed women need political power, resources, food, health care, shelter, sanitation and other necessities for everyday survival. Imposing population control on Third World women, while not addressing these other shortages, will only increase suffering.

Aiding and abetting imperialism is contrary to any pacifist agenda; this any revolutionary group or individual should know. It is plausible that the AFSC may have been swept up in the imperialist country chauvinist wind that is currently blowing alongside the population control issue.

This article was submitted by Mike Little of the Maoist Internationalist Movement.

Center keeps traditions afloat

By Hernán Rozemberg
Collegian Staff

Josephine White Eagle was born on Dec. 11, 1923, in Wisconsin, a member of the Winnebago Nation. She lived in the Wisconsin Dells area and then moved to Minneapolis, Minn., where she obtained her bachelor of arts degree from the University of Minnesota in 1961.

White Eagle participated for nearly two decades in the federal Headstart program, both in Wisconsin and Minnesota. In 1979 she moved to Amherst, after having received her master's degree jointly from Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She completed her academic cycle by obtaining her doctorate degree in education from Harvard.

White Eagle, after working on a linguistics post-doctoral fellowship, joined the University of Massachusetts' faculty staff, later being appointed assistant professor in the School of Education, as part of the graduate faculty. She passed away on July 10, 1989. Harvard University began a fund in her name in order to assist Native American students interested in attending the latter institution.

The University of Massachusetts has also extended the legacy of White Eagle, by establishing the Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, located in the basement of Chadbourne Hall; the Center "was established in her honor to uphold her vision and commitment to Native Community Development as was exemplified in her research," states an official pamphlet.

This same document adds that "the function of the ... Cultural Center is to promote awareness of the diversity of cultures, histories and talents of native peoples in the Western hemisphere."

The Program Coordinator for the Cultural Center is Joyce W. Vincent, who believes that the center is "still underfunded in terms of meeting all the needs to build the resources" that the Native American community wants to allocate for its students. Currently, the annual budget for the center is $16,500.

Vincent believes that the Center should provide a certain atmosphere to "support Native students not only culturally or academically, but also to make them feel like they have a home in the University." This is specifically intended to let Native students know that they can adapt to the UMass environment without necessarily completely changing their personality. That is to say, the Center tries to diverge from the Eurocentric or Americocentric support services that students are provided with, for, says Vincent, this is not precisely what new American Indian students need.

However, this does not mean that the Center is not open to any and all who are interested in Native American culture: the Center pamphlet suggests that the latter is there "for the [UMass] campus community to experience the many wonderful talents of Native People first hand, and for informative dialogues on current issues and concerns."

Native American student Justin Beaty speaks wearily of the University's attitude toward Native students in general and the Cultural Center in particular. "[UMass prides itself on multiculturalism," says Beatty, "but there are many of us who are not profiting any from it." Moreover, he adds that the administration "uses to its advantage that [ethnic minorities] have a numerical disadvantage."

Vincent speaks of the role of the Center in guiding Native students down the right path, one that might be contrary to the status quo. "You should not have to feel that just because you are a student of color, you have to be something that you are not," she states.

She thus makes reference to the ultimate significance of education and the achievement of academic degrees. Vincent made this point clear, saying that while a student may receive diplomas, these are but mere papers in comparison to what lay beyond them, a human being.

Additionally, one objective that the Cultural Center is striving for is to dispel the myths and stereotypes that continuously haunt ethnic minorities in the United States, or as Beatty calls it, "the Untied States ... of the post- Columbus apocalypse."

Vincent said "the key concept is cultural respect ... [because] this helps people recognize the value of the difference of peoples' cultures;" for this reason, the Native American Cultural Center is "working toward achieving the exposition of race and class issues within and without the Native campus community."

The legacy of independence: La República Dominicana

By Yudeica Diaz
Collegian Correspondent

We have all heard the story of how Christopher Columbus got lost in his search for Indian spices, and how relying upon his competent navigation skills he stumbled upon, excuse me, "discovered," the beautiful island of Hispaniola in 1492.

After exploiting the island's resources, including the human resources, Spain proved to be a terrible administrator of its colony. The Spanish neglect led to dissatisfaction among those on the island, and eventually a conspiracy was born in Santo Domingo.

Among the conspirators were the most important political and military elite leaders, as well as some rich white land owners; one of these was José Nuñez de Cáceres. They plotted to free Santo Domingo from Spanish rule in order to create a new Dominican state which would then ally with Colombia. However, on the issue of alliance the Dominican people stood divided. While the rich plantation owners (and sometimes slave owners) wanted to unite under Colombian rule, the Mulatos, spearheaded by commandant Andrés Amarantes, wanted to converge under Haitian rule. And yet others wanted to become autonomous.

...Spain proved to be a terrible administrator of its colony. The Spanish neglect led to dissatisfaction among those on the island, and eventually a conspiracy was born in Santo Domingo.

The struggle escalates in intensity

The pro-Haitian group which was mostly along the Western border informed Haitian commanders of their intentions and requested ammunition and protection in case they encountered an opposition too strong for them to face alone. During the first 15 days of November 1821 they announced their intentions throughout the west. The news traveled fast, in fact, it reached the ears of those who favored Colombian domination in the capital city. Nuñez de Cáceres knew that he had to beat them to the punch if he wanted to defeat this pro-Haitian conspiracy.

On Nov. 30 1821, troops led by Pablo Ali and Cáceres himself, occupied the capital's fortress, the military posts, and warehouses. Promptly at 6 a.m. the cannons proclaimed the new political order, which intended to ally with Colombia.

Meanwhile, Boyer, the Haitian president, had different plans for the eastern side of the island, which he believed should remain under one common rule. With the help of the pro-Haitian community he stirred public opinion throughout most of the now independent Dominican side of the island, toward favoring a joint governance of the island.

And indeed it was not difficult, for this population was made up of Mulatos, and it certainly did not want to be ruled by Colombia (since Colombians were not of the same race). Also, the Haitian government promised them land and freedom for the few who were still enslaved.

Cáceres, on the other hand, was becoming increasingly unpopular, even among the rich white land-owning class which had backed him up before; he had the man-power to combat Haitian troops in battle.

Knowing that his defeat was imminent, he wrote Boyer a letter in which he accepted the Haitian-Dominican alliance, for he understood that Boyer was coming as a father, a friend and a brother.

In actuality, Boyer had 12,000 troops, which he dispersed into two groups to squash any opposition he might encounter. Thus, we see the beginning of the Haitian occupation of the entire island, a feat which lasted 22 years — thanks to Boyer's wish to maintain uniy between the two territores. Its culmination was not possible until the economic situation had reached rock bottom and the old piantations had utterly ruined Haitian agriculture and therefore the rich economic base of those who rule the land.

According to Frank Moya Pons, a renowned historian, it was precisely this economic situation accentuated by the enormous debt of $150 million francs imposed upon Haiti by France in 1825 as the price of recognition of Haitian independence, which finally brought Boyer's demise in 1843; it also precipitated the separatist movement among the Dominicans which finally succeeded on Feb. 27, 1844, to proclaim an independent Dominican Republic.

Que viva la Republica Dominicana!

Native American community reacts to blatant acts of racism at UMass

'Students infuriated and disgusted'

We, the above signed Native American undergraduate students, graduate students, faculty, staff and members of the White Eagle Cultural Center and Native American Students Association, would like to request your immediate attention to the following matter of what we feel is a case of racial and sexual harassment directed toward one of our members.

The incident occurred on Sunday evening, Feb. 19 in the basement of the Chadbourne dormitory. The incident began as a simple harassment and escalated to include racial slurs, sexual innuendoes and a total disrespect and disregard for Native American culture. The perpetrators of this most upsetting attack, accosted a Native American woman, continuously making stereotypical and extremely ignorant references to Native culture and traditions. This incident of obvious certainly did not have the support of our community on many different levels.

The perpetrators not only victimized the newest member of our Native community at UMass (she is in the class of 1998, this is her first semester on campus), but in addition they boldly attacked her in an area immediately adjacent to the Dr. Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, and the Native Resource Library. In addition, this building houses the Native American students and community members as well as educating the larger UMass population. These perpetrators were under the influence of alcohol and/or a controlled substance and obviously felt beyond reproach in their actions.

A written complaint regarding this incident has been submitted to [the office of the assistant dean of students], the UMass police, and the appropriate housing representatives. Because of the nature and location of this latest incident in a string of these individuals residing within the Chadbourne dormitory, we insist that they be relocated immediately, and we expect to have a voice in the range of their sanctions. In addition to this, we expect that a review board will be put in place for the explicit purpose of investigating these incidents collectively. The current policy regarding harassment must be reviewed for effectiveness in dealing with these types of acts. All members of the UMass community have the right to feel safe here.

This letter was submitted by Autumn Banks on behalf of the Dr. Josephine White Eagle Native American Cultural Center and the Native American Students Association. 12 other students, staff and faculty also signed the letter.

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Christopher Hassett • Photos by Nathan Martin and Paul Bilodeau

What was your best, worst or most interesting dating experience?

"I went out with the District Attorney of Florida my freshman year of college. He was 30, I was 18. It was probably the best date I could've had but I wasn't mature enough to handle it."

—JULIE SPOLLIE
senior, CASIAC
Newton

"I was kind of missing an old boyfriend of mine. I called him up and he said he broke up with his new boyfriend who was cheating on him. I told him to come over to talk and he said he didn't think it would be a good idea. I asked why and he said, 'you were the one he was seeing.'"

—CHRIS SAVASTANO
junior, pre-med
Manhattan

"A guy brought me to a nude beach on our first date and there were three 60-year-old guys there, if not older. A former boyfriend by the way."

—BRIAN LEPPER
sophomore, biology
Agawam

"For Valentine's Day my boyfriend made me lobster in one of the dorm kitchens, then took me to a basketball game, then out for ice cream. It wasn't your average Valentine's Day gift but it was really sweet."

—MAJORIE DALBEC
sophomore, political science
New Bedford

"New Year's Eve my date came over and I had plans for dinner but she just didn't want to go out. We ended up watching a movie and ordering a pizza. Around 11:15 she said she was tired and went home. I spent New Year's Eve on the phone with a friend. We broke up three days later."

—ERIC DOUGLAS
junior, anthropology
Amherst

"I went out with this guy who drove a brand-new European car. The alarm went off and he didn't know how to turn it off. We had to drive all the way to UMass with the alarm wailing. We went out for half a year, it worked out."

—DAVE ANDERSON
senior, psychology
Melrose

STAFF MEETING

There will be a staff meeting Monday, March 6 at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office.

We will be discussing and voting on the structure of the specialty pages.

Cold weather translates into crowded buses

By Amy Scott
Collegian Correspondent

Students who find themselves waiting a long time for their morning bus while overcrowded buses drive by can rest assured — when the weather gets warmer, the problem will pass.

Mike Walsh, a psychology major who lives in Brandywine Apartments in North Amherst, is used to watching the bus pass by his stop.

On his way to his nine o'clock class, he regularly watches his bus drive past, displaying a digitalized "Sorry, Overloaded" message alongside the "Belchertown Road" tag, he said.

According to Walsh, the southbound Belchertown Road bus often fills up at Puffton Village Apartments, its first stop.

"I can't wait until the warmer weather when it's less crowded," Walsh said. When the weather is mild people walk or ride bicycles instead, he said.

To avoid the overcrowding, Walsh said he tries to fix his class schedule so that he can take the bus at times when it is less crowded.

Alan Buyam, general manager of the UMass Transit Service, said the overcrowded buses are part of the "usual stuff" for this time of year.

"This happens all the time in the beginning of the semester," Buyam said. "I really haven't seen it as abnormal compared to other semesters."

According to Buyam, the bus crowds will thin out in a few weeks when the students learn to take earlier buses, and then again when the weather gets warmer.

The bus drivers are instructed to call in all passenger overload problems, Buyam said.

The UMass Transit Service makes note of all overload occurrences and analyzes them for the purpose of spotting trends. If a particular stop or time of day seems to cause the most problems, he said, they send out extra, unscheduled "trippers" to supplement the normal schedule.

Trippers are often sent to Puffton Village and to the Townhouse Apartments, which are both in North Amherst, Buyam said.

There tend to be less students around during the spring semester. Buyam said he does not recall receiving any complaints this semester from students.

Even when he gets complaints, he makes his decisions whether to increase services according to the trends he spots, Buyam said.

The UMass Transit Service responds to complaints by suggesting alternative ways to deal with the overcrowded buses.

For students whose problem is the 9 a.m. overcrowding, Buyam suggests that they take an earlier bus.

"Our operating budget is quite fixed," Buyam said. "We don't have the extra resources [to add more buses]."

According to Buyam, UMass Transit's fleet of PVTA– owned buses is 15 years old. They can't send out more buses unless their budget is increased, he said.

"If we have an extra bus or an extra body lying around, we'll send them out," he said.

THE HAMPDEN
MUNCHIES & MORE
SNACKBAR
AT THE TOP OF THE SOUTHWEST HORSESHOE

TONIGHT
UMASS B-BALL SPECIAL
9:30-MIDNIGHT
SLICE OF PIZZA .50

also available...
mozzarella sticks, onion rings, fries, chicken fingers...

EVERYDAY MENU SPECIALS!
BEGINNING AT $2.00

ICE CREAM SUNDAE SPECIALS
EVERY NIGHT FROM 7PM-10PM

SYRACUSE ABROAD
Your world doesn't have to end where your campus does.
Discover England, France, Italy, Spain or Zimbabwe:
• Earn academic credits while taking classes in your host country language or English
• Study for a semester, year or summer
• Travelling seminars and field trips
• Internships
• Over 200 Study Abroad Grants and Scholarships awarded each semester.
Attention UMass Students!
student interest meeting
Wednesday, March 1st
2:30 Campus Center, Room 811
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS ABROAD
119 Euclid Avenue, Syracuse, New York 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472 •315-443-3471 •DIPA@suadmin.syr.edu

Do you like to stay up really late?
Why not get paid for it?
Collegian Night Graphics
Come down to 113 Campus Center Basement for more information.

HOLOCAUST DENIAL: MEMORY AND THE SEARCH FOR MEANING
presented by
DR. DEBORAH LIPSTADT
Associate Professor of Modern Jewish and Holocaust Studies at Emory University
Author of Denying the Holocaust: The Growing Assault on Truth and Memory
• Appointed by President Clinton to serve on the United States Holocaust Memorial Council
Wednesday, March 1
7:30pm Memorial Hall
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Sponsored by Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Concerns, Jewish Studies and supported by Friends of Concerns Charitable Foundation with additional funding from Lesbian Gay and Bisexual Concerns and Urban History Department

August the First
Beads
Jewelry Making Supplies
44 Main St., Amherst, MA 01002 • 413-256-0276
112 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 431-586-7182
343 W. Main St. Northboro, MA 01532 • 508-393-0180
Anniversary Sale
March 4th - March 11th
On March 6th we celebrate the 2nd Anniversary of the opening of our August the First Bead Stores. Two years and three stores later, August the First invites you to celebrate with an Anniversary Sale with Store Wide Specials
With this advertisment, save an additional 15% OFF all purchases over $5

BRODIE SKIING COUPON - CUT IT OUT ✂ MA-A-MDC
Ski Brodie
Route 7 New Ashford, MA 413/ 443-4752
Nearby, in the Berkshires
Any Day $10 Off!!
Monday - Friday? YES! • Saturday - Sunday? YES!
St. Patricks Day/weekend? no. Sorry. (Isn't our annual Irish Olympics week enough?)
One coupon per person per lift ticket. Valid 1994/1995 ski season. All day adult ticket only. $7 off twilight, night, children day ticket. Not valid toward otherwise reduced price ticket. Must complete brief info note at Brodie for redemption

Arts & Living

Hunted trapped in ninja motif

Chen featured in predictable role; Chris Lambert lacks substance

By Laura Stock
Collegian Correspondent

THE HUNTED
Directed by J.F. Lawton with Christopher Lambert, Joan Chen
Playing at Hampshire Six Theaters

The Hunted proves that, regardless of a decent cast and innovative photography, the storylines of ninja warrior movies have become stale and virtuously impossible to make original.

Unsuspecting American computer salesman Paul Racine (Christopher Lambert) strolls into the bar of his hotel in Nagoya, Japan following a long day of business meetings and negotiations. With one glance across the bar, his eyes become transfixed upon those of a beautiful Japanese woman perched upon a stool, seductively batting her eyelashes.

The mesmerizing enchantress clad in a scorching-hot red dress lures Racine up to her room, and only reveals that her name is Kirina. She is played by Joan Chen — a woman who's acting talents have carried her from television's "Twin Peaks" to roles in movies such as The Last Emperor. Racine reluctantly departs after a steamy hot tub scene, but returns upon discovering her key in his pocket.

Much to his misfortune, he walks in on the ninja-style execution of Kirina. Racine attempts to save her, but his efforts are in vain. Miraculously he escapes, but he has seen the face of legendary ninja warrior Kinjo (John Lone). Nobody has ever seen Kinjo's face and lived.

A wounded Racine finds himself caught in a longtime feud between Kinjo and samurai warrior Takeda. Takeda claims he wants to protect Racine from eminent death, but truly uses him as a pawn in his violent game with Kinjo.

The action flicked is packed with obligatory bloody showdowns of ninjas versus samurai, but they are intrinsically ridiculous and unbelievable. Takeda can somehow single-handedly slaughter 20 ninjas on a train, dodging poison tipped ninja stars, in true samurai fashion (no guns allowed!). Racine, who has probably never held anything sharper than a letter opener, acquires talent enough to do battle with a "mystical" sword.

The entire good vs. evil plot is trite and corny. Any attempt made at adding humor is inane and entirely misplaced in the dialogue. The untimely death of Kirina is detrimental to the film, and leaves the viewer feeling cheated. It seems as though Chen was cast as a selling point, rather than for her talent (which is reminiscent of her abbreviated role in Heaven and Earth.)

As the writer and director, Lawton fails at adding a unique touch to the overdone martial arts theme. Lambert's character is spineless, yet he is the hero — while the only intriguing female characters die too soon. It's disappointing when in a ninja film even the battle scenes aren't worth it. And this film isn't worth even that.

Choral festival delights Smith crowd

By David Mac Court
Collegian Correspondent

THE FIVE COLLEGE MUSIC FESTIVAL
John M. Greene Hall, Smith College
Feb. 25

NORTHAMPTON — The John M. Greene Hall at Smith College hosted the Five College Music Choral Festival on Feb. 25. The festival opened with performances by choral groups from all of the Five Colleges.

Each group performed two pieces and there were two premieres by University of Massachusetts faculty members Richard du Bois and Robert Stern and by pianist Clifton Noble Jr.

Excellent performances were turned in by the Mount Holyoke College Chamber singers who performed a piece by Palestrine from the balcony of the hall. Because of the location of the performers, the piece sounded as if angels were singing down from above. It was a polished, beautifully performed selection.

Also performing well were the UMass madrigal singers (six in all) who executed a flawless display of their talents and the University Choral who sang under the direction of Wayne Abercrombie.

Two performances of the evening proved to be the most intriguing. The first was performed by the UMass Vocal Jazz Ensemble. The piece entitled "Chili Con Carne," was an excellent departure from the traditional choral format. The members of the ensemble were obviously strong singers, and sang at a level that the P.A. system could not do justice to.

The other standout performance was by the Mount Holyoke College Glee Club, whose music director chose to perform two songs from Ghana for their set. Comprised of two difficult songs, the group's rendition was flawless and it was a wonderful break from the traditional choral music melange.

The festival ended with a piece that was commissioned by UMass faculty members Robert Stern and Frederick Tillis. In the piece, all of the choral groups sang together at once. It was a tremendous effect to have so many singers performing as one entity. As a whole the festival was a wonderful display of talent and music that had the potential to please everyone from choral enthusiasts to the mere curious.

COURTESY CAROLINE GREYSHOCK

Blues guitarist Buddy Guy will be performing at John M. Greene Hall at Smith College atonight at 8 p.m.

Buddy Guy to bring cure for blues

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

The blues will come alive in Northampton tonight, as one of the genre's true originals, Buddy Guy, takes the stage at John M. Greene Hall at Smith College, in a show sponsored by the Northampton Arts Council.

During a career which has spanned almost 40 years, Guy has created some of blues' most innovative guitar work. He has been called "...by far and without a doubt, the best guitar player alive," by Eric Clapton, and Billboard magazine said, "Buddy Guy is an international treasure, a bold and no-nonsense reflection of our better selves as well as the worthy artistic ancestry we draw upon."

Guy, is currently on tour for his latest album, Slippin' In, released by Silvertone Records, which was recorded half in Chicago and half in Austin, Texas with the late Stevie Ray Vaughan's band, Double Trouble.

"[Guy] is such an innovative guitar player. He takes it to the next level," said Lisa Danforth, a member of the board of directors at the Northampton Center for Arts. "Jimi Hendrix said he was knocked out by his playing."

Born in Louisiana in 1936, Buddy Guy taught himself the guitar and soon after packed his bags and headed off to Chicago. It was there Guy met up with such legendary blues artists as Muddy Waters, Koko Taylor and Howlin' Wolf and was soon playing guitar on their albums.

From that point on Guy began to blaze his through the blues world with his ferocious, yet distinct, style of guitar playing.

"He's one of the original blues guys," said Danforth. "He helped create the Chicago blues sound in the '50s."

Guy recently has received newfound recognition, thanks in part to an appearance with Eric Clapton at the Royal Albert Hall, which was featured on Clapton's live 24 Nights release.

In 1993, Billboard magazine awarded Guy with the Century Award — their most prestigious nod to creative achievement.

He also managed to walk away with two Grammys for his 1991 release Got The Blues and for his 1992 follow-up, Feels Like Rain, both released on Silvertone Records.

With all this history behind him, and a resurgence in recognition, Guy's performance should be a treat for lovers of all music.

"[Guy's] a real crossover artist," Danforth said. "While he's a blues artist, he can appeal to a rock audience."

Buddy Guy will be playing John M. Greene Hall at Smith College tonight. It is an all-ages show and will benefit the Northampton Center for the Arts. Tickets are $20 for general admission seating. A section of special front and center seats will be sold for $27.50.

Blues performance highlighted by voice and rhythm section

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

MIGHTY SAM MCCLAIN & THE BLUES PARTY
Iron Horse Music Hall
Feb. 24

Northampton was hopping Friday night. In the Iron Horse, Mighty Sam McClain sang the blues slow and full of soul. He wanted to get something off his chest and when the crowd responded well, he became upbeat and would go into one of his swinging barroom blues.

McClain has a distinctive voice. It's deep, it's booming and it's the voice of a dirty old bluesman. He sang the Sam Cooke classic "A Change is Gonna Come" with long-held notes that had listeners on the edge of their seats waiting for him to finish. His raspy voice ripped through his own "Hold on to that Dream," with a destination, getting through to his audience the inspiration he hoped to attain.

As his singing was bluesy and raspy, one hoped for a dirty old Chicago grits-and-black-coffee type of blues, but McClain's singing was backed only with modern blues, a la Eric Clapton's beer-commercial rendition of "After Midnight." Not to say the backing band, The Blues Party, wasn't talented. They definitely had their musical skills down, but what they put out was often times too clean.

Peter Giftos lent a second voice to McClain. His lead guitar riffs off his Fender Stratocaster (which he used for the better part of the night), were poignant and sometimes gut- wrenchingly sublime. And even though many times his solos were frighteningly predictable, the notes he chose showed that he has not been wasting his last twenty-odd years playing professional blues guitar.

Dave Limina had some great surprising solos on his keyboards. His Korg organ had that hollow, almost introspective sound which can be felt right in the heart. The rhythm section of Zac Casher (drums) and Teddy B (bass) kept feet tapping all night.

Still interested in Arts & Living?
It's not too late to start writing about what's hot in the Valley in music, art, theater and much more.
Come on down to the Collegian and ask to talk to Matt, Tara, Justin or Mike.

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian
Write for GLB Issues
Let your voice be heard
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Want to announce an upcoming event?
Submit a press release to the Collegian's Daily Happenings at the Collegian
Announcement should be typed and submitted at least two days in advance. Please specify the dates you want the announcement to appear.
PVIs should be brought down to our office, 113 Campus Center

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, March 1,2,3
Open house at the North Fire Station, March 3 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

Immigration Law
Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law
1163 Main Street Springfield, MA 781-6370
12 Old South St Northampton, MA 584-3232
50 Congress St. Boston, MA (617)722-0063
Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty

Hadley Tire and Performance Center
Route 9 • 439 Russell St., P.O. Box 608
Hadley, Mass. 01035
Tel. (413) 253-9911
Used Tires:
13" $9.95
14" $12.95
15" $14.95
Guarantee 100s In Stock
FREE BRAKE INSPECTION!

Lincoln Real Estate
Apartment Rentals
25 N. Pleasant St.
253-7879

$5 off any Lift Ticket with this ad and your 5-college I.D.
Free Bus!
SKIER FRIENDLY!
Wed. 2/15 Wed. 2/22 Wed. 3/1
Leaves Boyden 10:30 a.m. & 5:30 p.m.
Leaves Mt. TOM 4:30 p.m. & 10:00 p.m.
Only a 25 minute ride from U. Mass!
This offer not good in conjuction with any other promotion.
Mt. TOM
Rt. 5 Holyoke MA • 413-536-0516

Strike negotiations resume once again

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — With strike negotiations about to resume, the players' union filed another grievance against owners, alleging the San Francisco Giants improperly released Darryl Strawberry after he tested positive for cocaine.

The grievance, filed late Friday, contends the Giants had no right to release the outfielder earlier this month for failing a drug test.

The Giants say Strawberry signed an addendum to his contract that said the team could release him if he tested positive. The case eventually will be heard by arbitrator George Nicolau, who already has a stack of strike-related cases.

Negotiators for owners and players were supposed to arrive by this past weekend, hoping to break a stalemate that persisted through six rounds of talks in the New York and Washington areas over the past 3 1/2 months.

The strike reached its 200th day yesterday, and exhibition games with replacement players are scheduled to start tomorrow.

Management negotiator John Harrington says there must be a settlement by March 5 for the season to start on time (April 2) with the regular players.

On Feb. 26, a management lawyer said teams probably will renew the contracts of all unsigned players within two weeks.

More than 800 of the approximately 1,100 players on 40-man rosters are unsigned. The union boycotted signings started Dec. 23, when owners imposed a salary cap. The union's freeze ended Feb. 6 when owners lifted the cap, but management then started a boycott of its own.

On Feb. 17, owners mailed contracts to all unsigned players, for the most part filling them in with players' 1994 salaries. Owners say they can automatically renew any unsigned player between March 2-11, but the union claims all unsigned players are free agents.

"I'm sure that we won't go past March 11 without renewing," said the management lawyer, who spoke on the condition he not be identified. "No one has really focused on it yet because all the focus has been on the replacement players."

Owners will have a relatively new face at the table Monday — acting commissioner Bud Selig, who has stayed away for the most part. Selig and union head Donald Fehr set up these talks during two days of discussions last week in Milwaukee, Selig's hometown.

Asked what he expects to happen, Selig said, "We shall see. Given that last week's events were civilized and sensitive, I don't know. We'll take each day as it comes."

It's unclear who will make the first move. Players made the last proposal Feb. 4, but owners never responded because it represented hardly any change from the union's previous proposal of Dec. 22.

Talks broke off Feb. 7 after a failed session with President Clinton at the White House.

"We agreed to meet Monday in a smaller setting, a meeting on the core economic issues," said Chuck O'Connor, management's chief lawyer.

The negotiations will take place on the Gainey Ranch, where both Selig and Fehr's parents have homes. When they arrived in their rooms, they each received dark chocolate baseball gloves with white marzipan baseballs and the inscription "Play Ball!" written across the tray in chocolate.

■ women's gym

continued from page 10

well.

"It was not a perfect vaulting rotation, and yet we rose to the occasion. I think when times get tough, you have to continue to strive," said Kuzara. "We were just sitting there waiting for them to tell us we were in second place by two or five tenths."

"I thought the genuine surprise and emotion was really great. Wins and losses do not matter in our sport, and if it did not matter, then you would not have reacted like that."

What came out of the meet for Kuzara himself was the play of his top freshmen athletes, Penny Lebeau (vault) and Karen Maurer (all-around). As for Maurer, she had the enviable position of leadoff for all except one of the events, which Kuzara points to the unseen factor of experience.

"I really think that this was a big meet for the freshmen. They are not used to kind of system at all," said Kuzara. "West Virginia is a huge place for a gym, and if you are not used to that it can cause problems."

"If Karen and Penny do not come through, we lose that meet. I am very proud of both of them."

COURTESY OF UMASS SPORTS INFORMATION

Lianne Laing's first vault proved to be the clincher for the women's gymnastics team when she scored a 9.85, solidifying the Minutewomen's win over West Virginia.

Men's track is ninth at New Englands

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts track head coach Ken O'Brien entered this past weekend's New England Track Championships at Boston University shooting for somewhere between a fifth and tenth place finish. And although he would have preferred a higher overall scoring total, his team's ninth place standing sufficed.

The UMass representatives totalled 27 points, 92 behind champion UConn (109). Rounding out the top five were Boston College (61), Boston University (58), Rhode Island (52) and Southern Connecticut State University (39).

"We [did finish between fifth and tenth place], but I felt we could have finished maybe five or 10 points higher going into the weekend. I think the fact that we had as many personal and season bests as we did compensates for that," O'Brien said.

The distance medley unit, comprised of sophomore Paul Blodorn, freshman Corey Cameron, senior Craig Cormier and sophomore Michael Macceiko, fit into that category. Their season-best time of 10:06.9 not only earned them a second-place finish in the event, but it qualified them for next weekend's IC4A Championships in Princeton, N.J. The time was an 11 second improvement over its previous week's mark.

Blodorn ran the 880 with a time of 1:55.8, Cameron finished the 440 with a time of 51.4, Cormier did the 3/4 mile with a time of 3:06.7 and Macceiko finished the mile with a time of 4:13.0.

Senior John Johnson earned a fourth place finish in the long jump with a leap of 23 feet. However, his season-best feat was bittersweet, as Johnson was just six inches shy of qualifying for the IC4As.

"It's a little disappointing," O'Brien said, "given that if he had qualified [for the IC4As], his family would have been in Princeton [his hometown]. But the accomplishment itself was impressive, given he was just coming off of his hamstring injury."

Senior Tom Galligani earned third place in the triple jump with a 46–feet 10–inch mark. Galligani had made the IC4As a week earlier in the Atlantic 10 Championship, with a 47– feet 11–1/4–inch jump.

Ethan Nedeau nailed a fourth–place finish in the 1000 meters with a personal best time of 2:27.16. With the impressive mark, the junior qualified for the IC4A's.

Sophomore Walter Stock mustered a sixth–place finish in the mile with a time of 4:14.52. Stock's personal–best time also notched a spot in the IC4As.

The 4x800 relay team of Blodorn, Macceiko, Cormier and senior Rick Copley ran a time of 7:50.95, good for fourth place in the competitive event.

Sophomore Matthew Behl did not place, but achieved a personal–best in the 5000 meters, with a time of 15:08.12. Also garnering a personal best was freshman Jeffrey Brusso, who scored 2,999 points in the pentathlon.

"This team doesn't have a lot of championship depth, but it does own a lot of team depth," O'Brien said. "In a meet of this caliber, if our blue chips don't perform great, we're simply not going to have the people to fill in the holes. We do, however, have the manpower to excel in a dual meet, as we have shown in the past."

In all, UMass will send representatives from six events to the IC4As, including the aforementioned, along with freshman sprinter Scott Price. His time of 22.48 in the 200 meters at the Challenge Cup Finals earned him the honor.

Women's swim pleased with fifth-place finish

By Andrew Bard
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's swimming team took fifth place at the Atlantic 10 Championship last weekend in Piscataway, N.J. The Minutewomen finished with a total of 401 points, which was 298 behind first–place West Virginia. Progress was made as the Minutewomen bettered last year's total of 395.50 points.

Junior Sarah Baker and freshman Karen Sonnwald shined in Massachusetts fifth–place finish. Baker became the first UMass woman swimmer to ever win an Atlantic 10 individual swimming title as she finished with a time of 52.63 in the 100–yard freestyle. That time was a personal– best for Baker and the second best time in UMass history.

Baker also finished second in the 50–yard freestyle, swimming a career–best time of 24.32. Sonnwald finished fifth and set a new school record with a time of 5:02.49 in the 500–yard freestyle. She also placed fifth in the 1,650 freestyle and broke her own school record by about 16 seconds with a time of 17:12.47.

Massachusetts head coach Bob Newcomb was very pleased with the individual accomplishments, and learned a lot about his team over the weekend.

"It was a big thing, a big thing for the program for someone like Sarah and Karen to step up," Newcomb said. "I think a lot of people had okay meets. A lot will swim better this weekend. When we come back we will surprise people."

The Minutewomen finish up their 1994–95 season this weekend as they travel to Buffalo, N.Y. for the Eastern College Athletic Conference Championship. Last year, the Minutewomen took fifth place out of 44 teams with a total of 247 points, 202 behind first–place Connecticut.

The Minutewomen set three school records at the 1994 ECAC Championship. Senior Julie Verney set a school record in the 200–yard butterfly, while Barbara Banks, Baker, Jodi Walters and Trish Evers set a new school record in the 400–yard medley relay with a time of 3:58.56. Banks, Baker, Evers and Jessica Griffith finished sixth and set a new school record in the 200–yard medley relay with a time of 1:50.33.

This year, the relay teams should put in another strong performance, while both Baker and Sonnwald will contend for individual titles.

Newcomb has a good feeling about his team heading into this weekend's competition, which take place March 2-4.

"I really think we are optimistic, a lot of them like the second meet. There is a realistic chance that we'll swim better. Some of our distance swimmers are going to swim different events," Newcomb said.

■ hoops

continued from page 10

end of the regular season as a tune–up for the post–season, Rhode Island coach Al Skinner's team is still learning.

"We're still doing a lot of teaching," Skinner said. "Our play has improved. This is a much different team than we were a month ago."

The UMass alumnus knows that his team has its work cut out for it against his alma mater.

"You can't ignore UMass," Skinner said. "They've clearly established themselves as the first place team in the conference."

The Rams are led by Cuttino Mobley (13.5 ppg) and Cordell Llewellyn (13.0 ppg). Freshman Tyson Wheeler has been brilliant at times, but erratic at others, dishing out 126 assists but committing 112 turnovers.

Notes: Calipari confirmed on his Channel 40 television show Sunday night that he had arranged a tryout for Mike Williams with the NBA expansion franchise, the Vancouver Grizzlies.

■ men's gym

continued from page 10

On the pommel horse, senior co–captain Jason Lee scored a 9.35 and was followed up by a personal–best from sophomore Lorenzo Macaluso (9.7). Senior Jay Santos ended with a 9.45.

Still rings, where UMass is one of the strongest in the nation, brought success, as well, highlighted by an outstanding performance by sophomore Chris Funk (9.75). Freshman Kevin Schwartz, ranked first in the nation in the event, hit another 9.9 on the rings. Schwartz said he is still striving for that perfect routine.

Sangirardi put in another clutch routine in the vault scoring a 9.25, and Shupak kept up his outstanding performance in the vault with a 9.55 to keep UMass close.

Parallel bar routines were excellent from top to bottom as all scores were above a 9.25, including placing first (Columbus with a 9.6) and third (junior Steve Goldman, 9.5) in the event.

With their dual meet season over with, the Minutemen head to Cambridge on Saturday for the New England Championships.

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

ALANA Christian Alliance presents a heritage mini–gospel concert/picnic/Sunday March 5, 1995 Campus Center auditorium featuring a five college mass choir. If you would like to sing with the mass choir for this one time event contact Chuck 6 0980 ASAP

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. FS011

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst. Classes start Mon. March 6th at 7:00pm Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN MIX to register today!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Mazda RX-7 5Mt, 5 spd, tint, sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500 Call 253-3149

Ford Tempo 1984 light blue (automatic) 58,000 miles only! Runs like new. Excellent condition Asking for $2300 or b.o. Call Ilias at 549-8133

Mustang GT 1989 Beautiful shape, alarm, sunroof, 5 spd, burgandy, loaded 7895. Call Aaron 546-4074

Need a car!! Going back to school 1994 Geo Tracker. Standard covertable, only 51mm 532-7958

CAMP MATAPONI

Summer opportunities Male and female staff needed for girls overnight camp in Maine. Positions available waterfront, horseback riding, gymnastics, dance, tennis, nature, roces course, athletics, arts and crafts. For applications call 800-424-2755.

ENTERTAINMENT

If you are a stand up comic, juggler, mime, poet, etc. and want to put on a show just for fun with the UMass Juggling Club call Harry 549-4189

FOR RENT

Cape Cod Group Summer rentals waterfront houses Falmouth area 508-477-6000

Two rooms available! 230+ a month. Off rt. 9 Amherst Kitty house w/ yard, on bike path + bus route. Right near Stop + Shop Sorry, no phone yet call 549-0804 house name + number with Tim.

FOR SALE

Alpine 7917 5X model, full logic, detachface, dolby $175 Alpine 6040 component. -tic set 4" mids, 1" dome tweeters, -160 Kenwood KAC 624 amp 80 W/2 180 W1 $95. Alpine 3521 amp 18W/4 $30 Magnavox 4 head VCR HQ, unified remote, $140 Call 253-3149

Atari Interlinkon, Colecovision gamac controllers and systems Buy/Sell/Trade 256 1995 ask for Tony

Condoms by mail. Top quality brand names $2/9 condom sampler, $8/12 condom sampler, $21/36 condom sampler. Send cash, check or money order to Healthy Concepts, Box 52, Amherst, MA 01004

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $599 Call Chris at 800-789-5885

2863306 computer system CPU monitor keyboard $225. Steve 549-5181

Save $$$. U.S. Air anywhere by March 29 $173 valid to $110 For male 549-4015

Yen Forty ka Albany March 27 14th nor center Good prices great seats Call now 584-8282

Want a Macintosh? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Clarisworks $490 Christoffer 549-7453

FOUND

Key found outside Sylvan et bus stop Sunday morn. Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain Call Bill at 6-0204

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol Credit available Casa Box 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512-416-0191

HELP WANTED

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania Excellent residential coed summer camp. Looking for caring counselors to help teach all land and water sports, mtn bikes, motorcycles; arts + crafts, climbing wall, ropes course, radio, newspaper, waterskiing, jet skiing, and much more. Summer season 6/20/95 thru 8/18/95 Call 800-832-8228 for an application

Counselors for coed N.E. PA. overnight Jewish Federation camp –3 hours from NYC. General, sports, waterfront, + arts Call 1-800-973-3869. On campus interviews available.

Cruise ships hiring Earn up to $2000 +/month World travel Seasonal + full time positions. No exp necessary For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext C5001-4

Dancers wanted No experience necessary Earn $1000-$1500 per week 532-1422

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod. Call Holly at 349-8382

Guaranteed 40 hours/week exterior painting in local area during summer. Need hungry hard working people No experience needed Potential earnings above $3000 Michael Bulow 413-546-7120

Part time marketing/sales Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary Call (401) 295-5490 after 2 p.m.

Summer camp in Cape Cod. Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids Beautiful location. Excellent program, competitive salaries Call Rob at 549-8417 for info and application

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000–$4,000+/mo Teaching convention in English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea No teaching background or asian languages required For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50017

LOST

All black kitten with green eyes His name is Chubby and was last seen in Tobin on 2/21/95. Please call 253-0858

PERSONALS

Congratulations to Tri Sigma's newest members Corrie, Chelsea, Cara, Kelly and Elana! Get psyched for a fun filled semester

Hot! Hot! Hot! Some stuff on this page could be stolen merchandise. Be sure to ask for a bill of sale if you buy an item from here. Remember, Cinbank's looking out for you.

Insomniac party line. Customer service reps are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for your questions and emergencies Call 1-800-Chbank to apply

Mellie D. Any guesses as to who has your pants? Well don't lose your shorts over it.

Someone to watch over you We look out for students better than any other credit card. Call 1-800-Citibank to apply Note: we won't hit on your dates

The sisters of $07 would like to welcome our new ribbonettes Megan, Amy, Danielle, Suzanne, Shari, Leigh, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julie, Terri, Samantha, Kim B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lee

ROOM WANTED

Want a room for May! Grad student seeks room in house to rent starting in May- would rent for one year Angela 546-1851

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo Florida Spring Break- Earn 2 credits Call Project Deep 1-800-257-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800-282-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS 256-8085, 19.2 K bps 130 mega online + CD ROM Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Scholarship money is available! I can help you locate and receive it Call for details. 817-782-8375

You take your writing seriously and so do we For more information about quality editing by e-mail, write to Editing Transnational at editrase@aol.com

TRAVEL

Killington ski vacation, Five nights hotel, five days lift tickets Good during any Mon.-Fri this season Worth $1000 sell to best offer. 6-2156 details

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 8 days $275! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $429! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Date entry sod word processing. Reliable and fast. Call Andy 585-0018

WANTED

Old Cabbage Patch Kids from the 80's Call Herb 549-1791

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends Gas $ 253-2809

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Classified Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto for Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Word Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

REGARDING PERSONALS
1. All personals ARE to be typed or printed legibly. Unrecognizable personals will not be printed. Acceptance of the classified is at the discretion of the Collegian.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X _____ Words: = _____ X rate = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Jim's Journal By Jim

I walked past my chair today and noticed Mr. Peterson chewing on it.
When she saw me she ran away.
I sat down to watch some TV.
Nothing was on.

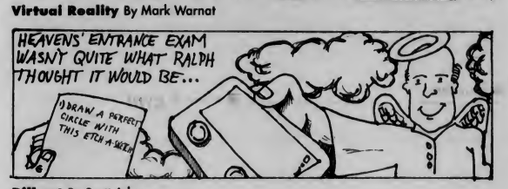
The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

SORRY YOU LOST YOUR WALLET AT THE CIRCUS, HONEY.
I DON'T KNOW HOW IT HAPPENED.
MAYBE THE BRIGHT LIGHTS BLINDED ME WHEN I PAID FOR THE POPCORN.
I HAVE BAD VIBES ABOUT THAT CIRCUS!
FUNNY--- SO DO I!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

I WONDER WHY YOU CAN'T REMEMBER MY ACT AT THE CIRCUS, HONEY.
I DON'T KNOW. EVERYTHING ABOUT THE SHOW IS JUST A BLUR TO ME.
IT MUST HAVE BEEN A BLUR TO EVERYONE! I DON'T HEAR ANY APPLAUSE!

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat



Dilbert By Scott Adams

AND TED GETS THIS "SINGULAR ACHIEVEMENT" AWARD FOR CREATING THE "WE ARE TEAMS" CAMPAIGN
IT'S A CHECK FOR A THOUSAND DOLLARS! LET'S ALL GIVE TED A HAND
THESE THINGS NEVER WORK THE WAY YOU WANT THEM TO SLAP WHACK OW!!

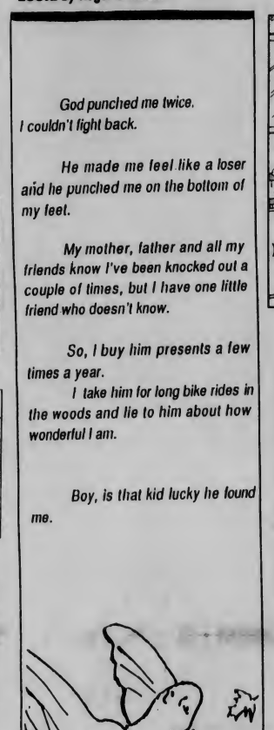
Bruno By C. Baldwin

HEY BABE, WHAT'S HAPPENING?
EXCUSE ME! WHAT? I'M JUST WAITIN' TO USE THE BATHROOM!
THAT'S COOL! I'M JAPAN, SO DID YOU COME HERE ALONE TONIGHT?
NO, I CAME HERE WITH MY LESBIAN LOVER.
OH RANDY... DON'T TELL ME YOU'RE A FRIGGIN' DEEE MAN. THAT'S SICK. DON'T YOU HAVE ANY CONCEPT OF DECENCY?
IS HERE WHERE I'M SUPPOSED TO BE WHEN OVER BY YOUR CHARMING PERSONALITY?
GET A LIFE FRANK!
LISTEN, THERE'S NO REASON TO FEEL INFERIORITY JUST BECAUSE I'M BETTER LOOKING THAN YOU ARE.

Lead Crystals By Gleeson

TOOK A TRIP INTO SPRINGFIELD - A NICE LITTLE TOWN
After hanging with the Atheneg General we cruised right into an episode of C.O.P.S.
Damn I thought the Boys in Blue were after us for something but I was just Baggy!

Loaid By Roger & Salem



God punched me twice. I couldn't fight back.
He made me feel like a loser and he punched me on the bottom of my feet.
My mother, father and all my friends know I've been knocked out a couple of times, but I have one little friend who doesn't know.
So, I buy him presents a few times a year.
I take him for long bike rides in the woods and lie to him about how wonderful I am.
Boy, is that kid lucky he found me.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I rigged up the phone so you can talk while you're cooking."

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Tracy Monahan
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Juan José Chacon Quiros
Production Supervisor.....Greg Iafrate
Production.....Dave Gleeson
Ken Perry, Mark Mitchell

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER- MARDI GRAS
Grilled Cheese	Country Style Ribs
Kielbasa Grinder	Fried Chicken
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Cheese on Granola	Veggie Gumbo Cass.
Hummus Veggie Pocket	Fried Chicken

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Take the helm
8 Lushing or jamming
10 "La Cog —"
13 Paint swelling
14 Escapi
18 Eye part
19 Pick-me-up
21 Bakery treat
20 Former Yugoslav leader
22 Bandeau
25 Andrews, e.g.
26 Put a match to
29 They look into the future
30 Timid Casper
33 "A Mighty Fortress — God"
34 Chemical ending
35 Hank Sessions' for one
36 Hardly the macho type
43 Sure, in slang
44 Pub drink
45 Chantey Weaver's "home"
46 "Carmen" star
49 Valentino specialty
53 Ancient Mariner's cry
54 "Aida was — —"
55 Author Peretz
57 Ill-tempered one
58 Swinging swimmer
62 Din
66 "— Clock Jump"
67 Touch on
68 Card for 29 across
69 Cleo's killer
70 Deprives of
71 Trite

DOWN
1 Darting
2 Altar words
3 Actor Carlos
4 Fad to include
5 Secretive
6 Usher
7 Spoil
8 "— Got a Secret" singer
9 Plage
10 Twisted
11 Little egg
12 Allude to 13 Ship since
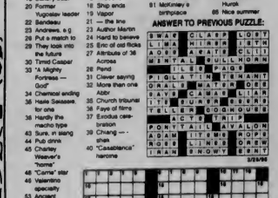
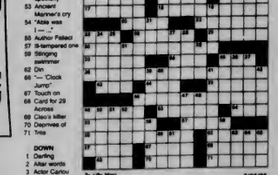
19 Vapor
21 — the line
23 Author Morton
24 Hard to believe
25 Entr'—ed Roles
27 Attributes of 36 across
28 Pend
31 Clever saying
32 More than one Aldo
35 Church tribunal
36 Fays of films
37 Exodus caravanserai
39 Chiang — -shek
40 "Casablanca" heroine
41 Route
42 Kid
46 Zenith competitor
47 Marina sights
48 Gashed or Gawain
49 Japanese admiral of WWII
50 Omni, for one
51 McKinley's birthplace
52 Round dance
56 Out yonder
58 Lt or nav
60 Nigerian
61 Deli items, briefly
63 George's brother
64 Impressive Huish
65 Nice summer

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



2/28/95



By Eddie Mineo
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/28/95

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A good day to tackle paperwork. Trust your instincts. Although a financial dream may continue awhile longer, the solution is near at hand. Simmer down before a quarrel develops between you and your mate.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Small economies can mean big savings over time. When considering the options available to you, discuss the various possibilities with your mate or partner.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Concentrate on projects you can handle alone. Making an appearance at a professional meeting will introduce you to influential people. Although your workload will soon be heavier, you stand to reap fabulous regards. Forge ahead!

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Carefully look over joint finances. You need to make sure that partnership funds are efficiently deployed. A chance encounter could make your heart skip a beat.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): A stroke of good fortune benefits romance or a project designed to help children. Be careful not to read too much into a phone call. A home repair proves easier or less expensive than anticipated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Take your time today. Although enthusiasm is important, you should not get carried away. The financial picture may not be as rosy as you have painted it. Listen to your intuition and act accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Profits can be made through distant contacts. Expect to pay for their help. Get promises in writing and avoid making impulsive decision. Lighten up when spending time with your family. Focus on fun.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): You may be able to accomplish more at home than at work today. Confide in your mate or partner. A loved one's extravagance will have to be curbed. Be firm about buying essentials only.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Postpone plunging into a real estate venture until more information is available. You need to take a new associate's claims with a grain of salt. Investing in some new clothes will polish your image.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Thoughts of romance could interfere with your efforts to concentrate on work. If you went to succeed, you must be businesslike! A heartfelt compliment makes you blush with pride. Resist the urge to brag.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Nit–picking could lead to job upsets or bruised relationships. Rely on your instincts. Keep a safe distance from troublesome people. You need to bond a little in family matters. Make intelligent concessions to mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): You feel energetic and daring today. Be bold: Ask for a raise or a better–paying assignment. A dawdling romance will soon pick up momentum. Veer your heart on your sleeve this evening.

Quote of the Day

"When I was a kid my parents moved a lot– but I always found them."

–Rodney Dangerfield

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR, 78 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR, 141A Damon Rd., Northampton, MA 586-4444
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates • We Rent to All Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Companies

100% BEEF 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS QUARTER POUNDERS® OPEN YEAR ROUND 585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA Great Burgs! Great Deal!

ARE YOU TIRED of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

家滿園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
Mandarin / Szechuan Cuisine
We Deliver in Amherst 5-9:30 Everyday
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 pm • Sunday Brunch 11am - 3pm
NEW ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children Under 10 $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30 - 3pm $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 chicken fingers, 2 chicken wings or hot & sour soup.
Take Out Service - Full Cocktail Menu
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

USA TODAY-CNN Top 25 – Men's Basketball

1 UCLA	6 Maryland	11 Wake Forest	16 Purdue	21 M[illegible]
2 N Carolina	7 Arkansas	12 Villanova	17 Mississippi
3 Kentucky	8. UMass	13 Virginia	18 Oklahoma
4 Kansas	9 Michigan St	14 Arizona St	19 Stanford	[illegible]ma St
5 Connecticut	10 Arizona	15 Syracuse	20 Oklahoma St	25 T[illegible]

Sports

SPORTS NOTICE
There will be a IMPORTANT Collegian Sports meeting on Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office (113 Campus Center Basement). If you are unable to attend, please contact Andrew Bryce or Matt Vautour at 545-1851.

Special night tonight for seniors at Mullins

■ Last regular season home game for seniors against Rhode Island

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

On senior night two years ago, he sat in the stands cheering as the crowd at the William D. Mullins Center honored Tony Barbee, Kennard Robinson, Tommy Pace and Harper Williams. Tonight, when the 1994-95 University of Massachusetts basketball team has its senior night, Jason Germain will be among the honorees.

"I used to come to all the games, front row all the time, waiting two hours before the game to get in," said the South Hadley native. "Now I don't have to do that."

After walking on to fill the roster spot vacated by Giddell Padilla before the 1993-94 season, Germain has been along for the ride of every hoop fan's dream.

Before tonight's game against Rhode Island (7 p.m.), the earliest Germain had ever entered a game was midway through the second half. Tonight, however, in keeping with the tradition of senior night, the walk-on guard will take his place alongside fellow seniors Lou Roe, Derek Kellogg and Jeff Meyer, starting in what could be their final game at the Mullins Center.

What is Germain's dream scenario for his first start?

"First play, [I'll] come off the trailer, hit a three to open up the game," Germain said. "Next time down, give the ball to Lou, see him dunk it. Open the game up like 13-2, then they'll take me out and I'll be happy.

"If things go well, we'll have a good lead, and in the second half I'll be able to play."

When asked if he planned on closing his career the way last year's walk-on Craig Berry did, with a showboating dunk, Germain laughed.

"Nah, I'll stay out there and shoot the three," Germain said.

Massachusetts coach John Calipari hoped the night would be special for his four seniors.

"Senior night is always a special nigh," Calipari said. "You want them to be appreciated. The three A-10 championships they've been a part of are unprecedented."

Roe will likely reach a personal milestone tonight, as well. His second rebound of the night will be the 1,000th of his career. Roe is second on UMass' career rebounding charts. Only Julius Erving, at 1,049, has more in his career.

Senior night may not be the last time the home crowd will see this year's team. A win for Massachusetts tonight will insure them the top seed in the Atlantic 10 Tournament. If the Minutemen survive the first two rounds of the tourney, the conference championship would be at the Mullins Center.

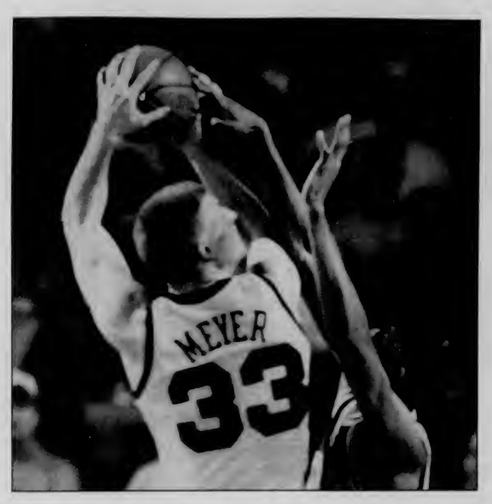
Meyer said that it would be a thrill to finish his home career with another Atlantic 10 title.

"That would be the biggest bang we could go out with, to win four straight Atlantic 10 championships," he said.

"It's strange because it's an end and a beginning," Calipari said. "Hopefully, we're going to be playing a lot more basketball."

While the Minutemen are using the

Turn to HOOPS, page 8



COLLEGIAN FILE
Jeff Meyer (33) will play in his final regular season home game of his career at the William D. Mullins Center against Rhode Island tonight at 7 p.m.

Game Preview

No. 8 UMass Minutemen vs. Rhode Island Rams

At The Williams D. Mullins Center
Amherst, MA
7:00 p.m.

Senior Night

Lou Roe
Forward

Derek Kellogg
Guard

Jeff Meyer
Center

Jason Germain
Guard

On the Air
Radio: WMUA 91.1 FM Greg Corey, Pat Sheeran
WHMP 99.3 George Miller and Jack Leaman

Gymnastics teams achieve success over weekend

•Men's gym finishes strong, beats Syracuse

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Correspondent

Performance under pressure. It makes the difference between losing teams and winning teams.

As expected, the pressure was on Saturday in Boyden Gymnasium as the 13th ranked Orangemen of Syracuse put their undefeated season on the line against the 15th ranked Minutemen, who were trying to extend their five-meet winning streak.

The rankings indicated that the meet would be close, and the teams did not disappoint. The crowd at Boyden Gym went home especially happy as the Minutemen finished strong and won the meet, 225.05-224.60. The point total bettered their season-best by almost two points.

Coach Roy Johnson had predicted the meet would come down to the final event, the high bar. He felt that if his squad was within a point, they would have a good shot at a victory.

"We were trailing by 1.1 points (going into the high bar) and I pulled all the guys together", Johnson said. "I told them we had a better high bar team then them, so let's just go out and show them."

Syracuse's first performer in the fifth event missed," Johnson added. "Then their first high bar scored a 7.4 after missing his routine, so that just changed the whole complexion of the meet."

Next up was Massachusetts freshman Mike Sangiri rdi, who scored a 9.25 to really put the Minutemen in good position to take the meet.

Under the pressure of the situation, Johnson was impressed on how he performed.

"As a freshman, (and) leading off the last event with a 9.25 with the meet still in doubt was incredible," Johnson said. "Mike really came through for us."

Sangirardi, aware of the situation at hand, just concentrated on his routine and stayed focused.

"I really got excited when their man didn't perform that well," Sangiradi said. "The whole pressure of the situation got me excited. I really like to perform under the pressure of the situation."

Another huge contributor to the team high bar score was freshman Danny Young, who shared first place in the event with fellow Minuteman Gabe Columbus (9.6).

Young's score was a personal-best and Columbus' routine brought all members of the team to embrace on the mat.

The meet was hotly contested from start to finish, as no team could dominate a particular event. Through the first five, neither team won an individual event by more than half a point.

UMass started strong with floor exercise scores of 9.35 and 9.4 by Young and senior Pete Degenhardt, respectively. Sophomores Ruslan Shupak and Gabe Columbus finished with scores of 9.25 and 9.7.

Turn to MEN'S GYM, page 8

COURTESY OF UMASS SPORTS INFORMATION
Ruslan Shupak's 9.55 in the vault helped the men's gymnastics to defeat Syracuse this past weekend at Boyden Gym.

•Women's gym upset WVU at Coliseum

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Last Sunday afternoon, the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team (9-2, 4-1 A-10) defeated the No. 21 nationally-ranked West Virginia squad with a school record score of 190.925-190.725 at the WVU Coliseum.

The University of Pittsburgh came in third with 186.325. It was sweet revenge, as they were able to pay back the close home loss, also by less than one point, from two weeks ago at the Curry Hicks Cage. Running two-tenths of a point behind going into the last event, the Minutewomen's comeback in the WVU Coliseum signifies a big step forward in the overall program, and is happening at the right time of the season for both coach and players.

"It is clearly the biggest win since I have been here. I mean, it does not even compare. Each one of the team is responsible for this win," said head coach Dave Kuzara.

"We had mistakes, but with 24 routines you are going to have mistakes," Kuzara said. "Every time someone made a mistake, the next person was able to pick up the slack. Then, the person who made that mistake was able to do very well in the next event.

"It is six meets into the season and every meet we have improved, every meet our scores have gotten higher and now we have broken the school record again. There are so many positives that come out of this situation, and I think we still have our best gymnastics ahead of us."

With the win, West Virginia's streak of 24 consecutive wins in the Atlantic 10 Conference was snapped. As UMass has performed in the shadows for so long, the A-10 superiority of the Mountaineers is now in jeopardy. Kuzara sees it as a healthy victory for the overall conference make-up come playoff time, but also admits that now the revenge factor is on the side of West Virginia.

"We are going to be in these situations with the A-10 Championships and the NCAA regionals, and this win makes the A-10s already looking like an exciting meet," said Kuzara.

"You do not go 24-0, get beat and then all of the sudden lay down."

In the all-around competition, UMass placed three gymnasts in the top five. Behind Mountaineer All-American Kristin Quackenbush's first place score of 39.25 was junior J.J. Tolhurst (38.675) and sophomore Tara Swartz (38.575), with sophomore Lianne Laing coming in fifth (37.875).

But what came to stand out as one of the top performances of the day was the first vault of Laing, proving to be the clincher for the event and the win.

Going into the last event, UMass was down by two-tenths of a point, with both teams starting their best events (WVU- floor exercise, UM-vault). Freshman Karen Maurer led off, with junior Shaheda Keels and freshman Penny Lebeau following and the trio of Swartz, Tolhurst and Laing close behind.

Then, the second place announcement fell on the shocked ears of West Virginia, the circle of payback was complete, but surprising to UMass as

Turn to WOMEN'S GYM, page 8

Yarworth happy with fifth place

16 of 18 swimmers set personal best times at Atlantic 10 meet

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Staff

On the surface, a fifth place finish out of seven competing school at the Atlantic Ten Championships doesn't sound overly impressive.

A closer look at the results shows that 16 out of 18 University of Massachusetts men's swimmers set their personal best times this weekend at the Scarlet Aquatic Center in Piscataway, N.J.

"I've never been more impressed or more thrilled with the way that the team has performed at the end of the year," coach Russ Yarworth said. "You just can't ask for a yield like that. The attitude, excitement and enthusiasm was tremendous. It was one of the more enjoyable coaching experiences I've had in years, just watching their attitudes and enthusiasm inflate as the weekend went on."

From top to bottom, Minuteman swimmers constantly exceeded their limits throughout the three days of heated competition.

Senior co-captain Tim Milbert set a new school record in the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 57.58. Milbert also set a personal best in the 200-yard breaststroke, finishing in 2:05.03.

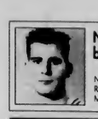
Junior Keith McLarty broke school records in both the 400-yard individual medley and the 200-yard backstroke, with times of 3:58.48 and 1:51.21, respectively. McLarty topped the 200 record by about a second and a half, and shattered the 400 record, breaking it by a full three seconds.

The 200-yard medley relay team of Matt Turner, Milbert, John Koritkoski and Greg Menton swam an impressive race, eclipsing the old school record by finishing in a time of 1:33.71.

"I've got a real core now," Yarworth said. "It was good to see the youngsters like Matt Turner, Scotty Herbert and Dave Peck, who were walk-on swimmers, not only make the A-10 squad, but to qualify for the ECACs in their first year of Division I swimming. Their improvement is incredible and is a testament to their hard work and ability."

The Minutemen hope to continue their solid efforts at the ECAC Championships, which is held this Thursday through Saturday at Buffalo. Last year, Menton captured the ECAC title in the 50 and 100-yard freestyles, set a UMass record in the 100-yard backstroke, and took fourth in the 100-yard butterfly. The Minutemen placed fifth overall in the competition.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 85 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, March 1, 1995



No. 8 Massachusetts blows out Rhode Island
The Minutemen celebrated "Senior Night" in fine fashion, demolishing Rhode Island, 86-71, last night at the Mullins Center (See Sports, page 10).

Chips ahoy for UMass student
A UMass student ventures into the world of marketing with new Minute-man tortilla chips and salsa. (See story, page 5).

New play to take flight
The Birds, the latest play sponsored by the UMass Theater Department, is opening on March 2 at the Rand Theater (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast
No more ice, ice, baby. Wednesday will bring cloudy skies, while Thursday and Friday promise to be mostly sunny with fair temperatures in the mid-30s.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 42 LOW: 25	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 35 LOW: 20

Arrest made in alleged UHS embezzlement

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

A man who processed supplemental health insurance claims for the University of Massachusetts Health Services (UHS) allegedly stole $200,000 from the University.

Glenn R. Essler, a partner with the firm Somers, Kitchen and Essler, which managed a supplemental health plan for UHS, was arrested Sunday at his father's home in Danvers by State Police, said John Lamontagne of the Attorney General's news office.

Essler, 45, of Beverly, pled not guilty to six charges of larceny assault, six charges of procurement fraud and four counts of false claims Monday in Franklin Superior court, said John Van Lonkhuyzen, one of the assistant attorney generals prosecuting the case.

Judge William Welch set bail at $40,000 cash and a $200,000 personal surety, pending his trial.

Essler did not make bail as of yesterday. His trial will be held at the Hampshire Superior Court in Northampton.

Money taken from University trust fund

Essler allegedly used money from a University trust fund set up to pay for health benefits for students who were covered by the plan for personal use, Van Lonkhuyzen said.

He allegedly did this by filing for false invoices and transferring checks intended for payment to his insurance company from UMass into his own pocket.

Essler allegedly filed false invoices by inflating the dollar amount of the claim from the actual worth, Van Lonkhuyzen said.

The University used Somers, Kitchen and Essler to process the claims filed under supplemental health coverage because it is more inexpensive to hire an outside firm rather than doing it within the University, said Karin Sherbin, spokesperson of the UMass news office.

The firm is also being taken to court for their representatives alleged activities, Van Lonkhuyzen said.

Theft will not affect student services

The supplemental health plan is used to cover the cost of hospitalization of students on and off campus.

The yearly fee for students is $490, according to Bernette Melby, director of UHS. The supplemental health plan is used by approximately 8,000 students annually, according to Sherbin.

According to Tom Robinson, vice chancellor for student affairs, his office conducted a programmatic review of UHS and the supplemental health benefits plan.

Melby expressed a concern about an irregularity in the health plan, which then lead him to notify the UMass police, the Attorney General's office and the Northampton district attorney's office of possible wrongdoing, Robinson said.

"We've been concerned about this for quite some time," Robinson said. "We are pleased the Attorney General's office has done a complete investigation."

Essler's alleged affairs did not affect students, their insurance claims or any increase in fees for the supplemental health plan, Robinson said.

The University hired a new firm, First Health of Utah, to process the claims, Robinson said.

The pretrial hearing is slated for March 15, according to Lamontagne.

Cannabis reform group claims unfair treatment

By Henry J. Brier and Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

One of the University of Massachusetts' largest registered student organizations is claiming that it gets discriminated against on campus.

The Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC), a 800-member student organization which supports the legalization of marijuana, has been refused adequate space in the Student Union Building and received harsh treatment from housing services and campus police, according to Lance M. Brown, the CRC's office manager.

For the past year, the CRC has been requesting increased office space to facilitate their growing number of members, according to Michael Stavros, president of the CRC.

"We don't want preferential treatment, we want fair treatment," Brown said.

The group holds their promise to keep all members identities confidential, but the lack of privacy in sharing their office with other active organizations deters this effort, Stavros said.

The Campus Center/Student Union Commission (CC/SUC), an organization responsible for accommodating registered student groups, is now in the process of devising a space allocation procedure so that all RSOs are treated fairly and equally, according to Matthew Auger, chair of the CC/SUC.

According to Stavros, it took a year of the CC/SUC thinking up every possible reason not to allocate space for the CRC before they were granted shared space in the Student Union Building.

"They keep tossing us a bone, and then they take it away," Stavros said.

Delphine M. Quarles, organizational advisor for campus activities, could not be reached for comment.

Harassment and denial of rights

The CRC has found themselves immersed in conflict with the residence halls, and have observed police opposition to their group, Brown said.

According to Brown, flyers are regulated by Residents Assistants and the CRC's flyers that advertise the groups meetings have been ripped down in the past, violating the group's constitutional rights.

The director of housing services could not be reached for comment.

But the CRC's rights have been jeopardized by police activity, as well. According to Brown, police harassment of CRC members is

Turn to CRC, page 2

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Cannabis Reform League is pushing for more space than their current student union office allows.

Student files discrimination charge at chief

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts student has filed a sexual discrimination complaint against Amherst Town Fire Chief Victor Zimbruski and the Town of Amherst.

UMass senior Sarah Marsh was a student volunteer firefighter with the Amherst Fire Department (AFD) for two years, during which she was allegedly discriminated against as a candidate for promotions within the department.

The alleged claim, Marsh vs. Amherst, filed with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination states that twice Marsh was denied promotion to Lieutenant, which was given to less qualified males.

"My self confidence and self esteem have been undermined," Marsh said. "My dream of being a firefighter has been shattered."

Marsh's claim of the alleged discrimination said men were given rank positions over her because she was a woman.

"I know from discussions with other former female firefighters at AFD, that the AFD has a long history both sexual harassment and discrimination, one that should not be tolerated," Marsh said.

Two of the three women presently on the student force disagree.

Tanya Carlino said she has "absolutely not" experienced and sexual discrimination in the department.

"If you do your job, you do your job," she said.

Firefighter Susan Thibeault said she feels the students on the force are treated as equals."We are not a girl or a guy," she said, "we are all firefighters."

Chief Zumbruski declined to comment on the alleged claim.

Zimbruski did say that there are no female firefighters living in the firehouse on Eastman Lane, but declined to say why.

Eight males currently live at the firehouse, according to Travis Roberts, a UMass student and pump operator.

"All three of [the candidates] had the same rank and seniority," said Marsh, describing an alleged incident. One had been out sick for much of the previous semester, she said.

The candidate chosen for the position, Colin Campbell, was not certified as an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT), as she was, according to Marsh.

"I worked hard to be a good firefighter and EMT, " she said. "It is frustrating when this was not recognized or valued because of my sex."

Amherst Town Manager Barry Del Castilho and Assistant Town Counsel Alan Seewald did not return telephone calls regarding the case.

Freeze frame

CHRIS KASUBA / COLLEGIAN
Frigid temperatures caused ice to form on everything from branches to walkways yesterday, causing classes to be cancelled until 11 a.m.

Amherst library seeks extra aid

Additional $100,000 sought by trustees due to yearly overspending

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — The trustees of the Samuel Jones Library asked the Amherst Select Board for $100,000 last Monday to insure that librarians do not lose their jobs.

Because of overspending, the Jones Library may be forced to lay off three of their full-time staff. With the loss of full- time staff, many of the library's community programs may be in danger of being lost, said Bonnie Isman, director of the library.

The library has 12 work-study positions. These should be unaffected since the federal government pays for all but $5,000 of their pay, Isman said.

The trustees of the library went before the town select board and requested additional funds of $100,000 from the town of Amherst.

The select board said the town needs to cut $800,000 already and it is unlikely that an additional $100,000 would be available.

"The problem is where to get the $100,000," said Carolyn Holstein, member of the select board. "The rest of the budgets in the town are overwhelmingly bad and will continue to be so for the next couple of years."

The trustees suggested perhaps an override of the 2.5 percent property tax could raise the needed funds. The select board was skeptical on whether voters would pass such an override.

According to John Roberts, president of the board of trustees for Jones Library Incorporated, an endowment should spend no more than five percent of its total amount if it is to remain stable. The endowment is currently approximately $5 million, said Roberts. Five percent of five million is $250,000.

The library has been spending $350,000 in endowment money, seven percent of its total, for the past three years, said Roberts. If the overspending continues the endowment would be completely exhausted in 20 years.

The library currently has 26 benefited positions, Isman said. Many of the libraries programs are staffed by only one or two people.

"In cutting three full-time staff we would definitely be wiping out programs of service," Isman said. "It would be very drastic."

The University of Massachusetts was noted as a possible source of contributions.

"Maybe the University or the state might want to give some money," Holstein said. "The library does benefit the students of the University as well as citizens of the town."

The endowment was donated in 1919 by Samuel Jones in order to construct a library in the town of Amherst. For 35 years the library was completely funded by the endowment. In the late fifties it became necessary to ask the town of Amherst for additional funds.

Amherst contributes more then $700,000 each year, 63 percent of the library's budget. The endowment is responsible for 31 percent of the library's funding, which is $350,000, Isman said. The state of Massachusetts contributes $50,000 each year, six percent of the libraries total budget.

If the additional funding is not found the cuts would take effect July of this year, Isman said.

Operator killed as car bursts into flames after hitting tree

An unidentified individual was killed in a car accident on route 202 Monday night when the individual's vehicle burst into flames after smashing into a tree, according to the Belchertown Police Department.

At approximately 7:47 p.m., the vehicle traveled off the right shoulder of the roadway, struck a tree and burst into flames near the intersection of Underwood Street and route 202, police said. The vehicle was headed towards Granby from the Belchertown Center portion of route 202.

The operator died instantly, police said.

There is no reason to believe that the operator was a student at the University of Massachusetts, police said.

The police think they are pretty sure of the individual's identity, but cannot legally release the information until it is confirmed by the medical examiner, police said.

Sergeant William Zobka is heading the ongoing investigation of the case, police said.

— Jessica Taverna

COMING SOON!

The Collegian will be rolling out the red carpet for all students interested in any of the three departments — business, graphics and news — in an open house.

We are always looking for new and exciting staff members. No prior experience needed. Come down and see how we work.

Coming Friday, March 10 to your favorite Campus Center basement office.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, March 1

Information session — The State Public Interest Research Groups will be interviewing on campus for full time organizing positions on campuses across the country. There will be an information session, Campus Center Room 802, 7 p.m.

Music — Leroy Jenkins, solo violin concert. This program is part of the 24th Annual Black Musicians Conference. Augusta Savage Gallery, 7 p.m.

Video — "The image of an artist." Part of the Student Union Gallery Film Series. Campus Center, room 903, 5 p.m.

Lecture — Rona Pondick on "Imperfect Show," NYPOP exhibition. Herter Hall, room 227, 4 p.m.

Performance — Sistahs Achieving Sanity for Selves. The event is part of the Cafe Series, UMass Program for GLB Concerns. Fee upon admission. The Hatch, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Dr. Deborah, author and Emory University Professor, will speak on "Holocaust Denial: memory and the search for meaning." Memorial Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, March 2

Music — Diva, No Man's Band and Marlena Shaw. This program is in conjunction with the 24th Annual Black Musicians Conference. Fee upon admission. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

Theater — Ice Cream. Mount Holyoke College, Rooke Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Robert Berlind, painter and head of the MFA program at SUNY–Purchase will present a slide lecture. Hampshire College, Hammen Auditorium in Adele Simmons Hall, 7 p.m.

Film — The University Film Society presents Phil Joanou's State of Grace, a tale of the Irish mob in Hell's Kitchen, starring Sean Penn, Ed Harris and Robin Wright. Tonight at 7:30 p.m., Foreign Language Resource Center in Herter Hall.

Friday, March 3

Music — The Atlantis Ensemble. Amherst College, Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Film — "The Wages of Fear." Hampshire College, Franklin Patterson Hall, 7 p.m.

Theater — Ice Cream. Mount Holyoke College, Rooke Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Lionel Wilson, University of Lancaster, United Kingdom, will speak on "Controls on volcanic eruption rates and lava flow lengths." Morrill II South, room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Notices

Fundraiser — WFCR 88.5 F.M. Public Radio for Western New England seeks volunteers to assist the station with spring fundraising, scheduled to begin on March 29. For more information call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100.

Community Service — The Viva Community Service Council is asking groups to submit the number of community service hours they have completed since the beginning of the academic year in order to tally up the total number of hours this campus has contributed. If you have any questions, contact Lori McKinney at 545-3368.

CRC

continued from page 1

not unusual.

"We keep people out of jail every day," Brown said. "UMass police officers are finding it a lot more difficult to harass UMass students."

During academic year 1993–94, unannounced room sweeps were scheduled, Brown said. The CRC found out about it and informed their members days before the imminent sweeps.

"Housing Services got an onslaught of calls from our members," Brown said. "They called off the search."

Privacy rights are protected under the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, according to UMass Public Safety Lt. Michael R. Grabiec. However, search and seizure is permitted if the substance in question is illegal.

"You're not protected under the Fourth Amendment," Grabiec said.

Public Safety's task is to enforce laws, Grabiec said.

Because marijuana is currently illegal, Massachusetts laws prohibiting its possession must be observed, according to Grabiec.

"My job is to uphold the law," Grabiec said. "As long as it is unlawful, I deal with it. [CRC] is a group who does not agree with the law."

The CRC is now ready to become an affiliated arm of the more widely-renowned National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), Brown said.

When this happens, what is now the CRC will become the UMass/Pioneer Valley NORML, resulting in their ability to form alliances throughout the area.

Collegian Classifieds ... ... They Really Work!
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

BRODIE SKIING COUPON - CUT IT OUT ✂ MA-A-MDC

Ski Brodie
Route 7 New Ashford, MA 413/ 443-4752
Nearby, in the Berkshires

Any Day $ 10 Off!!

Monday - Friday? YES! • Saturday - Sunday? YES!
St. Patricks Day/weekend? no. Sorry. (Isn't our annual Irish Olympics week enough?)

One coupon per person per lift ticket. Valid 1994/1995 ski season. All day adult ticket only $7 off twilight, night, children day ticket. Not valid toward otherwise reduced price ticket. Must complete brief info note at Brodie for redemption

CHANCELLOR'S AWARDS FOR MULTICULTURALISM

SPRING, 1995

On behalf of the Chancellor, you are invited to nominate an outstanding individual most worthy of recognition for his or her contributions toward a diverse, multicultural campus. A Certificate of Appreciation and four $1,000 awards will be presented at a reception to honor and celebrate their achievements on April 20, 1995.

One award each will be presented to an undergraduate student, a graduate student, a staff member, and a faculty member of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Faculty members are invited to use their award for research or scholarships.

Criteria will be based upon one or more of the following related to multiculturalism: (a) original contributions to the University; (b) attainment of high priority objectives; (c) crises of "beyond the call of duty" service; (d) achievement of significant improvements in the area of teaching or curriculum development; and (e) promotion of the awareness of multicultural issues and concerns.

Nominations should be written and include specific reasons or examples based on the above criteria, along with biographical and other pertinent information (including a resume or vitae, if possible) regarding the candidate's current position on campus.

Nominations should be submitted by FRIDAY, MARCH 17, 1995 to: Chancellor's Awards for Multiculturalism, C/O Frederick Tillis, 129 Herter Hall. For further information, contact Julie Fifield at 545-3517.

GREAT EXPERIENCE
GREAT PAY

ADVERTISING REPRESENTITIVES

Needed
Train
Immediately

The Collegian Advertising Staff is now looking for ambitious self starters who aren't afraid to "beat the pavement"

Applications are available at:
THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center

Deadline: March 10, 1995

GREAT JOB!

UM prof appointed to dean post

Faculty member of 19 years named for work with multiculturalism

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

An African American faculty member of 19 years has been appointed as the dean of the school of education at the University of Massachusetts.

Professor Bailey Jackson's appointment will be celebrated at an assembly in the Campus Center Auditorium tomorrow, according to the University News Office.

Jackson is an expert on multicultural organization development and has done independent consulting on multicultural affairs for public agencies, schools and private businesses, according to the News Office.

Jackson has had some of his works published concerning topics such as Black identity development, social oppression and liberation, multicultural organization development and management of diversity in the workplace.

Since 1976, he has served at numerous positions at the University. These positions include interim dean, associate dean for academic affairs, director of teacher education and a professor in the school of education.

He received his masters degree in education at the University in 1972, and went on to receive his doctorate in 1976.

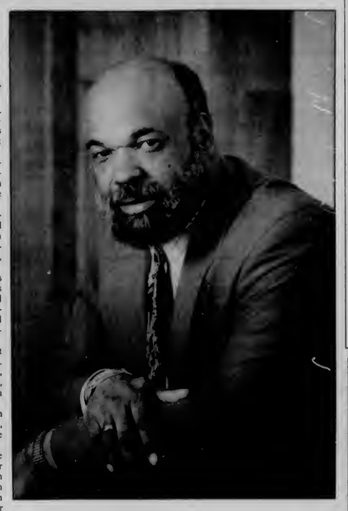
Jackson is affiliated with the American Association for Higher Education, the Organization Development Network, the American Educational Research Association and the Association for Teacher Educators.

The keynote address will be presented by Madeleine Kunin, the former governor of Vermont who is currently serving as the deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Education, according to the News Office. Kunin is an alum of the class of 1956.

Kunin was the first woman to be elected governor of Vermont in 1984. She served three terms, and was appointed to deputy secretary by President Bill Clinton in 1993. She co-chairs Clinton's working group on violence prevention.

Bailey could not be reached for comment.

The event will take place at 11 a.m. It is free and open to the public.



COURTESY BAILEY JACKSON

Professor Bailey Jackson will be appointed dean of the school of education in an 11 a.m. ceremony tomorrow.

Man held in Mexican assassination

By Bill Cormier
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — The brother of a former Mexican president was arrested yesterday in connection with the assassination of a high-ranking, reformist leader of the ruling party.

The arrest of Raul Salinas de Gortari was a startling development in one of three unsolved assassinations of top Mexican leaders over the past year. The Attorney General's Office scheduled an evening news conference on the case, but it wasn't immediately clear what Raul Salinas' connection was to the killing.

A spokeswoman for the federal attorney general's office confirmed local news reports that Salinas, 48, was arrested Tuesday afternoon.

Radio Red said federal police had arrested him in connection with the September 1994 slaying of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, No. 2 man in the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI.

Investigators had been puzzled by the assassination, and in the past were unable to come up with a motive. Raul Salinas is the brother of former President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, who left office in December. Both were brothers-in-law of the victim.

The news of Raul Salinas' arrest comes on the heels of the government's announcement Friday that last year's murder of Luis Donaldo Colosio, presidential candidate of the ruling party, was the result of a conspiracy and that a second gunman had been arrested.

Many Mexicans have long suspected a conspiracy in those two killings, as well as the 1993 assassination of a Roman Catholic cardinal in the western city of Guadalajara.

The PRI, which has ruled Mexico since it was formed in 1929, currently is racked by infighting between reformers and members of the old guard, who want to retain power at any cost.

Carlos Salinas has bristled at suggestions that his administration either bungled or covered up the assassination investigations and that he left his successor, President Ernesto Zedillo, with a seriously troubled economy.

In an television interview earlier yesterday afternoon with the Televisa network's "24 Horas" news program, Carlos Salinas insisted that he had "done everything possible for the good of Mexico" during his six-year term.

He defended the way he had handled the investigation of the Colosio killing, appointing an independent prosecutor "so that no one, not even the president, could impede the lines of investigation, suggest tasks or prevent any one person from being investigated."

During the interview, there was no mention of the Ruiz Massieu case or the arrest of the former president's brother.

Photo Staff Meeting

Anyone interested in shooting for the Collegian should come to our general meeting this Thursday at 7:00 p.m.

No prior experience is necessary.

Bring an empty stomach — there will be pizza!

Collegian Graphics
We're Up All Night
putting together New England's oldest daily college newspaper

tonight...
1/2 PRICE
ALL APPETIZERS AND NACHOS
9:30 till 11:00

Weekly Special
Pitchers $4.75 ICEHOUSE
16oz. Bottles $1.75
Retro Night
Smoking Section 10-1
THE PUB
No Cover Charge
DRAWING FOR T-SHIRTS
13 east pleasant street
amherst

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE

• The #1 overall customer satisfaction rating of any Chevrolet dealership in Massachusetts for 1994.
• Full service auto body. Insurance approved. Rentals available.
• Full selection of Genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
• Fine selection of new and used cars and trucks.
• Mass. State Inspection station #3243.

PAIGE'S Chevrolet Amherst Geo
DICKINSON ST - BETWEEN RT 9 & MAIN ST - 253-3444

The Magic Lantern
THE BEST IN ADULT ENTERTAINMENT

Amateur Night
Wednesday, March 1
8:30 pm
Come See The Top Amateurs From New England Compete For $500 Cash Prizes
Giveaways & Audience Participation
Coming Soon: 40th Anniversary Bash

Only 30 Minutes From Amherst. Rte 9 east to Rte 181 south to Rte 20 West for 1.5 miles
Open 6 Days - Closed Sundays 12 pm to 1 am Boston Rd Rte 20 - Palmer, MA (413) 283-9275

HOWARD HUGHES
SUMMER UNDERGRADUATE RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS
University of Massachusetts

Molecular & Cellular Biology
Chemical Biology
Neurobiology

JUNE 5 - AUGUST 11, 1995

The ten-week program will include:

A Weekly Stipend of $250
Housing Allowance of $500

Fellowships are available for talented college sophomores and juniors to participate in a summer program of research and scholarly activity. Applications are now available at:

MCB Office-435 Morrill North
NSB Office- 337A Morrill South
Biology Undergrad-348 Morrill South
Biochemistry Undergrad-913 LGRT
Chemistry Undergrad-149 Goessmann
Microbiology-203 Morrill North

All application materials must be received by March 15, 1995.
Women and minority students are encouraged to apply.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief
Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager
Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager
Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager
Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Herman Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jessica Taverna News Editor
Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor

Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas Sweeney Graphics Professional
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Campus needs answers

On Feb. 22, basketball coach John Calipari shocked the UMass campus by placing shooting guard Mike Williams on indefinite suspension. Williams, a linchpin of the team, will never wear the Minuteman jersey again.

To date, Calipari has been unwilling to explain the reasons behind his decision, giving rise to rumors of every variety. Calipari has stated that his reason for remaining silent is that he does not wish to hurt Williams by revealing the reasons for his suspension.

The coach's logic in this case is deeply flawed, since it has invited a rash of speculation unhelpful to the team, Williams and himself. One assumes that if Calipari had legitimate reasons for the suspension, he would be prepared to explain them to the University and the fans.

Like his own silence and his enforced silencing of the players during the transcript scandal, Calipari's refusal to comment on this matter creates an atmosphere of secrecy that is counterproductive.

It is time for Calipari to embrace a new spirit of openness. The success and popularity of the basketball program will be based on the quality of performance not only on the court, but off the court as well.

Given the support that the University, its students and fans alike provide, Calipari has an obligation to disclose the affairs of the basketball team.

Fed policy brings sustainable growth

The Dow Jones Industrial Average ended its year-long flirtation with 4,000 by surging to a record close of 4,003.33 last Thursday. Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's testimony gave the markets new confidence that his latest round of interest rate hikes will contain inflation while still fostering sustainable growth.

Greenspan's controversial moves are looking brilliant in hindsight. 1994 saw 4.0 percent real GDP growth and a 5.8 percent unemployment rate, while the Fed kept consumer price increases at a modest 2.8 percent increase while M2 growth, an indicator of the money supply which includes checking and savings accounts as well as small CDs, grew by only 1.0 percent.

A number of indicators have been causing inflation fears among analysts and brokers alike. January saw a rise of 0.3 percent in the producer price index, with an alarming 17.4 percent jump in raw-material prices.

Increases in factory production have also caused concern that manufacturing growth could tighten the labor markets, which could drive wages up, forcing producers to raise prices. Manufacturing increased output by 1.0 percent in both November and in December. Capacity utilization also jumped from 84.7 percent in November to 85.4 percent in December, which could force bottlenecks that could enable producers to raise prices.

But the news isn't all bad. "We are a lot closer to the edge of deflation than we have been in a long time," notes C.J. Lawrence Inc.'s chief economist Edward E. Yardeni, and for good reason. Manufacturing slowed in January, rising only 0.3 percent for the month.

And retail sales, seasonally adjusted, actually fell 0.1 percent in December, after the Commerce Department revised its 1.2 percent November retail sales growth rate to 0.2 percent. These figures point to rising inventories — not depleting ones, which force prices up due to shortages. And even Greenspan feels that the consumer price index overstates the actual inflation rate by between 0.5 percent and 1.5 percent.

Manufacturing added 138,000 jobs in the fourth quarter of 1994, more than in the second and third quarters combined, when rates were lower. This job growth shows that companies can increase capacity even when rates are increasing, thus preventing the slowdown which typically occurs as a recovery rolled on.

Business Week economist Christopher Farrell notes that "because companies are more efficient now, shortages of goods have been rare, and customers have not had to accept higher prices to get supplies delivered."

Greenspan's testimony to the Senate Banking Committee last Wednesday indicated that the latest round of interest rate hikes, which saw a doubling of the federal funds rate since last February, "will be sufficient to contain inflationary pressures." The bond market rallied immediately, with the yield on 10-year Treasury notes falling to 7.32 percent from 7.42 percent.

There is some dissent within the Fed, however. In a statement at the Richmond Federal Reserve last Monday, Vice-Chairman Alan Blinder reinforced the written purpose of the Fed, which is to pursue "maximum employment, stable prices, and moderate long-term interest rates." In regards to Greenspan's pre-emptive strikes against inflation, Blinder said that "you should know when to stop and make a pre-emptive strike against recession as well."

But Greenspan's successes have almost undoubtedly secured him an unprecedented third consecutive term as the Fed's chairman. Even though Blinder feels that risks are now "roughly balanced" between inflation and recession, both consumers and markets are confident in Greenspan's leadership of the economy, and the apolitical yet fiscally conservative chairman's appointment will surely be confirmed by the Republican Senate.

When asked whether we can concede victory on the war on inflation, Greenspan said, "Monetary policy never ends. It's like the luggage carousel at the airports, where you never know where the end is. You phase in from one policy into another. You rarely get to a point where you say, 'Bang. That's it. We succeeded.'"

Despite an onslaught of criticism, Greenspan has proven that he has the economy under control and the best interests of the nation in mind.

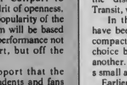
Andrew Davidson is a Collegian columnist.

Strangers make good company

Jen is a starving artist. Al sells computers. Susan is hoping to be a soap opera actress. Pete has to tell his parents that he is a homosexual. And Kevin needed a job so he works the "disco" shift on the New Jersey Transit, which is from 2 a.m. to 7 a.m.

In the past couple of months I have been places that are extremely compact, and people have no other choice but to bond and talk to one another. I am convinced that being in a small area brings people together.

Earlier this month, I was called by the state of Massachusetts to serve jury duty. At eight in the morning I had to report to the Northampton Superior Court and wait in a small room with 30 other people. We had to sit there for five hours because the judge wasn't ready to call us in. Well, in those five hours I listened to people complain about anything and everything. I listened to one lady talk about her divorce settlement, one man talk about his retirement and another man complain about his children. Everyone else listened as I, too, complain about how I was serving jury duty for Massachusetts when I am a resident of New Jersey.



When everyone piled out of the room, I was actually sad to say goodbye. I had completely bonded with so many of them and I knew I would never see them again.

A week ago, I was at a laundromat very late at night. There were five other people in the place and we immediately began talking. By two in the morning, I was telling people, whom I barely knew, about my "problems."

This past weekend, I traveled from Springfield to New Jersey on an Amtrack train, and it was probably the most exciting and the most exhausting weekend I have had in a long time. The train ride was a good four hours, and within that time, I had many great conversations. When I first got on the train I was in no mood to talk. And as luck had it, the man who sat next to me was extremely talkative.

Tom was from Texas. He is 55 years old and has the manners of a king. He is a big man and ate all of my pretzels, but in exchange I got to hear some great stories. What's strange is we kept swapping stories about our lives, even though we knew we would never see each other again. We were keeping each other company on the long trip, in the small train.

Tom and I kept looking out the window commenting on the towns we were passing through. He told me that he lived in a small town, but nobody talked to each another. He didn't even know the name of his neighbor whom he lived next door to for 25 years.

I was next to Tom for several hours, and I knew more about him then his neighbor did.

Being in a small, confined space changes people's attitudes towards socializing. They don't have the time to pre-judge or avoid the person.

In any situation, people should take the opportunity to talk and get to know the person you are doing laundry with, sitting on a train next to or sitting on a jury with. Because you never know — they could be the next President of the United States. Whenever I meet people, I tell them I am going to be a famous writer someday. Hey, you never know.

Geri Sahn is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN ART BY JEFF WILSON

Letters to the Editor

Women's sports not getting ignored

To the editor:

I would like to take a moment and answer a few questions for UMass student Kyri Sparks.

Question #1: Why is a number one nationally ranked men's basketball team worthy of more attention and praise than a women's team with the same ranking?

Answer: Entertainment. When was the last time Rebecca Lobo or any women's hoop player threw down a reverse jam in traffic? You don't know. Well let me tell you — never — and when that happens, (which I'm sure it will someday,) the press coverage will most likely be bigger than any men's highlight that day.

Question #2: How could WFSB, the CBS affiliate in Hartford, run a story on UConn basketball's success vault to number one and lead with that not-so-impressive win over Syracuse? Then could you imagine the audacity it took for that sport's reporter to call Rebecca and Jen by their first names?

Answer: It must have been that ridiculous concept of new news vs. old news. You see, Kyri, everyone in Connecticut (my home state) knows that the women are number one and they are led by Rebecca and Jen (oh I'm sorry, that's Rebecca LOBO and Jen RIZZOTTE.) However, it was the first time in school history that the men's team received that number one spot, so if you were the news station you might want that to be your lead story too. In essence, I really don't think they were patronizing the lady Huskies.

Question #3: Did you ever notice that when ESPN, CBS, NBC or ABC promotes a college basketball game they don't include gender? They just assume we know it is a men's game.

Answer: Maybe you don't notice those pictures they usually show when they are talking about a game or the little caption on top of the screen that says Men's or Women's.

One of the last points I wish to make is about the Sports Illustrated thing. 53 covers, six women on five of them, five have to do with some sort of tragedy, the other in a bathing suit. Come on, we don't complain when men are not on the cover of Cosmo or Vogue. S.I. is an international magazine which puts the biggest story of that week on the cover, male or female.

The last thing I would like to say is this article was not meant to take anything away from women's sports. It was only to show how trivial the things printed today really are.

Chris Martin
Southwest

Editor's note: In the Dec. 5, 1994 game between UNC- Chapel Hill and North Carolina A&T, Charlotte Smith of the Tar Heels grabbed the opening tip to dunk the ball. She was the second woman to ever dunk — the first in 10 years.

Sorority girl strikes back

To the editor:

This letter is in response to Adam Scott Roberts' article "Fighting for bar justice in the cold," printed on February 16. I am a "sorority girl" who is of age and frequently visits the bars uptown. I have taken great offense to the following assumptions: 1) "Sorority girls" are the only people who have fake I.D.'s 2) "Sorority girls" cannot talk about things such as Europe and 3) all "Sorority girls" are alike.

I wonder how Mr. Roberts got the uncanny ability to tell Greeks from non-Greeks. Did the person who stood up to the bouncer actually tell him that she was not Greek? Did this come up in conversation. "Oh by the way, I am not Greek." I have been in the Greek system for three years now and I have yet to point at somebody I did not know and say, "I bet that he/she is Greek" nor would I care if he/she was or was not. Unlike some people, I have better things to do with my time then to wonder what the people standing around me do with their spare time.

Finally, I have never wanted to hook-up with any of my friends boyfriends nor have I had a friend hook-up with my boyfriend. Where this comment came from I am not sure but I know for a fact that kind of behavior happens about as it does in any other living situation. My advice to you, Adam, if you do not like waiting in line, or like the "sorority girl couture," or the "homogeneous environment," then find a new place to hang out because I, like many other "sorority girls," will still be uptown and we do not like those who do not have open minds.

Beth Hoime
Sigma Kappa
Amherst

Hooker's plan borders on idiotic

To the editor:

After reading Juan Jose Chacon Quiros' article on February 27 and Kenneth Miller's letter on President Hooker's conference, I feel I must add my two cents. President Hooker's moves to privatize the University are drastic to say the least, bordering on idiotic.

I am a transfer student at UMass, a refugee from Southern Connecticut State University. Though SCSU has not been privatized, it has had its funds cut by the state of Connecticut. These cuts forced SCSU to put more money into pathways that would attract students (i.e. sports, lowering education standards) and cutting money from its other programs (i.e. fine arts and humanities, the education department). As a result, not only did SCSU's quality as a university decay, its reputation as an institute corroded as well. The same fate seems to be waiting for UMass.

If Mr. Hooker's cuts are enacted, UMass will become another crummy state school. We CANNOT permit this to happen. Are we to leave a high quality education to the wealthy who can afford exclusive private colleges? Are we going to allow President Hooker and his cronies in Boston to create a wealthy, educated elite in Massachusetts, leaving the rest of us to concede our integrity as students and as a public institution in the struggle for private funding? As students in the '90s, we have seen tuition rates grow and the quality of education drop. As students, most of us are poor.

We have significantly less power than those in the legislature who at this moment are deciding the future of OUR education. With the GOP in power, our student aid programs are in jeopardy, as the Republicans attempt to foreclose upon whatever future we may have by denying us the means to higher education.

If President Hooker cannot find the funds to keep our school developing and growing, then perhaps he should take responsibility instead of throwing the burden on our shoulders; perhaps President Hooker should resign. It is obvious to me, as it should be to every UMass student, that Michael Hooker and the state legislature don't care about us or our interests. We have a right to education; it is the only way any of us are going to get anywhere in this world. I agree with Kenneth Miller's assertion that President Hooker is "dismantling us as a political force" (Collegian Feb. 4, 1995); we must fight this crackdown in any way we can. Protest, build coalitions, write your congressional representatives and senators. Call up Hooker's Boston hideout and let him know what you think of his plans. Call up Governor Weld and let him have it as well. UMass is a great school; we can't let the whims of the politicians du jour take it away from us.

Brendan Skwire
South Deerfield

Bryce column refreshingly original

To the editor:

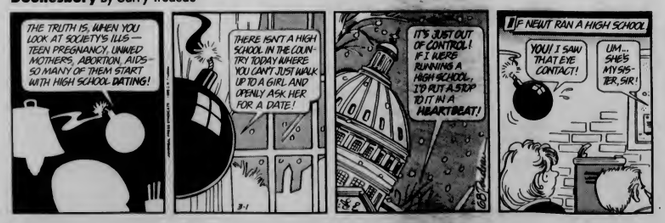
Andrew Bryce's column on the sports page of Feb 27.'s Collegian was one of the most original opinions I have seen expressed on UMass hoops in the three years I've attended this school. This atmosphere which is spoken of about McGonigle Hall is one which was present in our old school gym (Curry Hicks Cage); where people like Julius, Herndon, Barbee and even a guy like Lou Roe would play in-your- face, nasty, aggressive basketball and the relentless Cage crowd (maybe drunk, maybe obnoxious) full of the same tough spirit would show appreciation in the same frenzied manner. This is what's missing at the Mullins Center. Don't get me wrong, the place rocks at times, but it rocks because we have (had) players like Bright, Camby, Roe and even Williams showing skills which could give them a chance to get paid after they leave UMass, doing something which we all wish we could accomplish ourselves.

Watch Hoop Dreams, and replace Lou Roe as Willie Gates, and Mike Williams as Arthur Agee and then you'll see what I'm talking about. Any of these guys should be damn proud of themselves if they leave this place with a degree, a broader and wiser outlook, and if I had my wish, Lou and Donta would be playing alongside of Oak and Ewing while me Spike, and Andy Bryce would be chillin' along with our championships watching two UMass alums getting paid and having fun.

Back to reality, however, and this is where gyms, arenas, playgrounds, backyard hoops stay — the players unfortunately don't. This is why places such as the Boston Garden, MSG, the Palestra in Philly and the Cage become part of our pride, part of the student body, part of our hearts. I've been lucky enough to visit all these hoop arenas and it's something about the magic and mystique in every one of them which keeps our memories of them so cherished. This is Temple-UMass, Boston-New York; rivalries started and will last for lifetimes. This is why our sacred Coach Cal could try taking his face and his made for media personality out of the spotlight for a second, and maybe give a little bit back to us.

Eric Biggio
Amherst

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau



THE TRUTH IS, WHEN YOU LOOK AT SOCIETY'S ILLS — TEEN PREGNANCY, UNWED MOTHERS, ABORTION, AIDS — SO MANY OF THEM START WITH HIGH SCHOOL DATING!
THERE ISN'T A HIGH SCHOOL IN THE COUNTRY TODAY WHERE YOU CAN'T JUST WALK UP TO A GIRL AND OPENLY ASK HER FOR A DATE!
IT'S JUST OUT OF CONTROL! IF I WERE RUNNING A HIGH SCHOOL, I'D PUT A STOP TO IT IN A HEARTBEAT!
IF NEWT RAN A HIGH SCHOOL
YOU! I SAW THAT EYE CONTACT!
UM... SHE'S MY SISTER, SIR!

Staff meeting

There will be an all-staff meeting Monday, March 6 at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office.

We will be discussing and voting on the structure of the specialty pages: Black Affairs, Multicultural Affairs and Developing Nations.

Be there to have a voice and make your opinion heard.

Student's chips, salsa aid University

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts student has incorporated his studies into marketing Minutemen Tortilla Chips and Chunky Salsa, that in return will benefit the school.

Any purchase of the chips or the salsa is a direct contribution supporting the UMass W. E. B. DuBois Library, according to owner Tim Holcomb, a senior University Without Walls major and the owner and founder of Happy Valley Products.

"People buy my chips because they support the University and then they discover it's a good product as well," Holcomb said. "Whether I show a profit or not, the library is going to get money."

In planning the philanthropic angle, Holcomb said he worked closely with a number of people at the University, and they helped him decide that the library is the most useful charity.

"A strong University library is not only key to every department in the University itself, but also to the entire Commonwealth," Holcomb said. "[The library] is such a valuable information asset."

Holcomb's goal is to help the Friends of the W. E. B. Dubois Library in their quest to become within the top 20 ranked research libraries in the nation by the year 2000.

"Today, the library is ranked 77th," reads the back of the bag of tortilla chips. Holcomb said that of the 108 nationally-ranked research libraries in the nation, he would like to see the tower ascend towards the top.

Holcomb, 39, first started selling the three varieties of UMass tortilla chips and the two selections of salsas in the beginning of May of 1994. Since then, business has been "phenomenal," Holcomb said.

"People are always asking me, 'I heard you have the have the Minutemen chips. Where are they?'" said John Menard, manager of Victory Super Market. "They sell great."

The three choices of tortilla chips are a restaurant style white corner quarter cut, a classic yellow corn triangle style and an unsalted classic yellow corn, according to Holcomb. Salsa comes in either a hot or mild form.

Last winter, after having noticed that Super Stop & Shop in Hadley sold tortilla chips under the name "UConn Huskies," Holcomb was influenced to market a tortilla chip that was prided upon the institution in this immediate region.

"It just makes sense that a University of Massachusetts chip would be a natural choice in this area," Holcomb said.

The UConn tortillas — which Holcomb calls "dog food" because of the husky on the front — are essentially the same as the Minutemen chips.

However the exception being that proceeds from their endeavor will benefit the University of Connecticut Children's Cancer Center Fund, Holcomb said.

As a part-time student of the University Without Walls, Holcomb has taken business courses that have been "incredibly helpful," he said.

He cited the close contact he has had with professors, teaching him different expertise and organizational skills.

Each bag of tortilla chips sells for $1.89, Holcomb said. Ten cents of this goes back to the University, part to the library and also the licensing fee. The salsa sells for $2.79, 16 cents of which is earmarked for UMass.

Holcomb is the first person to use the Minuteman logo on a food product.

The Minutemen tortilla chips are also healthier than the competition, Holcomb said. He employed the services of Dick Stevens, a UMass food science graduate, who makes the chips.

"We don't use hydrogenated oil," Holcomb said. "Instead we use Canola Oil. Hydrogenation causes good oil to lose its good qualities. Then it becomes fatty and clogs arteries. We're also comparatively lower in sodium."

Last March of 1994 was when Holcomb got the business end of the deal off the ground. He has been told by the industry that it is unusual for a snack food to be so successful so quickly.

"The tortilla chip market all over the country is exploding," Holcomb said.

But, until then, Tim Holcomb will continue to sell his tortilla chips, while remaining one of this institutions most loyal fans.

"I love the University of Massachusetts because it is a coming together of principles, ideas and philosophies," Holcomb said.

Clinton stands by handgun law on anniversary

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a stern defense of his gun-control policy, President Clinton pledged Tuesday that the Brady handgun law and a ban on assault-style firearms "are here to stay," despite Republican opposition.

The comment came in an Oval Office ceremony commemorating the one-year anniversary of the Brady law, which requires a five-day waiting period and background checks for handgun purchases.

Armed with an administration study showing thousands of felons were denied weapons under the law, Clinton said, "The Brady bill became the Brady law with flying colors."

Opponents scoffed at the study, saying the law keeps guns away from law-abiding citizens and resulted in just four federal prosecutions of people who illegally sought to buy the weapons. "We're going to stop crime with this law?" National Rifle Association lobbyist Tanya Metaksa said sarcastically.

The law, named for former presidential press secretary James Brady, who was wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on then-President Reagan, was Clinton's first major crime initiative. He later persuaded Congress to ban certain assault-style weapons and pass a comprehensive crime bill to help put 100,000 police on the streets.

Newly empowered Republicans argue that the crime law, enacted last year, is loaded with pork and they are working aggressively to curtail it. Republicans, joined by at least two dozen Democrats, also hope to repeal the assault-style weapons ban.

"You can mark my words: The Brady law and the assault weapons bill are here to stay," Clinton said, with Brady seated nearby in a wheelchair. "They will not be repealed."

The president later reaffirmed his pledge to veto any bill that reduces grants for 100,000 new police officers. "I will do everything I can to protect that," he said.

On Capitol Hill, gun control advocates held a news conference to mark the anniversary. Rep. Charles Schumer, (D-N.Y.), a chief sponsor of the Brady bill and last year's anti-crime law, said he had mixed feelings on the Brady law anniversary, "because this anti-gun control Congress is poised to reverse the Brady bill."

Clinton released a Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms review of 30 law enforcement agencies reporting that more than 15,500 people were denied guns under the Brady law between March 1994 and January 1995.

The review said the 15,500 people, or 3.5 of those who applied, were felons, fugitives, people under indictment or restraining orders, illegal drug users and juveniles. Extrapolating the figures, the administration argues that at least 40,000 applications were turned away nationwide.

"Three percent of the American people buying guns for the wrong reasons can do a phenomenal amount of damage, and stopping them can do a phenomenal amount of good," Clinton said.

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Tuesday - April 25
6:30 - 8:30 p.m.

Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass Campus
Room Number Will Be Posted By Campus Center Elevators

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

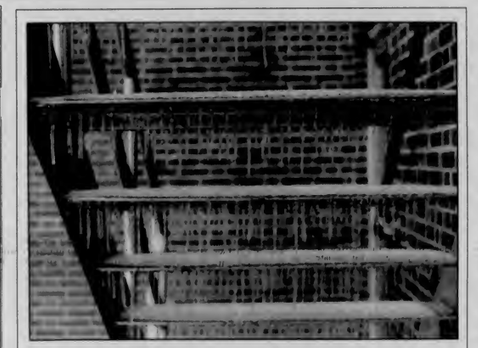
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest . . . Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid . . . What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

For more information, please call
549-2671, Clinic 4 - ext. 233 or 234

UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES - UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - AMHERST

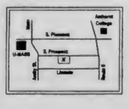


REBECCA PETERSON \ COLLEGIAN

Watch your step

Campus plow crews began sanding and salting early Monday, in order to get a jump on yesterday's freezing rain and ice problem. The sand and salt did not begin to take effect until temperatures rose yesterday morning and kept the crews busy all day in an effort to ensure safety.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385



- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
- Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems.
- We provide substitute transportation
- Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities

Shop Registration # RS1212

WANTED
Assistant Finance Manager

EXPERIENCE
is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...

We are looking for:
Ambitious • Responsible • Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills
Business Majors Preferred

Applications are available at the Collegian
113 Campus Center and must be submitted by
Thursday March 9 @ 4:00 p.m. !!

CHOUSTER
Chinese Restaurant
Anniversary for the Month of March
ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET
Lunch $3.99 • Dinner $4.99
Saturday & Sunday All Day $4.99
Dinner Special
Pork Fried Rice w/ Choice of Egg Roll or Chicken Wing and Ice Cream Dessert
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
253-4068 • 253-7469

August the First
❖Beads
❖Jewelry Making Supplies
44 Main St., Amherst, MA 01002 • 413-256-0276
112 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 431-586-7182
243 W. Main St. Northboro, MA 01532 • 508-393-0180
Anniversary Sale
March 4th - March 11th
On March 6th we celebrate the 2nd Anniversary of the opening of our August the First Bead Stores. Two years and three stores later, August the First invites you to celebrate with an Anniversary Sale with Store Wide Specials
With this advertisment, save an additional 15% OFF all purchases over $5

Arts & Living

COURTESY TERESA A B GAUTHIER

The UMass Theater Department's newest play, The Birds, opens up this Thursday.

MFA candidate stages The Birds

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

On March 2, the University of Massachusetts' Department of Theater will present their latest production The Birds, which will run until March 4. The play, which is was originally Greek playwright Aristophanes, is being directed by Davor Diklich, an M.F.A candidate in directing at the University.

The production tells the tale of two mortals, Hopeful and Trusting, who decide to leave Athens out of disgust for society. The two eventually become friendly with the birds and decide that the winged creatures lead the "Good Life." The two eventually persuade the avis to help them create an alternate world entitled "Cloudcuckooland" where they can escape the hassles of everyday life and the overbearing demands of the Gods of Mount Olympus.

The script is famous for its puns and sometimes ribald language and is considered Aristophanes' masterpiece, often put on the same level as many of Shakespeare's greatest works.

"It's a comedy," says Diklich. "It's fantasy and gives people an opportunity to get away from reality."

The Birds is Diklich's thesis project, which he has been working on for quite some time.

"We started before winter break, but I began working with the designers during the end of last semester," says Diklich.

The plays combines traditional acting along with elaborate dancing and music. All of the actors in the play are students, but most of the dancers are professionals, according to Diklich.

The Birds features the talents of many UMass faculty members such as Penny Remsen, who will handle the lighting design and Miguel Romero, who is in charge of scenic design. The costume design will be done by Mount Holyoke professor K.C. Kozminski and the sound design by UMass alum Will Pile.

"It will be visually very attractive," says Diklich. "We have original music, original dance, masks and puppets."

The Birds will run March 2 - 4 at the Rand Theater. Performance begins at 8 p.m. Admission is $6 for the general public and $3.50 for students and senior citizens. Tickets are available at the door or at the Fine Arts Center Box Office.

Stars highlight Chieftains' latest

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

THE LONG BLACK VEIL
The Chieftains
BMG Music

With St. Patrick's Day right around the corner, the return of spring comes as welcome news to the ears of many. But what has also come as good news to the fans of traditional Irish folk music is the newest release by The Chieftains, The Long Black Veil.

Three-time Grammy winners, The Chieftains have never truly stuck to the generalization of folk music, working with artists from country (Ricky Skaggs) and rock music (Roger Daltrey). On this release they further that exploration into different styles with names from today's music-business headlines.

The release begins with Sting joining the six gentleman on an adaptation of an 18th century Gaelic poem, "Mo Ghile Mear–'Our Hero'," written by Sean Clarach MacDownhaill. This was no surprise that this relatively obscure work was chosen, due to the ex-Police member's never ending propensity in his solo career to overstate even the most noblest of themes — and he does it here once again.

COURTESY CLAIRE CARNEGIE

The Chieftains, pictured here with Sting.

The Birds features the talents of many UMass faculty members such as Penny Remsen, who will handle the lighting design and Miguel Romero, who is in charge of scenic design. The costume design will be done by Mount Holyoke professor K.C. Kozminski and the sound design by UMass alum Will Pile.

"It will be visually very attractive," says Diklich. "We have original music, original dance, masks and puppets."

The Birds will run March 2 - 4 at the Rand Theater. Performance begins at 8 p.m. Admission is $6 for the general public and $3.50 for students and senior citizens. Tickets are available at the door or at the Fine Arts Center Box Office.

Joined by the Anuna Choir, Sting mixes in the English translation with the traditional Gaelic, attempting to conjure up a grand, ostentatious feeling that left me feeling that he should mellow out — just a little bit. What might have worked better is if Sting just left the work stand for itself, instead of trying to make it into a, or should I say "his," anthem.

Another song that can be put into the overstated, if not thrown out all together, category is "Love Is Teasin'" sung by Marianne Faithfull. I do not know, but I thought this lady was still waiting in Bethel, New York, with Sha Na Na, seeing if the crowds were still going to show up for the totally debauchery that their Woodstock reunion became. Both events were shams, if not on totally different levels, and so is the un-melodious singing style of this woman who is still attempting to achieve musical legitimacy.

Other than those examples, the traditional Irish folk balladry and themes that has encompassed this sextet's repertoire over the past thirty years or more are done as close to perfection as they can achieve.

The return of Sinead O'Connor from relative obscurity is brought forth on two tracks. The dark social and personal themes that revolved in her biggest release to date, I Do Not Want What I Haven't Got, are back again and they have seemed to figuratively grown up. From the tribute of "The Foggy Dew" to the men killed in the Easter uprising of 1916 to the lament of "He Moved Through The Fair," O'Connor's spine tingling vocals run congruent with the haunting Uillean pipes of Paddy Moloney.

Two of the most interesting tracks on this release are from singers who are the last thought of when it pertains to Irish folk, Tom Jones and Mick Jagger. Mick pulls one out of his hat as he does more than a commendable job on the title track, blending his trademark blues voice into the framework of a deadly love triangle in which he is the one

Turn to CHIEFTAINS, page 7

Amherst features Singer Sargent's art

Area exhibit set to highlight artists' eclectic pre-mural works

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

This Friday, the Valley will have a chance to experience first-hand the varied art of John Singer Sargent, at the Mead Art Museum at Amherst College. The exhibit, entitled The Sublime Figure: John Singer Sargent's Studies For The Boston Mural Projects will feature over thirty of Sargent's works, including oil paintings, drawings and plaster reliefs.

Between 1895 and 1925, Sargent gained recognition for creating three mural projects in the city of Boston. The murals displayed Sargent's ability to mesh certain styles of art, often combining elements of Egyptian, Assyrian and Byzantine art within one work.

His first commission was for the Boston Public Library, and he subsequently rose to the challenge by creating a mural based on the history of religion. By combining different scenes from the Old Testament with scenes from the New Testament, Sargent managed to create a body of art that reflected diverse styles as well as themes.

"This [exhibit] is the first of its kind," said Kristen Erickson, the National Endowment for the Arts – Curatorial Intern at Smith College, who is the guest curator of the show. "There hasn't been many shows of Sargent's work."

Not only did Sargent create the painted murals, but he also designed and created the elaborate surface ornamentation and plaster moldings that surround the murals and also run along the ceiling of the library hall.

Sargent's second commission came from the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston. This time he chose another massive theme as his topic — Greek and Roman mythology. This time Sargent stuck to a more classical style, in order to reflect the artistic flavor of the period.

His works which will showcased at the Mead Art Museum will represent the earlier portion of the artists career, before he began working on the now famous murals. Many of the works in the exhibit include early charcoal sketches and oil paintings and ideas that would later resurface in his murals.

"People have been gaining interest in Sargent's murals," says Erickson. "We're seeing a sort of Sargent revival. There is in increase in interest for mural decoration."

"The Sublime Figure: John Singer Sargent's Studies For The Boston Mural Projects" will open on March 3 and will run to April 30. Admission is free. Hours are weekdays from 10 a.m.– 4:30 a.m. and on weekends from 1 a.m. – 5 p.m.

Get inside independent music labels
Take a behind the scenes look at how many record labels, sick of working within the corporate world, are opting to do it themselves. Coming this Thursday in the Arts & Living Weekend Edition.

SET YOURSELF APART
THE NEW JERSEY YM-YWHA CAMPS ARE LOOKING FOR PEOPLE WHO WANT TO MAKE A DIFFERNCE!!
* COUNSELORS
*SPECIALISTS
NAH-JEE-WAH - AGES 6-11 CEDAR LAKE - AGES 11-14
TEENAGE CAMP - AGES 14-16 KISLAK ADULT CENTER
ROUND LAKE CAMP FOR ADD/LD
OUR 5 CAMPUSES INCLUDE:
6 separate lakes, 3 swimming pools, superior athletic facilities, modern craft shops, quality Jewish programming
SALARY RANGE $1100-2000
Camp representative will be available at the Camp Day Fair in the Student Union Ballroom on Tuesday, March 7th. For more information stop by or contact: New Jersey YM-YWHA Camps (201) 575-4268 ext 26.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™
• Professional Bartending and Bar Management Training ...at a fraction of the cost at most schools
• Full certification in as little as six weeks
• Specific programs tailored to your specific needs
• T.I.P.S.™ and Serv-Safe™ certification available
• Approved by the National Restaurant Association®
CLASSES START Monday, March 6th 7:00 p.m. Lord Jeffrey Inn
Shop around and compare! Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited

PAWSS
The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies and The Russian Department of Mount Holyoke Present...
"Russian Foreign Policy in the Caucasus and the U.S. Response"
A lecture by:
Ambassador Tedo Japaridze
of the Republic of Georgia
Wednesday, March 1st
7:00 p.m.
New York Room,
Mount Holyoke College
This event is free and open to the public. For more information please call PAWSS at 582-5519

Garrison Keillor Tickets
To holders of the same, if you change your plans for Saturday night 3/4, and cannot go, before you give away your tickets, call me. I'll pay twice the face value for your (2) tickets!
Call Dave at (413)736-7472

Didn't think a sorority was for you?
OPEN RUSH
IGU
Come see what we're all about
Wed. 3/1 . . . . .Sundaes
Thurs. 3/2 . . . .Pizza • 6:30-7:30
Fri. 3/3 . . . . . .Mystery Nite
406 N. Pleasant Street
call Kristen @ 549-0243
for more information or a ride.

Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879 • 25 N. Pleasant St. (above McDonald's)
Has the best selection of 1,2,&3 bedroom Apartments with gas heat.
We begin showing apartments in April and May for June or September occupancy

Swing music brings back Big Band era

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Take a step into the past and return back to the days when swing was king and everything was hip and happening with Marlena Shaw and her No Man's Band at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, March 2 at 8 p.m.

Crashing through the waves of conformity, Shaw's 16-piece all female ensemble, DIVA: No Man's Band, is walking in the footsteps of such bands like Woody Herman's Herd, Count Basie and the bands of Buddy Rich.

Many critics argue the legitimacy of an all female swing band, but rest assured, when they play all you see and hear are talented musicians.

They debuted in November of 1994 at the Trump Castle in the King Courts Showroom winning over jazz enthusiasts. Since there debut they've had gigs in Carnegie Hall, the Village Gate, and the Rainbow Room as well as other New York venues and are regulars at the famous Tavern on the Green.

DIVA was created by renown drummer Stanley Kay who worked with the Buddy Rich Orchestra. It was the talent of drummer Sherrie Maricle however that sparked Kay's interest and motivated him to work with John LaBarbera to gather more talented musicians together. Their result — DIVA: No Man's Band, turned out to be a band that breathed new life into swing-era melodies.

Singing with the band is Marlena Shaw. She began her career at the age of 10 at the famous Apollo Theater in Harlem. Her grandmothers protested her going on the road with her uncle trumpeter Jimmy Burgess, but a star had been born. From there her voice earned her a place in Count Basie's Orchestra (touring nationally and internationally for four years) and with Sammy Davis, Jr.

With twenty years of vocal jazz experience, Shaw has lent her voice to many hits such as "Mercy, Mercy, Mercy" and "Don't Ask Why," the theme song for the movie Looking for Mr. Goodbar.

Shaw's style draws from such diverse forms of music as jazz, soul, pop and R&B. In 1972, she became the first female vocalist ever to be signed by Blue Note records. This association gave her five albums and several singles. She then left to join Columbia without compromising her jazz roots that many critics feared.

"When I sing, I want people to feel something. I don't care if it's jazz, pop or rhythm and blues as long as my message reaches the people," said Shaw.

The singer has been known to combine witty monologues with her music to bring the lyrics to a new level of meaning. Spoken introductions have often become a part of her act highlighting her other talents as a sort of actress/comedian.

The event will have added meaning because CBS' "Sunday Morning" will be at the performance taping for a profile of DIVA for a future program.

Tickets for the performance are $23, $18 and $13. Half-price tickets are available for Five College students. Children 16 and under $10. For more information or tickets call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511.

■ Chieftains

continued from page 6

who loses out. A sense of remorse and sadness, both with the song and the production, centers into Jones' "The Tennessee Waltz/Tennessee Mazurka."

Recorded at Frank Zappa's Utility Muffin Research Kitchen, and as Moloney says in the liner notes — under the "bemused and watchful eye" of the man himself — the track is possibly one of the last recordings overseem by this genius stirs the soul just by itself. Once you get past the primal crooning of the "chief of self expression" himself, the emotion Jones puts into the melody has its overall positive qualities.

On the other, the rest of The Rolling Stones join the gang with the raucous, and appropriately named, "The Rocky Road." Better get the Guinness chilled, or warmed if you like, before this one as you will want to grab your favorite drunk/friend to lean on, and let the singing Irish-person in you come out.

Overall, The Long Black Veil will satisfy both the staunch fan and outsider alike. Martin Fay (fiddle), Sean Keane (fiddle), Kevin Conneff (bodhran, vocals), Matt Molloy (flute), Derek Bell (harp, keyboards) and Moloney further their reputation as the premier traditional Irish group in the business. With just a few stumbles, their newest release makes "the rocky road" seem effortless, and the destination is as satisfying as a tall Guinness after a day's travel. A-

Solo violinist to play Savage gallery

Leroy Jenkins set to showcase unique style, composition

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Acclaimed violinist and composer, Leroy Jenkins, will be presenting a solo violin concert at the Augusta Savage Gallery March 1 at 7 p.m.

The gallery is hosting this free event so people will be able to experience Jenkins' unique talent in person. As a musician, Jenkins has the ability to reinvent his musical language changing and shaping each note into a work of art.

"Leroy's music leans heavily on improvisation. I really can't compare his style to that of any other violinist," said Terry Jenoure, a student of Jenkins who played in his electric string band, Sting, for about four months. "His tone and overall approach is so honest and unique."

Jenkins has spent over a decade touring with his group and as a soloist world wide. Because of his musical talent he has been able to receive several commissions and is great demand for his experimental and theater-based work.

"He integrates a wide range of experiences into his style and always seems ready to experiment and try unusual ideas," said Jenkins.

Skilled in both the jazz and classical genre, Jenkins manages to create a mixture of sound and textures that titillate audiences ears. "Mother of Three Sons" is an example of his ability to intertwine modern and old methods. The dance opera was a collaboration with Bill T. Jones and premiered in 1992 in Germany by the New York City Opera and by the Houston Grand Opera.

Awards from The Rockerfeller Foundation and the Reader's Digest Program have only increased Jenkins status as a virtuoso. Other works such as "The Negro Burial Ground" and "Willie Horton" have performed at various venues in Philadelphia, Chicago and New York City.

Jenkins' has been sought out as a resident for many universities such as Oberlin Conservatory, University of Illinois Atlantic Center for the Arts, Bennington College and the Carnegie Mellon Institute. Quartets and symphonies has performed his compositions and many of them have been included in the American Composers' Series which was presented by the Kennedy Center.

He was bestowed the Bessie Award in 1992 for dance/opera composition and honored five time with NEA grants as well as grants from the New York Foundation for the Arts twice, the Creative Arts Program and Harvestworks Artist Residence Program.

"I've known Leroy for over 15 years and it seems as though the older he gets the more adventurous he becomes," said Jenoure. "This concert will give the Valley a chance to hear one of the pioneers of the new music movement of the '70s and a master improviser."

The concert begins at 7 p.m. and is free and open to the public. The Augusta Savage Gallery is located in New Africa House in the Central Residential area.

Still Interested In Arts & Living?
It's not too late to start writing about what's hot in the Valley in music, art, theater and much more. Stop down the Collegian and ask to talk to Matt, Tara, Justin or Mike.

CAMP DAY 1995
Tuesday, March 7th • 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom

Summer Employment Opportunities
Many Camps from the Northeast Area
For Further Information Contact:
Financial Aid/Student Employment Office
243 Whitmore Administration Building

240 Reasons to Return to Long Island this summer
SUMMER SESSION
University at Stony Brook
* 240 courses in 40 subjects
* Day and evening classes
* Low NYS tuition
* Register by mail, fax, phone or in person
* Live on campus or commute
* Two terms: May 22-July 7; July 10-Aug.18
For free bulletin, call 24 hours (516) 632-7070
Please send me the 1995 Summer Session Bulletin:
Name
Street/Box No
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
Summer Session Office
University at Stony Brook
Stony Brook, NY 11794-3730
STONY BROOK
STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
An AA/EO educator and employer

THE COLLEGIAN OFFERS ALL UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS THE PERFECT EXCUSE FOR ATTENDING CONCERTS, MOVIES AND OTHER FORMS OF ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAPPY VALLEY.
IF YOU WRITE FOR ARTS, WE WILL EVEN THROW IN FREE TICKETS!
COME DOWN AND SEE MATT AUDETTE AT THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE, 113 CAMPUS CENTER!

READINGS BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
HELPS SOLVE ALL PROBLEMS OF LIFE. HELPS YOU THROUGH YOUR GOOD AND BAD CYCLES OF LIFE. TELLS YOU LUCKY DAYS AND LUCKY MONTHS. ONE VISIT WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT SHE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL READERS YOU HAVE SEEN BEFORE.
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed.
HOURS: 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.
210 Russell Street
Route 9
Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 586-6711
Walk-in's are Welcome

HOLOCAUST DENIAL: MEMORY AND THE SEARCH FOR MEANING

presented by
DR. DEBORAH LIPSTADT
Associate Professor of Modern Jewish and Holocaust Studies at Emory University
Author of Denying the Holocaust: The Growing Assault on Truth and Memory
• Appointed by President Clinton to serve on the United States Holocaust Memorial Council
Wednesday, March 1
7:30pm Memorial Hall
University of Massachusetts/Amherst

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, March 1,2,3
Open house at the North Fire Station, March 3 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

great research...
Kaplan spends over $3 million annually developing products and researching the tests. We've proved that we know the tests inside out.
LSAT — In 1992, Kaplan predicted the elimination of an LSAT question type and changed our course in anticipation of the change.
GRE — In 1993, the ETS was forced to withdraw a GRE question type because Kaplan "broke the code."
GMAT — In 1994, Kaplan research brought to light security flaws in the computer-based GRE tests. As a result, the ETS temporarily pulled the test.
MCAT
SAT
great results.
Kaplan's expertise translates into higher scores and greater confidence for our students. Put our research to work for you on test day.
1-800-KAP-TEST
get a higher score
KAPLAN

• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Direct Insurance Billing
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
CARSTAR, Collision Repair Centers
Where America goes for Quality Collision Repairs
North Amherst CARSTAR 78 Old Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Road, Northampton, MA 586-4444

Gerry's Music
80 Lamb Street Rt.116 South Hadley
Phone 534-7402 • 1-800-724-7402
NEW FOR '95
• Instructional videos for all instruments featuring today's best musicians.
• Hottest instrument cases and gig pacs at the lowest prices.
• Electronic pickups for clarinet, flute, sax, brass, and guitar.
• Area's most complete percussion department featuring: Pearl, Ludwig, Gibraltar, Yamaha, C.B., Remo, Afro, L.P., and Toca
• 100's of new and used band instruments including Selmer saxophones.
Conveniently located at the junction of Rt. 116 and Rt. 202.
Open Mon.-Fri. 9-6, Thur. 9-8, Sat. 9-3.
Go UMass!

track

continued from page 10

Kenku was busy this weekend, running in four races in two days.

Junior Jen Waeger placed sixth in the 1000 meters with a time of 3:01.66. She also ran on the 4x800 meter relay team, which finished third.

Junior Nicole Roberts ran both trials of the 55-meter dash and the 4x200.

"Roberts didn't score a lot of points this weekend but ran very well," LaFreniere said. "She is a very reliable starter. She ran lead in both the 4x400 and the 4x200 meters. She puts in a lot of effort and really contributes to this team."

The UMass team in the 4x200 meter relay was disqualified after the competition, contributing to their fifth place tie. The disqualification, occurring when contact was made between a UMass and a UMass/Lowell runner, cost the team two points, matching B.U.'s score.

"Overall, the team really pulled together," LaFreniere said.

"It has been a long season with a lot of sickness. We have been missing our top competitors all season. I expected to finish fourth at best, so I am still pleased. It was very close."

The Minutewomen will compete next weekend in the ECAC Championships in Syracuse, N.Y.

LT signs with the 'real athletes' of the WWF

By Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — After 13 years of terrorizing quarterbacks from Joe Theismann to Troy Aikman, future NFL Hall of Famer Lawrence Taylor hoped for an acting career. On Tuesday, his wish came true.

Taylor, to the delight of some former teammates and the disbelief of many others, signed with the World Wrestling Federation to battle 390-pound Bam Bam Bigelow in a feature match at Wrestlemania XI.

Goodbye, LT. Hello, Lawrence the Giant.

The deal was sealed with a kiss, planted by Taylor on Bigelow's big, ugly, bearded, earringed, tattooed head. The very odd couple will meet in the ring on April 2 in Hartford, Conn., with LT picking up a reported $500,000 paycheck.

"I think Bam Bam has problems — mental problems," Taylor said at a Manhattan news conference. Some in the crowd hinted that Bam Bam wasn't alone after this bizarre pit stop on Taylor's road to the Hall of Fame.

Not so, said the perennial All-Pro linebacker, who retired in January 1994 after 13 often-spectacular seasons.

"Whether you believe it or not, these guys are real athletes," said Taylor, sharing a podium with "real athletes" Big Daddy Cool Diesel, Sid Vicious and Shawn "Heartbreak Kid" Michaels.

While professional wrestling and professional football share nothing outside a predilection for Roman numerals, Taylor was confident of a victory in this match. (Seen the scrips, perhaps?)

And he proved adept at handling the often pointed queries about his new career. Did money problems land him in the ring?

"They can run me out of a lot of things, but money ain't one of 'em."

Will this tarnish his legendary NFL career?

"No. I'm exercising my right to do what I want to do."

hoops

continued from page 8

accolades of each of the four seniors, as Germain, Kellogg, Meyer, Roe and their respective families took center stage before starting their last regular season game on campus.

"This class was a part of UMass' first NCAA tournament team in 30 years," O'Neil said. "It has won four straight regular season Atlantic 10 titles, three straight Atlantic 10 tournaments, and has helped make UMass one of the top five winningest programs in the country in the 1990s."

"It was a nice experience to go out in front of the crowd and experience what its like to start in the Mullins," Meyer said. "I'll remember it the rest of my life."

Roe further imprinted himself in the Massachusetts record books, last night as well. His second rebound made him only the second player in UMass history ever to clear 1,000 boards. He had nine for the game leaving him 42 shy of the Julius Erving's career record of 1049. If he continues on his average of about eight rebounds per game, Roe could become the schools all time leading rebounder somewhere in the NCAA tournament.

Derek Kellogg moved up on the UMass career charts as well. His nine assists pushed him past Anton Brown into fourth all-time in the category. Following the game, Kellogg reflected on his four years.

"It's been great playing here for four years," he said. "Everybody who is a senior can look back in the future and have great memories like I have. It's been a great time, but it's not over yet."

Despite the milestones, none of the four seniors had a spectacular effort, leaving that to a pair of sophomores as Marcus Camby's and Edgar Padilla's numbers stood out the brightest on the stat sheet. Roe had 13 points to go along with the rebounds. Kellogg's 9-to-1 assist to turnover ratio was impressive, but he only scored four. Meyer scored four points in the contest as well.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Lou Roe gets a handshake during yesterday's Senior Day ceremony prior to last night's 81-76 victory over Rhode Island.

And Germain? His teammates tried throughout to get him on the board, but the South Hadley native went 0-for-4 from the floor. Despite his lack of points, the Mullins crowd game Germain a tremendous ovation when he checked out.

While the crowd cheered the four seniors wildly last night, the thought on every fan in the Mullins Center seemed to be "they'll be back." The win clinched UMass' fourth straight regular season Atlantic 10 title. Barring upset in the early rounds of the conference tournament, the Atlantic 10 final game will be played in the Mullins Center.

The players themselves fully expect to be back.

"I couldn't believe that this is my next to last game in the Mullins Center," Roe said.

Guido

continued from page 10

to join the tourney field, as well.

The cyclones boast "the Mayor" Fred Hoiberg (the best nickname in college hoops) and the Sooners' Ryan Minor, two of the best long-range gunners around.

Congratulations go out to Xavier, as the Muskateers have run through the Midwestern Collegiate conference undefeated (14-0). Nice job, and a great addition to the Atlantic 10 next season.

The SEC has the best format, split into the east and west divisions. All signs point to a Kentucky-Arkansas clash. Winner gets the SEC crown, and the vaunted No. 1 seed in the Southeast region.

Parting Shots

It now appears that the Atlantic-10 will send three teams to the tourney. Late pushes by Temple and George Washington have regained some respect for the rest of the conference....Forget the West Coast glitter, forget the lore of Carolina — Joe Smith is the Player of the Year.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

Rhode Island

continued from page 8

said.

Before the game, each senior was praised for their careers at Massachusetts. The parents of the seniors were among those at center court to share the special night with the four Minutemen.

"I'll probably go back to the dorms tonight and think back on the four years," Kellogg said. "Hopefully, we'll come back here one more time, and then I'll really think about it."

Calipari was obviously caught up by the emotion.

"That was a tough game to coach to start the game, when you're talking to seniors and hugging parents and brothers and sisters," Calipari said. "I want you to know we love you."

Calipari said.

Game notes: It was announced yesterday that John Calipari was named the coach of the East squad at the 1995 U.S. Olympic Festival, which will be held July 21-30 in Denver, Colo.

CORPORATE COMPUTER SERVICES, INC.
1170 Broadway, Suite 307, New York, NY 10001

★ The Global source for technology ★

Western Massachusetts Headquarters:
19 Pray Street, Amherst, MA 01002

Grand Opening

WE WILL BEAT ANY LOCALLY ADVERTISED PRICE!
YES, WE MEAN ANY PRICE!

CCS has been providing computer solutions throughout the world for over 10 years. Our global positioning allows us to carry the largest variety of computer hardware and software in the area!

CHECK OUT THIS SPECIAL!

CCS Genuine IBM Computer
- 486 SLC2 50 Mhz
- 4 MB Ram
- 360 MB IDE Hard Disk
- 14" Vivatron .28 SVGA
- 3.5" Floppy Disk Drive
- 101 Keyboard
- MS-DOS Windows
- Mouse
- 14.4 K Internal Fax Modem

All this for only $999.00

Call us for all of your computer needs. Ask about our special pricing of Apple Products including the new Power Macintosh! We meet impossible deadlines. Same day shipping on most items. Special offer to students and staff of the 5 college area, free delivery to dorms and residential areas. Don't know what you need? Allow us to help you customize a system to your specific criteria. Call the toll free EDU-TECH hotline at 1-800-4499-CCS. We are a full service provider of hardware and software. If you can buy it anywhere, we can get it for you at a significant savings. We also offer ON-SITE service for the length of the manufacturers warranty. Our commitment to the customer begins AFTER the completed sale of the system.

Not Everyone is Straight and neither is the Collegian

Write for GLB Issues

Let your voice be heard

Contact Wendy Darling

113 Campus Center
545-3500

TRAVEL SMART! FROM NEW YORK

One Way	Roundtrip
LONDON $122	$244
PARIS $199	$398
AMSTERDAM $201	$402
SAN JOSE COSTA RICA $238	$476
TOKYO	Roundtrip $774

Scheduled Flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Eurailpasses Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs-Immigration taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Classified Advertising Submission

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto for Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Wrod Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

RE-RUNNING PERSONALS
1. 10 personal ads/1 to be sent ad by a different limited number each to be put into it acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or down room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: _____ Date: _____ Taken By: _____

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total Days: _____ X Words: = _____ X rate = _____ Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

ALANA Christian Alliance presents a heritage mini-gospel concert/social Sunday March 5, 1995 Campus Center auditorium featuring a five college mass choir. If you would like to sing with the mass choir for this one time event contact Chuck 5-0950 ASAP

Open rush IGU. Come see what we're all about. Wed 2/1 sundaes, Thurs 2/2 pizza, Fri 3/3 mystery mix 6:30-7:30pm 406 N Pleasant St. Call 549-6043 for more info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available! All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. F5011

Learn to harvest with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst! Classes start Mon. March 6th at 7:00pm. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Mazda RX-7 94K, 5 spd. b/a, sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500. Call 253-3148

Ford Escort 1984 blue 77,000 miles Good little cars. Good condition asking for $50.00 or b.o. Call 549-7187

Ford Tempo 1984 light blue (automatic) 58,000 miles only Runs like new Excellent condition Asking for $2300 or b.o Call Ilias at 549-8133

Mustang GT 1989 Beautiful shape, alarm, sunroof, 5 spd, burgandy, loaded 1986 Call Aaron 548-4327

Need to sell Going back to school 1994 Geo Tracker Standard coverable, call Trinh 532-7856

ENTERTAINMENT

If you are a stand-up comic, juggler, mime, poet, etc. and want to put on a show just for fun with the UMass Juggling Club call Harry 546-4189

FOR RENT

Capa Cod Group Summer rentals-waterfront houses Falmouth area 508-477-8000

Room available in spacious home 1 block from campus Call Heather 549-7403

Two rooms available! 230+ a month Off rt. 9 Amherst Killer house w/ yards, on bike path + bus route. Right near Stop + Shop Sorry, no phone yet call 548-0884 leave name, + number with Tim

FOR SALE

B 52 Extremes for 490 bindings w/leg Used 3X perf cond 500/bo Rich 665-2998

Alpine 7517 '94 model, full topc, detach lock, ability $175 Alpine 6066D component spkr set 4" mids, 1" dome tweeters, $100 Kenwood KAC 624 amp 80 W/2, 160 W/1 $75 Alpine 3531 amp 18W/4 $30 Magnavox 4 head VCR HQ, unified remote $140 Call 253-3149

Atari, Intellivision, Colecovision games, controllers and systems Buy/Sell/Trade 256-1995, ask for Tony

Brother word processor w/monitor Barely used 253-9405

Goodams by mail. Top quality brand names. $2/3 condom sampler, $6/12 condom sampler, $21/36 condom sampler. Send cash, check or money order to Healthy Concepts Box 52, Amherst, MA 01004

Kegerator 500/bo Rich 665-2998

Macintosh computer. Complete system including printer only $599! Call Chris at 800-289-5665

286LBN computer system CPU monitor keyboard $225 Steve 549-5161

Save $63. U.S. Air anywhere by March 28 $173 value for $110 or less. Call 549-4015

Tom Petty tix Albany March 21 14th row center. Great prices great seats. Call now 584-8382

Want a Macintosh? Something inexpensive? Mac SE with new Clarisworks $490 Christoffer 549-7453

FOUND

Found a German grammer book Hertar 724 2/8 Call Linda 5-0929

Key found outside dolyan at bus stop Sunday morn. Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain. Call Bri at 8-0704

Teddy bear with found outside Morrill N229 last Thurs 2/23/95

GARRISON KEILLOR TICKETS

To holders of some, if you change your plans for Sat night 3/4 and cannot go, before you give away your tickets, call me I'll pay twice face value for your 2 tickets! Call Dave (413) 736-7472

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol Credit available Casa Box 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512-416-0991

HELP WANTED

Camp Canadensis, Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania Excellent residential coed summer camp. Looking for caring counselors to help teach all land and water sports, mtn. bikes, motorcycles, arts + crafts, climbing wall, ropes course, radio, newspaper, waterskiing, jet skiing, and much more. Summer season 6/5/95 thru 8/18/95. Call 800-832-8228 for an application

Camp counselors for underprivileged children- if the sounds interesting and you would like to work with 8-12 year old boys and girls, visit us in the Student Union Ballroom, Camp Dev. March 7th-Channel 3 Country Camp

Counselors wanted. Trim down-fitness, co-ed, NYS cmp. 100 positions: sports, crafts, many others. Camp Shane, Ferndale, NY 12734 (914) 771-4141

Cruise ships hiring Earn up to $2000 +/month World travel! Seasonal + full time positions! No exp necessary For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50014

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod Call Holly at 349-6392

Part time marketing/sales Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary Call (401) 785-3466 after 2 p.m.

Summer camp on Cape Cod. Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids Beautiful location, excellent program, competitive salaries Call Rob at 548-9417 for info and application

Summer jobs for the environment Earn $2500-$3500 and free the planet Campaign to save endangered species, promote recycling and stop pollution! Work with environmentalist groups like PIRGs, Sierra Club, Green Corps. Positions in 33 states + D.C. Campus interviews March 6,7 Bsh Call Jamie 1-800-75-EARTH

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000-$4,000+/mo. Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (708) 632-1146 ext. J50012

PERSONALS

Balding male with bad taste found at Chibank photocard. Can't use it because it looks nothing like me. Name on card is Dave Wilson. Nice hair.

Congratulations Kelly and Anne Marie to Sigma's newest members Get ready for a fun filled semester Love, the sisters of Tri Sigma

Emily, Because we had such a great time at work on Sunday, I'll make you two cash sized mudslides Love, the Mudslide Queen

Hail Hail Hail Some stuff on this page could be stolen merchandise Be sure to ask for a bill of sale if you buy an item from here. Remember, Cridland is looking out for you.

Insomniac party Bike. Customer service reps are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for your questions and emergencies Call 1-800-Citibank to apply.

Jill Happy 18th B-Day, blue eyes! Your best friend with copper hair

"No comment"

Someone to watch over you We look out for students better than any other credit card Call 1-800-Citibank to apply Now, we won't hit on your dates.

The sisters of SDT would like to welcome our new roommates Megan, Amy, Danielle, Susanne, Sheri, Leigh, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julie, Tami, Samantha, Kim B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lea

Tommy, I hope you get your cast off soon so you can come to my window because I'll be the only one. Love, C.

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends Gas $ 253-2609

ROOM WANTED

Want a room for May? Grad student seeks room in house to rent starting in May--would rent for one year Angela 546-1851

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo, Florida Spring Break Earn 2 credits Call Project Deep 1-800-767-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to Dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800-767-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS 256-8085. 18.2 K bps 130 mags online + CD ROM Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Scholarship money is available! I can help you locate and receive it. Call for details 617-767-6375

You take your writing seriously and so do we. For more information about quality editing by e-mail, write to Editing Transnational at editmanx@aol.com

TRAVEL

Da Europa $189 anywhere, anytime/Mex $189 r/t free brochure Cheap fares worldwide Airhitch Tm 212-864-2000

Killington ski vacation. Five nights now, five days lift tickets Good during any Mon-Fri this season Worth $1000 sell to best offer 8-2156 details

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 6 days $279! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $429! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more Call Jeff at 549-4927

TYPING

Data entry and word processing. Reliable and fast. Call Andy 586-0976

WANTED

Old Cabbage Patch Kids from the 80's Call Heidi 546-1281

MAKE YOUR SUMMER COUNT!
Summer Session '95
Rutgers-New Brunswick

- Over 1,000 Courses
- Convenient Times, AM/PM
- Undergraduate and Graduate Level
- Study Abroad, Certificate Programs, and more...

Registration begins in March.

NEW! Rutgers Summer Session Catalog now on computer via INTERNET lynx http://www.rutgers.edu/academics/catalogs/summer95
or
mosaic http://www.rutgers.edu/academics/catalogs/summer95

For more information, call 1-800-HI-RUTGERS

Division of Summer Session and Continuing Studies
191 College Ave., New Brunswick, NJ 08903

THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW JERSEY RUTGERS Camden at New Brunswick

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

AS I HAVE CREATED YOU, SO CAN I DESTROY YOU!
THEREFORE, IN RECOGNITION OF MY SUPREME POWER, YOU MUST WORSHIP ME!
YES, BOW BEFORE MIGHTY CALVIN AND TREMBLE, FOR I AM THE ETERNAL, ALL KNOWING...
PAFF

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I DIDN'T DO IT! I NEVER THREW THAT! YOU CAN'T PROVE I THREW IT!
PAFF
BESIDES, I MISSED. DIDN'T I?
THE DEFENDANT PETITIONS THE COURT FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUNDS THAT HIS LAWYER IS INCOMPETENT.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

WILL YOU BE DOING YOUR CIRCUS ACT AGAIN TONIGHT, PETEY?
SURE! THE PAY IS GOOD!
BESIDES, I LIKE TO SHOW OFF FOR MY FAVORITE WIFE!
AND I WANT TO LEARN WHY EVERYONE THERE ACTS SO STRANGE!

Dilbert By Scott Adams

WHY IS IT THAT I NEVER HAVE TIME TO EAT BUT YOU MEN ARE IN HERE EVERY DAY AT 11:35?
BECAUSE THE HOURS WE SPENT UPGRADING OUR PCs HAVE FINALLY PAID OFF BY GREATLY IMPROVING OUR EFFICIENCY
I THOUGHT IT WAS BECAUSE WE GET HUNGRY AT 11:30
WE CAN'T REVEAL ALL OUR SECRETS

Bruno By C. Baldwin

BRUNO, YOU ARE GOING CRAZY AND IT'S DRIVING ME CRAZY.
I... UH... I'M SORRY...UH
SO, YOU SEE THAT OUT MARSHMALOW THAT WALKS AT THE BAR?
WELL, I'M GONNA GO TAKE OUT MY AGGRESSION ON HIM AND THEN I WANT TO GO HOME AND HAVE WILD SEX
BUT, DO YOU THINK VIOLENCE IS...
COME ON BRUNO, WHAT'S THIS? THE WEAK SHALL INHERIT THE EARTH? IS THAT THE KIND OF CRETINISH GUILT-TRIP THEY'RE DEALING BELIEVING?
UHH...UH, MAYBE I SHOULD HAVE ANOTHER BEER.
OKAY, BUT PROMISE ME YOU'LL PASS OUT, OKAY?
UHH...OKAY

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

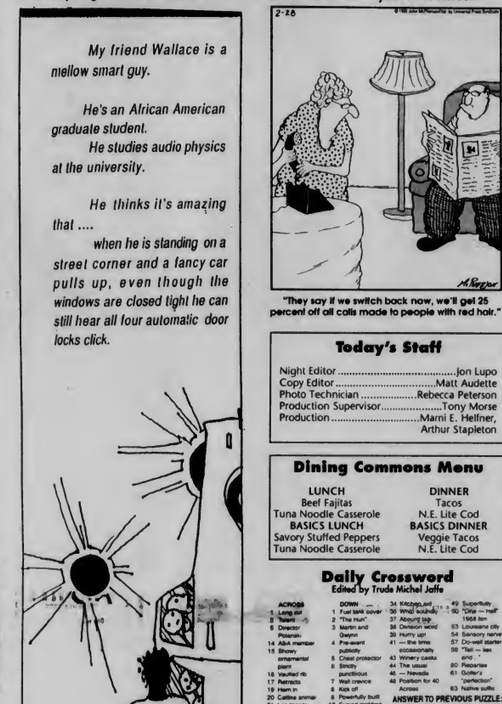
GREAT PARTY MIM & CATY!
YEAH! CHUG IT OUT!
I FIGURE THAT SINCE CHRIS DIG GOES IN POWER AND IN UNITRON, THIS MUST BE THE 10th HALLOWEEN COSTUME I'LL HOOK UP WITH
IN FACT, I THINK MAYBE THIS SHIT WILL GET ME THAT CUTE UNITRON MECH
YOU MEAN HERE?
ROAR
WHO'S YOUR DADDY?

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Jim's Journal By Jim

I slept in late today and felt really tired.
I probably got too much sleep.
I had my lunch break with Dan today.
He told me there were seven kids in his family and he was number five.

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom



My friend Wallace is a mellow smart guy.
He's an African American graduate student.
He studies audio physics at the university.
He thinks it's amazing that .... when he is standing on a street corner and a fancy car pulls up, even though the windows are closed tight he can still hear all four automatic door locks click.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"They say if we switch back now, we'll get 25 percent off all calls made to people with red hair."

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Copy Editor ..... Matt Audette
Photo Technician ..... Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor ..... Tony Morse
Production ..... Marni E. Helfner, Arthur Stapleton

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Beef Fajitas	Tacos
Tuna Noodle Casserole	N.E. Lite Cod
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Savory Stuffed Peppers	Veggie Tacos
Tuna Noodle Casserole	N.E. Lite Cod

Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

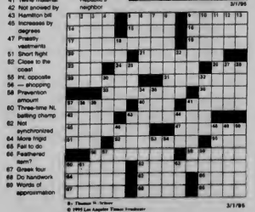
ACROSS
1 Long-dist. 5 Tavern 9 Director Pasquin 14 Abdi member 15 Showy ornamental plant 16 Vaulted rib 17 Retracts 19 Ham it 20 Caltrop animal 21 Londoner's bank orders 23 Mug filler 24 Takes the SAT's again 26 Calendar abbr 26 Joe Montana, for one 31 Ten-percenters 33 Beginner's dance 36 Sanctuary termination 37 Buffalo basketeer 40 Play for Shaq 41 Twine material 42 Not proved by 43 Hamilton bill 45 Increases by degrees 47 Preen's vestments 51 Short flight 52 Close to the ocean 56 Inc. opposite 58 — shopping 59 Prevention amount 60 Three-time NL batting champ 62 Not synchronized 64 More frigid 65 Fail to do 66 Feathered nest? 67 Greek tour 68 Dr. handwork 69 Words of approximation

DOWN
1 Kleptomaniac 2 "The Hun" 3 Martini and Gwynn 4 Pre-event publicity 5 Chest protector 6 Strictly punctilious 7 Wall crevice 8 Kids off 9 Powerfully built 10 Curved molding 11 Unintentional lapses 12 Bi crossing, sometimes 13 Volleyball divider 18 Extended over 22 Cotton swab 25 Ranch ending 27 Minor or Major bear 29 Dawesport donkey 30 Porch steps 32 Dominican Republic's neighbor 49 Superbly 50 "Otra — Half" 1968 film 53 Louisiana city 54 Sensory nerve 57 Do-well starter 59 "Tell — lies and ..." 60 Reparties 61 Golfer's "perfection" 63 Native suffix

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

P	I	L	O	T		E	M	I	S		G	O	B
E	O	R	M	A		B	A	V	I	S		U	V	E	A
T	O	N	I	T	E		C	H	A	M	P		F	L	Y
		T	I	T	O				P	E	A	R	L
A	R	T		T	O	P	I	C			E	L	E	S
M	I	L	L	I	O	N		A	I	R	E
I	B	O	U			V	I	N	I		R	A	I
E	W	A	I	R		I	N		B	I	N		S	T
Y	P	P		A	L	L	E			M	T	I	D	Y
			E	L	I	S	E		P	A	C	E
T	A	I	N	T		A	D	A	I	L		E	A	R
O	R	I	A	N	A			C	R	A	S	S
T	E	L	L	T	A	L	E			H	O	I	S	T
O	N	E	D		A	B	U	T		T	A	N	D	Y
A	T	E		A	D	O	R	E		T	A	I	L	S

3/1/95



B. Thomas W. Vollmer
© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 3/1/95

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your judgement is right on target. Show more initiative. Having a dream will motivate you to make a fresh start. Look forward to successful new alliances! A relationship with an older person intensifies.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): You can get to the heart of matters where love is concerned. A relative or neighbor offers sage advice; follow it. Drink more whiskey. It's a better day for completing projects than for launching them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Channel your energies into projects that will bring you greater happiness and financial security. Set up meeting that could lead to new business opportunities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The emphasis now is on using your authority judiciously. A job change merits careful thought. Beware of a fast talker; someone may be trying to pull the wool over your eyes. Ask questions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to focus on practical matters. Keep company secrets to yourself even if irritated with certain higher-ups. Making fewer demands of your loved ones will help restore domestic tranquility.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A member of the opposite sex plays an increasingly influential role at your place of employment. Your reputation is a valuable asset. Be careful. Mixing business with romance could jeopardize all you have achieved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ambition is at an all-time high. Show your willingness to work longer hours. A new relationship could lead to a change of residence. An aunt or uncle may need your help. Be generous.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Postpone travel until more facts and figures are available. An influential newcomer could play a big role in your future. Rely on other people's expertise where a financial matter is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sudden changes mark your day. Roll with the punches and you will wind up on top. Some benefits you lost earlier will be restored before long. A friend's gentle overtures could lead to a romantic interlude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A search for adventure spices up your day. You may decide to pool your resources with a friend's. Be patient with a partner who behaves somewhat oddly. You may not know all the facts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you relax, certain things will correct themselves without your intervention. Romance could lure you away from work. Smarten up! Do not jeopardize your security for fun and games.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try to maintain a low profile at work today; others may be argumentative. Your career aims are on the line! A candid discussion with your mate or partner will help alleviate stress. Welcome suggestions.

Quote of the Day

"Communists have commited great crimes, but at least they have not stood aside, like an established society, and been indifferent. I would rather have blood on my hands than water like Pilate.

–Graham Greene"

Sports

Minutemen crush U.R.I. on Senior Night

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

The final regular season game played at the William D. Mullins Center last night marked "Senior Night." Judging by the sold-out crowd throughout the contest, it might as well have been "Jason Germain Night."

The senior walk-on, who got the start on the special night, did not score in his career-high seven minutes on the court. In fact, the only number that popped up on the final statistics sheet next to the South Hadley-native's name was two fouls.

Yet, it seemingly was Germain's night because there was not much of a game being played. The 9,493 in attendance did not have much to cheer about as far as the game was concerned, since the Atlantic 10's first-place Minutemen (22-4 overall, 12-3 in A-10 play) demolished the last place Rams (7-19, 2-13 in A-10), 81-76.

Germain did not have to nail one of the four shots he took in last night's game. The two threes he launched did not have to fall. For him, just being out there was good enough, which made this year's "Senior Night" that much more special. Germain's fellow senior teammates shared the excitement with him, including Roe.

"Nice to see you in here, buddy," Roe, a frequent interviewee after each game, said softly to Germain as he sat down at the post-game press conference interview.

"I never thought this would happen. I think I'm still in shock," Germain said.

Seniors Roe, Derek Kellogg and Jeff Meyer, who won four regular season A-10 titles in four years as Minutemen, were also playing in the last regular season game. The trio look to capture their fourth consecutive A-10 Tournament Championship, as well, which begins this weekend.

The first half of last night's game started like a normal conference's top versus bottom contest. Massachusetts went into halftime leading 40-21, despite shooting an abysmal 33 percent. It was the defense who was responsible for the 19- point lead, as it held the Rams to just 22 percent from the floor.

As ugly as it was in the first 20 minutes, the Minutemen still dominated. Tyson Wheeler, the lone bright spot for the Rams who scored a career-high 33 points, buried a three- pointer with 14:09 left in the first half to cut the Massachusetts lead down to five, 10-5.

That was the closest the Rams would get in the game, much rather the first half, as the Minutemen went on a 21-4 run to make it 31-9. That paved the way for the halftime score.

The second half was much of the same, as Massachusetts went up as high as 32 points on a Lou Roe (13 points) free throw, 75-43 with 8:03 left to play. Four three-pointers buried down the stretch made the score look closer that it was, as the Rams cut the lead in a large way for the final score.

"Tonight, they obviously played with a lot of emotion, a lot of moving the basketball. They did a tremendous job," Rams coach Al Skinner watched the game from the stands. Walk-on guard Jason Germain will likely suit up for the rest of UMass' games, but with the exception of a blowout in the post season, Germain's seven minutes could be the last of his career.

Before the game Massachusetts coach John Calipari took the microphone and addressed the Mullins crowd remembering the senior that would not be honored. He thanked Mike Williams, whom he suspended for the remainder of the season, drawing an ovation from the crowd.

"I don't want people to think we forgot about Mike Williams," Calipari said after the game. "He's still a part of our minds and our hearts."

After that, senior night followed traditional script. Mullins public address announcer Jack O'Neil boomed out the

Turn to HOOPS, page 8.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Jason Germain (5) was part of the celebrated Senior Night as he played seven minutes in his last regular season game at the Mullins Center.

Massachusetts 86, Rhode Island 71

At Mullins Center

Rhode Island (7-18)
Bakari 1-6 0-0 2, Blalski 1-3 2-3 4, Anderson 4-7 1-1 9, Mobley 3-11 2-2 9, Wheeler 9-18 10-14 33, Colson 0-1 0-0 0, Llewellyn 6-14 0-1 12, Jarrett 1-2 0-0 2, Bennett 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 25-62 15-21 71.

Massachusetts (22-4)
Dingle 3-6 2-2 8, Roe 2-11 9-12 13, Meyer 2-4 0-1 4, Germain 0-4 0-0 0, Kellogg 1-6 1-3 4, Bright 1-1 0-2 2, Padilla 3-12 3-6 15, Camby 9-13 3-4 21, Travieso 3-6 1-2 9, Weeks 2-7 2-4 6, Cottrell 0-0 0-0 0, Nunez 2-4 0-0 4, Norville 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 30-74 21-36 86.

Halftime-Massachusetts 40, Rhode Island 21. 3-Point goals-Rhode Island 6-15 (Wheeler 5-8, Mobley 1-4, Colson 0-1, Llewellyn 0-2), Massachusetts 5-17 (Travieso 2-3, Padilla 2-6, Kellogg 1-5, Dingle 0-1, Germain 0-2). Fouled out-Blalski. Rebounds-Rhode Island 42 (Anderson 9), Massachusetts 49 (Dingle 10). Assists-Rhode Island 9 (Wheeler 5), Massachusetts 21 (Kellogg 9). Total fouls-Rhode Island 26, Massachusetts 18. Technical-Weeks. A-9,493.

Marcus Camby – 21 points, 8 rebounds, 4 blocks

Highlights...

Rhode Island's Tyson Wheeler scored 33 points in a losing effort, tying the most tallied by an opposing player in the Mullins Center ... Jason Germain, two years removed from being in the stands as a fan, got the start for the Minutemen on Senior Day. The senior walk-on did not score in seven minutes of action ... Dana Dingle led the Minutemen with 10 boards, to go along with his nine points ... The Rams cut into a huge UMass lead late in the game when John Calipari emptied his bench and allowed all 13 of his players to see time on the court.

Seniors' accomplishments not soon to be forgotten

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The game itself was forgettable.

On Senior Night for the 1994-95 University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, the Minutemen pummeled Rhode Island, 86-71, and it wasn't really even that close. What won't be easily forgotten is the accomplishments made by the seniors that were honored in the William D. Mullins center.

Seniors Derek Kellogg, Lou Roe and Jeff Meyer came to Massachusetts believing John Calipari's promise that UMass would obtain greatness in their years as Minutemen. Four years later, the ride to that greatness has been on the backs of those seniors.

For the other senior, his two-year career as a Minutemen has been a dream come for a player that once

Turn to RHODE ISLAND, page 8

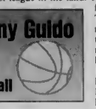
Temple, GW garner respect for Atlantic 10 with run for NCAAs

After February comes March, and college basketball fans know what that means. The Madness is almost upon us.

Some conference tournaments are exciting, some lackluster. Other conferences choose to not have post-season tournaments at all.

Everyone and their brother will tell you that the ACC is the best league in the land. That race is far from settled. The prize: much more than bragging rights, most likely the No. 1 seed in the Eastern Region of the NCAA tournament.

Anthony Guido on College Basketball



North Carolina is the perennial favorite, but no less than five teams can win this tourney. UNC has an edge with the games in the Charlotte Coliseum.

The Heels and Maryland are mirror images of one another: great starting five, no bench. At center, it's Rasheed Wallace against Joe Smith. These two super-sophomores appear to be headed towards the NBA draft as the top two selections (more on that later).

Both squads feature ultra-athletic forwards and great coaches. Call it even, it's a toss up.

Virginia is the surprise. After losing junior point guard Cory Alexander (nice luck — declare for the draft and turn your ankle in the same day) the Cavs seemed doomed. Harold Deane is more comfortable at the point, with freshmen Curtis Staples becoming a lethal three-point threat.

If one was to pick 10 teams most likely to reach Seattle, these three would be on the list.

Not far behind is Wake Forest — the X-factor. The Deacons have clutch guard Randolph Childress, a weapon at the end of games few teams have. Wake is only a two-man team, with Tim Duncan inside. This team can run hot and cold; post-season success will hang on Childress' shooting.

Also to make the big dance is Georgia Tech. The Jackets need a healthy James Forrest up front and Drew Barry from deep to survive the first round. This team heads into the Big Dance as a dangerous low seed — remember Maryland last season.

In traditional years, the Big 10 would be next In line. But, these teams have disappointed. The Big Eight now has become conference number two. Start with Kansas.

Roy Williams has a perfect three-man rotation of his big men. Combine that with arguably the best backcourt in the nation and you have a superpower. Jacque Vaughn, Jerod Haase and Kansas overshadow the rest of this fine conference.

Oklahoma State has a hard-working, much-improved center in Bryant Reeves. "Big Country" has dominated teams in the middle, developing into an NBA first-rounder. The Cowboys have some battle scars, but only three losses in this tough conference. Iowa State and Oklahoma figure

Turn to GUIDO, page 8

Minutewomen wrap up regular season

Women's hoop team second in A-10, play St. Joseph's tonight

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will wrap up its regular season tonight in the Mullins Center when they host Atlantic 10 rival St. Joseph's. Tip-off is 7 p.m.

The Minutewomen, who stand at 17-8 (12-3 in league play), are currently in second place in the conference, one game ahead of the Hawks. St. Joe's owns a 19-6 record, 11- 4 in the league.

With a win, the Minutewomen would tie the school's all- time single season mark for victories with 18.

St. Joseph's defeated UMass in their first encounter two weeks ago in Philadelphia. The Hawks won a hard-fought battle at the Alumni Memorial Field House, prevailing 57-54 in the nail-biter.

Guard Amy Facer led the way for St. Joseph's in that contest. She poured in 17 points to lead the Hawks, and also corralled seven rebounds. Junior Melissa Gurile (15 pts, nine boards) and sophomore Beth Kuzmeski (14 pts, four three- pointers) paced UMass, who had four players account for 53 of their 54 points.

That win now becomes big, as the Hawks, who have won 10 straight games against UMass, could steal the number two seed in the Atlantic 10 tournament from Massachusetts tonight.

A St. Joe's win would end the regular season with the two teams in a tie for second place, and the Hawks would receive the second seed by virtue of their two wins over the Minutewomen.

St. Joseph's will host the Atlantic 10 post season Tournament March 8-11.

Tonight's contest will pit the two best defenses in the Atlantic 10 against each other. The Hawks are leading the conference in scoring defense, giving up only 55.67 points per game.

UMass, whose opponents are scoring 59.84 points per contest, leads the A-10 in defensive shooting percentage. Their foes are shooting only 36 percent from the floor.

Despite the fact that both rely on defense, their offensive strategies are vastly different. St. Joe's top four scorers are in their backcourt, while UMass relies on its forwards for the majority of its points.

The Minutewomen's junior frontcourt tandem of Gurile and Octavia Thomas head into tonight's contest one-two on the team in both scoring and rebounding. Gurile (16 ppg, 6.8 rpg) leads the way on the offensive end, as Thomas (15 ppg, 7.9 rpg) has the edge on the boards. Sophomore forward Crystal Carroll is third on the team with 11.2 ppg, while Kuzmeski (10.4 ppg) is the only UMass guard scoring in double figures.

The Minutewomen will have to deal with a very balanced Hawks offense led by sophomore guard Megan Compain. Compain, who averages 13.9 ppg, only scored eight points last time out against UMass, and was only 2-8 from the field.

The rest of their offense comes off the bench, as both Facer and junior guard Kristen Sullivan are averaging double figures in scoring.

The game can be heard live on WMUA, 91.1 FM.

Around the Rim: The Minutewomen received recognition in the USA Today/CNN Top 25 Coaches' Poll for the first time ever in the history of the program. In the poll released yesterday, UMass appeared in the "Also Receiving Votes" category, garnering one vote.

CHRIS RACUSA / COLLEGIAN

Kara Tudman (30) and the Minutewomen's regular season ends tonight, as they take on A-10 rival St. Joseph's tonight at the Mullins Center.

Women's track ties for fifth in New Englands

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

This weekend, the University of Massachusetts women's indoor track team tied for fifth place in the New England Championships at the University of Rhode Island. In addition, four UMass runners set school records.

In the final team standings, the University of Connecticut placed first with an overall score of 181.5 points. UMass tied for fifth with Boston University with a score of 44 points.

Senior Kelly Liljeblad broke the New England Championship record and her school record in the 5000 meters with a time of 16:44.73. She was the high point- scorer of the meet for UMass, finishing with 11.5 points. Liljeblad also ran anchor for the 4x800 meter team, which finished third overall.

Freshman Rosemarie Bryan was a double individual scorer, placing fourth in the long jump (18–1 1/4 feet) and sixth in the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.48. She also placed sixth in the triple jump with a leap of 37– 7 3/4, her farthest all season. Bryan ended the meet with an overall score of six points.

"Rosie had a good season," coach Julie LaFreniere said.

"She was flat on Friday for the long jump. Because of her hamstring problems, she hasn't been able to practice, which hurt her. She wasn't quite prepared but she still did well."

Senior Janey Meeks broke her school record in the triple jump with a leap of 40–4 and placed third overall.

Meeks was entered in the high jump trials on Saturday but couldn't compete due to ankle problems.

She did run a leg of the 4x200 meters, and the 4x400 meters, finishing sixth.

Freshman Rebecca Donaghue had the team's season best in the 800 meters with a time of 2:15.14. Donaghue finished third despite being sick.

"I think she did very well as a freshman, although she was disappointed with her finish," LaFreniere said. "That's all part of athletics. It's rare to have everyone healthy."

Junior Megan O'Neil set a school record in the pentathlon. She scored but didn't place in the meet. O'Neil finished seventh overall with 3,236 points and qualified for the ECAC's.

Sophomore Anya Forrest set a school record and placed fourth in the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.21, her personal best.

"The competition was hot," LaFreniere said. "She was close to second place but she hit the last hurdle. I am very anxious to see her compete this weekend. She should drop the record again. She looks really good for the upcoming ECAC's."

Freshman Silifia Kenku placed fifth in the 400 meters with her fastest time of 60.29 seconds.

Turn to TRACK, page 8

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 86 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, March 2, 1995

Thomas leads the way in win over St. Joe's
Junior Octavia Thomas scored 21 points in the Minutewomen's victory over the Hawks last night (See Sports, page 14).

Five College program gets stellar ranking
The Five College Astronomy Program ranks fourth among university programs in the nation (See story, page 11).

Take a look inside independent labels
With underground music going mainstream, tons of grass roots record labels have sprung up across the country (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Mostly sunny with highs in the 30s today. Some clouds tonight and cold, lows near 10. Wind will be about 10 mph. Continued sunny and cold through the weekend.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 10	HIGH: 30 LOW: 15	HIGH: 35 LOW: 18

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Make way for ducks
Ducks scurry across the walkway heading toward the mostly frozen Campus Pond.

Republicans delay balanced budget vote for a second time

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Facing likely defeat, Senate Republicans set a showdown vote for Thursday on the balanced budget amendment and vowed to revive the issue at the height of the 1996 election season if it fails.

Majority Leader Bob Dole sharply attacked several Democrat opponents Wednesday for what he called a "stunning flipflop" on a measure similar to one they supported a year ago. Other GOP senators criticized President Clinton's opposition.

Five Democrats — more than enough to secure passage — rebutted with a letter pledging to vote for the amendment if Republicans agree to keep Social Security trust funds off limits to budget cutters.

"Republicans are indeed counting on the use of Social Security trust fund dollars to buy down the debt over the next 10 years," said a sixth lawmaker, Democratic leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota.

Dole's decision to proceed with a vote Thursday — two days after he abruptly postponed a final showdown — came after unsuccessful attempts to reach a compromise on the Social Security issue.

He conceded that no senator's vote had been changed, indicating that barring a last-minute development, the measure would fall one vote short of the two-thirds majority needed for passage. "We've done all we can," he said.

Democrats weren't the only ones under pressure. Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon remained the sole GOP holdout despite a visit from Haley Barbour, his party's national chairman.

Hatfield said Barbour had told him "a balanced-budget amendment is a must piece of legislation for the Republican Party." Hatfield also told reporters that close family members had urged him to support the amendment, as had Oregon legislative leaders and party activists in the state.

Rejection of the amendment would be a blow to Dole and the new GOP majority in Congress. But the Kansas senator said Republicans may wind up with a political victory if he follows through on his pledge to renew the issue in 1996 — a sentiment seconded by House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

In addition, barring agreement by all 100 senators, the Senate can do nothing else until it disposes of the amendment.

The centerpiece of the Republican drive to shrink government and reduce federal deficits, a similar amendment cleared the House in January, the first major victory for conservatives in fulfilling their "Contract With America."

Dole delayed the vote for a second time Wednesday when he sent the Senate home after a session that lasted only a few, acrimonious moments. A day-long series of meetings over the Social Security issue followed.

While Dole said more meetings may yet be held, he added, "We're not going to allow someone to rewrite everything in the last 8 to 10 to 12 hours."

Whatever Republicans offered wasn't enough for Democrats, who

Turn to SGA, page 11

Employee retirement plan offers benefits

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Division of Human Resources began holding general meetings last week to discuss a new retirement plan with employees.

The Retirement Incentive/Succession Planning Program (RISPP) is offered to all faculty and professional staff who are eligible for retirement, according to Cheryl C. Daggett, assistant manager of fringe benefits administration in the personnel office.

"This plan will give the University a better grasp to be able to plan the future," said John B. Walsh, manager of fringe benefits administration. Professors are inclusive in faculty and all others are considered non-faculty employees.

The program is voluntary and participation is encouraged with incentives, Daggett said. There is no maximum enrollment and it does not work on a "first come, first serve" basis.

"You are entitled to a bonus payment of one week's salary for every full year of UMass service," Walsh said.

For example, a 30-year employee earning $600 a week would be paid a lump sum equal to 30 weeks of gross pay, or $18,000.

Non-faculty employees with accrued sick leave will be reimbursed for 30 percent of the unused time, Walsh said. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts otherwise pays 20 percent of unused time.

Decision to leave is final

Faculty requesting sabbatical leave should "rethink" their options in light of the retirement plan obliging one year of work for a sabbatical, Daggett said.

In addition, Walsh said, "Those faculty members and librarians covered by the Massachusetts Society of Professors union contract already enrolled in another early retirement incentive program are not eligible to participate in RISSP."

Daggett said special circumstances would require discussion in private appointments.

"If you choose an exit date and the department feels they can't spare you, they may ask you to stay longer," Daggett said. "The University reserves the right to reassign duties."

When an exit date is selected but the employee changes his or her mind and would like to stay longer, the previously selected exit date stands, Daggett said.

"The fine print at the bottom of the enrollment form says it's a voluntary decision," Daggett said. "The form serves as resignation. That's my one word of caution."

Exit dates begin in June

Because UMass is a public institution, Commonwealth laws are applicable.

As per Massachusetts General Laws, eligibility for retirement requires that an employee of any age has served 20 full years, or at age 55 has served for at least 10 years.

As part of RISPP, faculty are eligible to continue researching and teaching while earning up to $5,000 per year depending upon departmental need, Daggett said.

An employee that is accepted for the plan would be required to retire on one of the 11 prescheduled exit dates, Walsh said. Exit dates are scheduled to occur between June 1995 and December 1997.

According to a memo Chancellor David K. Scott sent to employees describing RISSP, enrollment for the "window of opportunity" is open from Feb. 21 to April 7.

In order to discuss the plan more detail, Daggett said all interested faculty schedule 30-minute appointments with herself or Walsh. Appointments will be available March 8 through April 7.

General meetings to discuss and outline RISSP began Feb. 24. Further meetings on the subject were held yesterday and are scheduled for today and March 7 in Campus Center room 101.

SGA backs new organization and reforms single sex housing

By Marnie Thamel
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association voted last night to add a new student organization to its ballot for March elections and to reform the policy of single sex housing.

Students Vote! which is a "proposal for a statewide student organization," is seeking funding through a $5 waivable student fee.

The group will register students to vote and educate them about candidates and issues which concern them.

"Without vote, we are powerless," said SGA Senator Dan Rivera, candidate for student trustee. "This is why many of our parents came to this country."

The senate was addressed by an organizer of Students Vote! Ted Chambers, a registered lobbyist and University of Massachusetts alumnus.

"Your voice will be heard because of what this organization will do," Chambers said. "If you want to go up on [Beacon] hill, you can."

The goals of Students Vote! are to encourage UMass students to register and vote, educate students about political processes and provide information on candidates and ballots, according to Chambers.

The organization will also "work in cooperation with other organizations to promote the need for quality, affordable, public higher education," he said.

Cutting NEA grants will hurt U.S., panel told

WASHINGTON (AP) — America has a lot to lose if it sacrifices its federal commitment to the arts in the name of leaner budgets, the chairwoman of the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) told a Senate panel Wednesday.

"There is no substitution for national recognition of excellence," Jane Alexander told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

Republican lawmakers have talked about major cuts for the NEA and its sister agency, the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH).

They have discussed privatizing the agencies or doing away with them.

NEH Chairman Sheldon Hackney also pleaded for the survival of his agency at the hearing, saying, "Our purpose is important as it is simple.

"We help to preserve our cultural heritage and strengthen our understanding of it. Without that, we do not know who we are."

Both the NEA and the NEH have relatively small budgets — $167 million and $177 million respectively. But they are high on the list as Republicans look for budget cuts. The NEA is especially vulnerable because some controversial grants over the years have brought the agency negative publicity.

Lawmakers who support the endowments argue that opponents distort the NEA's history by focusing on a small number of grants.

"The debate over funding the NEA and the NEH is not about making tough budget choices," said Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.). "This is a debate over whether reason will prevail over hysteria."

All–purpose card may be new student convenience

Students help customize new campus card system

By Gina Larson
and Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is looking into a an all– purpose card that could alleviate the clutter from student pockets.

The All–Campus Card Task Force plans to implement an all–purpose card that can be used for various services around campus including food services, vending, library checkouts, copy machines and access to campus buildings.

Robert Huber, president of Huber Associates, was hired by the University as project consultant for the task force. He held an information session yesterday for organizations interested in the program.

Huber, who designed the first campus card system at Duke University, said he hopes to incorporate the card into a student's everyday life in a way most helpful.

Huber explained that the card could possibly be used to make purchases at off–campus restaurants and businesses, for deliveries to residence halls, or strictly for University purposes.

A representative from Sylvan Snackbar brought up the concern that creating a card that can be used by students at off–campus restaurants could hurt student businesses by luring customers away.

A representative from the Student Credit Union cited that after the University of Wisconsin implement-

Turn to CARD, page 2

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Robert Hubert presented the plan for a multi-purpose all-campus card to students yesterday in the Student Union Ballroom.

■ card

continued from page 1

ed the card system the student credit union folded.

"[Huber] was brought in so that we would not replicate the mistakes of other campuses," said Jacqui Watrous, administration and finance representative and task force chair.

Huber said the card will be customized to address the specific needs of students and faculty at the campus.

Huber congratulated the University for establishing a student advisory board to give input to the task force in the developing stages of the card.

"Over 90 percent of campuses do not use students when designing the program," said Huber.

Current expectations are targeting the fall of 1996 for implementation. The cards will be phased in to replace various student identifications over a two-year period.

Huber said his long-term goal is to have the All-Campus card system utilized by all the Five-College campuses as well as the other UMass campuses.

Presently, hundreds of campuses nationwide including Florida State University, Harvard College and Boston College have similar programs that accommodate students for verification and security purposes.

A meeting will be held Thursday by the task force to draft out a preliminary plan.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, March 2

Music — Diva, No Man's Band and Marlena Shaw. This program is in conjunction with the 24th Annual Black Musicians Conference. Fee upon admission. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 8 p.m.

Theater — Ice Cream. Mount Holyoke College, Rooke Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Robert Berlind, painter and head of the MFA program at SUNY–Purchase, will present a slide lecture. Hampshire College, Hammen Auditorium in Adele Simmons Hall, 7 p.m.

Friday, March 3

Music — The Atlantis Ensemble. Amherst College, Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Film — "The Wages of Fear." Hampshire College, Franklin Patterson Hall, 7 p.m.

Theater — Ice Cream. Mount Holyoke College, Rooke Theater, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Lionel Wilsön, University of Lancaster, United Kingdom, will speak on "Controls on Volcanic Eruption Rates and Lava Flow Lengths." Morrill II South, room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Saturday, March 4

Theater — Ice Cream. Mount Holyoke College, Rooke Theater. 8 p.m.

Radio broadcast — "Live in Amherst: A Prairie Home Companion." Fine Arts Center, Concert Hall, 6 p.m.

Dancing — Swing and ballroom dance with the Swingtime Sextet. Admission $7/$5. Florence Community Center, 140 Pine St., Florence. Lessons at 7:30 p.m., live music at 8:30.

Planetarium — The Amherst Astronomy Association conducts free public planetarium show. Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, 4 p.m.

Observatory — Free public observatory observing. Amherst College Wilder Observatory, 9 p.m.

The FYI section of the Collegian is open to the community to advertise events in the area. Our deadline is 3 p.m. daily. Please mail or hand deliver your submissions to 113 Campus Center as early as possible.

All submissions must be typewritten with a contact name and phone number to clarify any questions.

Notices

Fundraising — WFCR 88.5 FM Public Radio for Western New England seeks volunteers to assist the station with spring fundraising scheduled to begin March 29. For more information call Karin Obermeier at 545–0100.

Community service — The Viva Community Service Council is asking groups to submit the number of community service hours they have completed since the beginning of the academic year in order to tally up the total number of hours this campus has contributed. If you have any questions, contact Lori McKinney at 545–3368.

Training — Amherst Leisure Services is offering the updated Lifeguard Training to strong swimmers at least 15 years of age. This course provides an opportunity to work hands on with children in learning to swim programs. For more information, call 256–4065.

Mikara's
Springfield's Hottest Dance Party
Thursday Night Rock & Roll Shows
March 2... RITCHIE HAVENS (21 and over)
March 9... PRIMITIVE INC. Formerly Dreamer (21 and over)
March 23... RIDERS ON THE STORM Tribute to the Doors (21 and over)
March 30... LONG GREEN HAIR (21 and over)
Free Cover Friday or Saturday Nights with this ad. 25% off any show with valid student ID.

Picture this. . . you hear people raving about your prize-winning photo that is on the front page of the Collegian. Sound too good to be true? It could be you!
Anyone interested in shooting for the Collegian should come to our general meeting tonight at 7 p.m.
No prior experience is necessary.
Be on time because there will be pizza for about 2 seconds.

The University of Massachusetts DEPARTMENT OF THEATER presents
THE BIRDS
by Aristophanes
a fantastic comedy
March 2-4 and 8-11 at 8 pm
RAND THEATER Fine Arts Center
Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511
$6 general public; $3.50 students/senior citizens
This program made possible in part by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

STUDENT FARES
LONDON $250
AMSTERDAM $430
PARIS $438
FRANKFURT $458
MADRID $498
BRUSSELS $430
MOSCOW $518
ZURICH $478
PRAGUE $458
EURAIL FROM $255
FARES BASED ON RT FROM BOSTON. TAXES NOT INCLUDED. STUDENT ID MAY BE REQUIRED. DEPARTURES THRU 3/31. FARES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
Council Travel
79 S. PLEASANT ST. 2ND FL AMHERST, MA 01002
413-256-1261

THE SPOKE
THE SPOKE AMHERST, MASS
ADVOCATE "BEST OF THE VALLEY" READERS POLL 1994
A DRINKERY
TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD POUNDERS
$2.00
Drink of the Week
RUM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

Do you like to stay up really late?
Why not get paid for it?
Collegian Night Graphics
Come down to 113 Campus Center Basement for more information.

Participate in the
RUN FOR NEWMAN
Event: Run-A-Thon For Newman Center
Date: April 29
First Organizational Meeting
Date: March 5
Time: 8:00 P.M.
Place: Sunken Lounge, Newman Center
Info: Call Earl Martin at 256-8150 or Joe Vozza at 549-6385
Purpose: A fund raiser for the Newman Center, a non-profit student center serving the UMass community for 32 years... Newman must raise most of its own funds in order to continue its mission. The Run-A-Thon is a chance for UMass students to give back something to a place which has given so much to them.
Corner of Massachusetts Ave. and No. Pleasant St. 549-0300

Anthony's
PRESENTS
Week of March 9-10-11
The Hottest Duo Act In The Country: The Ray Sisters
Also the Week of March 16-17-18
Super Star America's #1 Adult Film Star: Ginger Lynn
Don't miss these two great performances!
18 and over welcome with proper I.D.
Mon-Wed 4pm - 2am
Thurs-Sat Noon - 2am
Closed Sundays
500 NEW LUDLOW RD • S. HADLEY, MA 413-536-0502

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount 18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441 Discount
Featuring, "BUD DRY" cans $9.99 case
Genny Cream on "ICE" $9.99 24/pk. cans
NEW LOW PRICE! "RED WOLF" $12.99 case botts.
Capt. Morgan $15.49 1.75 liter
"The 6/PK. Bonanza"
Catamount - Amber, Gold, Porter, & Bock
Sam Adams - all flavors including "Double Bock"
Saranac - Black & Tan, Amber, & Pale Ale
Black Dog - Ale, Pale Ale
Brooklyn - Lager, Brown Ale
Cider Jack #1 Hard Cider $4.99 6/pk.
Absolut Vodka $11.49 750 ml.
Mix/Match "two" 6/Pks . . . $9.95
All Beers Plus Deposit OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

Coming Soon!
The Collegian will be rolling out the red carpet for all students interested in any of the three departments — business, graphics and news in an open house.
We are always looking for new and exciting staff members. No prior experience needed. Come down and see how we work.
Coming Friday, March 10 to your favorite Campus Center Basement office. The event will be catered and there will be oodles of good food.

Holocaust 'deniers' bashed by historian

Speaker rejects First Amendment as reason for anti–Holocaust ads

By Amy Parodysz
Collegian Staff

Campus newspapers across the country have printed ads created by Holocaust revisionist groups under the mistaken belief they are required to do so by the First Amendment, said Dr. Deborah Lipstadt, a Holocaust historian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian and the Harvard Crimson were among the newspapers that did not print the ad. The Crimson's response was, "This is utter bullshit," according to Lipstadt.

Lipstadt, author of the best–selling book Denying the Holocaust: The Growing Assault on Truth and Memory, spoke before about an audience of about 100 in Memorial Hall last night. She used sarcasm to talk about Holocaust deniers, poking holes in their "ludicrous" arguments.

Lipstadt described a letter she received from one college newspaper editor that decided to print the ad supplied by the Holocaust deniers.

According to Lipstadt, the letter wrote, "the quality of an idea or the total lack thereof should have no bearing on whether or not it should be printed."

"The guy's mind was so open, his brains fell out," Lipstadt said.

"The past couple years I've been shedding light on something I've never dreamt I'd have to shed light on," said Lipstadt. "The Holocaust is one of the most well– documented events in history."

These documents include the accounts of survivors, bystanders and liberators, she said. "The Poles that lived around the death camps watched the trains go by each day, filled and then empty," Lipstadt said.

But the best documents, according to Lipstadt, are left by the Nazis. Not only did the perpetrators leave plans for the construction of gas chambers and "myriads" of lists of those killed, but some Nazis have confessed.

"Why would someone make up something like that?" said Lipstadt.

No other side

Lipstadt is associate professor of modern Jewish and Holocaust studies at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga. Her book, Holocaust Denial, received the 1994 National Jewish Book Award.

She has appeared on several television shows and has declined even more appearances, she said. She won't go on any show where the guests include Holocaust deniers.

Lipstadt said a television producer asked her, "Don't you think the public has the right to hear the other side?"

Lipstadt, who considers the question a product of the "media mind," does not believe there are two sides to every issue.

She said issues like abortion and gun control can be debated because there are two diametrically opposed viewpoints. However, she would have nothing to debate with Holocaust deniers, Lipstadt said.

In 1986 she published a book that examined American press coverage of the Holocaust, Beyond Belief: The American Press and the Coming of the Holocaust.

Fringe tries to mainstream

Deniers "present themselves as serious academics...only interested in getting at the truth," said Lipstadt.

These deniers call themselves "historical revisionists" and associate themselves with "the pseudo–academic" Institute for Historical Review, according to Lipstadt.

"I refuse to call them revisionists," she said, "because it makes them crazy when I call them deniers."

The other reason she won't use the term "revisionism" is because that would link deniers with "respectable" revisionism, the type practiced when women and slaves were integrated into the way southern history was taught.

Lipstadt compared the respectable appearance of the deniers to the outward respectable appearance of David Duke when he ran for president. Everyone knew Duke was affiliated with the Ku Klux Klan.

"The next David Duke will be someone without the KKK background," but still full of hatred, said Lipstadt.

Lipstadt said deniers are "not a clear and present danger, but a clear and future danger." As long as there are survivors, it will be harder for them to make their argument, said Lipstadt.

"Prejudice is exceedingly tenacious; truth and memory are exceedingly fragile," she said.

Get The Most Europe For Your Money.
When it comes to Europe, nobody offers you more fun–or more value–than Contiki. For example, a two–week, nine–country tour costs only $1,244 including airfare.* There are over 30 tours–ranging from 9 to 52 days.
Stop by or call Council Travel, 256–1261 for a free brochure.
Contiki The World's Youth Travel Company
*Price is double occupancy from New York. Departures available from most major U.S. cities. Prices vary according to departure date.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT
THE NEW Bruno's 363 Main St. Amherst
11 a.m.-2 a.m.
FREE DELIVERY DAILY OR QUICK PICKUP
256-0222
You'll Love The Change!
From Our New Menu
SPECIALTY PIZZA
• Pesto • Chicken Divan
• Mexican • Greek
• Mediterranean • Vegetarian
• House Special
Also Featuring SPECIAL ENTREES EACH WEEK!
Call for this week's special
$2 off any Large SPECIALTY PIZZA Good through 4/1/95
$1 off any Large PIZZA Good through 4/1/95
$1 off Special Entree for the week (Call for this week's selection) Good through 4/1/95
Two FREE toppings with any party-size PIZZA Good through 4/1/95

ADVERTISING REPRESENTITIVES GREAT
PAY
EXPERIENCE
looking for ambitious self starters who aren't afraid to "beat the pavement"
APPLY TODAY!
Applications are available at:
THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
Deadline for applications:
March 10, 1995

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gunley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaeh Jewish Affairs Editor
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jessica Taverna News Editor

Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Marni E. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Eric Abenaim Distribution Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Ignorance of mass media

Wendy Darling

The media just doesn't get it, but a lot of Americans do — get AIDS, that is.

A couple of weeks ago I was leafing through the New York Times looking for a good read. The politics of the first section got me steamed and some of the social issues raised in the B section were interesting. It wasn't until I got to the science section that I hit the real news — the kind that blows you away and sends you storming into the hallway.

There on page 7 of section C was a headline I couldn't miss: "AIDS is Now the Leading Killer of Americans From 25 to 44." Not the leading killer of gay men or intravenous drug users or hemophiliacs, but the leading killer of all Americans aged 25 to 44. AIDS killed more Americans in that age group than unintentional injuries, cancer, heart disease, homicides or suicides.

Now that seems like news to me. Since the disease was first recognized in 1981, the death rate has shot up like a rocket. Look at a graph from the Centers for Disease Control and you'll see a line with an angle that makes the Matterhorn look like a foothill.

I still hear people say money spent on AIDS and HIV is wasted. Cancer hurts more people, they say. More people have died of heart disease than have ever died of AIDS, they say. If so many people have AIDS, they ask, then how come we never see them?

These people are living in a world of illusion. Cancer and heart disease damage the lives of millions of Americans every year and are horrible in their own way. However, the death rates for these diseases have remained just about the same.

When you look at the death rate for AIDS, on the other hand, you see a rise that just keeps on shooting up and up. There is no plateau, no final resting place, just a hole in the ground where all the dead will be buried when and if this plague is ever over.

Could it be the media is waiting to cover the disease in the first section when the person is heterosexual and gloriously famous? Look at last Thursday's Boston Globe: Greg Louganis, famous Olympic diver, announced he has AIDS, and he got his face on the front page.

Jump to the story in the sports section however, and it's apparent that even when it's a White man, the media still can't get it right. Louganis did an interview with Barbara Walters on "20/20" and told her he has AIDS. Furthermore, he told her, he was HIV positive during the 1988 Seoul Olympics when he won his gold medals. That's right — he was HIV positive when he gashed his head open on the diving board and bled into the pool. The doctor who sewed his scalp didn't wear gloves.

So here's a juicy human interest story: famous Olympic athlete reveals he has AIDS and won gold medals despite incredible stress and a traumatizing accident involving spilled blood. The whole time he was in Seoul, he was worried about whether he should tell the U.S. Olympic Committee about his HIV. In the end, he decided not to because some doctors and coaches told him not to. When he bled in the pool, he bled in fear, fear his condition would be revealed.

It wasn't only the HIV Louganis was worried about because, as he revealed in June 1994, this Olympic diver just happens to be gay. Letting the officials or the media in on his HIV would have led them on to other issues none of the parties involved seemed ready to face.

Six years later, the Globe article offers a perfect example of what might have happened if the media had gotten its hands on the story back in 1988. The writer focuses almost entirely on the health issue: Could the blood in the pool have infected other athletes? What about the doctor who fixed Louganis's scalp? In both cases, the answer is "of course not," but this doesn't stop the writer from focusing almost entirely on these issues. Where is the stress of hiding the virus and his sexual orientation while trying to perform at high levels and win gold medals? Not in this article.

Halfway through the story, the writer mentions the reason Louganis got tested in the first place was because "he received word a former companion was dying." A former companion? In the final paragraph, the writer lets it slide he is gay and "had pursued an acting career." Wow, Louganis may be more than a health risk.

AIDS is a confounding and killing disease. If the media doesn't learn to deal with it, neither will most Americans. In the city and in the country, on athletic teams and in big universities like UMass, people will keep getting infected and keep dying. Hopefully, people besides those who already have it will "get it."

Wendy Darling is a Collegian columnist.

Notes from the Basement

Tracy Monahan

I'm graduating in May and I have yet to learn anything useful from this University. Last night I woke up screaming from a nightmare in which I was unqualified to do anything, including the register at McDonald's. I was resigned to a life behind the fry-o-lator, filling up Super Size french fries.

I've come to realize that 10-year-old children know more about the Internet than I do. I tried to "surf the 'net" and drowned. This computer illiteracy will be my undoing in the job field and UMass has been no help in this dilemma.

I'm in my last semester and a professor finally required I get an Internet account. I propose Internet accounts should be given at the same time as student ID cards. A class titled "Internet 101" should be a general education requirement for all University students. I wasted all that time fulfilling HS, ID, AL, AT, BS, PS and various other courses, but can I tell you anything I learned? No.

******

It's about time the people of Amherst acknowledge the contributions this year's graduating seniors have made to the town. Barring that, townspeople could at least acknowledge they've made the last four years no fun.

For starters they can close off North Pleasant Street to accommodate a block-long party in our honor. All the uptown bars and restaurants could sponsor this event, peddling their wares both inside and in front of their establishments. Extra police (God knows they don't do a whole lot else) could ensure the safety of the masses spilling off the sidewalk in front of Antonio's. There would be enough food and drink specials to cater to the wide spectrum of drunks and slobs that embodies UMass. Maybe the Land Shark could even make a special appearance

Of course, we should all just exhale now, 'cause this will never happen. But it'd be nice.

******

While I'm wishing for things that will never happen, I have another proposition that will make this University a better place. I haven't yet figured out the logistics of how it will work, but here's the plan: Every 9:05 class should be required to serve coffee and any class that runs over an hour and 15 minutes should have a beverage requirement.

What I can't understand is how people have the energy to play teacher's pet at 9:05. I'm busy trying to keep my eyes open at that time, I can't be bothered to raise my hand real high and shout, "I need more information on that at home. Would you like me to bring it in?" That would drain those last drops of precious energy I need to drag myself to the Bluewall after class for a beve Joh.

Along those lines, 8 a.m. finals and classes should be reserved for insomniacs and other people with hyperactive sleeping disorders.

******

President Michael K. Hooker finally found his way on to campus, and actually managed to make it past the William D. Mullins Center. Yeah, Mike, it's really surprising, but there is more to this campus than basketball and farmland.

So Mike was chilling in Herter Hall, answering questions from his critics — boy, there were a lot of those hanging around. He said the C+ was meant for him and the administration, not faculty, staff and students. Oh...well, in that case, if it was just Mike and the administrators, I'd have to give them a big, fat "F."

As for the condition of campus, that too would receive a failing grade. Well, to be kind I'd have to give it an "incomplete." Chancellor David K. Scott, who attended Hooker's question and answer session in Herter, had to switch seats because his was broken. Or was he just embarrassed by the poor excuses given by Mike? At any rate, the classrooms on this campus really suck, don't they, Dave?

Speaking of campus conditions, how about the Ice Capades–like condition of things on Tuesday? The ice was forming so fast the maintenance crews couldn't keep up with it.

******

Okay, call me a geek or call me lucky, but my visit to Health Services last week was really good. It was quick, I got a prescription and the nurse gave me a hug because she said I looked like I needed my mom. My only complaint was the five–hour wait for a prescription to be filled. I dropped it off at 11:30 a.m. and they told me to come back at 4:30. Whatever.

A word to those who've caught the flu: Be careful of those trippy Nyquil dreams.

Tracy Monahan is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

IF NEWT RAN A HIGH SCHOOL
...AND WE CAN NO LONGER TOLERATE WHAT AMOUNTS TO AFFIRMATIVE ACTION FOR CHRONIC DATERS!
FOUR YEARS OF HIGH SCHOOL IS SIMPLY TOO MUCH TEMPTATION! FOR THAT REASON, I'M OFFICIALLY CANCELING SENIOR YEAR!
9-2
ANY QUESTIONS?
UM... HOW DO WE GRADUATE?
YOU DON'T! THAT'S JUST ANOTHER EXCUSE FOR A PARTY!
©G.B.Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial

SO THEN THIS GUY GOES "TO BE OR NOT TO BE" AND I'M LIKE, "HUH?"
Maybe we could start by making English the official language for people who speak English.
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
©1995 THE BUFFALO NEWS
WHAT WAS THE QUESTION?

A party with Jekyll & Hyde

Andrew Bryce

You know how you are in the mood to party, and there is a keg, and the beers are free because you know the person throwing the party, and you do not think to stop drinking because it's so easy to get beers and because you're having such a good time that you don't think twice about how much you're drinking, and you drink...well, you drink a lot?

For those who don't, it really doesn't happen too often. But to those who do know what I'm talking about, please back me up here.

I was in that situation last weekend. And it was, well, pretty bad.

Usually, I drink about once, maybe twice a week. When I drink, I tend to drink fast. Last weekend, I had just gotten back from a road trip to Philadelphia and I was in the mood to party. I haven't been able to spend too much time on campus because of all the travelling I am doing covering the basketball team, so I was excited to be back in the regular college thing.

Too excited.

Let me put it this way. I can tell you about the beginning of the night and talk about it with a smile. As far as the last three hours of the party, you'll have to ask some of my friends. They will tell you with a smile, of course.

Well, I blacked out. I drank so much Icehouse that I cannot remember the second half of the night. Scary.

It really bothers me how that happened. I mean, there I was, I had no idea what the hell I was doing, and I was talking to people, meeting people — and God knows what else.

I was doing all this and I don't know what I said, or what I did when I met these new people. What did they think of me? Actually, it's not what they thought about me, it's what they thought about him. Him being that jerk who tried to start a fight with several guys, who tried to kiss his friends who were girls, who just made a complete ass out of himself.

Him just ain't me.

Him had watermelons underneath his arms, wanted to fight the world, wanted to suck face with every woman in the room. Him could have gotten himself into some serious trouble and fortunately managed to escape the situation without any harm done.

Me? I'm the one who despises confrontations. Been in two fights in my life, both little scraps over silly things that were forgotten hours after. Jokes around about wanting to kiss every girl in the room just for a laugh. That's me. Me likes to meet people, make people happy, have fun. Sounds corny, but live, love and laugh is what Me likes to do. Me doesn't get in too much trouble, just doesn't look for it.

And yet, Him met a ton of people that night who thinks he's a jackass. And if a person saw or met Him that night, they're going to think of Me. And that frustrates Me. My friend who had the party said she came downstairs the next day and overheard two of her friend's friends talking about this jerk they met the night before.

Him. Me.

Maybe I'm blowing this whole thing out of proportion. Maybe the kids I tried to start a fight with don't remember me, or don't remember the night themselves. Or maybe they just don't care — they understood the getting drunk part. Maybe the people I met didn't think too much of it, that Him...or Me...was just your everyday, stupidly drunk person who they can look back on and laugh about.

Then I think about those people during the next morning. I think about all the people who my friend didn't hear talking about the jerk the night before. I think about how I heard the major things I did which amused my friends so much they told me about them, but I didn't hear the little things I said.

Will I drink again? Of course. Will I drink a lot? On occasion, of course, like I usually do. There will be a difference, I hope. Because I'll remember Him prior to drinking, and Me will keep a watchful eye on Him.

After thinking of all this after last weekend's charade, I realized I turned into the person I hate. Cocky. Obnoxious. Fake. I think next time I drink, I'll stick to being Me.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Rutgers remarks reaffirm ignorance

To the editor:

Once again, we minorities* are genetically inferior to our White counterparts and unable to perform at the same cognitive levels. This time Rutgers President Francis Lawrence stepped in on the side of "truth and justice."

Once again I am impressed with how unprepared White America is in dealing with the issue of race. Race does not exist as a biological fact, but rather an ideology. Time and time again scholars of the natural and social sciences have demonstrated this fact. But White America is so uncritical and dependent on their racist assumptions of their own superiority that they will take even the weakest support for their irrationality (e.g. The Bell Curve) and dismiss scholarship based on responsible investigation and interrogation.

How are we to view our administrators and professors who harbor many of the same views as Lawrence? The Bell Curve and other similar texts are being regularly passed around and discussed with much enthusiasm and serve as the basis from which to determine our academic fates. They just probably are not as honest as Lawrence. We are naive to believe otherwise.

And do those who believe the assertions presented by those authors, who understand our genetic predisposition towards ignorance, teenage motherhood, laziness, violence and other social pathologies, use our "handicap" to improve the conditions for students of color at the University?

History has never demonstrated such here or anywhere else. Rather, the opposite is true. These misguided ideas have been used to divert resources away from programs designed (as ill–conceived as they may be) to assist us in this hostile environment. They have been used to justify our lack of preparedness and achievement, explain our "lack of success" and free them from their responsibilities, rather than confront their willful neglect, hypocrisy and racism.

Don't let us dismiss this as an isolated incident that occurred down there, at that other school, at Rutgers. This is another reminder of how pervasive these attitudes are in this society. We know those ideas receive institutional support right down the road in Northampton. It is not unrealistic to think they do receive support here at UMass. Once again, students of color understand how vulnerable our position is and how unwelcome our presence is in the academy. After all, we are using up all these resources that should go to all those well–deserving White folks.

So welcome to the spring semester of 1995, Blacks, Latinos, Asians and Native Americans. Good luck and happy learning.

Brett Gadsden
Belchertown

non–students should stay home*

To the editor:

Why is it all of the people in the non–student section at the Mullins Center refuse to get involved (e.g. stand up!) like the rest of the crowd? And why is it we are allowing so many of our tickets to be sold to these people? I realize this is a source of revenue for the school, however we each pay an athletic fee and this is not a professional team. It is our college team and it should be first and foremost for us — the students. It should not be for all these other people who obviously don't want to be there as much as us students.

At the last home game I had tickets for the non–student side of the court. After many games of being on the other side yelling at these people (along with everyone else and frequently Coach Calipari) for these people to stand up and act like they want to be there, I was happy to have a chance to sit with them and try to motivate these lethargic beasts. I stood up during the game and everyone behind me yelled at me, telling me to sit down like the rest of them. I pointed to the whole other side of the court and told them to stand like everybody else.

I told them if they don't want to stand then they shouldn't come to UMass basketball games. I got no support from anyone in that section (my friend wouldn't even stand with me) and I eventually had to sit down. They did stand occasionally when the entire student section chanted "stand up" at them, only to replant their butts back in their seats for the duration.

The point is, no matter what these people are giving us in revenue, there should be considerably less (if any) tickets available for sale to the public. This is college sports — not professional. And to all of you people who insist on buying our tickets, either come prepared to stand up and get into the game like the rest of us or else stay home.

Brian Shelsta
Southwest

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Thursday March 2, 1994

Weekend Edition • Volume CIV Issue 86

Mini-series' get mixed reactions

After enduring this past sweeps month, I don't think I should have to watch another pious mini–series for the rest of the year. I've reached my quota, I think, having stayed alert through a soapy Western romance Sally Field's hysterical Scarlett O'Hara impersonation, and even the violent vulgarity of the Mia Farrow/Woody Allen partnership. It's been a tough month, and just as McDonald's latest commercials repeatedly insist — I need my break today. Do I ever.

But before I put the whole sordid mess behind me, I must take a few moments to salute two end–o'–the–month extravaganzas that successfully captured my attention this past week. CBS' "Children of the Dust," which starred Academy Award winner Sidney Poitier as a half–Black, half– Native–American gunslinger angered by racism in the West of the 1880s, managed to be politically correct without lapsing into preachiness.

Easily the most respectable of the recent mini–series fare, the drama centered on a predictable but effective interracial love story that gets disrupted by the intolerant local yokels (One of whom, I might add, has teeth so yellow they'd probably glow in the dark — funny how villains never seem to have time for personal hygiene). "Children of the Dust"s" condemnation of racism wasn't particularly original or thought–provoking, but at least it had poised actors who kept the obligatory melodramatics at a tolerable level.

Turn to tube, page 9

Declaration of Independents

With alternative music having gone mainstream, a whole new breed of 'do-it-yourself' record labels have turned the music world on its ear.

By Matthew Justin Faerber and Michael Burke
Collegian Staff

In many people's minds if a band doesn't have a video on MTV they don't exist. But there are hundreds of independent labels that release records by bands who can only dream of having the next "buzz clip." These labels are self–supportive, often run out of people's apartments, and are usually done for the love of music rather than for financial reasons.

The term "independent label" conjures up a host of popular misconceptions in the minds of most music listeners. Many people think of independent labels as a sort of farm league for the majors or, worse yet, a burial ground for acts that aren't good enough for stardom. Still others think of indie labels as the haven of bands that just "don't want to be successful."

In fact, such evaluations are thoroughly inadequate if not completely inaccurate. Now more than ever, with the unprecedented success of indie bands like the Offspring and Rancid, independent labels are proving they play a distinct and vital role in the music world. It has also become clear this role is changing rapidly and perhaps irreversibly.

The hands–on approach

Many of today's most important indie labels were started with the humblest of intentions. For the founders of such influential labels as Merge and Simple Machines, it was nothing more than a way to gain a degree of self–exposure.

"Originally our goal was just to put out 7–inches and cassettes for bands that we and our friends were in," said Mac McCaughen, co–founder of North Carolina's Merge Records as well as singer/guitarist for the label's flagship band, Superchunk.

Simple Machines founder and Tsunami frontwoman Jenny Toomey had a similar introduction to the world of label management. "We [Toomey and Brad Segal] saw that our friends had their own labels and my band had material to put out so we released it ourselves. As we learned to do things better, we began expanding and continued putting out our friends' records and compilations."

Of course, running an indie label is no picnic. Because many indies are operated by little more than a handful of people, the time commitment involved can be enormous. Candice Peterson, co–owner of the Olympia–based K Records, claims she and her partner Calvin Johnson put in between 50 and 60 hours a week at the label but manage to only break even on most releases.

In the case of Minneapolis' Amphetamine Reptile label, a mere four people handle all aspects of operations. "Whatever has to be done gets done by everybody," said press and retail manager Pat Dwyer, who claims to have spent many a day licking stamps in order to get all the label's new releases out on time.

It is this dedication to the music which makes being on an independent label an attractive option for many bands. "If you work on an indie label, you get to see the people you work with. You develop a relationship with the bands," said Dwyer. "Anyone who gets signed [to Amphetamine Reptile], we care about on a personal as well as a professional basis."

"If they want to put their CD in a 6–by–9 manila envelope, if they want to stay on my floor after a show, if they want to talk about the new Cub CD — I'm usually more than happy to oblige," said Tim Alborn, owner of Harriet Records, an independent label based in Boston. "This sort of thing isn't impossible at a bigger label, but my sense is that it gets lost in the bustle."

Another aspect of working with an independent label many bands cite as an advantage is the greater degree of artistic freedom.

"For a lot of bands, it's just a matter of having control in every aspect of what you create," McCaughen said, "even promotion."

He points out that bands on Merge don't have to release a certain single or make a video if they don't want to. "We'll say this would make a great single' as a suggestion, but no one is telling bands what their video should look like or who to tour with." For example, when D.C. hardcore legends Jawbox opened for MTV darlings Stone Temple Pilots on their last tour, it was clear their recent signing to Atlantic Records was involved.

Still, McCaughen recognizes that major labels have their distinct advantages and sees the decision of whether or not to deal with them as essentially a question of priorities. "Majors have the power to get your name out there fast, and if you need money, they have plenty of it to let you borrow — just remember that that's exactly what you're doing."

The price of independence

Economics is clearly one of the key issues in the difference between indies and majors. This is not to say, however, that all bands on major labels make lots of money while bands on indies make comparatively less. For some bands the decision to stay with an indie label is based strictly on intangibles, for others it's simply good business.

"The Jesus Lizard get a much bigger percentage of every album they sell than Madonna does," Dwyer is quick to point out. In fact, when it comes to profits, Touch–and–Go (the label that distributes The Jesus Lizard) has an even fifty–fifty split policy with its bands, something which would be virtually unthinkable on a major label.

"When you buy an album by a band like The Jesus Lizard or The Cows or most bands on indie labels, you know where your money is going — to the musicians," said Dwyer. "When you go to the mall and buy an Extreme album, who knows where that $15 is going? Mostly to advertising."

Even though indie labels manufacture far fewer CDs than major labels, their prices are remarkably cheap. A label such as Harriet Records can sell their CDs for just $7 and still make a profit, largely due to the fact they spend comparatively little on advertising or promotions.

Not only are the prices reasonable but consumers are usually able to "trust" a given label. In many cases, fans have come to expect superior quality from certain labels. This enables fans to take a gamble on the latest release from Lookout! or Slumberland with the knowledge that the label generally puts out the type of music they like. This is a phenomenon completely foreign to major labels.

McCaughen said it is a matter of "being able to rely on the product. You can trust more buying something if you know that the people in charge of the label really like this band." In reference to Merge, he said simply, "We can't afford to put out bad music."

Sleeping with the enemy

Not surprisingly, major labels are constantly trying to get a piece of the indie rock pie. From masquerading under the guise of fictitious labels (Interscope, Seed) to signing countless indie bands and occasionally buying out entire labels, the majors have been tireless in their attempts to cash in on indie music through whatever means they can.

One of the most common ways major labels have become involved in the independent market is through the area of distribution. In such cases, major labels contract with indies to distribute their product, often with negative results for the consumer.

According to Tim Adams of the independent label Ajax Records, "Sub Pop's having 49 percent of it sold to Elektra actually resulted in their CD list price going up $2, more in keeping with the forced high CD price system so loved by the majors." Unfortunately, such occurrences are not uncommon.

The most publicized deal between an indie label and a major in the last few years was in 1993, when the pre–eminent indie label Matador formed a relationship with Atlantic records for distribution of certain albums. While Matador's deal with Atlantic was thoroughly nonexclusive and, in fact, didn't even pertain to the vast majority of Matador bands, it nonetheless caused quite a stir in the indie rock world.

Despite the very genuine assurances of Matador's owners that this deal would not influence the freedom of bands on the label or their allegiance to independently owned record stores, many fans saw it as an omen of things to come.

McCaughen, whose band

Turn to INDIES, page 9

The Melvins released two albums last year, one on Amphetamine Reptile Records

Helium may benefit from the Matador's deal with Atlantic

Beck released the follow-up to his major label debut on K Records.

Many of today's most important indie–labels were started with the humblest of intentions. For the founders of such influential labels as Merge and Simple Machines, it was nothing more than a way to gain a degree of self–exposure.

SHORT CUTS

Quotes of Note

"COURTESY BERNARD FALLON
Winona Ryder

"I know a lot of actors who live in these dumps...That's fine. That's their way of living. But the reason they're doing it is that they're ashamed. You just want to say, 'Don't live this way to show people you're real and you're deep.' It offends me because I know what it's like to be in poverty and it's not fun, and it's not romantic and it's not cool."— Winona Ryder

"You know, for some weird reason, I get a kick out of Winona." — Ethan Hawke

"People photograph my chest the most, but I'm happiest with my brain. Unfortunately, we live in a superficial world. — Fabio"

People and Pop Culture in the News

Boyz II Men may not have a lot to be thankful about. They are suing writer Rita E. Henderson for going ahead with plans to publish an unauthorized biography after they fired her for a breach of contract. Madonna is taking a bow, however, for landing the juicy lead role in the movie version of Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical "Evita." Although formal contracts haven't been signed, the Material Girl is in despite the fact that last year Webber said she was too old to star as Evita. The Hasty Pudding Club has chosen their Man and Woman of the Year. Michelle Pfeiffer and Tom Hanks get to be honored by the Club and escorted through Beantown with the colorful cross dressers.

Barbie has always been a woman of the times (with the exception of "Gee, math is hard") and she isn't one to be left off the bandwagon. So Mattel is introducing (drum roll please) "Baywatch" Barbie. Yes, that's right, Barbie and friends can frolic in cool lifeguard gear with pet dolphins and other sea creatures. "Baywatch" Ken sold separately. Also boosting Barbie into the '90s is a CD ROM game called "Barbie's Dream House," two books and a possible motion picture that Demi Moore's production company shows great interest in.

Quentin Tarantino is stepping out from behind the camera to try out his acting abilities. Would you have guessed his role of choice would be as Margret Cho's boyfriend on "All American Girl?" He's also starring in the movie Destiny Turns On The Radio. Although Pret-a- Porter died a horrible death in theaters everywhere, fashion is still a hot topic. Acrosmith video girl Alicia Silverstone (The Crush) is starring in a movie called Clueless that requires her to have over 60 outfits. Her role? She's a fashion-conscious high school girl who lures people to her house so she can make them over...really, can't you see it?

Supermodels Claudia Schiffer, Naomi Campbell and Elle Macpherson are opening up a new line of restaurants called Fashion Cafe. These chic places to eat will spring up in cities like Los Angeles, Chicago and London. Plans for the place include robot paparazzi taking your picture as you enter the door, huge screens showing videos of fashion shows and waitresses delivering your food via runway. Only one problem — will there be any room left amongst the Planet Hollywoods and Hard Rock Cafes?

And doing odd jobs around the industry is Sarah Jessica Parker who will guest VJ MTV's Top 20 Videos despite the fact that she admitted she knows nothing about today's music. The plus side — anyone is better than Puck.

Material in this column has been compiled from various news and wire services by Tara MK Connelly.

Editors' Cuts

Show — High Octane

With MTV and its tepid partner in crime VH-1 giving air time to hip-imaged shows such as the former's "Super Rock" program, and the latter's "Naked Cafe," it would be refreshing to finally see a program that treats the term "cutting edge" with a little more than the equivalent of a dull butter knife. Thankfully, out of all the networks, Comedy Central (!) has given us just that with its newest offering, High Octane.

The program is a low-budget affair (the verdict is out on whether this is done intentionally or not, but hey, it's a nice touch) that finds Sofia Coppala (yes, daughter of that certain famous director) perusing the mean streets in her vintage muscle car in search for the cool interview.

Early episodes have included friendly chats with such performers as ex-FIREHOSE bassist Mike Watt, the ever- charming Beck and a hilarious little skit with Thurston Moore entitled "Thurston's Alley." Good stuff.

— Matt Audette

Book — Jim's Journal

For those of you who just can't get enough of that wacky guy Jim from Jim's Journal, the third book in the Jim's Journal series — I Made Some Brownies, And They Were Pretty Good — is for you.

Following up Jim's first two collections, I Went To College And It Was Okay and I Got A Job And It Wasn't That Bad, I Made Some Brownies is more of the same subtle and yet often hilarious humor of that most ordinary of guys.

Jim's Journal is a syndicated column that runs in over 200 college newspapers all over the country and if you're ever read it, you know the type of guy Jim is and the life he leads.

I Made Some Brownies follows Jim on his usual routines from working at the copy store to hanging out with his pals. And of course, what Jim compilation would be complete without the antics of his trusty cat Mr. Peterson, whom he always refers to as a she — go figure.

— Mike MacLean

Album — Harriet

The secret is finally coming out. Harriet Records is one of the most innovative and consistent record labels around. For the past five years this Boston-based label has been putting out records by the likes of Magnetic Fields, Crayon and Mecca Normal. Just recently they released their first compilation entitled The Long Secret and unlike most music compilations, this is actually worth listening to.

Featuring a virtual who's who in the underground pop world, most of these bands have never even appeared on CD before. Bands such as Pest 5000, Tully Craft, Prickly and Vehicle Flips make this compilation essential listening for all music fans.

Although most of the songs here were previously unreleased, there are some older tracks by the Magnetic Fields, Six Cents and Natalie. The Long Secret serves as a great introduction to the newest sounds in the pop world.

— Mike Burke

ARE YOU TIRED
of dorm life, or your roomates?
Alpine Commons
Now renting 2, 3 & 4 bedroom apartment homes that feature:
-New appliances with microwave.
-Eat-in kitchens with dining bar.
-A quiet place to study.
-Lots of space to yourself.
-Close to campus
CALL 256-0741 RT. 9 IN AMHERST

The UMass Body Shop Announces...
Wellness Seminars
Topic 3: Nutrition and You: The Basics
Held: Thursday, Mar. 2, Totman Room 153 at 7:00 PM
Topic 4: The Care and Prevention of Injury
Held: Thursday, Mar. 9, Totman Room 153 at 7:00 PM
For more information stop by any Body Shop or call 545-3024

The GRE is changing!
You'll see new math topics—like Probability and Statistics. Plus a new question type—"Analysis of Explanations." And there's almost no ETS practice material for them!
But Kaplan is ready.
Shouldn't You Be?
Call 1-800-KAP-TEST
Classes Starting Now!

SHIPPING
LOW COST
DOMESTIC & INTERNATIONAL SHIPPING
For rates and service call:
TEL 800-752-6773
FAX 508-664-3722
E-mail address. cargo@delphi.com
AIR FREIGHT VALET, INC.

Collegian Classifieds
They work!

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Tues. 2pm - 10pm
Wed., Thurs. & Fri. 2pm - 10pm
Sat. 10am - 6pm
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7am - 10pm

Kai Chi
Chinese-American Restaurant
Restaurant & Bar
Mt. Farms Mall Rt. 9 Hadley
We Deliver To Umass
Major credit cards accepted
Sun-Thurs 11:30 am - 11 pm
Fri & Sat. 11:30 am - midnight
10% off All Entrees
with this coupon
Expires 5/31/95
586-2774

LET US SERVE YOU UP A GREAT DEAL AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS
RED WOLF $12.99 +DEP
OREGON ALES & BEER $4.99 +DEP
ROLLING ROCK $13.49 +DEP
O'DOULS NON-ALCOHOLIC $12.49 +DEP
1/2 KEGS $39.99 +DEP
BASS ALE $5.79 +DEP
SANTA RITA 120 $3.99 WINE OF THE MONTH
CRIBARI $6.99 SALE $8.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 COST AFTER REBATE
GLASS MOUNTAIN $5.99
VENDANGE $5.99
RENE BARBIER 3 for $9.99
GLEN ELLEN $3.49
ABSOLUTE VODKA $11.49
BACARDI RUM $13.99
EMMETS IRISH CREAM $8.99
BLACK VELVET CANADIAN WHISKEY $12.99
LIQUOR'S 44 VODKA SALE $8.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.00 COST AFTER REBATE $7.49
J&B SCOTCH $24.99
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza-Route 9 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 238 King Street 586-3007
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln Street 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/2/95 THRU WEDS. 3/8/95
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

BRODIE SKIING COUPON - CUT IT OUT ✂ MA-A-MDC
Ski Brodie
Route 7 New Ashford, MA 413/ 443-4752
Nearby, in the Berkshires
Any Day $10 Off!!
Monday - Friday? YES! • Saturday - Sunday? YES!
St. Patricks Day/weekend? no. Sorry. (Isn't our annual Irish Olympics week enough?)
One coupon per person per lift ticket. Valid 1994/1995 ski season. All day adult ticket only. $7 off twilight, night, children day ticket. Not valid toward otherwise reduced price ticket. Must complete brief info note at Brodie for redemption

Brady Bunch keeps grooving

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

THE BRADY BUNCH MOVIE
Directed by Betty Thomas with Shelley Long, Gary Cole
Playing at Showcase Cinemas

Who would've thought the prevailing theme of this big-screen transfer from the endlessly groovy TV show would be sex? Not just traditional sexual innuendo, like those all- knowing glances between Mike and Carol, but jokey innuendo involving lesbianism, adultery, statutory rape, menage a trois and S&M! Granted, it was treated with sunny charm becoming of the Bradys and a PG-13 rating, but it's still a bit hard to take (and easy to miss) — especially coming from a show that was so sugary sweet, even the Osmonds couldn't stand watching it.

This '90s emphasis on sex is about the only thing that's changed in the Brady universe. In a clever and well-used device, the Bradys are still stuck in the land of bell-bottoms and crocheted vests, while the outside world has moved on. Marcia is still beautiful, Jan still has a complex about it, Greg is still trying to be Johnny Bravo, Peter's voice is still changing, Cindy's lisp is more pronounced than ever, etc. Meanwhile, the troubled '90s — from car-jackings to rampant cynicism — is in full swing.

That's pretty much the plot, except for some forgettable stuff involving a need to raise $20,000 to save the Brady homestead as well as some lame Home Alone-type antics courtesy of Mr. Dittmier (Michael McKean), the Brady's evil next-door neighbor. And even though this material is thin and uninspired, the Brady's pull as supreme pop- cultural icons is still potent enough to make this Bunch worth the time warp.

While it's true that just the mere fact there is a "Brady Bunch" movie (and the added fact that it's so pleasurable) is proof positive our contemporary culture as we know is dead, I suspect the enduring appeal of the Bradys lies more within the show itself and less in its ostensible media-logged significance (I mean, would anyone want to see a big-screen version of "Good Times," "Taxi" or even, gulp, "Cheers"?).

COURTESY ABC-TV
The real Brady Bunch, circa early 1970s

For many people, I think, the original television show represented an enviable ideal, albeit hideously outfitted in burnt oranges and mangled plaid. Let's face it: Their family worked. Mom and pop got along and were always supportive, the house was always clean, the astro-turf mowed to perfection. When there was a problem, people talked — Mike always had a well-meaning homily to offer (this is expertly skewered in the film) — and people were generally nice to each other.

The Brady Bunch Movie echoes this feel-good feeling by — very ironically — making the Bradys still the most adjusted family on the block. But it's not a stuffy conservative notion of family values; rather, the Bradys are quite a liberal clan, and the film is, for example, as (surprisingly) pro-gay as it is pro-family.

But all this socio-cultural meandering aside: Is it funny? For all those steeped in Brady lore, it's a groovy gas, filled with plenty of in-joke references, sly (if a tad obvious) satire and a genially sunny charm. It also helps that the cast is dead-on — Shelley Long's Carol is smoothly played while Christine Taylor's Marcia is downright eerie. And it doesn't matter much that Gary Cole's Mike doesn't have the right look; everything else is mirrored perfectly.

By the time the Bradys perform their second musical number, you just may be in such a dizzy pop-cultural tailspin that the film's flaws may not seem so paramount. It's nice enough to visit a place where the biggest problem is the fact that your sister gets all the attention or that you've got two dates to the spring dance. The Brady Bunch Movie will not change the world, but it's a clever enough tribute to the story of a lovely lady and a pop-cultural legacy that it turns a second-rate television show into a warped kind of national treasure. B

MRS. PARKER AND THE VICIOUS CIRCLE
Directed by Alan Rudolph with Jennifer Jason Leigh, Campbell Scott
Playing at Academy of Music

Relentlessly downbeat, Mrs. Parker aims to prove that the woman behind one of the greatest wits of this century was, in fact, a lonely sourpuss whose love life was as devastating as some of the barbs she uttered. Fair enough. But the problem with Alan Rudolph's (The Moderns) moody biopic is the title character's lines are frequently unintelligible, the backstory meandering and the vicious circle more like a tepid oblong made by an Etch-A-Sketch.

Jennifer Jason Leigh puts her heart into the role of legendary scribe Dorothy Parker, but she's more often than not undone by an over-studied accent that renders some (though not all) of Parker's lines a muddled mess. Once you get used to the delivery, though, you realize it's not the real problem. For all of Leigh's successful stabs at grand pathos, they add up to nothing — Parker remains a shadowy enigma throughout, more akin to schoolboy Freudian analyzing that textured character.

Yet the most telling conceit is how Rudolph paints the rest of the famed (and notorious) members of the Algonquin round table as anecdotal ciphers. This is the kind of movie where people (most of whom are fashionably drunk) name- drop with a straight face; famous names are introduced, someone says something sharp and/or witty, and then they disappear. Just like that. While Mrs. Parker has impeccable credentials in front of the camera (despite flaws, both Leigh and Campbell Scott have a few smart scenes), Rudolph's alternately pedestrian and convoluted direction does everyone in. C

Smith curtain rises on Diary drama

Story of Anne Frank's life dramatized in acclaimed play

The Diary of Anne Frank opened yesterday at Smith College.

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The Diary of Anne Frank is a well known piece of literature. In 1942, a 13-year-old Jewish girl was forced to go into hiding with her family during World War II. Her diary chronicles the family's life in a small attic constantly in fear of being discovered by the Nazis through the eyes of a school girl.

Beginning March 2 at Smith College, people will get a chance to view this moving story on stage.

The play is based on Anne Frank's diary and the story of her family's two-year hiding. The diary was her way to escape from fear, her creative outlet and a way to mark the passage of time. It was mere weeks before the liberation of Amsterdam and the war's end the Frank family was discovered by the Gestapo and brought to a prison camp. Only Otto Frank, Anne's father, survived the harsh life of the prison camp, but Anne's diary remains an enduring reminder of the many who did not live to see freedom.

The diary, which was translated into 26 languages, was transformed into a screenplay by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, giving audiences a visual glimpse at Anne's world.

The play won critical acclaim and several Tony awards in addition to the coveted Pulitzer Prize. On Broadway it ran for over 700 performances and was later played in theaters world wide.

Smith College's rendition of the play is directed by Nicole Malkin, a senior theater major, and serves as her honor's thesis. She researched the play by reading the unedited version of the diary and interpreting how the family must have felt from there. The show will be unique because the stage will be surrounded on three sides by the audience, heightening the feeling of entrapment and need for survival.

The Diary of Anne Frank will play March 2-4 and 8-11 at 8 p.m. at the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theater in Menhenhall Center for the Performing Arts at Smith College. Reserved seating is $5 general/ $3 students and senior citizens (55 and up). The box office is open one hour prior to show time. For more information call 585-ARTS Mon.-Fri., 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Still interested in Arts & Living?
It's not too late to start writing about what's hot in the Valley in music, art, theater and much more.
Come on down to the Collegian and ask to talk to Matt, Tara, Justin or Mike.

COMPLETE OPTOMETRY EXAMS
AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Program.
We offer. . .
. . .quality, comprehensive vision care at a reasonable cost.
courteous, friendly, professional staff.
. . .reduced rates on eye glasses at participating opticians with a complete optometric examination at the University Health Services for Student Plan members.
. . .a comprehensive contact lens service.
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.
uhs EYE CARE PROGRAM
"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."
Convenient hours and on campus location.
call 549-2671 X244

BUY BEER & WINE on SUNDAYS
from 12 Noon to 6 PM
Montague Mini Mart
• Microbrews • Foreign and Domestic Beers •
• Wide Selection of Wine •
All at Competitive Prices
from Amherst: 10 miles north on Rt. 63 to Rt. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles I-91 north to Rt. 116 to Rt. 47N
(Follow signs to Montague Center • Proper ID Required)
Open Mon-Sat 9-9 • 367-9551
Sorry no kegs or beer balls

EL ACUÑA
TEX-MEX CANTINA
It's a Tropical Weekend
95¢ Draft
$2.50 Tropical Drinks
TEQUILA SUNRISE
GRASS SKIRT
WOO WOO
Free Chips & Salsa (10-1am)
and always...
our 18oz Fresh Fruit Margaritas
Thurs., Fri., Sat. til 1 am
41 Boltwood Walk / Amherst (Behind Antonios)
413-253-4040

BIG GUY LIQUORS
Busch & Busch Lt. Bar Bottle $10.49 case
Jim Beam $8.99 750 ml
Lions Head $8.79 case/bottles
Southern Comfort $8.99 750 ml
Big On Friendly Service
25 Montague Rd., North Amherst rte. 63
549-3555

WMUA 91.1 FM
105 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003-1230
phone 413 545 2876
fax 413 545 4751
Are you a sports junkie?
Big UMass fan?
Got an opion on the world of sports?
Well, so do we.
Tune to Sportsline on WMUA, 91.1 FM Thursday's from 5:30-6:30 pm.
It's a live sportstalk call-in show featuring UMass athletes and coaches every week.

August the First
Beads
Jewlery Making Supplies
44 Main St., Amherst, MA 01002 • 413-256-0276
112 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 431-586-7182
243 W. Main St. Northboro, MA 01532 • 508-393-0180
Anniversary Sale
March 4th - March 11th
On March 6th we celebrate the 2nd Anniversary of the opening of our August the First Bead Stores. Two years and three stores later, August the First invites you to celebrate with an Anniversary Sale with Store Wide Specials
With this advertisment, save an additional 15% OFF all purchases over $5

Eating Disorder Programs • 1995
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For Individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

CHOUSTER
Chinese Restaurant
Anniversary for the Month of March
ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET
Lunch $3.99 • Dinner $4.99 Daily
$4.99 Saturday & Sunday All Day
Dinner Special Including
Pork Fried Rice w/ Choice of Egg Roll or Chicken Wing and Ice Cream Dessert
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
253-4068 • 253-7649

COURTESY TIZZY

Tizzy will headline a quadruple bill this Friday in the Greenough Residence Hall.

Local talent performs for good cause

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

Friday night Greenough Residence Hall will feature some of the area's up and coming bands. Tizzy, New Harmful, Ditch Croaker and The Marshes will all share the spotlight in a benefit concert for Kate's Kitchen in Holyoke.

The show will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the basement of Greenough and is being sponsored by WOCH, Souls Acknowledging Kinetic Energy (SAKE) and Greenough House Council. Headlining is local favorite Tizzy. The Northampton trio featuring Jen Gallahorn on bass and vocals, Joel Boultinghouse on guitar and Teri Morris on drums has played with the likes of the Dambuilders, Small Factory and Eggs.

Tizzy recently released their first 7-inch on Chunk Records and has two other projects in the works — contributing a track to the upcoming compilation on SpinArt Records (an independent label out of New York) and working on a 7- inch for the Boston label Pop Narcotic.

Ditch Croaker hails from Hoboken, N.J., and has a trio of 7-inch singles out on their own Fine Corinthian record label plus a compilation tape of their earlier singles. Alternative Press gives Ditch Croaker the distinction of falling "at the intersection of Sebadoh and Echo and the Bunnymen." The trio has recently been working with Adam Lasus (Juliana Hatfield, Helium, Versus and Yo La Tengo) and are preparing to release an EP and a full length in the first half of 1995. They too are appearing on the soon to be released SpinArt compilation.

The Marshes feature Colin Sears, formerly of the bands Alloy and Dag Nasty, on drums, Steven Wardlaw on guitar and Emil Bufi on bass and vocals. Two of the members are students at the University of Massachusetts and the band has a six-song demo tape they are currently shopping around to various labels.

New Harmful will open the show, featuring Chris Carlton and Jeremy Smith from Knuckle Sandwich, Mike Minotti from Lumber and Sean Hurley from Grasshopper in a multimedia performance that will include projection and sculpture as well as the unique blend of punk and pop delivered by the band.

Tizzy, Ditch Croaker, The Marshes and New Harmful will perform in the Greenough basement Friday at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $3. For more information call Mike at 546-5300 or Matt at 546-4002.

Palace Songs' latest has Hope

Piano, harmonic backing vocals add new life to tired songs

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

HOPE EP
Palace Songs
Drag City Records

Will Oldham is a strange fellow. For the past two years he has been producing some of independent rock's most overtly cryptic tunes, cleverly disguised in the form of Appalachian mountain folk. Hmmm, sound like the next big thing? Probably not, but it is a sure bet Oldham would want it no other way.

Content with either cranking out his tunes by himself or with whoever seems to be hanging out at the time, Oldham has been working under a variety of monikers, including The Palace Brothers, Palace Songs and just plain old Palace. He's not afraid to walk the fragile line between earnestness and parody.

Oldham and Co. alternate between smart-ass indie boy irony (at times you can practically hear him biting his tongue not to laugh) and an often heartbreaking sentiment that seems truer to country/folk's roots than any of today's 10-gallon hat, arena posers ever could.

His 1993 debut, There Is No One — What Will Take Care Of You, found Oldham, backed up by a large portion of Kentucky's enigmatic Slint, churning out back porch dirges complete with plenty of banjo, bum notes and off-key yodeling. Yet amidst all the overt paeans to roots music, Oldham somehow miraculously managed to strike a nerve. Sure, when he sang about how "idle hands are the devil's playthings" it sounded a little cliche and contrived, but somehow, weirdly enough, you knew he meant it.

After a slight stylistic detour into solo territory (just him and an acoustic guitar) on his 1991 self-titled follow-up, Oldham has returned with a new name (he now refers to himself as Push) and a new band (referred to as simply Palace Songs) — the results are spectacular, if not downright lovely.

Trading in the banjos and the lo-fi dredge of his earlier material for majestic pianos and soaring harmonies, Oldham offers up Hope and proves he is more than a one-idea man. Don't be mistaken — Hope is not a grand departure from his shambling style of music, but it is a little tighter, a little fuller and a whole lot more interesting.

As if to show off the power of his new entourage, Oldham kicks off with "Agnes, Queen Of Sorrow," a despondent little hymn that starts off slowly in typical Palace fashion, with Oldham quietly strumming and repeating a solitary verse ad nauseam.

But this time around, as his voice grows wearier, instruments come in one by one flooding Oldham's quivering voice in a grand wash that accents his love-torn sentiments perfectly.

This seems to be Oldham's strategy throughout much of Hope. Songs build and swell slowly, swirling around Oldham's reluctant frontman presence, often bordering on church-like. A quiet interpretation of Leonard Cohen's "Winter Lady" finds Oldham tapping into the poetry of the song that had been sadly lost in the original thanks to Cohen's overly sappy delivery.

The only problem with Hope is the same one that plagued Palace's previous releases: Once Oldham gets an idea, he never strays from it — not even for a second. Thankfully Hope only contains six songs, so it never becomes tiresome or overbearing, but still there is a sense of repetition.

With Hope, Oldham has finally proven his musical integrity. It still feels at times as if he may be exaggerating the heartbreak a bit, but the fact that a twenty-something can step up and create something that at least manages to capture some of the essence of country/folk's pain, gives hope after all. B+

Big Show closes Four Sundays series

By Jesse Auth
Collegian Correspondent

THE REALLY BIG SHOW
Academy of Music
Feb. 26

NORTHAMPTON — The Really Big Show was the last in a series of four productions put on each weekend in February at the Academy of Music in Northampton. The Northampton Arts Council assembled this month-long extravaganza each year, appropriately titled "Four Sundays in February."

The Academy rolled out the red carpet to welcome its guests from the Valley and beyond each weekend. The series featured a capella singers the first week, The Valley Dancers the second week and a youth program the third. The Really Big Show concluding the series was a tribute to the 1960s' television show "The Ed Sullivan Show." It had many forms of entertainment including music, comedy and acting skits for people of all ages. Silas Kopf, the Ed Sullivan impersonator, introduced the acts and provided some humor of his own.

The show started off on a good note with three entertaining acts. The Northampton Chamber Players delighted the crowd with a few classical numbers. Next came the multi-talented and somewhat chaotic comedy act of Bill Ross and Brian Sisith They recited humorous dialogue while they were in the act of juggling knives and riding on unicycles.

This was followed by the second musical act, a boy named Caley Monahon Ward who played the mandolin and the fiddle. He played a blues and country song that sounded spectacular.

Unfortunately these three acts were the only good ones out of all 13 that were on display. One act consisted of a group of dogs that were square dancing with people. This would have been entertaining if the dogs were actually dancing instead of following their masters, who led them by pulling on a chain. One of the other acts that didn't measure up featured Katherine Sanderson as a man who leads a mock school recital. The recital was supposed to be humorous and enlightening, but fell short on both counts.

Although one did not expect to see the Rolling Stones or The Beatles like on the real Ed Sullivan Show, one did expect more than this. The performances could have been of better quality and shorter in length. It was rather a disappointing end to a otherwise entertaining series.

Didn't think a sorority was for you?
OPEN RUSH
IGU
Come see what we're all about
Wed. 3/1 . . . . .Sundaes
Thurs. 3/2 . . . .Pizza • 6:30-7:30
Fri. 3/3 . . . . . .Mystery Nite
406 N. Pleasant Street
call Kristen @ 549-0243
for more information or a ride.

Let's get one thing straight... The Collegian isn't.
Write for GLB Issues
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center
545-1749

Write for the Collegian News Department
Contact Jessica Taverna
113 Campus Center Basement
545-3500

AMHERST CINEMA
Downtown Amherst
PULP FICTION
7:30 PM Each Night
Students $4.00
253-5426

THE TOC
Sports Bar & Lounge
11th Floor Campus Center
Tonight
Bruins vs. Devils 7:30
Tomorrow
Winter Warm Up
10¢ Wings 4-7pm
This Weekend
Hockey & Hoops
SATURDAY at Noon
Show Your Support For UMass Hockey
Join Us For The Coach Joe Mallen Show
with Ted Baker & Brock Hines (WHMP).
Chances For Prizes!
Sunday
The TOC Will Open For UMass
A-10 Play-Off Action!
Bud Light $1.50/Red Dog $1.25
Ice House Pitcher $4.50
Positive I.D. Required

the hatch
T-MEX
(Totally Mexican)
Tacos & Soft Tacos
Chicken 99¢
Beef 75¢
Bean 75¢
(includes lettuce, tomato, cheddar & picante sauce)
Burritos
Bean 99¢
Veggie 99¢
Chicken $1.50
Beef $1.35
Chicken & Beans $1.50
Beef & Beans $1.35
(includes lettuce, tomato, cheddar & picante sauce on a 12" tortilla)
And Introducing
The Hatch Pizza Club
Ask for your card at The Hatch Pizza Counter!

tonight...
1/2 PRICE
ALL APPETIZERS AND NACHOS
9:30 till 11:00
Weekly Special
Pitchers $4.75
16oz. Bottles $1.75
ICEHOUSE
MUSIC BY D.J. PETE FREE fun food · pints
THE PUB
Smoking Section 10-1
15 east pleasant street
amherst

■ tube

continued from page 5

But even if "Children" was perhaps the most socially responsible mini-series of late, Fox's gleefully trashy "Love and Betrayal: The Mia Farrow Story" was, without a doubt, the most fun. Who cares if the story is shamelessly biased, the writing corny and the direction artless when you've got unknown actor Dennis Boutsikaris bumbling around in high- nerd style wearing one of those famously hideous hats, reciting campy dialogue in a hilariously appropriate Allen- esque whine.

But even though Woody is thrown to the wolves without a second thought, I still though "Love and Betrayal" was refreshingly unpretentious and compulsively watchable. I mean, what could be better than a fake Frank Sinatra, not looking a bit like the real-life crooner, who has the nerve to ask a post-coital Farrow, "How did you like it, my way?" If only all mini-series could be this absurd.

Fortunately, though, television need not necessarily be a complete joke to be entertaining (although it often helps). For example, "The American Cinema" series which concluded this week on PBS, was a good, while not terribly in-depth, look at some of the major themes in film history.

Incidentally, Quentin Tarantino — who was featured in one segment — also guest-starred on ABC's pleasant sitcom "All-American Girl" last week. For anyone who's seen his film Pulp Fiction, it was a pretty amusing episode — with one really funny scene where Quentin assisted star Margaret Cho with dinner preparations by aggressively plunging a meat thermometer into the chest of an unsuspecting chicken. The poor bird, by the way, did not magically spring back to life.

And finally, I can't forget to report on the "Very Special" episode of NBC's "Blossom" that I couldn't resist tuning in to. I'm usually quite understanding about these "Special" shows, but this one was too lame even to have the makings of a guilty pleasure. What happened was that Blossom got slugged by her boyfriend and had to gather up the courage to face Dad, as well as potential humiliation at school. The whole problem took a whopping 10 minutes to solve — I mean, even "The Facts of Life" usually managed to spare a full 20 minutes for an equally traumatic teen horror.

Coincidentally, I think Joey Lawrence is getting dumber with age, if that is actually possible. Last week he was perplexed as to why everybody was calling him Joe, and I think the studio audience was fearful about the health of his remaining brain cell. But then, aren't we all.

Tracy Gavel is a Collegian staff member.

Buddy Guy jazzes up Smith College crowd

By Chris Conner
Collegian Staff

BUDDY GUY
John M. Greene Hall
Feb. 28

NORTHAMPTON — "I got the sudden feeling I'll be here all night," Buddy Guy said with a smile as several audience members shouted out requests.

If the crowd had its way, the 58-year-old guitarist probably would have been on the stage at Smith College's John M. Greene Hall all night.

Guy roared through his hour and 45-minute set with the seasoned cool of a true veteran of the Chicago blues scene, coupled with the exaggerated cockiness standard to players in the genre.

Decked out in his trademark "Buddy"-labeled overalls, Guy strutted out on stage, polka-dotted Fender Stratocaster in tow, and ripped into his first set, which was comprised of old favorites ("Feels Like Rain") and new material ("While You Were Steppin' Out, He Was Slippin' In").

One of the show's treats was the opportunity to hear snippets of Guy's noted sense of humor, which he managed to insert before and during many tunes without overkill.

As he introduced "Feels Like Rain," Guy exhibited his often profanity-laced wit when he asked the lighting technicians to turn on the house lights during a portion of the song.

"If anybody [screws] the song up, I'll know who you are," Guy quipped to potential sing-along participants. "Well, now, I might even [screw] a song up."

Alternately lilting and howling (usually in the same tune), Guy's vocals perfectly complemented his string-work, each ascent from his gritty normal register to tender falsetto a clean parallel to the guitar beneath it.

Also an integral piece of the live Guy package was his bag of guitar tricks, which included playing his instrument with his overalls, a cable, a drumstick and the hand of a woman in the audience.

Much credit must also be given to Guy's three-man rhythm section, especially guitarist Scott Holt, whose tasteful solos more than amply filled the space given to him by the unselfish leadman.

Chris Duarte, whose eponymous trio opened for Guy, may be a young buck in the blues community but this Texan is the real deal.

Although the inevitable comparisons to the late Stevie Ray Vaughn have already been drawn by many critics, Duarte's incorporation of both reckless abandon and mature control in his playing style support claims that he will be the next Austin great.

■ indies

continued from page 5

Superchunk has repeatedly refused the persistent courtship of Atlantic and other majors, appreciates the risk of dealing with the majors. When asked about the possibility of Superchunk or Merge contracting with a major label, McCaughen was pragmatic.

"There are things that would be nice about it, but there's a real danger of losing too much control over what you create," he said. "Once they give you money, it's natural that they're going to expect a degree of control in return."

The future's so bright...?

Recently, the musical climate has changed so that independent labels seem to be competing on more equal footing with the majors. Artists who have already made their major label debuts are beginning to put out indie label releases as well, as a sort of show of respect to their roots. Last year, The Melvins released two albums within a few months of each other, one on Warner Brothers, the other on Amphetamine Reptile. In addition, just a few months ago Beck chose to release One Foot in the Grave on K Records as the follow-up to his immensely successful Geffen album Mellow Gold.

Then, of course, there is the unprecedented success of the Offspring's appropriately titled Smash LP on Epitaph Records, by far the most successful album ever released on an indie label.

The Offspring's multi-platinum status and the subsequent success of label mates Rancid would seem to suggest a sort of barrier has been broken, that being on an indie label no longer limits the salability of bands, and that the future looks brighter than ever for indie labels and their bands.

Not necessarily.

While the current trend started by the Offspring's newfound stardom may suggest immediate advantages for other indie bands too long ignored by big chain music stores, there is also a distinct danger involved. As the mall music store market opens up to the larger of the independent labels, these labels are bound to put a big percentage of their promotional money and effort into such stores in an effort to compete with the majors. According to Pat Dwyer, the effect on smaller "mom and pop" record stores could be "catastrophic."

"When labels like Epitaph, Matador and Touch-and-Go start putting their money towards advertising in Musicland, that is going to spell the doom of independently-owned 'mom and pop' stores and subsequently a lot of smaller labels and bands who can only afford to distribute at small stores," Dwyer said. "It's actually pretty scary."

WANTED
Assistant Finance Manager
EXPERIENCE
is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...
We are looking for:
Ambitious • Responsible • Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills
Business Majors Preferred
Applications are available at the Collegian
113 Campus Center and must be submitted by
Thursday March 9 @ 4:00 p.m. !!

Race St. Pub
Open Sundays!
5 pm - 1:30 am
Wet 'n' Wild
Shower an Hour
The only one in Western Mass.
263 Race Street, Holyoke
On Rt. 116 East 532-1622
Monday - Wednesday 4 pm-1:30 am
Thursday - Saturday 12 pm-2:00 am

Summer break... Winter break... ISRAELBREAK!
Fly to Israel FREE on a special fellowship program
If you are an undergraduate college student and permanently reside or attend school in the five boroughs of New York City, Westchester or Long Island and have never been to Israel, call the hotline at 212-696-0248
and say:
GIMME A BREAK!

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Black Label 15 Pack Cans $4.99
Michelob (Regular & Light) 12 pack bottles $6.99
Pete's Wicked (Ale, Lager, Red) $4.99/six
Anchor (Steam, Liberty Ale, Porter) $6.99/six
Lowell Brewing Co. Still Gin, Amber Ale & Lager $5.49/six
Frangelico 750 ml $14.99
Roman Sambuca 750ml $16.49
Cuervo Gold 750 ml $12.99
Ron Virgin Rum 1 liter $6.99
Absolut 750 ml $12.99
Open M-Sat 9am - 11pm
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt. 9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E
VISA – MASTERCARD – DISCOVER Accepted

Northwestern
Summer Session '95
Made in the shade.
It's not always possible to do everything you'd like to do. Too many interests, too few hours in the day, too few weeks in the term. Fortunately, Northwestern's Summer Session gives you a chance to catch up, or get ahead of the game. You can earn a full year's credit in chemistry, physics, or a language in eight or nine weeks. After a summer at Northwestern you'll have it made—in the shade.
Noteworthy in '95: Field schools in archaeology, environmental studies, ethnography, and urban studies and a six-week program in Prague.
For more information, please call 1-800-FINDS NU.
For a free copy of the Summer Session '95 catalog call 1-800-FINDS-NU. (In Illinois call 708-491-5293) fax your request to 708-491-5641 e-mail your request to summer95@nwu.edu or mail this coupon to Summer Session '95, 2115 North Campus Drive, Suite 162, Evanston, Illinois 60208-2610
Send the catalog to: ☐ my home ☐ my school
Name
School/Address
City State Zip
Home Address
City State Zip

EATING DISORDERS
A FIVE COLLEGE FILM SERIES • ALL SHOWINGS AT 7:30 PM
MARCH
Tuesday, 7: "Still Killing Us Softly." Jean Kilbourne video examining how advertising portrays women. Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Room 162.
Tuesday, 28: "Famine Within." Documentary film addressing the socio-cultural forces that impact women's obsessions with their bodies and weight. Hooker Auditorium, Mount Holyoke.
APRIL
Tuesday, 4: "Life is Sweet." Comedy focusing on an enduring couple and their iconoclastic twin daughters- one of whom suffers from anorexia and extreme self-loathing. Smith College, Seelye 106.
Wednesday, 5: "Life is Sweet." Campus Center, Front Room, Amherst College (See Apr. 4)
Thursday, 13: "Eating." Serious comedy about women talking about food, bodies, each other and life." Women's Center, Enfield House, Hampshire College.
Wednesday, 19: "Pack of Lies." Jean Kilbourne video examining advertising of the tobacco industry, including the connection between smoking and thinness. Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Room 162.
Sponsored by the Five College Eating Disorders Committee. For additional information call 542-2760.

Keillor brings old–fashioned radio to FAC

By Marni E. Helfner
Collegian Staff

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Robin and Linda Williams are to perform Friday as part of "A Prairie Home Companion."

Middle America is coming to the Fine Arts Center. It's coming in the form of Lake Wobegon's lovable and well-known Garrison Keillor with a live performance of "A Prairie Home Companion."

Keillor and his live two-hour radio variety show will be playing in the Fine Arts Center on March 4 as part of their national tour, which includes shows from New York to Tennessee to Baton Rouge to the University of Massachusetts.

The show will be airing live at 6 p.m. from the UMass Fine Arts Center. Produced by Minnesota Public Radio and distributed by Public Radio International, "A Prairie Home Companion" is heard live across the United States. Regularly heard on WFCR 88.5FM, the radio show is a favorite of New Englanders.

The show features comedy sketches, musical pieces, special guests and of course Keillor's "The News from Lake Wobegon." With vivid stories, anecdotes and tales of adventure, Keillor will weave the beautiful, tender and often funny tales of Wobegon, Minn., where all the men are good-looking, all the women are strong, and all the children are above average. Saturday's show will feature The Hopeful Gospel Quartet as the special guest.

The Quartet includes Kate MacKenzie, Robin and Linda Williams and Garrison Keillor. The group has recorded a live album at Carnegie Hall, performed in Scotland, Denmark and on PBS' "Austin City Limits." MacKenzie has recorded six bluegrass albums with Stoney Lonesome and has released her solo album, Let Them Talk.

The Williams' have been performing on "A Prairie Home Companion" since 1976, and are regarded as some of the finest songwriters in the folk-country genre. In addition to several albums under their belt, the Williams' songs can be heard on Mary-Chapin Carpenter and Iris DeMent's albums.

Keillor, creator of "A Prairie Home Companion," was inspired by an article he wrote about The Grand Ole Opry and decided to create a live variety show for radio. During the first 13 years, the radio show received a George Foster Peabody Award, an Edward R. Murrow Award and a medal from the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

"A Prairie Home Companion" ended in 1987 and Keillor moved to New York where he started "The American Radio Company," which was also a sell-out show. Keillor restored the original name in 1993, in order to retain its name recognition and to return to the Midwestern roots of the 2 million listeners across 325 public radio stations nationwide.

Keillor also hosts "The Writer's Almanac," a daily poetry program for morning newscast. In addition, Keillor has written several "A Prairie Home Companion"-themed books including: We are Still Married, Happy to be Here, Lake Wobegon Days, Leaving Home and The Book of Guys. The list of accolades continues with a Grammy for a recording of Lake Wobegon Days, two cable ACE awards for TV, a Peabody for "A Prairie Home Companion" and an induction into the Radio Hall of Fame at the Museum of Broadcast Communications.

The show will benefit WFCR and the Fine Arts Center.

"A Prairie Home Companion" will begin at 6 p.m. March 4 at the Fine Arts Center. Call the FAC box office at 545- 2511 for more information.

COURTESY JONETTE NOVAK

Garrison Keillor will headline "A Prairie Home Companion" at the Fine Arts Center.

New book focuses on the best of "BAD" TV

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — First of all, dear viewer, you must be clear on the distinction between "bad" and "BAD."

According to Craig Nelson, "bad," at least when applied to TV shows, is that which is boring and stupid and crying for clicker-oblivion.

On the other hand, BAD television (that's all caps, gentle viewer!) is a joy forever.

At least it is for Nelson, who cared enough to watch the very worst compiling The Very Best of the Very Worst of BAD TV ($9.95; Delta Trade Paperbacks).

What he ended up with is a funny read, a rigorously researched reference, and a shrewd celebration of human folly by people who brought you BAD TV like "Where's Everett?" (1966; Alan Alda and Patricia Smith adopt a baby who's not only from another planet but invisible).

The book's first section is "BAD Classics Hall of Fame," whose dozens of entries include "The Brady Bunch," "Mod Squad" and "Lost in Space."

Then Nelson moves on to his self-styled "Tammi Awards," named in honor of that great symbol of waste, Three Mile Island.

For each television genre (sitcoms, variety shows, even kid shows, infomercials and made-for-TV movies), Nelson confers from one to six Tammies on such deserving BAD TV as "She's the Sheriff," "Lancelot Link, Secret Chimp," "It Pays to be Stupid," "The Brady Bunch Variety Hour," the long-ago "Studs' Place" (1949), and then his most recent inclusion, "Late Night with Conan O'Brien."

Along the way, Nelson devotes a chapter to BAD things that happen to good (TV) people. "Life with Lucy" (1986's painfully short-lived return to sitcoms by a septuagenarian Lucille Ball) and "David Cassidy — Man Undercover" pratfall into this category.

Another chapter, "Curses!," plumbs certain mysteries of the BAD-TV universe, pondering, for instance, why Tim Conway could never make it as a series star (and darnit, did he ever try, try, try!).

Meanwhile, this book is a virtual "Poor Richard's Almanac" of BAD-TV maxims. Check out these words to live by:

• If you're a cop, it may be more trouble than it's worth to have a partner who's from another planet.

• If you're married to, best friends with, or next-door neighbors of your polar opposite, it'll be a living hell for you, but a laughriot for your friends.

And, of course:

• If your life is dull, buy a chimpanzee.

The idea for "BAD TV" came to Nelson in, aptly enough, a vision.

"With the coming 500-channel world of television, there will be more and more room for horrible shows," Nelson reasons. "I saw the need for a guide to all of them."

Thus did he set forth on his vision quest.

By day a just-turned-40 editor who specializes in pop-culture books, this unabashed fan of television devoted his after-hours to compiling lists, tracking down shows and screening his BAD contenders.

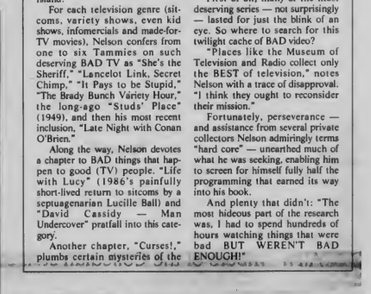
Don't think it was easy.

First of all, many of the most deserving series — not surprisingly — lasted for just the blink of an eye. So where to search for this twilight cache of BAD video?

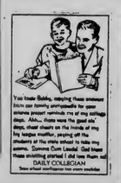
"Places like the Museum of Television and Radio collect only the BEST of television," notes Nelson with a trace of disapproval. "I think they ought to reconsider their mission."

Fortunately, perseverance — and assistance from several private collectors Nelson admiringly terms "hard core" — unearthed much of what he was seeking, enabling him to screen for himself fully half the programming that earned its way into his book.

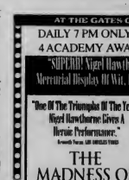
And plenty that didn't: "The most hideous part of the research was, I had to spend hundreds of hours watching things that were bad BUT WEREN'T BAD ENOUGH!"



Collegian Graphics
We're Up All Night
putting together New England's oldest daily college newspaper



AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
DAILY 7 PM ONLY!/Ends THUR. Mar. 9
4 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
"SUPERB! Nigel Hawthorne Gives A Stunningly Mercurial Display Of Wit, Pathos And Fiery Emotion."
"One Of The Triumphs Of The Year! Nigel Hawthorne Gives A Heroic Performance."
THE MADNESS OF KING GEORGE
ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON
584-8433



AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, March 1,2,3
Open house at the North Fire Station, March 3 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

When Appearance Counts, Count on Jonathon Reid
for a great selection of men's suits
for professional service and attention to detail
Suit Sale, 40% Off or More!
Jonathan Reid
The Men's Store
Hampshire Mall

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, MARCH 17
GRANTS FOR:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information:
Campus Activities
Office Student Union
or
the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692
March On Down to Scotts For These Great Savings!!
COORS EXTRA GOLD 30 pack cans $12.99 +dep
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 24-12oz cans $9.99 +dep
BUSCH 1/2 Kegs $34.99
CHECK OUT OUR 5 FOR $5 SELECTION
ICEHOUSE 24 - 12oz bottles or cans $12.99 +dep
STROHS & STROHS LIGHT 15 pack cans $5.99 +dep
BACARDI RUM 750 ml $7.99
POPOV VODKA 1.75 liter $10.49
GALLO WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 liter $4.99
MasterCard VISA DISCOVER
Tele-Check for your personal check
We Want To Be Your Favorite Liquor Store !
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games

Live Music
• Wednesday • GAY NIGHT MUSIC BY SPIN, INC.
• Thursday • 18+ DANCE PARTY HOSTED BY WHMP'S NICK DANGER The Area's Biggest Dance Party Music by Spin, Inc.
• Friday • RETRO NIGHT Dance Music From the Late 70's & Early 80's with DJ Dennis 9:00pm - 1:00am FREE admission with this ad
• Saturday • ALL NEW/ ALL REQUEST TOP 40 DANCE PARTY WITH DI DAVE SATURDAY NIGHT DINNER & DANCE PROMOTION - Dine anywhere in Northampton on Saturday Night, bring your receipt, and receive Free Admission to the Dance Club. Limousine service courtesy of Michaels Limousine of Chicopee. 533-8470
LIVE MUSIC
Thur., March 2 - 8:30 pm/18+ Reggae Dance Party, SISTER CAROL Loose Caboose
Fri., March 3 - 8:30 pm/18+ Record Release Party, SYNAESTHESIA Fossil
Sat., Mar. 4 - 8:30pm Led Zeppelin Tribute, PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
Thur., Mar. 9 - 7:30pm Final Show SLOW POKE Gratitude / Product
Fri., Mar. 10 - 9:00pm ART STEELE BLUES BAND
Sat., Mar. 11 - 8:30pm Tribute to The Doors RIDERS ON THE STORM
Tues., Mar. 14 - 8:00pm /18+/ AQUARIUM RESCUE UNIT Milo Z
Thurs., Mar. 16 - 8:30pm /18+/ CHUCKLEHEAD
Fri., Mar. 17 - 8:30pm St. Patricks Day THE BIG BAD BOLLOCKS
Sat. Mar. 18 - 8:30pm ROOMFUL OF BLUES
Thurs., Mar. 23 - 8:30pm BLACK 47
Sat., Mar. 25 - 8:30pm GRAHAM PARKER & The Episodes
Mon., April 3 - 8:00pm/18+ WIDESPREAD PANIC
Coming...
3/24 Doom Nation/All Ages
4/7 Leftover Salmon/18+
4/10 Junior Wells
4/13 From Good Homes/18+
5/7 Tish Hinojosa's Border Tour
5/12 Marcia Parker
5/13 Ferron
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office: 586-8686, For The Record in Amherst 10 Pearl Street Northampton 584-7771

5 College astronomy ranked top ten

Valley astronomy program helps fulfill students' requirements

By Annie Kelley
Collegian Correspondent

The Five College Astronomy Program has recently been placed among the top ten university astronomy programs in the United States.

The specialized science program, spread out among the five colleges, allows students to fulfill their requirements by taking astronomy-related courses at each of the institutions, according to Stephen Strom, chairman of the Five College Astronomy Program.

Currently 20,000 students are involved in the astronomy program, Strom said.

The participating schools are the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Smith College, Amherst College, Hampshire College and Mount Holyoke College.

The Institute of Science Information (II) has ranked the Five College Program fourth in the nation, according to Chrism King, editor of Science Watch. II is a database group that collects scientific data.

To rank the top 100 federally funded universities in the United States, II counts how many times a particular author was cited from 1981–1993, said King.

"This method is effective because there is no alumna satisfaction," King said. "With the citation method, scientists chose the citation. It is more objective."

One of the program's many research projects includes a joint venture with Mexico to put two large infrared telescopes in each hemisphere.

The astronomy program also is doing some of its most important research out of the Five College Radio Observatory.

The observatory currently houses the millimeter wave telescope, which is the instrument of choice for molecular clouds, according to Lori Allen, a graduate student in astronomy. These molecular clouds are the beginnings of star formation.

It is because of this research that Allen came to UMass to do her graduate studies, she said.

The high ranking of the department is a result of top-notch faculty and the work being done with star formations, Allen said.

"I think it [the ranking] demonstrates the research that is being done in this department is being referenced by a large part of the astronomical field," Allen said.

Michael Myers, an astronomy graduate student, said he also came to the University to study with the department.

The strongest part of the astronomy program is the instruction and time spent by teachers actually teaching instead of doing research, Myers said.

It is this aspect of the program that is being enhanced, Strom said. The department hopes to improve teaching and particularly the theory program.

Strom said he would like to use astronomy to incite the imagination of those who are not otherwise interested and make science courses more informative.

"We are well poised to sustain excellence," Strom said. "We have been building in the past years and are ready to move up in the league."

He said the astronomy department is "building on the strength of 20 years of intellectual focus."

■ SGA

continued from page 1

This year is a crucial time to ensure a valuable and affordable education, said Senator Lynn Robitaille.

There are 180,000 higher education students in Massachusetts, according to Chambers, and students have the potential to become the largest voting bloc in the state.

"The only thing standing between you and another tuition and fee increase is registering and voting," Chambers said.

According to Chambers the organization is currently made up of approximately 15 to 20 members and anyone can join.

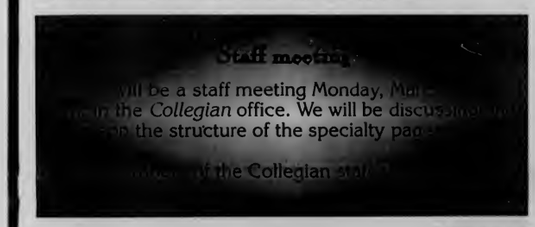
"We will make an effort to reach out to every student, to make sure they understand and encourage them to register," he said.

Single sex housing space was also deemed unfair by the senate Wednesday evening.

The senate voted for the Housing Assignments Office to create a policy that the amount of single sex spaces be decided by the number of students who choose single sex housing.

"It is not the moral obligation of the University to force someone into single sex housing," said Senator Peter Luongo, who presented the motion.

According to the motion, there are 1,573 students presently in single sex housing, "forcing 755 students into single sex housing against their will."



Staff meeting
will be a staff meeting Monday, Ma in the Collegian office. We will be discu on the structure of the specialty pa of the Collegian sta

President cuts back nuclear supply

By Donald M. Rothbert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Wednesday he has ordered 200 tons of radioactive material — "enough for thousands of nuclear weapons" — permanently withdrawn from the U.S. nuclear stockpile.

Clinton made the announcement in a speech in which he also portrayed foreign policy differences with the Republican majority in Congress as a struggle between those who want to continue U.S. leadership and "those who advocate a new American isolationism."

"The new isolationists are wrong," Clinton told a forum sponsored by the Nixon Center for Peace and Freedom.

Republican leaders preceded him, and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole criticized the administration for "misguided devotion" to Russia and what he called a failed policy in Bosnia and mistakes in dealing with Iraq and North Korea.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.), said "my commitment to the international causes of freedom is pretty overwhelming." The speaker noted that he led the fight for Republican votes for the North American Free Trade Act and GATT, and said, "I'm always curious when there is some presumption we are in any isolationist."

"Don't misunderstand a willingness to question everything for a willingness to abandon anything," said Gingrich.

Clinton said the United States has no international goal more important than continuing its decades-long struggle to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

He said to further demonstrate U.S. commitment to the goals of the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, "today I have ordered that 200 tons of fissile material — enough for thousands of nuclear weapons — be permanently withdrawn from the U.S. nuclear stockpile."

"It will never be used again to build a nuclear weapon," Clinton said.

Dole accused the administration of "timidity" for not threatening to veto any U.N. effort to lift economic sanctions against Iraq.

Anthony Lake, White House national security adviser, countered that Dole's criticism was "unfounded on the facts." He said U.N. Ambassador Madeleine Albright had told other governments that Clinton would veto such a resolution.

Legislation passed two weeks ago by the House that would cut back U.S. support for U.N. peacekeeping activities has been attacked by the administration as isolationist and likely to destroy the United Nations as a tool for dealing with trouble spots around the world.

Clinton said the legislation would "deny resources to peacekeepers and even to our troops and squander them on Star Wars," the space-based missile defense system first proposed by President Reagan.

He said the approach would "weaken America. We must not let the ripple of isolationism they have generated build into a tidal wave. If we withdraw from the world today, we will have to contend with the consequences of our neglect tomorrow."

UMass receives grant for microscopes

By Rana Meyer
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts polymer science department has received $1,355,000 to purchase three new microscopes which use beams of electrons rather than light to form images.

The W.M. Keck Foundation, one of the nation's largest distributor of grants, has given the University of Massachusetts $550,000 for the purchase of a new electron microscope, according to Samuel Gido, assistant professor of polymer science and engineering.

The W.M. Keck foundation's primary focus is on the fields of science, engineering and medical research at colleges and universities nationwide.

The transmission electron microscope as well as two new scanning microscopes will be able to examine the molecular structure of materials, Gido said.

This will make it easier to relate these properties to their own uses. The electrons will have much higher resolution than light, so the structure of the atoms will actually be visible, Gido said.

The new instruments will be able to help people in polymer science, chemistry and physics with their research, Gido said. These instruments will also benefit graduate students and research facilities as well as undergraduates with their laboratory course work.

Internal and external funding

The National Science Foundation contributed a $245,000 grant for the two new scanning microscopes and the University contributed $260,000 to leverage the funding from this foundation.

The University also contributed $300,000 for the electron microscope. The money from the University is from specifically generated funds meant to match research grants at the University.

"The money from the University is a matching commitment to the Keck Foundation," Gido said. "This is money that was generated from research grants that were earmarked for this cause."

According to Gido, the University struck a good deal in purchasing the materials. The University purchased $2 million worth of materials for $1.3 million.

Proposal for new equipment

Carolyn Sanzone, associate director of development and director of corporate and foundation relations, was involved in writing the grant proposal for the Keck foundation.

"The proposal was a team effort with Gido, Dean of the College of Engineering Joseph Goldstein, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences Linda Slakey, and head of the department of polymer science and engineering William McKnight.

"An award from the Keck foundation is a prestigious honor," Sanzone said. "It is very competitive."

According to Sanzone, the technology for the proposal came from Gido and Goldstein and she put it into a more marketable framework.

The new microscopes will be housed in the newly-built polymer morphology laboratory in the Silvio O. Conte National Center for Polymer Research, scheduled to open in the spring or summer of 1995, according to Gido.

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Lunch and Dinner Buffet
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAY TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-8800

Extra, Extra! For the Latest Feelings on the Net E-mail coffee@net.net
SURF THE NET WITHOUT GETTING WET
THE SHOCKING NEWS FROM THE EDGE OF CYBERSPACE
INTERNET INSIDER
From the safety and comfort of your easy chair, see what has fascinated millions and held the world spellbound. The one and only INTERNET INSIDER brings the elusive postings on the Net to you — no computer necessary!
THE INTERNET INSIDER
LAUGH! Read the offbeat and hilarious musings of the info highway's resident court jesters and crackpots.
SCREAM! Marvel at the strange and bizarre rituals and shocking customs of the world's first "virtual society."
CRY! Touching stories of life on the Net will warm your heart... and may even change your life forever.
BY RUFFIN PREVOST
$14.95, U.S.A.
ISBN: 0 07 882084-7
300 PAGES, ILLUSTRATED
A QUALITY PAPERBACK
THE INTERNET'S FIRST AND ONLY TATTLE-TALE TAPLOID BRINGS YOU ALL THE SHOCKING DETAILS.
Available at Fine Book and Computer Stores or Call 1-800-822-8158 Any Time. Use Your Visa, American Express, Discover, or MasterCard.
OSBORNE
Key=OP350L

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst presents
CROSSWORLDS
Maya Angelou & Elie Wiesel
IN CONVERSATION
Tuesday, March 28, 1995
7:30 pm, Mullins Center
Tickets are: General Public $20/$15/ $10. Students-$5
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office.
All TicketMaster Locations or charge by phone at (413) 733-2500
This event made possible in part by Bonducci's and Barnes & Noble
Arrangements for Elie Wiesel made through the Harry Walker Agency, New York.

4 SEASONS
VISA MASTERCARD
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • KEGS • BEER • ICE
RED WOLF 24-12 OZ BOTTS. $12.99 +Dep
ARTIC ICE & LT. ICE 24-12 OZ. BOTTS. $12.99 +Dep
ICEHOUSE 24-12 OZ. BOTTS. $12.99 +Dep
BUSCH & LT 24-12 OZ BAR BOTT. $9.99 +Dep
MEISTERBRAU & LT. 24-12OZ CANS $7.89 +Dep
AMERICAN 24-12 oz cans $7.29 +Dep
10+ CASE! BEER DISCOUNTS
Keg of the Week BUD LT. $36.99 +Dep
1/2 KEG NATURAL LT $32.99 +Dep
1/2 KEG RED DOG $39.99 +Dep
1/2 KEG ICEHOUSE $39.99 +Dep
1/2 KEG MICH. & LT. $39.99 +Dep
1/2 KEG LITE ICE $39.99 +Dep
1/2 KEG ROLLING ROCK $44.99 +Dep
JIM BEAM $13.49 1.75 l
4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75 L
POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75 L
ICE! 100lbs...$9.99 10lbs...$1.99 50lbs...$5.99
YAGERMEISTER $7.99 .375 ml
PEPPERMINT SCHNAPPS $3.99 1.0 l
PEACH SCHNAPPS $3.99 1.0 l
BUD DRY 24-12 OZ BOTTS. $10.99 +Dep
COORS EX. GOLD 24-12 OZ BOTTS. $10.99 +Dep
M.G.D. & LT. 24-12 OZ BOTTS. $10.99 +Dep
We Deliver! 584-8174 "Off Campus"
KEYSTONE & LT. 24-12 OZ CANS $8.49 +Dep
NATURAL LT. 24-12 OZ CANS $8.49 +Dep
MILWAUKEE'S BEST 24-12 OZ CANS $8.49 +Dep

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Sophomore Beth Kuzmeski dished out six assists in last night's win over St. Joseph's.

■ Hawks

continued from page 14

tum, as well as their biggest lead of the game at 51–43 with just over two minutes to go in the contest.

"I just tried to go to the basket and get the ball in," said Thomas. "I was trying to create my own shots tonight."

The Hawks, who were led by Maureen Costello's 10 points, would not die, however, and when sophomore Amy Facer (nine points on the night) sunk two free throws, the UMass lead was down to three, 52–49, with 1:30 remaining.

"We got a little tired," said O'Brien, who swiftly called a timeout. "We just needed to get ourselves together."

The Minutewomen came out of the timeout and responded, scoring the last three points on free throws and holding the Hawks without a basket.

The Minutewomen will travel down to St. Joseph's Mar. 8 for the first round of the Atlantic 10 tournament.

UMass will try to advance past the second round of the tournament for the first time.

"They [UMass] are one of the best teams we've played this year," Gaitley said. "I think they are an NCAA team."

■ Thomas

continued from page 14

fouled, hit the shot from inside the key, and then made the free throw.

Then with 51.2 seconds left in the game, and the score 52– 49 in favor of UMass, Thomas made a great defensive stop on St. Joe's Amy Facer. Facer was driving towards the basket but was forced out of bounds at the baseline by the speedy Thomas.

"I thought Octavia came to play, obviously she came to play, [scoring] 21 points," Gaitley said.

"She had some crazy baskets. I have to credit her, she did a super job."

"Octavia was tremendous," said sophomore forward Crystal Carroll, who scored nine points. "She's playing great."

"She stepped up and made some great plays," Gurile said. "She was the difference. I was hoping she would have a great game tonight and she did."

McCloskey quits, McHale may be next

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jack McCloskey promised the Minnesota Timberwolves would win when he became the team's general manager three years ago. He never said how much.

McCloskey, who built back-to-back NBA championship teams in Detroit before coming to the Wolves in 1992, announced Tuesday he will retire at the end of the season.

Assistant general manager Kevin McHale, a Hibbing native and former University of Minnesota and Boston Celtics star, is considered the likely successor. But McHale told Twin Cities media he isn't sure he wants the job.

* * *

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Unbeaten Oscar De La Hoya will face Rafael Ruelas in a lightweight unification bout May 6 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

De La Hoya, 17-0 with 15 knockouts, is the WBO champion. Ruelas, 43-1 with 34 knockouts, is the IBF titleholder.

"This fight between two young Los Angeles fighters is the most appealing match since Danny Lopez and Bobby Chacon fought in 1974," promoter Bob Arum said Tuesday. "This will be the first time in the lightweight division that both fighters' purses will exceed $1.5 million."

* * *

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Will Sterling Sharpe play again in the NFL?

Nobody knows. But if he does, it won't be for the Green Bay Packers.

General manager Ron Wolf announced Sharpe's release Tuesday, saying it's too risky to expect the Packers' leading receiver the past seven seasons to play pro football after the spinal-fusion neck surgery he underwent Feb. 3.

"We regret that the Packers' association with Sterling Sharpe has come to an end," Wolf said.

The decision gives the Packers relief under the NFL's salary cap when they find a replacement for Sharpe, Green Bay's career leader in pass receptions.

It gives the 29-year-old Sharpe the chance to sign on with another team willing to pay more than the $200,000 the Packers offered him for this year, in hope he can return in 1996.

And it leaves quarterback Brett Favre without his favorite target.

Out of Sharpe's 29 100-yard receiving days, 19 have come in tandem with Favre, the team's starting quarterback since four games into the 1992 season.

* * *

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Dexter Rogers had 26 kills as the United States volleyball team beat Canada 15-11, 15-13, 15-11 on Tuesday night.

"I got a lot of swings at the ball tonight," Rogers said. "It's nice to get that many, but my arm is really sore now. Tom Sorensen added 17 kills, three blocks and one service winner for the United States, which improved to 4-0 against Canada in its five-match Stars and Spikes Tour. The series concludes tonight in Cedar City, Utah.

* * *

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An investment adviser who failed to buy the Pittsburgh Pirates last fall is contemplating another bid.

Kevin Vaughn, chief executive officer of Sterling Acquisitions, told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette on Tuesday that he is assembling a group of investors and has talked with officials of Wertheim Schroeder, the New York investment bank handling the Pirates' sale.

* * *

QUEBEC (AP) — The Quebec Nordiques sent defenseman David Karpa to the Los Angeles Kings on Tuesday for a fourth-round pick in the 1995 draft.

Karpa, 24, who also plays right wing, failed to score in two games with Quebec this season. He had five goals and 13 assists in 78 games in four seasons with the Nordiques.

Quebec also recalled right wing Dwayne Norris [brother of Warren Norris from the UMass hokey team] and defenseman Jon Klemm from Cornwall of the American Hockey League.

■ NHL

continued from page12

But Millen? I guess Stars management believes Millen was constrained by New Jersey's grinding system, but Millen is no Kirk Muller, who disproved the theory by only marginally increasing his scoring upon arriving in Montreal.

Now the Stars are fuming over the less-than-promised lease they've been offered by the city of Dallas. Maybe Minnesota would make a better offer if the Stars would bring back Broten.

Even though it's a short trip from Cornwall to Quebec City, Dwayne Norris has still logged many miles on that route. Returned to the Aces by the Nordiques only last week, the parent club recalled the talented winger yesterday.

Buffalo, Calgary, and Ottawa have made major goaltending shifts in the past year. You'd think that might leave some playing time for the backups. Wrong. The Sabres' Robb Stauber, the Flames' Jason Muzzatti and the Senators' Mike Bales (whose Bruins career amounted to one 20 minute period) have played a combined 29 minutes this season.

Rotisserie gems: Stu Barnes, Petr Klima, Pat Flatley.

Since our campus lies equidistant from New England's two largest cities. I'm going to devote some deserved attention to the Insurance Land entry, the other team in the region, the Hartford Whalers.

My colleague thinks he's pretty funny when he calls them the "Usually closer to .300" Whalers. Well, they're better than that (7–9–3 before hosting the Rangers last night) and they're the only club below the median that has scored more goals than allowed.

It seems that every team now has a first-rate goaltender, but Hartford's is a proven star in the midst of a second prime: Sean Burke. Burke's numbers are phenomenal (7–6– 1, 2.18 Goals against average, .930 save ratio) and he's seeing a lot of shots in this age of offensive anemia: an average of 31 per contest. The Vezina Trophy will likely go to the No. 1 goalie on a big-winning team (Pittsburgh's Ken Wregget or Detroit's Chris Osgood have staked early claims), but to this point Burke deserves it.

Speaking of diseases afflicting goalscoring, the surest symptom reared its ugly head Tuesday night: the scoreless tie. In 65 minutes, neither the Rangers nor the Panthers lit the lamp. It's gotta be the goalies, right?

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

■ recruits

continued from page 14

ning for some big people as well. With Lou Roe graduating and the potential defection of Marcus Camby to the NBA, UMass' frontcourt could need to reload as well.

While Camby has said publicly that he is planning to remain in school, many experts believe the rookie salary cap which is expected to be implemented, may influence some top players to come out early to avoid its restrictions.

Isiah Epps, a highly touted prospect from South Carolina, that is playing for Maine Central Institute this season appears to be high on UMass' wish list.

At 6–foot–9, he is well suited for the power forward spot and could also see some time at center.

Terrence Christie, a 6–foot–7–inch power forward, of Watkinson High School (Conn.), also has UMass among his list of finalists but is reportedly leaning toward University of Miami.

* * *

Even the always fickle Mark Blount, whom mutually cut ties with UMass after verbally committing, is reportedly interested in UMass again, sources say a reconciliation between the two parties is very unlikely.

The next signing period begins on April 15.

Do you like movies, television, music, concerts, artwork, photographs, magazines, books and just about anything in the world?

Well, it's done! Pete B. Loving, somethere that you could find use of for! For free. Or, even better, that's always looking for interesting people to work with. Like you. Why not stop by and see if you can't find a way to get involved. Call 545-3500 or stop by the Collegian office in the basement of the Student Union.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $122 $244
PARIS $199 $398
AMSTERDAM $201 $402
SAN JOSE COSTA RICA $238 $476
TOKYO $774
Scheduled flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Email/passes Available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs-immigration taxes apply.
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Mike's Westview Cafe
SPECIALS OF THE WEEK

Jagermeister Shots	$ 2.25
Busch Bottles	$ 1.25
MGD Bottles	$ 1.50
Miller Lite Ice Bottles	$ 1.50

Thursday is Jagermeister Night!
Come meet the Jagermeister GIRLS!
FREE Hats & T-shirts
Friday Night Dinner Buffet for $1.00

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

ALANA Christine Alliance presents a heritage multi-gospel concert/a cappella/ Sunday March 5, 1995 Campus Center auditorium featuring a live college mass choir. If you would like to sing with the mass choir for this one time event contact Chuck 5-0950 ASAP.

Open rush IGU. Come see what we're all about. Wed 3/1 sundaes, Thurs 3/2 pizza, Fri 3/3 mystery nite. 6:30-7:30pm 406 N. Pleasant St. Call 549-0743 for more info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext 1501

Learn to bartend with Univbarity Bartending. Get certified for 1/2 the price of other school's night here in Amherst! Classes start Mon March 6th at 7:00pm. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Mazda RX-7 94K, 5 spd, brs, sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500. Call 253-3149

Ford Escort 1984 blue 77,000 miles Good little cars. Good condition asking for 550.00 or b.o. Call 549-7197

Ford Tempo 1984 light blue (automatic) 58,000 miles only. Runs like new. Excellent condition. Asking for $2300 or b.o. Call Ilias at 549-8133

Mustang GT 1988 Beautiful shape, stereo, sunroof, 5 spd, burgandy, loaded 7995 Call Aaron 548-4327

ENTERTAINMENT

Hey dot't you know Meyer is playing. Here's when March 3 that's Friday, Marsh House, Amherst College Mardi Gras This is good stuff!

If you are a stand-up comic, juggler, mime, poet, etc. and want to put on a show just for fun with the UMass Juggling Club call Harry 546-4189

There is a band in the area that will rock your party, and destroy your house (optional) Call 545-1954 or 584-8097

FOR RENT

Cape Cod Group Summer rentals waterfront houses Falmouth area. 508 477-5000

Cape Cod seasonal rentals. 1/5 bedroom houses in all towns. Rentals rates Haves Spence 508-394-2857 or 398-0367

Room available in spacious home 1 block from campus Call Heather 549-1463

Two rooms available! 230+ a month Off rt 9 Amherst. Killer house w/ yards, on bike path + bus route. Right near Stop + Shop. Sorry, no phone yet call 546-0884 leave name + number with Tim

FOR SALE

92 K2 Extremes Tyr 490 bindings w/bag. Used 2X. perf cond. 500obr Rich 665-2986

Alpine 7517 9M model, full topic, detachface, dolby $175 Alpine 6046ED component spkr set 4" mids, 1" dome tweeters, $100 Kenwood KAC 624 amp 80 W/C, 160 W/1 Ω95 Alpine 3521 amp 18W/4, $30 Magnavox 4 head VCR HQ, unified remote, $140 Call 253-3149

Brother word processor w/monitor. Barely used 253-9405

Kegerator 500/bo Rich 665-2986

Macintosh computer. Complete system including printer only $599! Call Chris at 800-289-5685

Printer ink cord dot matrix $150/bo Great deal! Call Jennifer 8-2985

286+386 computer system CPU monitor keyboard $225 Steve 549-5181

Save $63. U.S. Air anywhere to March 28 $173 value for $110. Fran 549-4015

Tom Petty tix Albany March 21 14th row center. Good prices great seats Call now 584-8282

FOUND

Found a German grammar book Herter 224 2/8. Call Linda 5-9829

Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn. Swipe key on Ralph Lauren key Chain. Call Bill at 6-0254

GARRISON KEILLOR TICKETS

To holders of some, if you change your plans for Sat nights 3/4 and cannot go, before you give away your tickets, call me. I'll pay ew/xx face value for your 2 tickets! Call DAve (413) 736-7472

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol Credit available. Casa Box 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512-416-5991

HELP WANTED

Animal sciance majors work on Cape Cod. Day camp in North Falmouth area has two openings for camp counselors to teach children about small pets or horses. Prefer college students enrolled in animal science or other related programs. Room and board possible. Contact Ed Powers, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, MA 02117 (617) 426-9170, or visit table during UMass Camp Day, March 7th

Camp Canadensis Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Looking for caring counselors to help teach all land and water sports, arts, bikes, motorcycles, arts + crafts, climbing, well, rioes course, radio, newspaper, waterskiing, jet skiing, and much more. Summer season 6/20/95 thru 8/18/95. Call 800-832-8278 for an application.

Camp counselors for underprivileged children. If this sounds interesting and you would like to work with 8-12 year old boys and girls, visit us in the Student Union Ballroom, Camp Day, March 7th Channel 3 Country Camp

Counselors wanted. Trim down-fitness, co-ed, NYS cmp. 100 positions sports, crafts, many others! Camp Shane, Ferndale, NY 12734 (914) 271-4141

Cruise ships hiring. Earn up to $1000 +/month! World travel! Seasonal + full time positions. No exp. necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50014

Dancers wanted No experience necessary. Earn $1000-$1500 per week 532 1422

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod. Call Holly at 349-8352

Part time marketing/sales Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 295-5490 after 2 p.m.

Real estate sales Part time now, full time this summer. License class starting soon, call Kathy Bryanski 584-5565

Summer camp on Cape Cod. Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids! Beautiful location, excellent program, competitive salaries. Call Rob at 549-8417 for info and application

Summer jobs for the environment Earn $2500-$3500 and free the planet! Campaign to save endangered species, promote recycling and stop polluters. Work with environmental groups like PIRGs, Sierra Club, Green Corps. Positions in 33 states + D.C. Campus interviews March 6,7 8th Call Jenna 1-800-75 EARTH

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000 - $4,000+/mo. Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or so Korea. No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Boston to Beverly on weekends. Ges $ 253-2808

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted 258.00/month. Behind Baybank on bus route. Call Kristen 549-3982

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo, Florida Spring Break. Earn 2 credits. Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm. 1-800-282-0977 Project Dive

SERVICES

Modem users! Call the Playground BBS. 256-8085, 19.2 K bps. 130 mega online + CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE, Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

Scholarship money is available! I can help you locate and receive it. Call for details 617-782-8375

You take your writing seriously and so do we. Fo more information about quality editing by e-mail, write to Editing Transnational at etcthemail@aol.com

SUBLET

3 international students looking for a place to stay during Spring Break. Willing to sublet or share apartment. Please contact Kokri546 5878 or Nic (546 3986)

TRAVEL

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 6 days $219! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $429! Panama City $129! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $159! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break. Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more. Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Data entry and word processing. Reliable and fast. Call Andy 586-0978

WANTED

Old Cabbage Patch Kids from the 80's Call Heidi 546-1391

The sisters of SDT would like to welcome our new ribbonettes Megan, Amy, Danielle, Suzanne, Sheri, Leigh, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julie, Terri, Samantha, Kim B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lea

Timmy, I hope you get your cast off soon so you can come to my window because I'll be the only one. Love, C

Classified Advertising Submission

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

(Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (In the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto for Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Wrod Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

REGARDING PERSONALS
1. All personals MUST be presented by Collegian classified employees before payment is acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

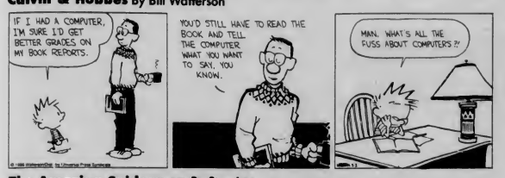
ADVERTISING COPY

1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply - Cost figured on each line of form used

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



IF I HAD A COMPUTER, I'M SURE I'D GET BETTER GRADES ON MY BOOK REPORTS.
YOU'D STILL HAVE TO READ THE BOOK AND TELL THE COMPUTER WHAT YOU WANT TO SAY, YOU KNOW.
MAN, WHAT'S ALL THE FUSS ABOUT COMPUTERS?!

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

IT'S ALMOST TIME TO LEAVE FOR THE CIRCUS.
BRRRRRING!
THE PHONE!
OH, OKAY, I'LL TELL HIM.
WE GO TO CONNECTICUT TONIGHT INSTEAD OF NEW JERSEY!
I DON'T GET IT! WHY WOULD THEY SWITCH TOWNS?

Jim's Journal By Jim

I slept in late again today.
I just really felt like sleeping.
Normally that feeling wears off during the day.
But today I felt tired all day.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

I'M A COP UNDERCOVER THINGS YOUR HANDSIAH UP'AH.
PISS OFF DRUNK. THAT'S A FELONY! CARPAST, NOT A BADGE BESIDES, ONE PUNCH LEBURNED YOUR LITTLE FRIEND I THINK.
BLIMEY! WHAT THE HELL ARE YOU DOING WITH A COMPACT?

Dilbert By Scott Adams

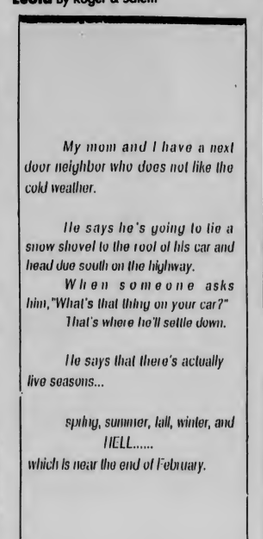
WE'RE ANNOUNCING TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR EMPLOYEES
THE FIRST IS A NEW DIGNITY ENHANCEMENT PROGRAM AND THE SECOND IS OUR NEW RANDOM DRUG TESTING INITIATIVE
THE CLUE METER IS READING ZERO
YOU EACH GET A HANDSOME COFFEE MUG AS PART OF THE KICK-OFF

Random Acts By Jeffrey Durand

DEAN By edwin

HMM... WHY WOULD I WANT TO GO THERE?
YOU SHOULD JUMP IN THERE.
YOU'RE A FRUIT FOR EVEN WONDERING!
I DON'T KNOW, I JUST WONDERED WHERE IT WENT.
CHRISTMAS!
GREAT, SUNDAY! I KNOW WHERE!

Leold By Roger & Salem



Close to Home By John McPherson

"So far we've been able to heat the entire house using nothing but junk mail."

My mom and I have a next door neighbor who does not like the cold weather.

He says he's going to tie a snow shovel to the roof of his car and head due south on the highway.

When someone asks him, "What's that thing on your car?" That's where he'll settle down.

He says that there's actually five seasons...

spring, summer, fall, winter, and HELL.....

which is near the end of February.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Darienne J. Hosley
Copy Editor.....T.J. White
Photo Technician.....Paul Bilodeau
Production Supervisor.....Sandy Bogage
Production.....Olmy Rosenstock, Dmitry Abramson, Kevin Farrar

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Ravioli/ Tomato Sauce	Roast Turkey/ Fixins'
Hamburger on a Roll	Beef Stroganoff
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
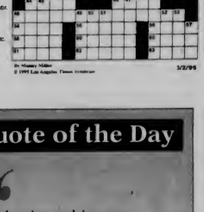
Ravioli/ Tomato Sauce	Roast Turkey/ Fixins'
Golden Burgers	Mexican Veggie Stew

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

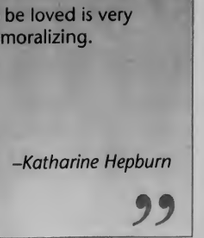
ACROSS
1 Window part
8 — mangeot
10 Rudeness
14 King Cole's fiddlers, for one
15 Hole — ace
16 Put in office
17 Part of CD
19 Detroit, with "City"
20 Yemen's capital
21 Type of yucca
23 Claire Boothe
24 Son of Aphrodite
25 Fine-feathered lens
27 "— a letter..."
30 Turnpike sign
31 Acquiescence
33 Right-angled extension
36 Bell-shaped white flower
39 Gall of sorts
40 Soft-cooked
41 East, South of the border
42 Fuss and fume
43 Part of YSL
44 First Nation member
46 Small plum
48 State flower of Connecticut
54 Gifts for the poor
55 Excessive
56 Singing brothers
58 Honshu city
59 Israeli statesman Shimon
60 French novelist André
61 Pitchers concerns: Abbr.
62 Williams' "Summer and —"
63 Relative of etc.

DOWN
1 Part of EST
2 Fleur-de-lis
3 Slip, another way
4 Place
5 Copycat
6 Winning margin at Ascot
7 Novelist Philip
8 Uppity one
9 Wife of Zeus
10 Classify
11 Game of chance
12 Bamboo sticks
13 On the double, in the OR
21 Greek letters
22 Basketmouth of a sort
25 Corn lily
26 Chelsea's dad
27 Band leader jones
28 Appear to be
29 The green-eyed monster
30 Quiller-Emes
31 Do of the 60's
32 Song or gang follower
33 Differently
34 Allows
35 Sodium hydroxide
37 Musical aggregation
38 Fuscumage
42 Special faculties
43 Homonym for ewe
44 Purple or puce
45 Cuban dance
46 Well-groomed
47 Plagiarize
48 Word with money or merry
49 Colonize
50 Bit of news
51 Ruthless Roman ruler
52 Discharge
53 Castor's mother
57 Parisian blessing

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



3/2/95



© 1995 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 3/2/95

Quote of the Day

"To be loved is very demoralizing.

–Katharine Hepburn

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Be alert to possible deceit on the part of a co–worker. You might get better financial terms if you postpone signing an agreement. A fulfilling romantic relationship is in the offing.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Get ready for travel, adventure — and perhaps a whole new life. Winning over a hot business prospect will improve the bottom line. Romance has you looking at the world through rose–colored glasses.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): A business or health matter may have you on the edge. Seek experts' help. Dwelling on slights is a waste of time. Focus your attention elsewhere. Acting on a constructive suggestion will make you a winner!

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Do not be swayed by the entreaties of a misguided loved one. Your money can be better deployed elsewhere. Capitalize on a good piece of news by sharing the details with someone in authority.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): You could be caught off–guard by a sudden financial mishap. Do not despair if you catch some flak from partner. Intuition will tell you the best way to get on someone's good side.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Business and career thames are favorably accepted today. Seize a chance to firm up an advantageous financial arrangement. An attractive newcomer will be turned off reckless behavior.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): A good morning to rush things or take unnecessary risks. Major decisions should wait until afternoon. Be careful not to go overboard when buying or selling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Try to follow a balanced schedule; giving equal attention to work and rest, business and pleasure. Tha early evening is mada for socializing. Get together with good friends and catch up on recent events.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): An out–of–season demand could boost sales for a product you handle. Rising prices put extra cash in your pocket. Try to be philosophical about developments you cannot control. Optimism is contagious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Family life becomes more fulfilling. Go to work in a positive frame of mind. Co– workers' cooparation will be easier to obtain. Larger profits depend on your ability to make special deals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Allow for the unexpected. Statistic from someone in your immediate environment could stymie a work plan. Pursue projects you can handle on your own. An evening phona call or message will boost your spirits.

PISCES (Feb. 19–Merch 20): You and your loved ones should reviaw any long–range financial plans together. Adjustments may be necassary. Presenting a balanced viewpoint will win you the respect of those you need to convince. Emphasiza mutual benefits.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday A.M.
Starting at $49.95
North Amherst Motors CARSTAR
76 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Northampton CARSTAR
161A Damon Rd., Northampton
586-4444
•Cars •Mini Vans •Trucks •Cargo Vans
•Direct Billing to Insurance Companies
•We Rent to All Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older

READINGS BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
HELPS SOLVE ALL PROBLEMS OF LIFE. HELPS YOU THROUGH YOUR GOOD AND BAD CYCLES OF LIFE. TELLS YOU LUCKY DAYS AND LUCKY MONTHS. ONE VISIT WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT SHE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL READERS YOU HAVE SEEN BEFORE.
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed.
HOURS: 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.
210 Russell Street Route 9 Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 586-6711
Walk In's are Welcome

Hunan Garden Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
Mandarin / Szechuan Cuisine
We Deliver in Amherst 5-9:30 Everyday
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 pm • Sunday Brunch 11am - 3pm
NEW ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children Under 10 $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30 - 3pm $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 chicken fingers, 2 chicken wings or hot & sour soup.
Take Out Service - Full Cocktail Menu
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Gilreath Manor Condos
on Hobart Lane
Showings Start in April for June or September Occupancy!
3 Bedroom • 1½ baths
Heated Basement
New Gas Heat and Hot Water
•1/2 mile to campus
• On Bus Route
Lincoln Real Estate • 25 N. Pleasant St • 253-7879

Sports Notice

There will be an important Collegian sports meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Collegian offices (113 Campus Center basement).

If you can't make it you must call Andrew Bryce or Matt Vautour at 545-1851.

Sports

UMass tops Hawks and keeps second place

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team is journeying down a road never before travelled.

The Minutewomen got 21 points from junior Octavia Thomas and held on to defeat St. Joseph's 55-49 last night in a hard-fought Atlantic 10 battle at the William D. Mullins Center.

Massachusetts	55
St. Joseph's	49

The victory not only tied the school record of 18 wins but secured UMass' spot as the second place team in the league — all this from a program that had never finished above fifth in the conference standings.

The Minutewomen ended the regular season 18-8, 13-3 in league play. The 13 conference wins set a team record and leaves UMass a full two games ahead of third place St. Joseph's, who saw their record slip to 19-7, 11-5 in the conference.

"This is a good springboard headed into the A-10s," said Massachusetts Coach Joanie O'Brien. "We are still hungry. We know we gave away a chance [against George Washington] to finish first. We want to do some damage [in the tournament]."

The game, which was heralded as a defensive battle, lived up to its billing from the outset as each team led by as many as, but no more than, three points in the first half. The Minutewomen lead was one, 25-24, at the break.

UMass' defense remained strong in the early going of the second half, holding St. Joe's without a basket for close to the first six minutes. Thomas' jumper capped a six-point run that put UMass up by seven, 31-24 with 14:34 remaining.

"She just stepped her game up to a new level," O'Brien said of Thomas, who had seven boards.

Any thoughts the Minutewomen had of breaking the game open were soon put to rest, however, as the Hawks stormed back to take the lead, 41-40 on two free throws from junior Kristen Sullivan with six and a half minutes left to go.

"We did a pretty good job," said St. Joseph's coach Stephanie Gaitley. "But we had some mental lapses on the defensive end."

One of those lapses helped the Minutewomen go on a 10-2 run from there, and an electrifying play that saw Thomas drive into the lane and sink the jumper plus draw the foul gave UMass the momen-

Turn to HAWKS, page 12

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Octavia Thomas was the difference last night, scoring a game-high 21 points while also grabbing seven boards.

Stellar team defense and Thomas key factors

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

One would think a game matching the top two defenses in the Atlantic 10 Conference, St. Joseph's and Massachusetts, would be a low-scoring contest, and one would think that if Octavia Thomas came to play, the Hawks would be in big trouble.

Last night's game between the top defensive team in the A-10, St. Joe's (holding opponents to 56.16 points per game), and the No. 2 defensive team, UMass (holding foes to 59.84 ppg), was indeed a low-scoring affair and the play of UMass' junior leader was indeed the difference.

After 10 minutes had gone by in the first half, the score was only 8-8, with both teams playing hard-nosed, in-your- face defense.

At the half, the score was 25-24 in favor of UMass with both teams causing numerous turnovers while swiping the ball with ease, a tribute to the great defense that was played. The Hawks caused 12 turnovers while getting five steals, and the Minutewomen caused 10 miscues and collected six steals (two steals each by the point guard tandem of Tricia Hopson and Sabriya Mitchell).

"We did a great job on defense," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said.

Melissa Gurlie drew praise from her coach for her stellar play defensively, especially in the second half.

"I know she didn't have a ton of stats [six points, five rebounds], but nobody scored on her in the second half and she was there to pick up a lot of big rebounds at the end of the game," O'Brien said.

"Both teams played great defense," Thomas said. "St. Joe's showed why they are the best."

"St. Joe's plays great defense. They're always on you," O'Brien said. "They're going to fight from start to finish. If you're not ready for 40 minutes, then they're going to come back in the game. Tonight, I thought we were ready for 40 minutes."

The Hawks pride themselves on their defense. In fact, the cover of the media guide says "National Defense," and rightfully so. Last year, the Hawks were the best among NCAA Division I schools, holding opponents to 53.9 points per game.

"Our defensive game I thought was pretty good," St. Joe's coach Stephanie Gaitley said. "I think UMass did a good job on defense also."

And the play of Thomas was key.

The All-America candidate scored 21 points and grabbed seven boards off the bench, shooting eight of 10 from the field and five of five from the line.

"Octavia came to play tonight," O'Brien said. "She picked her game up to another level."

"I just chased the ball down, created open shots for myself and my teammates. I just played hard," Thomas said.

Played hard is an understatement.

She made a key three-point play with 2:18 left when she got

Turn to THOMAS, page 12

Highly touted recruits close

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

With Mike Williams already gone, and Derek Kellogg's career drawing to a close, the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team has reportedly been recruiting some talented backcourt players to fill the void at guard next year.

The first piece to the puzzle appears to be Charlton Clark, a 6-foot-2-inch guard from the Bronx, N.Y., who is reportedly close to verbally committing to the University of Massachusetts according to sources.

Clark is currently attending St. Raymond's, the same high school Dana Dingle played for. Rich Allen, who writes for Reidel's Roundball Report, a publication that rates high school basketball players, said Clark was a talented athlete who can play either guard and possesses a good shooting range.

Clark broke his ankle during this season but is expected to be completely healthy by next season.

Sources said Clark has passed the minimum 700 on the SAT required to be eligible to play during his freshman year.

• • •

Massachusetts is reportedly also in the race for the player many people consider the best guard left available, Beaver Country Day's Wayne Turner.

Jack McMahon, Turner's coach from his summer AAU league team said that Turner, a 6-foot-1-inch point guard, is a combination of Derek Kellogg's leadership skills and Mike Williams' performance when the game is on the line. He also pointed to his unselfishness and lack of ego as assets.

"When we were on the road for a couple of weeks this summer," McMahon said, "a player that had been rooming with Wayne said that 'Wayne Turner doesn't know that he's Wayne Turner,' meaning he has no ego whatsoever."

Turner has supposedly narrowed his choices down to five schools: Massachusetts, Syracuse, Connecticut, Michigan and Providence, with UMass and Syracuse reportedly in the lead.

The Orangemen, who had also heavily recruited Stephon Maybury, a talented point guard who decided to attend Georgia Tech, have now put the full court press on Turner.

Allen said that although Turner is undecided, he guessed UMass could likely be Turner's destination, pointing to the senior's closeness to his family as an important factor.

Turner is reportedly "just short" of the SAT requirements according to McMahon and has several more opportunities to take them.

Turner will play in the prestigious McDonald's All-Star game this summer as well.

There are two other guards who could also potentially be in the mix for UMass.

Eddie Cote, a Brooklyn native (Tilden High School) has Massachusetts on a long list of finalists, which also includes Temple.

The most intriguing possibility however could be Preston Murphy, a 6-foot-2-inch guard from Saginaw, Mich.

Most highly touted recruits get noticed by the major colleges at the major summer camps run by Nike or ABCD.

Murphy did not attend the camps and was overlooked during the early recruiting.

But against strong competition, Murphy has been particularly impressive, averaging 29 points a game.

He is reportedly being heavily recruited by Rhode Island, and Miami of Ohio, while Minnesota and Wisconsin have also expressed interest.

Massachusetts has reportedly been scouting Murphy as well. After the success achieved by Kellogg, another player who was not highly publicized, Calipari could be willing to take a chance on another potential sleeper if Turner falls through.

Massachusetts is also in the run-

Turn to RECRUITS, page 12

Different style, but just as exciting

Second place, not second rate.

Not a single dunk was thrown down last night in the William D. Mullins Center, yet the crowd enjoyed every minute of Massachusetts' 55-49 victory over St. Joseph's, which kept the Minutewomen in the No. 2 spot in the Atlantic 10 Conference standings.

Why is basketball played by men more popular than the same sport played by women?

The knocks against the latter are plenty. No spectacular slams. Not enough three-pointers — the Minutewomen and Hawks combined for four. Too many turnovers — the teams combined for 39.

The list goes on and on. Whichever way you cut it, the sport receives a bad rap for not being exciting enough for the true fan.

This type of fan, though, doesn't like basketball. He wants a player to sky above the rim, jam in an opponent's face, then stand and explain to just about everyone how good you actually are.

Massachusetts forward Octavia Thomas isn't going to soar in the lane for a double-pump reverse jam.

That's not women's basketball.

Instead, Thomas uses a screen from one of her teammates, slices through the lane, gets fouled and scores the basket — like she did in last night's win over St. Joe's, a play that gave the Minutewomen an eight-point lead with 2:17 left.

Breakaway slams are non-existent in the women's version, so much so that the defense can actually hustle back and have a chance to prevent the easy lay-up off the glass.

Like apples and oranges, basketball is played differently by men and women — both styles are very good when you acquire the tastes.

"We play below the rim, while the men, they tend to play above the rim. Sometimes people who can't decide whether or not they like women's basketball can't differentiate between the two styles," Massachusetts junior Melissa Gurile said. "Once fans start realizing it's a totally different game, they come to appreciate it."

Emotion has a lot to do with sports, especially on the college level.

Never was it more evident than in the minutes after the final horn sounded last night.

Before the public address announcer could wish the crowd of 1,329 a safe return home from the Mullins Center, Gurile and the rest of her teammates grabbed the microphone.

The Minutewomen thanked the fans for coming and supporting their brand of basketball. Not in the media. Not on radio or television. Gurile did it on the spot, unrehearsed and spontaneously.

"That's them. You have to understand that for years this group has played in a gym with 100 people," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "They know they are a good team and now, I think people are realizing that they are very entertaining."

"I figured the fans deserve a lot of credit for helping us out. We usually don't like playing [in the Mullins Center], but since we're getting a lot of fan support, we're enjoying playing here more," Gurile said.

Midway through the first half, members of the nationally- ranked Massachusetts men's basketball team entered the arena as Minutewomen supporters.

Before one knew it, Minuteman players and coaches were surrounded by fans of all ages, begging for autographs and photo opportunities.

The Minutemen later pulled back and allowed the Minutewomen to regain the spotlight, long enough to capture the game and the second seed in next week's A-10 tournament.

After the triumph and a trip to the locker room, Gurile, Thomas and their teammates stood among the same group of fans, signing T-shirts and programs. The crowd wouldn't let the Minutewomen leave and the players, well, they were enjoying the spotlight.

At least those fans are beginning to appreciate the differences between the two sports.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

Art Stapleton on College Basketball

Bruins should trade Al Iafrate for offense

Ray Bourque is the best defenseman in the NHL today and one could argue he's the best ever. But a more concrete argument is that the Boston Bruins' whole defense collapses any in the league. Don Sweeney is having a career year, not only in scoring (1 goal, 9 assists, 10 points) but he has done everything necessary to become the NHL's top No. 2 defenseman. David Shaw is an ideal stay-at-home veteran on the blueline and Alexei Kasatonov is the skilled puckhandler who has replaced Glen Wesley ably. Jamie Huscroft adds toughness, and no other club has two rookies (John Gruden and Jon Rohloff) who can step in the lineup and contribute nightly.

Ted Kottler on the NHL

So who needs Al Iafrate? Not the Bruins. Yes, their power play is ailing, and Iafrate is a prototype quarterback, but the defense's chief responsibility is to play defense, which Iafrate doesn't do well at all.

If the Bruins want offense, why not acquire it in the form of a forward? Mats Naslund is a start but Iafrate could bring someone far better.

Someone like Joe Juneau, who the Bruins traded to Washington for Iafrate last season. Bureaucracy runs rampant through many teams' front offices in all sports, but the Bruins usually aren't afraid to admit they made a mistake. Mark Tinordi's injury has thinned the Caps defense and they're unhappy with Juneau, but how happy are the Bruins with Iafrate? He has missed the entire season, he deserted training camp, and he didn't exactly fill the hole left by Bourque at the end of the 1993-94 regular season.

The Bruins' power play will be fine with Bourque, Sweeney and Kasatonov, and with Juneau their offense could return to the potency it reached two seasons ago when Boston finished first overall and Juneau topped the century mark in points.

• • •

With clowns like Steve Yzerman and Sergei Fedorov running the Red Wings' offense, Detroit was under pressure to sign a guy like Bob Errey.

What would this column be without dumb trades? Neal Broten for Corey Millen. Not that either side got ripped off, but Broten should be insulted by this deal that probably wouldn't have been made if the Stars were still in Minnesota.

Broten, a Minnesota native and the only active 1980 USA Olympian, spent more time in the Stars' organization than anyone. He rewarded the franchise well from the start: In his rookie season (1980-81), he was a mainstay for its only Stanley Cup finalist. His production has declined, and he is an NHL dinosaur at 35, but his knowledge of the game is unsurpassed and his defense is strong.

While enjoying ESPN's rare safari into unfamiliar hockey territory — that is, anywhere outside of New York— it was painfully obvious in Dallas's 2-1 loss to Chicago the Stars need offense like the Cowboys need a new coach.

Turn to NHL, page 12

Heading to the tourney

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Sal Manganaro and the UMass men's hockey team are preparing for the Hockey East Tournament which starts March 9.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 87 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, March 3, 1995

Watt's the deal?

Ex-FIREHOSE bassist, Mike Watt, has released his first solo effort featuring, among others, Eddie Vedder and Henry Rollins (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Debating the Bell Curve theory

A UMass panel discussed the implications of the book Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in American Life (See story page 3).

Roe, Minutemen head to A-10 tourney

Lou Roe will try to lead UMass to a fourth straight A-10 tournament title starting this weekend in Philly (See Sports, page 8).

Weekend Forecast

Today's weather will be sunny, highs will be around 35. This weekend, temperatures will continue to rise. Tomorrow and Sunday will be mostly cloudy with highs in the 40s.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25	HIGH: 40 LOW: 20

Senate defeats balanced budget with Dole's vote

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate solemnly dealt defeat yesterday to the balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution, cornerstone of a broader Republican drive to cut spending and shrink government.

Both sides sought political advantage in the residue of battle.

The 65-35 vote left the amendment just shy of the needed two-thirds majority, and followed Democratic accusations that the Republicans were threatening Social Security, a charge Majority Leader Bob Dole sharply denied.

At the White House, President Clinton challenged GOP leaders in Congress to detail "how they are going to keep the promises of their 'Contract [With America]' on balancing the budget and paying for their tax cuts."

Fifty one Republicans and 14 Democrats voted for the amendment, while 33 Democrats and two Republicans — Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Dole — voted no.

Dole is a firm supporter. His vote — which left the amendment's supporters two votes short of victory — was cast solely to place him on the prevailing side, a parliamentary maneuver to keep the politically popular amendment alive for another possible vote during the 1996 election season.

"Let 'em try," Democratic leader Tom Daschle said defiantly a few hours before the vote. By opposing the amendment, he said, Democrats were saving Social Security trust funds from deficit cutters.

The amendment is designed to end the run-up in red ink that has the national debt approaching $5 trillion. It calls for a balanced budget beginning in the year 2002, unless three-fifths of both houses vote otherwise. Social Security aside, some opponents argued it would lead to devastating cuts and cripple efforts to deal with future economic emergencies and didn't belong in the Constitution. A key element of the "Contract With America," it cleared the GOP-controlled House in January on a vote of 300-132. Its rejection marked the sharpest setback to date for the conservative revolution that Republicans launched after gaining control of both houses.

School of education dean honored

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Bailey Jackson was appointed as dean of School of Education yesterday.

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Before Bailey Jackson ascended onto the stage, State Sen. Stanley Rosenburg (D-Amherst) leaned over and jokingly remarked, "Now it's going to be for real — you've just been practicing for the last couple of years."

Shortly thereafter, Jackson stood with his large frame towering over the podium and gave a short speech of thanks for his appointment as dean for the University of Massachusetts School of Education, after serving as interim dean since 1990.

Jackson, an African American faculty member of 19 years, was honored at a convocation held in the Campus Center Auditorium yesterday to celebrate his appointment as the fifth permanent dean in the School of Education.

Several politicians attended the event, among them was Madeleine Kunin, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Education.

Administrators and faculty attended in tribute to Jackson and listened attentively to a speech given by Kunin, concerning the current climate of nationalized education.

Approximately 300 people attended.

Jackson is known internationally for being a leading theorist in racial identity development, according to Crosson.

He has served as an independent consultant in multicultural organization development for public agencies, schools and private businesses.

Jackson has served as associate dean for academic affairs, director of teacher education and is the founder of the School of Education's Social Justice Education Program.

"This ceremony seems like an afterthought," said Provost Patricia Crosson. "It is really an appreciation of his work and affirmation of the benefit of the work he's done."

Crosson introduced Jackson and illustrated his strengths as a leader and a forceful presence in board meetings — an individual who speaks on behalf of the students and can always make the board laugh.

Turn to BAILEY, page 2

Education dept official speaks against contract

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Madeleine Kunin, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Education, is working to educate people about the herms Congress' proposed "Contract with America" would bring to the accessibility of public higher education.

Kunin, a University of Massachusetts alum from the class of 1956, spoke at yesterdays convocation to honor School of Education Dean Bailey Jackson.

President Bill Clinton appointed Kunin to her position, and she is now working to promote federal aid to students and also co-chairs Clinton's group working group on violence prevention. Kunin was also the first woman to be elected governor of Vermont in 1984, and has served three terms.

According to Kunin, the contract would eliminate "direct lending" of student loans from the government — a program that was initiated by Clinton.

Direct lending means students borrow directly from the government, eliminating middle organizations and extraneous bureaucracy, and then they have the option of paying off the interest on their loans after the graduate, Kunin said. By utilizing this system the government could save $12 billion.

Currently, 40 percent of student aid is distributed through direct lending, Kunin said. The contract would ensure that there would be a cap on this kind of lending, marked off at 40 percent.

More than half of the college students across the country are receiving federal aid to put themselves through school, telling in at a national figure of $12 billion, Kunin said.

If federal aid is eliminated, or decreased, it would mean that many of these students would not be able to attend college.

Kunin is urging that individuals oppose the contract and keep in contact with their representatives to do so. There is a lot of pressure coming from financial groups that were making profits, before direct lending was set up, she said. These pressures need to be counteracted.

Student's trial for officer assault postponed

By Tim White
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts student charged with assaulting a police officer had his trial moved to the end of the month because the Hampshire County District Court could not fit the case into its full schedule.

Gerald Longardner, Jr., 24, of Hadley, was charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery on a police officer at approximately 12:50 a.m. on Oct. 22, 1994.

The trial has been moved to March 29, according to the court clerks' office.

Incident Report

Longardner, a junior environmental designs major at UMass, was a passenger in a car being ticketed for a headlight violation when he exited the vehicle with another passenger, according to a record of investigation from the Massachusetts State Police.

Trooper Daniel Rose, who was writing the violation, told Longardner and the other to get back in the car, police said.

Longardner refused to get back in the vehicle, threw a cigarette on the ground and refused to pick it up, police said. Longardner was then warned by Rose he would be arrested if he continued with his actions.

After once again refusing to enter the car and shut the door which was obstructing one lane of the road, Rose told Longardner he was under arrest for disorderly conduct, police said.

Rose placed one hand cuff on Longardner's left wrist and attempted to apply the other when he spun around and walked to the other side of the vehicle. Rose then told Longardner several times he was under arrest, police said.

Longardner kept asking what he was being arrested for and demanded to speak to another police officer, in the midst of a struggle, in which Rose attempted to apply the other handcuff, according to police.

Refusal of arrest

Longardner broke free and walked into the travel lane stopping another vehicle and asking them to call the police. Rose told the vehicle to move on and Longardner left the road, police said.

Rose informed Longardner he could not refuse arrest and struggled again with the subject, striking him several times in the thigh with his flashlight, but he continued to resist and exited the struggle in a combative stance, police said.

Rose called for back up and informed Longardner the next force would be the trooper's weapon, according to police.

UMass police officer Brian Davies showed up after about 10 minutes and assisted Rose in subduing and handcuffing Longardner, police said.

At 1:03 a.m., UMass police received a call from the Amherst police asking UMass to assist the state police officer in the arrest, according to Phil Cavanaugh, UMass police court officer.

Longardner's point of view

According to police, Longardner suffered a welt above his eye and cuts on his knee as a result of the struggle. Rose also reported a "moderate odor of an alcoholic beverage on his breath."

Longardner was released that night on $25 bail.

However, according to Longardner, he was not subdued by Rose, he was assaulted.

He said that he had not been drinking.

He also did not make any attempt to assault Rose, or fight back when the officer used physical force against him, Longardner said.

Request made for plans for new steam plant

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is seeking a private developer to design and operate a multi-million dollar co- generation plant which would generate inexpensive steam to heat the University.

Currently, the University has a Request for Proposals (out for private developers to construct a steam-generation plant. This private construction would mean less of an economic risk, according to William Rose, associate vice chancellor for administration and finance of campus facilities.

The plant could cost $25 million to $40 million to construct, said Peter Wozniak, director of the co-generation project.

The chosen developer would be required to finance the project and staff, and operate the steam-production plant. The University would then purchase pounds of steam at a predetermined rate, Rose said.

Because the plant would be built, operated and owned by a private developer, the University would act as a consumer of steam and would not finance the project in any way, Rose said.

The steam would be less expensive for the University and the plant owners would make a profit producing the steam, Rose said.

Thermal Energy of Waltham, Ogden Projects of Fairfield, N.J. and Kenetec Energy Systems of Meriden, Conn. are qualified for the project, Wozniak said. Responses are due by April 7.

The plant, which is scheduled for completion by Sept. 1, 1998, would replace the presently aging University steam- generating facility. The current facility has components from as early as the 1950s which are expensive to operate, hard to find replacements for and increasingly unreliable, said Wozniak.

"The existing power plant has reached the end of it's useful life and needs to be replaced," Rose said.

Prospective new plant

The plant would use natural gas, oil or wood products as fuel, Rose said. It could not use coal or waste products because of space constraints and environmental concerns.

The plant site is currently located in the north-west corner of the campus by the PVTA parking garage. A new steam line would be installed to connect the plant to the steam distributor now located in the existing power plant.

The current plant would remain on-line for an undetermined period of time and then be shut down and eventually dismantled, Rose said.

The RFP states that all current power plant employees be given interviews and first consideration for employment at the new plant, Rose said.

"The RFP requires interviews and consideration of employment for current employees," but "there is the potential for current employees to be displaced," Rose said.

Any electricity produced must be sold to Western Mass. Electric in agreement with the state law. The University may not buy electricity directly from the plant, Wozniak said.

The construction site for the plant is located in proximity to the Farview Way neighborhood, which is north of the Graduate Research Center. Residents of the neighborhood have met with University officials with their concerns.

The residents have raised such concerns as the noise level of the plant, any fuels used by the plant, traffic congestion during construction and general unsightliness of the area.

"We have changed and put in additions to the RFP concerning noise emissions and landscaping of the plant," Rose said. "I think we have followed through with sensitivity to the concerns of the

Turn to STEAM, page 2

US marines offer cover as UN leaves Somalia

By Reid G. Miller
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Guns trained to the rear, U.S. Marines backed out of Somalia and into the sea yesterday with the remnants of a multinational force that fed starving thousands but failed to conquer chaos.

The Marines escorted the final U.N. forces from Mogadishu's shores, a quiet end to a two-year intervention that began with a televised invasion and ultimately cost $2 billion and the lives of more than 100 peacekeepers.

The last peacekeepers were hurried to warships offshore. The move of 1,500 American and 350 Italian marines from a small beach cove back to their ships ended at 12:59 a.m. Friday.

"U.S. and Italian Marines completed the extraction of United Nations forces and their equipment from Somalia," Defense Secretary William Perry said in a statement Thursday in Washington. "I want to thank the U.S. forces and their commanders for a job well done."

A Pentagon official said the withdrawal had been completed ahead of schedule, and that no American ships or aircraft would remain in the area. "Our plan is to withdraw our force as soon as possible," the official said.

U.S. Marines landed Monday to protect the evacuation of 2,400 Pakistani and Bangladeshi peacekeepers, the last in a multinational force that once totaled 38,000 troops from 21 countries.

The withdrawal was delayed several hours when a ferry chartered to pick up the Pakistanis was rammed by a tugboat, damaging its cargo doors. As the doors were being repaired, port officials found their only gangplank was missing, apparently looted.

"Just give us ropes and we'll climb aboard," one Pakistani officer said. A makeshift gangplank was jury-rigged from shipping containers, and the ship left after a three-hour delay.

U.S. Marines shot at least two Somali militiamen who fired at Americans from a pickup truck Thursday.

The Horn of Africa nation has lacked a government since former dictator Mohamed Siad Barre was overthrown in 1991. In the years since, despite numerous mediation attempts by the United Nations, Somali factions have been unable to bridge their differences and unite under one government.

Despite its failure to solve Somalia's political problems, the multinational intervention did end the widespread starvation that, together with war and disease, killed 350,000 Somalis in 1992. But it came with a cost. More than 100 peacekeepers and 42 American troops died, and the operation drained $1.66 billion from U.N. coffers. It ended without removing Somalia's main obstacle to peace — its intransigent warlords.

Tops among them was Mohamed Farrah Aidid, who once carried a $25,000 U.N. price on his head and subverted peacekeepers' efforts more than any other Somali.

Aidid was blamed for a militia ambush that killed 24 Pakistani peacekeepers on June 5, 1993, and ignited a low-level street war with U.N. forces. In October of that same year, a clash with Aidid's militia left 18 U.S. soldiers dead and cemented American distaste for the intervention.

The last straw came when the body of a American soldier was dragged through the streets of the capital, prompting President Clinton to order a U.S. withdrawal by March 1994.

Collegian Open House
Friday March 10, 1995

Coming Soon!

The Collegian will be rolling out the red carpet for all students interested in any of the three departments — business, graphics and news in an open house.

We are always looking for new and exciting staff members. No prior experience needed. Come down and see how we work.

Coming Friday, March 10 to your favorite Campus Center Basement office. The event will be catered and there will be oodles of good food.

■ steam

continued from page 1

neighborhood."

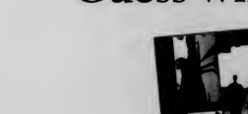
Alan Carpenter, spokesman for the neighborhood, agrees provisions have been added in response to neighborhood concerns but questions how those concerns will be executed. According to Carpenter, one provision calls for a noise level no more than nine decibels higher than the ambient noise level currently at the sight.

"All that's there now is flowing water and intermittent traffic noise," Carpenter said. "You'd get one reading if you took it at noon, you'd get another if you took it at midnight."

Other provisions include the landscaping of the area around the plant and minimizing the size of the smoke stacks.

"They have made provisions for our concerns but we don't know the results of them yet," Carpenter said.

AMHERST CINEMA
Downtown Amherst
PULP FICTION
7:30 PM Each Night
Students $4.00
253-5426



OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• 5 Year Nationwide Warranty
• Direct Insurance Billing
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
CARSTAR, Collision Repair Centers
Where America goes for Quality Collision Repairs
North Amherst CARSTAR 78 Old Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880
Northampton CARSTAR 141A Damon Road, Northampton, MA 586-4444

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, March 3

Music — The Atlantis Ensemble. Piano trios by Haydn and Beethoven. Admission is $15/$12, discounts are given to students. Amherst College, Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Music — Something every Friday. Music of James Taylor by Dave Binder. Mount Holyoke College, Blanchard Campus Center, 9 p.m.

Film — The Navigator: a Medieval Odyssey. Imaginative tale of a psychic boy in a tiny medieval English village. Admission $1.75. Amherst College, Campus Center Theatre, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Fun — Asian Student Organization Party. Admission $5. Smith College, Gamut Hall, 9 p.m.

Film — The Wages of Fear. Hampshire College, Franklin Patterson Hall, 7 p.m.

Theatre — Ice Cream. Mount Holyoke College, Rooke Theatre, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Lionel Wilson, University of Lancaster, United Kingdom, will speak on "Controls on volcanic eruption rates and lava flow lengths." Morrill II South, room 131, 3:30 p.m.

Meeting — The UMass Hindu Student Organization will be holding its first meeting. Check Campus Center Information Desk for room, 5 p.m. For further information, call Smir at 549-6778.

Saturday, March 4

Theatre — Ice Cream. Mount Holyoke College, Rooke Theatre, 8 p.m.

Radio Broadcast — Live in Amherst: A Prairie Home Companion. Fine Arts Center, Concert Hall, 6 p.m.

Dancing — Swing and Ballroom dance with the Swingtime Sextet. Admission $7/$5. Florence Community Center, 140 Pine Street, Florence. Lessons at 7:30 p.m., live music at 8:30 p.m.

Planetarium — The Amherst Astronomy Association conducts free public planetarium show. Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, 4 p.m.

Observatory — Free public observatory observing. Amherst College Wilder Observatory, 9 p.m.

Food Bank — Family Fun Day to fight hunger. Bring the family to Mt. Tom, all to benefit the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts.

Special event — Spring Bulb Show, a spectacular display of more than 2,500 flowering bulbs and spring flowers. Smith College, Lyman Plant House, 11 a.m.

Music — Dancing with the Stars, a Capella Concert. Mount Holyoke College, New York Room, 11 p.m.

Music — Concert of Hindustani Classical Vocal Music. Warren Sender, Vijaya Sundaram and the Raga Ensemble perform North Indian classical vocal music. Hampshire College, Music Building Recital Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Fun — Uniting Black Souls, a benefit talent show sponsored by MHA CASA. Mount Holyoke College, Blanchard Campus Center, 8 p.m.

Sunday, March 5

Pride March — The 1995 Northampton Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Pride March organizational meeting. Northampton Unitarian Society, 2 p.m.

Mini-Gospel — Music, food and games. Sponsored by the ALANA Christian Alliance. Campus Center Auditorium, 5 p.m.

Lecture — David Dempsey will speak on "The history and technology of papermaking." Smith College, Museum of Art, 2 p.m.

Music — Wind Ensemble/Symphony Band. Malcom W. Rowell Jr, director. Works by Nelson, Haas, Druckman and Ticheli. Free. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, 3 p.m.

Music — Opera Scenes by voice students. Music from the Marriage of Figaro, Don Giovanni, Dido and Aeneas, and the Telephone. Amherst College, Buckley Recital Hall, 3 p.m.

Community — African American Worship Service, Rev. Eddie O'Neil. Designed to provide Christian worship experience which affirms African-American religious traditions. Amherst College, Chapin Chapel, 1 p.m.

Notices

Fundraising — WFCR 88.5 F.M. Public Radio for Western New England seeks volunteers to assist the station with spring fundraising, scheduled to begin on March 29. For more information call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100.

Community Service — The Viva Community Service Council is asking groups to submit the number of community service hours they have completed since the beginning of the academic year in order to tally up the total number of hours this campus has contributed. If you have any questions, contact Lori McKinney at 545-3368.

Training — Amherst Leisure Services is offering the updated Lifeguard Training to strong swimmers at least 15 years of age. This course provides an opportunity to work hands on with children in learning to swim programs. For more information, all 256-4065.

■ Bailey

continued from page 1

Jackson said he intends to work, as he has in the past, to find a way to adjust to a decrease in resources but still offer quality education to those who are preparing to instruct the children of tomorrow.

"I'm proud, challenged and honored to be named dean," Jackson said. "I choose to see this as a statement of confidence in me and in the department."

Jackson said that he sees a parallel between his new position and a skit he once saw on the Ed Sullivan Show.

The skit consisted of a man spinning plates on top of a stick. According to Jackson, acting as dean is the biggest balancing act of all.

"I've got my sticks up, my plates in hand and I'm ready to start spinning," Jackson said.

While others spoke of Jackson's principles and integrity, his warmth and sincerity illuminated the auditorium as he gave gratitude to predecessors for his accomplishments — "an African American tradition."

Jackson honored Amstead T. Johnston, his great-grandfather was a slave on a plantation in the 1800s.

According to Jackson, Johnston was a self-taught teacher who took a great interest in educating Black students, and ended up having the first high school to ever accept Black students named after him.

Jackson has followed in his ancestors footsteps.

Correction

In Wednesday's Collegian, University of Massachusetts Division of Public Safety's Lt. Michael R. Grabiec was not fully quoted in regards to individuals' rights under the Fourth Amendment.

Grabiec said individuals are protected from search and seizure on the grounds that they do not possess an illegal substance in plain view, and an officer does not have a valid search warrant.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Only 10% of your brain is active during study.
Guess what the other 90% is thinking about?

10.95 ea CD
list 16.99-17.99

It's been your mantra since the first week in January.
Springbreakspringbreakspringbreak.
And now, all you need is the soundtrack for your adventure. So jump on your bed with the Dave Matthews Band to "What Would You Say" after your last midterm. Then you and Sheryl can sing "All I Wanna Do" over and over and over as you pack your bag. Grab your headphones and take Hootie & the Blowfish on the road with you. And have the time of your life.

Special pricing valid through March 9.

MEDIA PLAY
MUSIC • BOOKS • MOVIES • SOFTWARE
Hampshire Mall, 341 Russell Street, Hadley, 582-0410
Open Mon – Sat: 10 – 9, Sun 11 – 5

81-0119-035

Bell Curve stirs local controversy

Panel criticizes book's findings, unsure of racist implications

By Andrew Davidson
Collegian Staff

The study conducted in Richard J. Herrnstein and Charles Murray's book The Bell Curve: Intelligence and Class Structure in American Life draws socially dangerous conclusions, according to a four-person panel discussion.

The panel, which consisted of three University of Massachusetts professors and one student, discussed the issues surrounding the study by Herrnstein and Murray's book and its implications on race relations in America today. Approximately 50 people attended the discussion Wednesday night in the Southwest Residential Area.

The study has distinct effects on the political debate in this country, according to Eric Einhorn, a panelist and political science department chairperson. "To assume we could ignore this book and it would go away is a dangerous strategy."

The book was released last November, and has since stirred national debate over both its conclusions and its methods of sampling. It contained a study which sampled the intelligence of different races in the United States, and concluded that the intelligence of Blacks is inferior to that of other races, including whites.

"Psychologists disagree whether or not you can measure intelligence along a single dimension," Einhorn said.

Femi Richards, a panelist and an art history professor, added that the book is "based on value judgements and not on facts."

According to Shomwa Shamapande, a panelist and the president of the Black Student Union, the bell curve study's conclusions are not new in this country.

"The attempt of such pseudo-scholarship was to justify hate," he said.

However, John Bracey, Afro-American studies professor and Faculty Senate secretary, was not dispirited, saying that "one thing to be optimistic about is that the argument doesn't work. Black people are not going to go around thinking they're inferior."

The panelists agreed that the study, while being denounced by all members of Congress, will have an effect on current political debates.

It is "paradoxical that the authors claim that their work has no political impact," Richards said.

Although most members of Congress don't agree with the book's findings, it will indirectly affects their actions, Bracey said.

"[House Speaker Newt] Gingrich won't maintain the argument that blacks are inferior," he said. "He'll just take their lunches away."

Einhorn criticized the book's conclusions. "The study was an excuse for not doing more," Einhorn said. "To surrender to racial problems would be a disaster in the United States."

One of the main problems with the study according to Einhorn is that most people are going to rely on second accounts of the book.

The Bell Curve has spent the better portion of the last three months on the New York Times best-seller list. However, the book's popularity doesn't necessarily reflect the public's agreement with its findings, according to Bracey.

"Most people who buy the book are people who speak on panels like myself," Bracey said.

The panel was the second in a series of five discussions on racial issues organized by the Anti-Racism Forum, a group of 13 students co-funded by the Campus Activities Office and the Social Thought and Political Economy Department.

UMass reviews plans to renovate pond

By Emily Gold
Collegian Correspondent

A landscape architect is seeking input on the best way to renovate the University of Massachusetts campus pond to make it more appealing and eliminating erosion.

In an effort to seek University input, landscape architect Nancy Denig, of Denig Associates, proposed three renovation designs at a Campus Pond Workshop held in the Campus Center Wednesday night.

Denig was hired by the University as an independent consultant in the Campus Pond Improvement Project, a renovation project led by administration officials and the Campus Beautification Committee.

The final plan will be decided at the end of this month. By the end of October, the final contract documents will be submitted.

"We saw this as an opportunity to get some more ideas, even before we get strongly focused," said Bill Rose, associate vice chancellor of administrative finance.

According to Rose, the renovation will be funded almost exclusively through donations.

"There is no definitive financing plan at this time," he said. "We have no sense of what the costs are."

The objectives of the Campus Pond Improvement Project are to improve the aesthetic image of the pond, establish efficient circulation, encourage use of the area, eliminate physical problems and consider economic issues, according to the Project's overview statement.

"We tried to get a variety of solutions here," Denig said. "These are all intended to be discussion vehicles."

All of Denig's designs are done in an attempt to make an already attractive area of the campus even more appealing, she said.

"It is the magnet for this campus," Denig said. "Our goal is to enhance the attraction and upgrade the setting for people."

Elisa Campbell of the Academic Computing Department said, "I would really like to see the emphasis being on aesthetics." She said the pond should be enlarged.

Renovations of the pond area are necessary because of erosion, debris and graffiti.

"Time has not been so gracious on some of these elements," Denig said.

A lack of proper care is also a cause, Rose said.

All of Denig's three plans enlarge the pond and change the shape and positions of walkways.

All plans also require dredging in order to clean and deepen the water, which is mostly two feet deep, according to Mickey Marcus, of New England Environmental, Inc.

Denig's first design proposes a circular walkway surrounding the pond, replacing current walkways.

A second design, shaped by a rectangular lawn, features a stepped sunken lawn, an island and a bridge.

Denig said the sunken lawn promotes more sitting and recreation.

"It becomes the outdoor room," Denig said. "Having stairs encourages a lot of passive recreation."

The design calling for the most drastic renovations is marked by a large oval lawn between the library, the Student Union and the pond.

Denig said the oval will become an area for people to congregate.

"People will say, 'meet me at the oval'," she said.

This design would expand the pond, and would change the lawn between the Student Union and the Campus Center into a pond.

It also calls for a bridge, an island and a narrower section of the pond that would resemble a river.

However, Kathleen Scott, wife of Chancellor David Scott, said the plans do not include enough walkways and sitting areas.

Following her presentations of the three designs, Denig sought reactions and comments from the University community.

Among the various feedback was concerns that trees would block the view of the pond and that alumni would not donate money if the area changes drastically.

SHIN-ICHIRO SUZUKI / COLLEGIAN

Philadelphia here we come ...

UMass men's basketball T-shirts lined up on a table on the Campus Center Concourse. The basketball team will be finishing their postponed game against Rutgers this afternoon and will begin play in the Atlantic 10 tournament Sunday. Both games will be played in Philadelphia.

GOP plan could cut billions in welfare

By Jennifer Dixon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republican legislation to dismantle the federal welfare system would cut spending on social programs by more than $35 billion over the next five years, congressional budget experts said yesterday.

The biggest savings in the GOP plan, according to an analysis by the Congressional Budget Office, come from deep cuts in programs that provide cash assistance to disabled children and elderly aliens.

The budget analysis was released as the House Ways and Means Committee continued its third day of debate on the GOP legislation, which would repeal dozens of welfare programs developed since the New Deal and return the money — and the responsibility for supporting the poor — to the states.

The GOP's legislation also repeals the government's promise to provide a monthly check to single mothers and children whose income meets eligibility requirements.

Republicans, who released the budget estimates, say compassion can no longer be measured by how much money Washington spends on the country's poorest and most disadvantaged families.

"We're breaking the entitlement mentality of the welfare state," declared Art Fleischer, a spokesman for the Ways and Means Committee.

Democrats continued to attack. Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala called the GOP efforts "cruel blows to our youngest and most vulnerable citizens. ... House Republicans aren't offering tough love or positive alternatives — they're offering cold shoulders and cruel indifference."

Democrats also insist the GOP is cutting welfare to finance tax breaks for wealthy Americans. "They're whacking the living daylights out of the social safety net," said Rep. Jim McDermott (D-Wash).

Let's get one thing straight... The Collegian isn't.
Write for GLB Issues
Contact Wendy Darling
113 Campus Center
545-1749

STAFF MEETING

There will be a staff meeting Monday, March 6 at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office. We will be discussing and voting on the structure of the specialty pages.

STUDENT FARES

LONDON	$250
AMSTERDAM	$430
PARIS	$438
FRANKFURT	$458
MADRID	$498
BRUSSELS	$430
MOSCOW	$518
ZURICH	$478
PRAGUE	$458
EURAIL FROM	$255

FARES BASED ON RT FROM BOSTON. TAXES NOT INCLUDED. STUDENT ID MAY BE REQUIRED. DEPARTURES THRU 3/31. FARES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
Council Travel
79 S. PLEASANT ST. 2ND FL AMHERST, MA 01002
413-256-1261

CHOUSTER
Chinese Restaurant
Anniversary for the Month of March
ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET
Lunch $3.99 • Dinner $4.99 Daily
$4.99 Saturday & Sunday All Day
Dinner Special Including
Pork Fried Rice w/ Choice of Egg Roll or Chicken Wing and Ice Cream Dessert
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
253-4068 • 253-7449

The University of Massachusetts DEPARTMENT OF THEATER presents
THE BIRDS
by Aristophanes
a fantastic comedy
March 2-4 and 8-11 at 8 pm
RAND THEATER Fine Arts Center
Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511
$6 general public; $3.50 students/senior citizens
This program made possible in part by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

Friday & Saturday
1/2 PRICE
ALL APPETIZERS AND NACHOS
9:30 till 11:00
Weekly Special
Pitchers $4.75 ICEHOUSE
16oz. Bottles $1.75
MUSIC BY D.J. PETE FREE
THE PUB
Smoking Section 10-1
13 east pleasant street
amherst

BRODIE SKIING COUPON - CUT IT OUT ✂ MA-A-MDC
Ski Brodie
Route 7 New Ashford, MA 413/ 443-4752
Nearby, in the Berkshires
Any Day $10 Off!!
Monday - Friday? YES! • Saturday - Sunday? YES!
St. Patricks Day/weekend? no. Sorry. (Isn't our annual Irish Olympics week enough?)
One coupon per person per lift ticket. Valid 1994/1995 ski season. All day adult ticket only. $7 off twilight, night, children day ticket. Not valid toward otherwise reduced price ticket. Must complete brief info note at Brodie for redemption

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenium Distribution Manager
Herman Rozenberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Keep Williams case closed

John Calipari can't win.

After suspending senior guard Mike Williams for the remainder of the season (and therefore his career) for breaking team rules, Calipari has faced substantial pressure to disclose the "real" reason behind the decision. The Collegian recently called for an explanation of the decision in an unsigned editorial (Feb. 28), claiming that the rumors now circulating are more detrimental to Williams than the truth itself would be.

Caleb Cochran

What seems to be de-eloping here is a tremendous double standard. When the grades of several UMass players were published in the Boston Globe last fall, the campus responded furiously to this invasion of privacy. The players' reputations were hurt by this disclosure; and the article and accompanying chart were seen by many as unprofessional and unethical.

Now, however, the public is curious. Everyone wants to know what the real story is behind Williams' removal. As expected, rumors have been floating around regarding the suspension. Everyone wants an answer.

This is human nature. When essential pieces of a controversial story are denied to the public, people feel cheated. They feel like they have a right to know what goes on behind closed doors. They want the dirt about the most celebrated clutch shooter in Massachusetts' history and why his career has been cut short.

The reasons used to justify this curiosity are fascinating. "The rumors are hurting Mike more than the truth would." How do you know? Whether the suspension was the result of one isolated incident or simply the culmination of four years of problems, the fact is that Williams must have been causing some pretty big headaches in order to be kicked off the team, especially with the NCAA tournament right around the corner. Let's look at the situation from a purely basketball standpoint.

At the start of the season, the Minutemen had five legitimate guards: Derek Kellogg, Edgar Padilla, Carmelo Travieso, Andre Burks and Williams. After Burks went down for the season with a torn anterior cruciate ligament, the Minutemen were down to four guards. And now, with the dismissal of Williams, UMass has three guards who play significant minutes. Despite the power and depth of the frontcourt, this creates a downright scary scenario for the Minutemen come tournament time.

This said, it seems clear that Calipari did not suspend Williams on a whim. Calipari wants to win games, and it is ludicrous to suggest that he did not take this into account when making his decision on Williams. Although upholding team rules is important in establishing stability and consistency for the team, you can't tell me that the team's goal of a national championship wasn't taken into consideration when making this decision.

Don't you think Calipari realizes that the absence of Williams creates a hole in the backcourt? Don't you think he would like the option of kicking the ball out to Williams, positioned just behind the three-point arc, with the clock ticking down and the Minutemen down by two?

Although it is nice to think that Calipari's decision was made solely on the basis of team rules, that's not the reality of the situation. If a lesser player had broken a rule, he's probably gone. But for the third-leading scorer on the team, who has also hit the most game-winning shots in school history, the rules are a little different. That's the way it is. You can't tell me Williams wasn't given his share of chances.

Calipari has had problems with Williams in the past — some of which were made public, some of which probably were not. Calipari did not want to lose a player of Williams' ability. Critics who imagine an angry Cal making a snap decision to teach Williams a lesson should realize this.

The decision was a carefully considered one. Ultimately, Calipari decided that Williams' ability did not compensate for his poor attitude. He had every right to enforce the team rules and dismiss Williams, and he is under no obligation to disclose the details of the suspension. The public has no right to know the details behind the case, no matter how juicy (or how boring) they may be.

Those who cry for an explanation are the same people who chastised the Globe for dragging the team through the mud. This seems ironic: Just as there was no place for that garbage in the paper, there is no place for the dirt on Williams in newspapers either. All you need to know is that he screwed up pretty big. You don't boot your third-leading scorer for being late to practice.

If you really want to help Mike Williams, don't demand an explanation of his suspension. Appreciate him for what he was: a talented, gutsy, flashy, heart-stopping, clutch player. And leave it at that.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.

Shutting down a way of life

Earlier this week, Defense Secretary William Perry submitted plans for a procedure which will close and rearrange various military institutions across the country. The Pentagon says that base closures are necessary to reduce overhead and provide funds needed for the modernization of this country's weapons.

Mark McGrath

When the list of bases to be cloted was released, it came as no surprise that the naval air station in South Weymouth was among the casualties. The base was slated to close in 1993, when similarly, budget cutting procedures were being used. But then, through the efforts of politicians and lobbyists it was able to remain open.

I grew up less than a mile away from this air station. The base is not just a piece of land near where I live. It is a unique aspect of the community in which it resides. The base is important in many ways to the community.

First and foremost, it provides jobs. Employed on the base are 865 active duty personnel, 2,500 reservists and over 300 civilians who together feed an estimated $60 million to the local economy.

It is because of this base that many of the local businesses are able to thrive. For example, there is a specific eatery where I work when I'm not at school. Every weekend, during key periods, this pizza place is flooded with a troop of uniformed soldiers. If you didn't know any better, you'd think the place was being invaded. These hungry soldiers order plenty of food, and are able to transform what would ordinarily be a slow period into one of the busiest times of the week.

Also, a substantial number of deliveries are ordered from the base. Although security measures may be inconvenient at times, the company gladly delivers there, and receives plenty of business in return.

The case is similar for many other businesses in the area. If the base is closed, the bowling alleys, bars and dry cleaners, as well as local merchants will be affected adversely. Some will even have to close, pushing the number of lost jobs up a little higher. Closure of this base will undoubtedly wreak havoc on the local economy.

The base is not only an economic factor, but a social one, too. Every year, there is an air show on the base where the doors are opened to the public. People are able to see first hand the technology used by the military. The day is always capped off with a fantastic show of daredevil flying. People come from all over to see the exhibition. Few leave disappointed, and the base gets its chance to make a positive impression on the community which surrounds it.

The naval air station also serves as a site for the annual band camp of one of the local high schools. The base provides a place where students can practice and be free of the distraction of the outside world. It just serves as another reason why the base is valued by the people around it.

The base in South Weymouth has grown to be part of me and part of anyone who lives in the area, whether it be pizza delivery drivers or marching musicians. The base has and should continue to be an integral cog in the machinery which we call a community.

Closure of this base could send the area into a downward spiral from which it will not likely be able to recover. The implications will be felt economically and socially. South Weymouth is not the only place that will be adversely affected if these changes are to take place. States such as California, Pennsylvania and Alabama are all in line to lose between 3,600 and 7,000 jobs each.

In the past, the United States has had no problem developing superior military technology while these bases were in operation. Why do they now consider these bases unnecessary? Perhaps the government should consider cutting foreign aid to raise the money needed to keep us on top technologically. If this country wants to make to make the defensive walls bigger and stronger, it should know better than to destroy the foundation in doing so.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

IF NEWT RAN A HIGH SCHOOL...
I HEREBY DECLARE THIS SCHOOL A DATE-FREE ZONE!
NO LONGER WILL TAXPAYERS BE BURDENED BY A STUDENT POPULATION DISTRACTED FROM THE WORK AT HAND!
YOU'RE FACING ENTRY INTO A TOUGH, DEMANDING ECONOMY! IF YOU'RE NOT READY, YOU'LL BE EATEN ALIVE!
ONLY THROUGH DISCIPLINE AND FOCUS...
WHOA! LOOK AT THE PSYCHOS ON THAT NEW FRENCH TEACHER!
GB Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial

DID YOU KNOW LIFE IS LIKE A BOX OF...
OH SHUT UP WILLYA?
POOR GET
15 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS RECORD BOX OFFICE $
TOLES
©1995 UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND. 2-27 DETROIT FREE PRESS
MAYBE THE STORM SANK HIS SHRIMP BOAT

Letters to the Editor

Finding excitement in church

To the editor:

LOUD! I MEAN LOUD! EXCITING! That's what church is supposed to be. Our church is getting together at 10 a.m. (yes, a.m.!) this Sunday at the Student Union Ballroom for a meeting sponsored by the Upside Down Club and we're fired up about it.

"What?" you ask. "Your church? How do you do that?" Simple. All the people down in Springfield, where we usually meet, just hop in their cars and head up to Amherst. All the students who usually drive down to Springfield every Sunday just walk over to the Campus Center.

"What?" you ask. "Students drive over to Springfield to go to church? On Sunday? Impossible!"

It's true! We've got so many students we don't know what to do with them, figuratively speaking.

You say, "That doesn't sound like church."

That's the point.

Mr. Copeland, Collegian columnist, finds boredom in church. He should find a church that's not boring.

Steve Greene
UMass campus minister
Springfield Church of Christ

Article misquotes campus official

To the editor:

I want to thank you for your coverage (Feb. 26) of the educational forum organized by STPEC students regarding the recent Massachusetts Association of Scholars report.

I also need to correct two misquotes attributed to me in the article. In reference to the report, I was quoted as saying awkwardly, "It is not scholarly documented." I actually said, "It is not a scholarly document."

The article also reports that I accused the report's author, Gary Brasor, of unethical research methods because he called my office while falsely claiming to be a graduate student. This is not what I said. In my presentation, I said that I was called by persons who claimed to be graduate students working for Mr. Brasor. My suspicions were confirmed when I realized that the return phone number left on the messages for me was that of the Republican Club.

Grant Ingle
Director
Office of Human Relations

Writer misrepresents Jewish groups

To the editor:

As a civil rights counsel to the Anti-Defamation League, I wanted to correct the numerous inaccurate assertions made by Juan José Chacón Quirós de Quetzacoatl who claimed in a Feb. 1 piece that the University of Massachusetts is being held hostage by "a new coalition of Jewish organizations," including the ADL. The writer's primary beef seems to be the outcry students, faculty and community members, some but by no means all from the Jewish community, to the speech given by Tony Martin.

First of all, no Jewish organization Quetzacoatl named — not the ADL whom I represent, not the Springfield Jewish Federation and not Hillel — have "called for UMass to ban certain Black leaders from campus," as the author twice states. Wherever he received that information, the author should check his sources. In fact, in a letter to Chancellor David K. Scott written in December, ADL's New England Director Lenny Zakim and I recommended to the chancellor that while he should respect the right to free speech, even of bigots, he should act on his responsibility as chancellor to condemn anti-Semitism and bigotry. As an organization dedicated to supporting the First Amendment, we have never called for banning speakers, even hateful speakers.

Nor would we ever, as Quetzacoatl claims, single out one race of speakers for attention. ADL is a civil rights organization; we condemn those who promote anti-Semitism and bigotry, regardless of their race. We have a long history of fighting extremism on the right and have produced numerous reports on neo-Nazis, the KKK, David Duke, the neo-Nazi skinhead movement and Holocaust deniers. The race of the bigot is of no import to us; his or her bigotry is what concerns us.

Secondly, no Jewish organization, including my own, called for an investigation of groups "suspected of wanting to invite" Tony Martin to campus. Nor would they. These allegations are totally inaccurate. Several individuals did write to the chancellor asking about the source of funding for Martin's speech. They were not representing organizations when they wrote, and in any case, such inquiries hardly amount to calling for an "investigation" of groups on campus. Furthermore, when an anti-Semitic speaker is paid $2,000 from the coffers of a public university, is it any wonder that members of the Jewish community would be outraged? The only wonder is that more community members, Jews and non-Jews alike, were not outraged.

The false information in Quetzacoatl's piece is endless. No organization asked for membership lists or information on backgrounds of students. Nor would the ADL or any other Jewish organization that I know of ask a university to make such inquiries. Finally, to argue that Jews or Jewish organizations are "outside groups" or "malevolent outsiders" that are holding the University "hostage" smacks of the worst kind of anti-Semitic stereotypes, conjuring up images of Jewish "conspiracies" and Jewish "power." If the NAACP complains about racism on a college campus, would they be accused of malevolence? of course not. So why a double standard for Jewish organizations?

The author's absurd conclusions that asking about the source of funding for an anti-Semite and racist like Tony Martin is "racist attack on academic freedom" turns the situation on its head. It isn't the Jewish or non-Jewish individuals questioning payment of money to Martin who are racists and bigots. It's Martin who is the bigot.

It just so happens that many members of Jewish organizations in Massachusetts have close connections to and great affection for UMass-Amherst, as alumni themselves or parents of students and alumni. Their inquiries, far from being malevolent, come from their care and concern that UMass be a place where people can live together in harmony and learn to respect one another.

Sally J. Greenberg
Civil Rights Counsel
Anti-Defamation League

University ignores larger issues

To the editor:

I am pleased to see the University chaplain addressing an issue vital to this community's well being. I often hear people who are unaffected by certain harmful actions and attitudes tell those who are the victims that it takes time to change the world and eliminate those actions. As usual, they always fail to take into account the effects that these actions and attitudes have on people's psyche and life.

Some years ago, when a racial incident occurred on campus, I felt violated and threatened. I was so traumatized by it that my academic career almost went down the drain. The reaction then by people who thought my friends and I were too angry was "What's the big deal? Why don't they leave it to the administration?" Nobody asked my friends or myself how we were being affected. Not even the administration. We had to support each other, sleep in groups, and walk around campus in groups because we felt too threatened to walk alone. This incident has left its marks on all of us who were affected by it. I am still frustrated thinking about it.

Whatever our race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation and nationality may be, as students at this University, we have to focus on our education. We should not have to worry about being harassed and insulted especially by people who are being paid with a portion of our tuition money.

A disproportionate amount of incidents in which Black students are victims on this campus have always been treated with indifference from the administration whose job it is to prevent any hindrance in our learning process. It is their actions that have forced us to sometimes be more militant. Perhaps the chaplain has not been here long enough to know that there is a historicity in the way we are compelled to react.

Had effective channels been established to hear our grievances and deal with us in a respectful and helpful manner, ALANA students and their allies would not use their study time for demonstration. The incident in the Franklin Dining Hall, though an unfortunate incident, is part of the cycle.

We believe that ultimately the administration is to blame for not providing mandatory sensitivity training for the employees. Most of us do not really care whether those who work here like us or not. Why should we? What we will object to and will not tolerate is when their personal feelings disrupt our environment and interfere with our ability to exercise our rights. To expect to be liked is asking for favored treatment, but to expect not to be physically and emotionally violated is a very reasonable expectation.

I wonder what the University chaplain will have us do until everyone is taught not to cause us harm? Should we wait while our lives are being adversely affected?

Mr. Martin the chaplain should perhaps learn a bit of history. The positive changes that have occurred throughout the world have only occurred because people have refused to stand idly by and let time and others' efforts take their toll. I believe that it is first and foremost up to those whose rights are violated to discuss and determine the proper path to redress. Mr. Martin should not be so pretentious as to suggest or dictate our course of action. I personally will gladly stand with him on the condition that he considers my strategy as important as his and address the long term effect that these types of incidents are having on individuals. I do believe that education is important, but I also believe in the "carrot and stick" concept.

Moise S. Tirado
Hadley

Arts & Living

Watt helms star–studded album

By Matthew Justin Faerber
Collegian Staff

Ball–hog or Tugboat? One look at the impressive roster for Mike Watt's first "solo" album makes it clear that the title refers, at least in part, to Watt's own role in the project. Watt's bass is the only musical constant on this 17–track album which features guest performances from J Mascis to Flea to Eddie Vedder, as well as a host of others.

Watt, however, is quick to downplay the significance of the celebrity presence on the album.

"Maybe I should have used aliases and wrestling masks," said Watt in reference to the wrestling theme on the album's sleeve. "There are 50 people that play on this album, only about 15 of them are famous."

"I see this album as a way of giving something back to my scene," said Watt. Appropriately, that scene is one which Watt himself helped to create.

One of the undeniable legends of modern rock, Watt made musical history in the early '80s as one third of the proto–punk group The Minutemen who pioneered the art of remarkably short songs. After the tragic death of Minutemen guitarist D. Boon, Watt went on to form fIREHOSE with Ed Crawford and Minutemen drummer George Hurley.

Much of the material on Ball–hog or Tugboat? is "stuff I wanted to do with fIREHOSE that just didn't work out. This was my chance to make a record for its own sake," Watt said.

Despite the large degree of collaboration involved in making the album, Watt wrote all but three of the songs and the album's sound is branded with his distinct style.

While songs like "Tell 'em Boy!" and "Piss–Bottle Man" clearly harken back to Watt's earlier days in fIREHOSE and The Minutemen, others are unlike anything Watt has done before, including bold forays into the worlds of jazz, funk, folk and even psychedelia. Ironically, the album's greatest successes are those songs which are the furthest departure from Watt's usual territory.

Backed by only a drummer and dueling saxophones on the upbeat "Song For Igor," Watt proves that at times a guitar is thoroughly unnecessary. "Sidemouse Advice" is a similarly guitarless number in which Carla Bozulich's sultry vocals add a certain lounge act quality to this subtle, jazzy arrangement.

The album's highpoint is unquestionably the groove–oriented funk of "E–Ticket Ride." The song features not only a dream rhythm section (consisting of Watt, Flea, and Porno For Pyros drummer Stephen Perkins) and the surprisingly smooth vocals of Beastie Boy Mike D., but also the first ever vocal performance —by Coco Hayley Gordon Moore (the daughter of Sonic Youth's Thurston Moore and Kim Gordon).

If Ball–hog or Tugboat? seems to be a bit schizophrenic at times, it is only because spontaneity played such a key role in its creation. Whenever possible, the music was recorded live and, in several cases, the presence of certain artists is the result of chance. In the case of Evan Dando, Watt got him to come over to the studio right after the Lemonheads' set at Fairfax High.

On "Tuff Gnarl," there are two drummers because, when things got too out of hand, original drummer J Mascis picked up and left and Steve Shelley jumped in to take his place "just like in tag team wrestling," said Watt.

In April, Watt plans to embark on his first U.S. tour since the dissolution of fIREHOSE. Because it would be impossible to tour with a 50–member band, Watt has selected the promising supporting line–up of Dave Grohl and members of Sunny Day Real Estate.

Watt says in keeping with the spirit of the project, the album material "will be re–interpreted by the people I'm playing with." Watt even hinted at the possibility of some classics from The Minutemen archives popping up in the set list.

COURTESY JOHN EDER
Mike Watt's newest album, Ball–hog Or Tugboat? features an assortment of today's most popular artists.

Homoeroticism examined in movie

By Wendy Darling
Collegian Staff

PAUL BILODEAU/COLLEGIAN
Rolf Flor, UMass doctoral candidate, lectured on homoeroticism in Interview With The Vampire.

Last fall, two men tumbled onto a bedroom floor in a passionate embrace in front of millions of Americans. There was lust, there was desire, and there were even male lips on male flesh, but in the end, few noticed. Interview With The Vampire was about vampires, after all, and to most people, nothing more than entertainment.

In a lecture delivered this past Wednesday entitled "Interview With a Faggot," Rolf Flor, a doctoral candidate in philosophy at the University of Massachusetts, argued that the audience's lack of response hinged on several factors. One of these factors was a degree of homophobia that effectively blocked non–heterosexual images and ideas from their view.

"This lack of reaction," said Flor, "should not be attributed to a lack of homoerotic material."

Flor delivered his lecture as part of the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Lecture Series which is sponsored by the UMass Program for GLB Concerns.

Equating vampires and gay men

"Interview With The Vampire has a different effect on gays, lesbians and bisexuals than it does on most heterosexuals," said Flor. In Interview, there is a metaphor that equates vampires and gay men. For the most part, however, the only people who recognize this metaphor are gay men and those who are sensitive to gay and bisexual issues.

"Throughout the film, there are scenes in which men seduce and are seduced by other men, but by and large, heterosexual audiences seem to have missed them," said Flor.

When Lestat first comes upon Louis in the streets of New Orleans, he is drawn to him immediately, and within moments the pair are melded together, bonded by blood and by passion.

Soon Lestat and Louis are living together in an apartment, and later they create a daughter to raise as their own. After this rather unusual (for Hollywood) "family" breaks up, Louis travels to France and forms a relationship with another vampire, a powerful, seductive male vampire named Armand.

The heterosexual reaction

Flor noticed different reactions from different audiences during the movie. For example, as Armand says to Louis "I want you, I need you," a teenage girl let out a small peal of laughter. Apparently, said Flor, the metaphor became clear to the girl and caused her to react. On another occasion, however, the audience was silent during this part of the film and during other homoerotic scenes.

Flor questioned whether this was because audiences simply did not recognize the scenes for what they were or because they did not know how to react.

"Would saying it out loud have destroyed their sense of enjoyment," he asked.

"We're supposed to believe that vampires are homosexuals and homosexuals are vampires on some level," Flor said.

Vampirism kills like homosexuality

Many heterosexuals may also have missed a metaphor in the film that equates homosexuality with death. The vampires in Interview are all men who have a clear passion for other men, and they practice and spread this passion through an exchange of blood. When a vampire drinks a mortal's blood and the mortal in turn drinks his, the mortal dies and becomes a vampire. There is no going back — once you have been joined to the coven by blood, you can never be part of the human herd again.

"The spread of vampirism in this film parallels the spread of AIDS," Flor said, "and this is another reason why many heterosexuals missed the homosexual elements of the story."

Subconsciously, some heterosexual people enjoyed the film because they were able to see homosexual men die and be cast out by society. GLB people might see the spread of vampirism as erotic, but to others, the blood exchange is clearly dangerous.

"People will see what they want to see," Flor said, "and homosexual metephors are lost all the time, especially in Hollywood productions like Interview With The Vampire."

In the future, however, people should learn to see beyond mere images and recognize the deeper meanings alive in film. "A film like this cannot go unanalyzed," he said.

Not everyone is straight – and neither is the Collegian.
GLB issues wants you to speak your mind!
Let your voice be heard.
Contact Wendy Darling at 545-1749

Write for the Valley's best source for entertainment news & views!
ARTS & LIVING
Call 545-1361 for more info

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 6 (NEXT TO FRANKLIN MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY)
Call Theatre For Showtimes
THE MANGLER R
HEAVEN'S PRIEST R
THE WALKING DEAD R
BOYS OF THE SIDE R
HEAVYWEIGHTS PG
HAMPSHIRE 6 (HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY)
Call Theatre For Showtimes
BILLY MADISON PG
MAN OF THE HOUSE PG
THE PAGANTS R
WORLD'S APART R
THE SHAWSHANK REDEMPTION R
BUSHWACKED PG
JUST CAUSE R

at zanna...sports utility
by FRYE

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst
413.253.2563

WMUA 91.1 FM
105 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003-1230
phone 413 545 2876
fax 413 545 4751
Hear not one but both Atlantic 10 Tournament Semifinal games, live from Philadelphia.
From 7 till midnight, we'll have complete coverage only on WMUA 91.1 FM.
Listen as UMass tries again to bring the A-10 title game home, and also catch the game to decide who their opponent will be.
Between games, it's the UMass Hoop call-in show, so don't miss any of the action
MONDAY, MARCH 6

Men's track heads to championships

By Steven Grant
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's track team will be sending representatives from three events to the IC4A's, which will be held this weekend in Princeton, N.J.

The championship meet will also feature perennial powerhouses from all over the eastern half of the United States, including Notre Dame, Syracuse, George Mason, Manhattan and Villanova. Many runners, jumpers and throwers will qualify for the NCAA Championships to be held the following week in Indianapolis, Ind.

Freshman standout Scott Price will compete for UMass in the 200 meters and senior Tom Galligani, who qualified for the IC4A'S in ouidoors last year, will compete in the triple jump.

The runners in the distance medley is currently up in the air, as sicknesses to Ethan Nedeau and Walter Stock have altered things a bit. As of yet, no specific medley runner could be confirmed.

Nedeau's absence will cause him to miss not only the medley event, but also his qualifying time of 2 hours 27.16 seconds in the 1,000 meters. Stock's ailment must be equally as frustrating for the sophomore as his mile time of 4:14.52 landed him a spot in the meet.

UMass assistant coach Jim Giroux still remains optimistic about the weekend because he is confident in Price and Galligani's performances.

"We're a deep team, so we can somewhat handle situations like [the loss of Nedeau and Stock]," said Giroux. "But as far as Scott and Walter go, we haven't had any individual qualifiers in indoor the last couple of years. So we're quite pleased with the results of the season. This could be a great finishing meet for them.

"Scott had never run indoors before, so it took him a while to adjust to the tracks. But he's really lived up to expectations, and we're pleased with what he's been able to accomplish."

Price is closing in on the school record in the event, as his 22.37 time is just shy of the 22.48 mark.

"Scott has really worked hard to improve his technique and the results will truly show in outdoors," Giroux said. "Had he not been sick last week [at the New England meet] his time would have been much better."

The meet will mark Galligani's last chance to make the finals in the triple jump, and according to Giroux, he has a good one.

"Tom's rested, and I think he's going to be able to rebound from these last couple of meets," he said. "He should be one of the top jumpers there. His best distance so far has been a 47–11 1/4 jump, and he'll need a 48–3 jump to make the finals.

"Tom and Scott are two of the top individuals on the men's team, and this meet is simply more geared to their level of competition. It will be a real challenge for them."

■ track

continued from page 8

time of 9:44.5.

Sophomore Anya Forrest will compete in the 55-meter hurdles. She broke the school record in that event last weekend with a time of 8.21 seconds.

Junior Megan O'Neil scored 3,236 points to place seventh in the last weekend's pentathlon, breaking the school record. She is expected to surpass that score this weekend.

Freshman Rosemarie Bryan is the only double entry in the ECAC's. She will compete in the long jump and hurdles.

"Rosie is ready to break the record of 19 feet," LaFreniere said. "She hasn't yet. She'll be running the 55-meter dash before the long jump event which will be an advantage. She jumps her best after running the dash."

Bryan holds the record of 18–7 1/2 from the Atlantic 10 Championships three weeks ago at URI.

Junior Jen Waeger will compete in the 1,000 meters and will try to set a personal record. Freshman Rebecca Donaghue will also try to set a personal record in the 800 meters. According to LaFreniere, the 1,000 and 800-meters are difficult events to set records in.

The ECAC Championship competition will be the last for the Minutewomen before the NCAA Championships, which will be held on March 10–11 in Indianapolis, Ind.

■ Horn

continued from page 8

and tres gauche red–and–black sneakers. It seems the louder and more chaotic a design, the better chance it has to be worn.

The Big Eas' boasts another worst–dressed outfit, Villanova. The lettering on its jerseys looks like graffiti, and like St. John's, Villanova took the liberty of adding another color to its crest. You don't do that. A school's colors are emblematic of its tradition: by altering them, the tradition is lost.

Kentucky wouldn't dare mess with its blue and white, but are those icicles on the Wildcats' shorts? Today there's a premium attached to simple, classic, understated uniforms. Winners in this column include Connecticut, Arizona, Louisville and Duke.

• I also have to give props to what I feel are two of the highest quality venues in college basketball. They're both tough places to play, as well as aesthetic wonders, built strictly for basketball as they all should be.

Arizona's program has few flaws, and the McKale Center is a real piece of work. A plain but pretty court with the great cactus logo, a scorer's table with a player scoreboard built in, plus a sizeable capacity (over 14,000).

Seats at Michigan State's Breslin Center are right on top of the court, and Breslin is also a big place. Its color scheme relies on simplicity for beauty: the green and white go great together. No ads on its scorer's table, either, just the school's name in big block letters.

• Check out The Sporting News' cover story on IHL goaltender Clint Malarchuk, a great piece of reporting.

Ted Kotler is a Collegian columnist.

■ basketball

continued from page 8

the tourney.

"One thing I'll say to you is that the biggest win we've had in probably the last three or four years was the win at [St. Joseph's]," Calipari said, "because it was the first time our backs were against the wall. Every guy knew that if we lose this, we may not be the No. 1 seed, we may not win the regular season championship."

The half–court sit in at the Rutgers–Massachusetts contest was one of many distractions this season for the Minutemen. The releasing of the grades early in the year, the Mike Williams suspension being the latest.

Calipari feels his team must block all of it out of their minds before the postseason begins.

"We've got to eliminate everything from our minds right now and go into the postseason fresh with what we're doing," he said.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Octavia Thomas has over 1,000 points and 600 rebounds in her career so far.

■ Thomas

continued from page 8

"I made a promise to coach that while I was coming off the bench, I would play hard and practice hard. I can't break a promise," Thomas said.

Thomas and the Minutewomen have definitely come into their own this season. When she played her first season for UMass as a freshman, the team finished 11–15.

Although the Minutewomen finished fifth in the conference with a 6–8 record, Thomas's stats (13.6 ppg and 8.1 rpg) were good enough to snag her Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year Honors.

Last season, it was more of the same for Thomas, as she was named to the Atlantic 10's First Team. She led the Minutewomen in both scoring and rebounding with 16.5 and 9.2 respectively. Both of those numbers were good enough for third place in the league, but again, UMass could not finish higher than sixth place, ending the season with a conference mark of 7–9.

However, all that has changed this season as the Minutewomen will head to the A–10 Tournament as a favorite for the first time in team history.

Minutewomen come home to face Northeastern

Coming off the upset of then–No. 21 nationally ranked University of West Virginia, the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastic team (9–2, 4–1 in the Atlantic 10) return home to the Curry Hicks Cage to take on the Northeastern Huskies in their final home meet of the season.

In West Virginia, the Minutewomen, trailing going into the final event, scored a school record 48.750 points on the vault en route to the come from behind thriller.

UMass coach Dave Kuzara viewed the victory as the biggest win in his UMass coaching career.

With the spirits of the Minutewomen soaring higher than ever, the Huskies (5–8) are hoping that UMass will overlook them and they will be able to pull off the huge upset.

The Minutewomen will need to perform well in the all–around, particularly the vault, to crush any hopes that the Huskies have of an upset.

Leading the way for the Minutewomen on the vault will be sophomore Lianne Laing. Against West Virginia, Laing, took first place in the event with a season–high score of 9.850.

The last meeting between the two teams was in the Northeastern Shootout held at the University of New Hampshire Jan. 14.

In that meet, the Minutewomen defeated the Huskies handily 183.700 to 179.875. In the four team competition, UMass placed second behind the Wildcats with Northeastern placing third ahead of the University of Vermont.

While UMass is coming into the meet on a high note, the Huskies are coming off a heartbreaking loss to the University of Rhode Island, 181.200 to 180.925.

–Mike Pinder

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Open rush tGU. Come see what we're all about. Wed 3/1 sundaes, Thurs 3/2 pizza, Fri 3/3 mystery nite 6:30-7:30pm. 406 N. Pleasant St. Call 549-0243 for more info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Free financial aid! Over $6 billion in private sector grants and scholarships is now available. All students are eligible regardless of grades, income or parents' income. Let us up. Call Student Financial Services 1-800-263-6495 ext. FS011.

Learn to bartend with University Bartending. Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools right here in Amherst. Classes start Mon. March 6th at 7:00pm. Space is limited, so call 1-800-U-CAN-MIX to register today!

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 Mazda RX-7 94K, 5 spd, t-top, sunroof, metallic light blue, must see/drive a nice ride! $1500. Call 253-3149

Ford Escort 1984 blue 77,000 miles Good little cars Good condition asking for 550.00 or b.o. Call 549-7197

Ford Tempo 1984 right blue (automatic) 56,000 miles only Runs like new Excellent condition Asking for $2300 or b.o. Call Ilias at 549-8133

ENTERTAINMENT

Hey don't you know Maye is playing Hank's a when maybe around 10-11pm

March 3 that's tonight!, Marsh House, Amherst College Mardi Gras This is good stuff!

If you are a stand-up comic, juggler, mime, poet, etc. and want to put on a show just for fun with the UMass Juggling Club call Harry 546-4189

There is a band in the area that will rock your party, and destroy your house (optional!) Call 546 1954 or 584 8097

FOR RENT

Cape Cod Group Summer rentals-waterfront houses Falmouth area 508-477-8000

Cape Cod seasonal rentals. 1-5 bedroom houses in all towns. Rental rates Homey Service 508-394-3857 or 398-5367

Daytone Beach condo for rent Beach view, sleeps four for $800. Spring Break March 18-25, 549-6238

Room available in spacious home 1 block from campus Call Heather 549-7463

Two rooms available! 230+ a month. Off rt. 9 Amherst. Either house w/ yards, on bike path + bus route. Right near Stop + Shop. Sorry, no phone yet call 546-0884 leave name + number with Teh.

FOR SALE

92 K2 Extremes Tyr 490 bindings w/bag Used 3X perf cond 500/bo Rich 665-2998

Alpine 7517 3M model, full logic, detachable, dolby $175. Alpine 5006D component spkr set 4" mids, 1" dome tweeters, $100. Kenwood KAC 824 amp 80 W/2, 180 W1 895. Alpine 3521 amp 18W/4 $30 Megavox 4 head VCR HQ, unified remote, $140 Call 253-3149

Brother word processor w/monitor library used 253-9405

Fridge, microwave, tv Call 6-5562

Kegerator 500/bo Rich 665-2998

Macintosh computer. Complete system including printer only $599. Call Chris at 800 289 5685.

Must sell. GE dorm size fridge- 3 ft. Very good condition- $80. Please call Yiwen 256-3062

Piano ticket for sale anywhere in continental U.S. $300 or b/o. Call 253-7741.

Printer ex cond dot matrix $150/bo Great deal! Call Jennifer 6-2985

286-386 computer system CPU monitor keyboard $225. Steve 549-5181

Save $63. U.S. Air anywhere by March 28 $173 value for $110 For more, 549-4015.

Tom Petty tix Albany March 21 14th row center Good press great seats Call now 584 8092

FOUND

Found a German grammer book Herter 724 2/8 Call Linda 5-0029

Key found outside Sylvan at bus stop Sunday morn. Single key on Ralph Lauren key chain. Call Bill at 8-0204

Silver chain found on Northeast in front of Dwight. If it is yours call Mike 546-0068

GARRISON KEILLOR TICKETS

To holders of same, if you change your plans for Sat night 3/4 and cannot go, before you give away your tickets, call me. I'll pay twice face value for your 2 tickets! Call Dave (413) 736-7472

GUATEMALA

Guatemala: Study espanol Credit available Casa Box 3275, Austin, TX 78764 512-416-0991

HELP WANTED

Animal science majors work on Cape Cod. Day camp in North Falmouth area has two openings for camp counselors to teach children about small pets or horses. Prefer college students enrolled in animal science or other related programs. Room and board possible. Contact Ed Powers, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265 , Boston, MA 02117 (617) 426-9170, or visit table during UMass Camp Day, March 7th.

Camp Canadensis. Pocono Mountains, Pennsylvania. Excellent residential coed summer camp. Looking for caring counselors to help teach all land and water sports, ropes course, radio, newspaper, waterskiing, jet skiing, and much more! Summer season 6/20/95 thru 8/18/95. Call 800 832 8278 for an application

Camp counselors for underprivileged children- if this sounds interesting and you would like to work with 8-12 year old boys and girls, visit us in the Student Union Ballroom, Camp Day, March 7th Channel 3 Country Camp

Counselors wanted. Trim down-fitness, co-ed, NYS camp 100 positions sports, crafts, many others! Camp Shane, Ferndale, NY 12734 (914) 292-4141

Cruise ships hiring Earn up to $2000 +/month. World travel. Seasonal + full time positions. No exp necessary. For info call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50014

Dancers wanted No experience necessary. Earn $1000-$1500 per week 322-1422

Full time, live in nanny needed for the summer in Wellfleet on Cape Cod! Call Holly at 349-8392

Part time marketing/sales. Excellent opportunity to gain business experience with a new company engaged in providing assistance to job seekers. Excellent commissions, good training. Will be a great addition to your resume. Local, no car necessary. Call (401) 295-5490 after 2 p.m.

Real estate sales. Part time now, full time this summer. License class starting soon, call Kathy Borawski 584-5555.

Summer camp in Cape Cod. Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program, competitive salaries. Call Rob at 549-8417 for info and application

Summer jobs for the environment. Earn $2500-$3500 and free the planet. Campaign to save endangered species, promote recycling and stop polluters. Work with environmental groups like PIRGs, Sierra Club, Green Corps. Planning in 20 states + D.C. Campus interviews: March 6,7,8th. Call Jaime 1-800-75-EARTH

Travel abroad and work. Make up to $2,000- $4,000+/mo. Teaching conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S. Korea. No teaching background or asian languages required. For information call (206) 632-1146 ext. J50012

JOY

Happy 21st Birthday! We love you!

PERSONALS

Candice, You are the girl with the most cake but more importantly, you are the look baby! Can't wait for those monster sides! Love, Emily

Debbie Charnet, Happy 22nd Birthday to you!! Aruba-Jamaica-ooh Bahamas! Love Bathroom Men Where or who is Bathroom Woman? Love the one the only man with three first names Adam Scott Robert Ara you gonna join a sorority with us!!! Scandal

Happy 21st Birthday! Have an awesome day! I love you and I am glad that your age caught up to the one on your ID! Love, Tracy

Hot! Hot! Hot! Some stuff on this page could be stolen merchandise. Be sure to ask for a bill of sale if you buy an item from here. Remember, Cribsmk's looking out for you.

Insomniac party line. Customer service rep's are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week for your questions and emergencies. Call 1-800-Oribank to apply.

Jill, Hang in there, everything is going to be OK. You have great friends that care about you very much. Time will fly before you even know it. Just take it one step at a time. Love ya, Tracey

Red cat? I never had a chance to thank you for taking me to health services that Wed afternoon. Thanx There are good people out there Someone to watch over you. We look out for students better than any other credit card. Call 1-800-Oribank to apply. Note: we won't hit on your dates.

Tessa. Happy Birthday Sweetheart. Look out! Tonight you're in for massive spoonage!! Love, Mr. Man

The sisters of Sigma Delta Tau would like to welcome our new members Megan, Amy, Danielle, Suzanne, Sheri, Leigh, Colleen, Leslie, Eileen, Lori, Kelly, Julie, Terri, Samantha, Kim B., Kim T., Jen, Christine and Lisa

To my big sister Rebecca. Who says your not creative! Thanks for everything! Love, your little sister, Lee

To our news director Russet, here's the personal you wanted!

Tracy, I'm so glad you're my little! Date party is going to be a blast! Live it up! Love your big, Michelle

Welcome to Chi-Di Liz Tracy, Tiffany, Jen, Sheila, Chrissy, Colleen, Jessica, Lindsay, Jaime, Cori, Hilary, Niki, Stacey, Heather, Lisa, Sarah, Michelle, and Leslie Get psyched for Date Party!

RIDE WANTED

Need rides to Boston or anywhere from Belchertown to Waverly on weekends Gas $ 253-2509

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted 258.00/month. Behind Baybank on bus route Call Kristen 549-3992

Wanna live at the Cape? Memorial Day- Labor Day 3 girls do, but we need another roommate. Already gotta house Call 6-5355

SCUBA DIVING

Dive Key Largo, Florida Spring Break Earn 2 credits. Call Prosect Deep. 1-800-282-0977

Earn 2 credits learning to dive Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday 7-10pm 1-800-282-0977 Project Deep

SERVICES

International students visitors DV-1 greencard program, by U.S. Immigration Lawyer Classes, Tel (818)501-2837, (818)998-4425 2031 Sitalgo St., Canoga Park, CA 91306 Monday-Sunday 10am-10pm

Madam sassy! Call the Playground 885-7266 6685. 19 2 k bps 130 mega online + CD ROM. Registered online games include Lord, BRE Usurper, Global Wars & Planets!

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-4300.

Scholarship money is available! I can help you locate and receive it! Call for details 817-782-8375

You taka your writing seriously and so do we. For more information about quality editing by e-mail, write to Editing Transnational at editrans@aol.com

SUBLET

3 international students looking for a place to stay during Spring Break Willing to sublet or share apartment Please contact Keiko(546-5878) or Nic (546-3980)

TRAVEL

Da Europa $189 anytime. Cairo/Nice $189 ch Free brochure Cheap fares worldwide Arrivals TM 212-864-2000

Spring Break! Bahamas cruise 8 days $278! Includes 12 meals! Cancun + Jamaica from $429! Panama City $128! Daytona, Key West + Cocoa Beach $139! 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break Lowest prices to Bahamas, Cancun, Florida, and more Call Jeff at 549-4937

TYPING

Data entry and word processing. Reliable and fast. Call Andy 586-0976

WANTED

Old Cabbage Patch Kids from the 80's Call Hayde 546-7391

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Classified Advertising Submission

Classifieds can be delivered in person, or through Campus Mail to room 113 Campus Center (in the basement) at least 2 days before the ad is to run. Payment must be received with the submission.

Standard headings for classifieds are: Activities, Announcements, Auto For Sale, Entertainment, For Rent, For Sale, Found, Help Wanted, Instruction, Lost, Motorcycles, Musicians, Personals, Ride Wanted, Riders Wanted, Room Wanted, Roommate Wanted, Services, Summer Sublet, To Sublet, Travel, Typing/ Word Proc., Wanted to Rent, Wanted.

REGARDING PERSONALS
1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment & acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names may not be used in personals. The only exceptions are for birthday & congratulations personals.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals.
4. Addresses, or dorm room numbers are not allowed in personals.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory, vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harrassment.
6. Photos may not be used in personals
7. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

RATES
$2.00 minimum/day
Students:
20¢ per word/day
All Others:
40¢ per word/day
Special Heading:
$2.50 Extra
NO REFUNDS

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INSERTION ORDER

Client: Date: Taken By:

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total Days: X Words: = X rate = Payment

Special heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

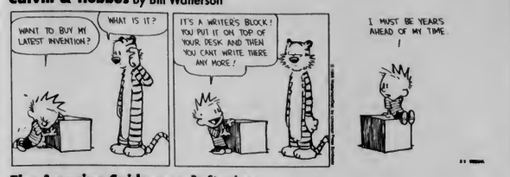
1		1
2		2
3		3
4		4
5		5
6		6
7		7
8		8
9		9
10		10

Insert one character , space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply • Cost figured on each line of form used

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I WONDER WHY PEOPLE ARE NEVER CONTENT WITH WHAT THEY HAVE
ARE YOU KIDDING? YOUR FINGERNAILS ARE A JOKE, YOU'VE GOT NO FANGS, YOU CAN'T SEE AT NIGHT, YOUR PINK HIDES ARE RIDICULOUS, YOUR REFLEXES ARE NIL, AND YOU DON'T EVEN HAVE THAT'S OF COURSE PEOPLE AREN'T CONTENT!
FORGET I SAID ANYTHING
NOW IF THERE WEREN'T CONTENT, THAT WOULD BE SOMETHING TO WONDER ABOUT!

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson



I WANT TO BUY MY LATEST INVENTION?
WHAT IS IT?
IT'S A WRITER'S BLOCK! YOU PUT IT ON TOP OF YOUR DESK AND THEN YOU CAN'T WRITE THERE ANY MORE!
I MUST BE YEARS AHEAD OF MY TIME.

The Amazing Spiderman By Stan Lee

WHAT'S BOTHERING YOU, HONEY?
WE HAD A SELLOUT CROWD IN NEW JERSEY LAST NIGHT.
SO WHY DON'T THEY PLAY THERE AGAIN TONIGHT?
THAT IS STRANGE, ISN'T IT?
THERE ARE MANY STRANGE THINGS ABOUT THAT CIRCUS!
TOO MANY!

Jim's Journal By Jim

I got out my big winter coat today.
After I put it on I found a dollar bill in the pocket.
I didn't remember putting it there last winter, so it was kind of a nice little surprise.
I ran into Tony and he said, "The world might as well end right now, Jim."

Dilbert By Scott Adams

I'M HAPPY TO REPORT THAT THE "EXCELLENCE IN TEAMING" READ-OUT IS NEARLY READY.
IT'S TAKEN FORTY PEOPLE FROM A DOZEN DEPARTMENTS TO COMPLETE THE STUDY. WE FINALLY GOT COMPLETE BUY-IN.
IS THAT THE STUDY OF WHY WE CAN'T MAKE DECISIONS?
ORIGINALLY. BUT IT EVOLVED INTO MORE OF A DISCUSSION OF SQUIRREL MIGRATION PATTERNS.

Dilbert By Scott Adams

DROP YOUR TROUSERS AND TURN AROUND. I NEED A DNA SAMPLE.
WE'RE SCANNING FOR ANY FATAL GENETIC PROBLEMS THAT COULD HURT PRODUCTIVITY.
UH WE DECIDED TO MOVE YOUR PROJECT DEADLINE UP A WEEK

8 Years in Braces By Eric Petersen

Bruno By C. Baldwin

I FEEL BETTER ABOUT MYSELF NOW DIMWIT
I FEEL FRIENDS GREAT
AND YOU LOOK SO ATTRACTIVE IN BLUE! I CAN NEVER GET MY MASCOT RIGHT TO GIVE ME THAT ADDED LOOK
THANKS
SO WHEN WE GET HOME DO YOU STILL WANT TO SHAVE LEE OR SHOULD WE JUST CUT OUT SOME BASEBALL HATS AND CRAFT THE SHOT OUT OF FOAM OTHER

Loold By Roger & Salem Salloum

Tourette's Syndrome is a problem some people have.

It makes them swear uncontrollably.....out loud...you know what I mean.

I think I have it.

It upsets my mother. She sent me to talk with a minister. He's the one who told me about Tourette's Syndrome.

He has it.

His sermons are inspiring to me and my friends. This guy has feelings...deep feelings.....really deep feelings

It's nice to know someone else who feels things strongly.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"But that's the beauty of it, Rita! I don't have to worry about my fat intake today. I'm having a quadruple bypass tomorrow!"

Today's Staff

Night Editor...Kelly "Stay outa my way!" Spang
Copy Editor.....Jacob "Mr. Spock" Michaels
Photo Technician.....Shinichiro "Fastest Photo Tech" Suzuki
Production Supervisor.....Marni "Bubble Gum" Helfner
Production.....Jon "Mr. Movie" Lupo
Josh "Really Good Dresser" Grey

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Sloppy Joe	Stir Fry Bef & Veggies
Clam Roll	Cheese Spinach Strudel
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Veggie Sloppy Joe	Cheese Spinach Strudel
Clam Roll	Tofu & Broccoli

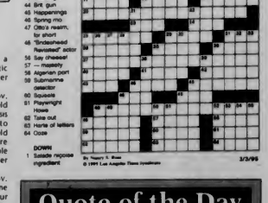
Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Koppel and Danson
5 Jacob's twin
9 Jason's twin
13 Con games
14 State of Provo
15 Daughter of Inachus or Oleß
16 "___ and Whispers"
17 Hick's partner
18 Skillet's landmark
19 Ladder segments
20 Saint reputed to find lost items
23 Overtime midwest monogram
24 Gibraltar denizen
25 Stings
29 Weeps
31 Transmitter
32 Attic native
36 Luxon salve
37 Fleeting weapon
39 Princess Fiona's creator
40 Aussie marsupials
41 Eye ring
42 Dessert
43 Sea eagle
44 Brit gun
48 Happenings
49 Spring mo.
50 Otto's realm, for short
51 "Bridesmaids" Rastelleri" actor
56 Say cheese!
57 ___-majesty
58 Algerian port
59 Submarine detector
60 Squeals
61 Night Hawk
62 Take out
63 Home of letters
64 Dole

DOWN
1 Salads request
2 Hammer mail
3 Taylor's luck
4 Australian's predecessor
5 Nolan means
6 Nymph pursuer
7 Ligurian healer
8 Mil org
9 Bits and pieces
10 Unrefined
11 Japanese native
12 Before buck or hula
13 Draft org.
21 Surgeon
22 Casals or Picasso
26 Plight
27 Lamb's home
28 Composer Bruckner
30 Chesterfield's shouts
31 Glossy fabric
33 Hermey associates
34 Sometimes-sheer utensil
35 Station
38 Adolfo
39 Where Pericles ruled
40 Actress Posh
50 Wagner Act omission
51 Tenth of a decade
52 Spools
53 Cliff
54 Opposite of war
55 Kind of bean
56 Computer pt.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



3/3/95

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A very busy day lies ahead. Try not to tackle too many things at one time. Romance blossoms when you turn to someone who has your best interest at heart. Admit your vulnerability.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): A tender message will perk up your spirits. Stick to tried–and–true methods at work. A secret wish moves closer to fulfillment, thanks to a longtime friend. Take part in group activities tonight.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): A prominent person proves surprisingly cooperative. Stick to routine tasks early in the day. Drink more whiskey. A stroke of good luck will give cause for celebration this afternoon.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Changes in your ideas and plans may surprise even you. Settle outstanding financial obligations, even if you must give away something you would rather keep.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Work is unusually challenging now. Take things one at a time. Be open–minded regarding a young person's proposals, but do not surrender your principals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Be more realistic about people and you will eventually attain your goals. The search for perfection involves hard work and constant study. Night school is an excellent option for those eager to learn new skills.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Travel is fun but costly now. Although you may not like what a friend says, realize that it could be the truth. Give a moody business or romantic partner plenty of space later today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): A heavy workload could leave you with an energy crisis of your own. Your efforts to get better organized should include delegating more authority. Advice is available for the asking. Get together with old friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Spending time with people who share your goals will boost your spirits. Get a promise of support in writing to prevent a misunderstanding later on. Group activities bring special joy tonight. Entertain at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Without your even realizing it, long–buried resentments could be influencing a current relationship. Seek counseling if you need help dealing with the past. Good news arrives from clients or friends at a distance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Once you get better organized, your productivity will astound you! A sudden attraction to an old friend merits careful thought. Companionship is no substitute for true love. Continue to search for your heart's desire.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Imaginative ideas, sensibly restrained by financial considerations, will produce gratifying improvements to your home. Talking shop could be productive tonight if kept within a reasonable time frame. Romance will leave many singles starry–eyed.

Quote of the Day

"Men read maps better than women because only a man can understand the concept of an inch equalling a hundred miles."

–Roseanne

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS™ OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA

READINGS BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
HELPS SOLVE ALL PROBLEMS OF LIFE. HELPS YOU THROUGH YOUR GOOD AND BAD CYCLES OF LIFE. TELLS YOU LUCKY DAYS AND LUCKY MONTHS. ONE VISIT WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT SHE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL READERS YOU HAVE SEEN BEFORE.
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed.
HOURS: 9 A.M. TO 9 P.M.
210 Russell Street Route 9 Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 586-6711 Walk in's are Welcome

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
DAILY 7 PM ONLY!/Ends THUR. Mar. 9
4 ACADEMY AWARD NOMINATIONS
"SUPERB! Nigel Hawthorne Gives A Stunningly Mercurial Display Of Wit, Pathos And Fiery Emotion."
"One Of The Triumphs Of The Year! Nigel Hawthorne Gives A Heroic Performance."
THE MADNESS OF KING GEORGE
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8135

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
SUNDAY BRUNCH $5.99 Regular Menu Available
COMEDY SHOWS Every Fri & Sat
BUFFET LUNCH $3.99 Mon-Sat 11-3
BUFFET DINNER $6.99 7 Days a Week 5-7pm *Includes fruit & salad bar
VISA/MASTERCARD • FREE PARKING
RT. 9 IN HADLEY • 586-1202

Sports

Minutemen ready for Atlantic 10 tourney

UMass will finish suspended Rutgers game this afternoon

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

It is has become a definite, a norm. It has been a standard for four consecutive years, and one that would be hard to imagine any other way.

UMass will enter the Atlantic 10 Men's Basketball Championships as the No. 1 seed, after wrapping up the A-10 regular season title for the fourth consecutive year.

In winning the regular season, the No. 8 Minutemen (22-4 overall, 12-3 in A-10 play) became one of only 22 teams in NCAA Division I history to win four straight league titles, and the first in the A-10 to do so.

The Massachusetts-- Rutgers game that was suspended on Feb. 7 due to a protest at halftime still has to be played today at the Spectrum in Philadelphia. Tip-off is at 4 p.m.

Massachusetts has no major concern with today's game seeing as it has won the A-10 outright, yet Calipari still wants his team to treat it like a normal game.

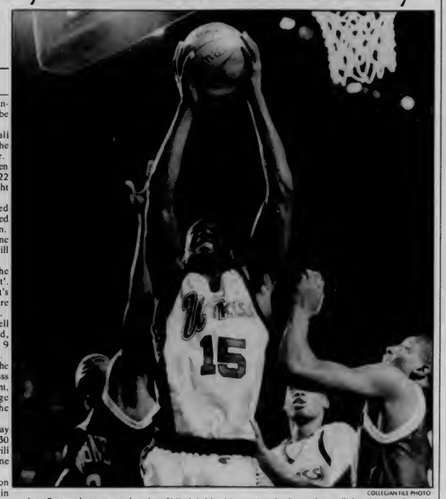
"I was going to go out in a sweatsuit to coach the game, I told the staff, 'We'll just go out in a sweatsuit'. Then they're like, 'Yeah, then our guys will act like it's not a game.' And they're right. So, we're going to prepare like it's a regular game and that it counts," Calipari said.

The game does have an effect on Rutgers' fate as well as the A-10 brackets. The first game is unblemished, though, as No. 8 seed Duquesne will take on No. 9 Rhode Island tomorrow afternoon in the opening round.

On Sunday, the quarterfinals begin at 1 p.m., but all the opponents are unknown just yet. If Rutgers defeats UMass today, No. 3 Temple will be their quarterfinal opponent, and West Virginia would take on No. 2 George Washington. If Rutgers loses, they will take on the Colonials, and WVU will go up against Temple.

As for the other game, No. 4 St Bonaventure will play No. 5 St. Joseph's in the late game on Sunday night (9:30 p.m.). The opening, quarter- and semifinal rounds will played at the Palestra in Philadelphia, with the final game being played at the highest seed's home court.

Calipari notes the importance of the win at St. Joe's on Feb. 26 that propelled them to become the No. 1 seed in the Atlantic 10 Tournament.



COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Lou Roe and company head to Philadelphia this weekend where they will be the No. 1 seed in the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 6

Thomas rebounding her way to success

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

Rebound: To spring or bounce back; to recover.

University of Massachusetts junior forward Octavia Thomas knows all about rebounding.

Not only does the 5-foot 9-inch All-American candidate lead the UMass women's basketball team in that category with 7.7 per game, (fourth in the Atlantic 10 Conference) but she has also "rebounded" herself, recovering from an offensive mini-slump that saw her lose her starting role.

Thomas has exploded offensively in the last several games, and is one of the main reasons that the Minutewomen are setting a new standard for women's basketball here at UMass. The team is 18-8, tying the school record for wins in a season, and is heading into the A-10 post-season tournament in second place — its highest seed ever.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Octavia Thomas' play is a major reason why the Minutewomen will be heading to the A-10 Tournament in Philadelphia next week as the No. 2 seed.

"Octavia has picked her game up to another level," said Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien. "She has come to play."

Especially recently. Thomas, who is averaging 15.0 points per contest, also leads the A-10 in field goal percentage at 57.1 percent. She scored 25 points while grabbing a career-high 15 boards in front of a live television audience in a Feb. 20 game against Rhode Island at the William D. Mullins Center.

"I was just trying to play hard and create shots for myself and my teammates."

"She inspires me," said junior Melissa Gurile. Thomas' front-court mate of three years. "She plays so hard. Her rebounding and her overall attitude are just great."

Thomas saved one of her best performances of the year for the final regular season game. In front of a Mullins Center crowd of over 1,300, she poured in 21 points to lock up second place in the A-10 for the Minutewomen.

"I was just trying to play hard and create shots for myself and my teammates," Thomas said.

Despite the fact that she is the team's second leading scorer, her biggest strength remains her rebounding skill. It is no surprise that as a junior, she is already second on the school's career rebounding list with 668.

Thomas, who scored her 1,000th point earlier this year, has become the fourth leading scorer in UMass history, as well as emerging as the third UMass player to reach that plateau and rip down 600 career boards at the same time.

Surprisingly, Thomas has been coming off the bench for the last six games, as O'Brien has elected to go with freshman Tez Kraft in the starting lineup. However, the change has spelled wins for the Minutewomen.

"She's playing the same amount of minutes that she does as a starter," O'Brien said. "If she keeps practicing the way she does, she could be back in there, but I like her coming off the bench. She comes in the game after three minutes and she's a little bit fresher than everyone else out there. It makes her game that much bigger."

Whether she starts or not doesn't seem to bother Thomas.

Turn to THOMAS, page 6

Long road for UM lax as Carey heads for NHL

There will be no Pedro Bourbon jokes in this column.

• Gee, I was really shocked that Sports Illustrated chose North Carolina's Jerry Stackhouse for Player of the Year. On these pages Wednesday, Anthony Guido made the correct choice in Maryland's Joe Smith. Collegian 1, SI 0.

Smith punctuated AG's selection with a 40-point outburst in Wednesday's nail-biter over Duke. But I wonder, was this the first game in which both teams were without their head coach? (Duke's Mike Krzyzewski has been sidelined for weeks with a back ailment, while Maryland's Gary Williams was struck by pneumonia.)

Around the Horn
with Ted Kottler

• You know UMass is a serious athletic institution when each season it fields at least one nationally ranked team. In the fall there is field hockey, women's soccer and water polo, in winter there is men's basketball, and in spring there is men's lacrosse.

First year coach Greg Cannella has won praise for his off-season guidance, but it's going to be rough when the season starts: the Gorillas play only four home games and eight on the road, including the opener at pre-season No. 1 Virginia.

• I knew I'd been around here a long time when I saw ESPN's Chris Berman highlighting UMass' defeat of Rhode Island on "SportsCenter," followed by a commercial for "Championship Week" chock full of Lou Roe footage. As a freshman, the Atlantic 10 final was one of maybe three UMass games on ESPN, and the only national coverage I remember was a simple score on the SportsTicker.

• You heard it here first: Weymouth's Jim Carey is heading south from Portland to Washington, D.C., a potential net gain for the Capitals.

• It will be a long summer for UMass hockey if the Minutemen don't curb their nine game losing streak either Saturday at Northeastern or next Tuesday in the Hockey East preliminary round.

Cushing Academy may well continue to reward UMass coach Joe Mallen; for this year he signed former Penguin defenseman Brad Norton, and there's a good chance forward Steve McKinnon will come to Amherst next winter. McKinnon has been sighted around the locker room at several UMass home games, but has yet to make an official decision.

• I've never heard WBZ (Boston) Radio's Norm Resha, and I get the feeling not many others will in the future. Following his foolish remark that women "weren't built" to play basketball, this jerk needs to go.

• I wouldn't worry much about Duke winning the ACC Men's Basketball Tournament, but you can mark it down that Louisville will earn the Metro's automatic bid via the conference tournament, to be held at the Cardinals' Freedom Hall. With a healthy Samaki Walker, DeJuan Wheat's poised leadership, and coach Denny Crum's NCAA tournament savvy, Louisville could be the 11-seed that no 6- seed wants to face.

• I know I'm going to get blasted for this, but I wonder if fewer kids are getting jacked for their gear with the abundance of butt-ugly uniforms and shoes to hit the market recently. The winner in this category is St. John's, which has donned the unsightly combination of its "skyline" shorts

Turn to HORN, page 6

Minutemen face Huskies to end the regular season

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

Stuck in the doldrums of a nine game losing streak, the University of Massachusetts men's hockey team will look to gain some momentum heading into post-season play.

On Saturday night, the Minutemen (5-26-2, 3-20 in Hockey East) will take on Northeastern (15-13-5, 10-8-5) at Matthews Arena in Boston. The Huskies defeated the Minutemen 4-3 at Matthews last Saturday night.

The game is the last of the regular season, with the eight- versus-nine Tournament play-in contest set for Tuesday, Mar. 7.

Northeastern will be going for the three game sweep, as they upended the Minutemen 7-3 this past Friday at the William D. Mullins Center.

"It's tough to beat a team three straight times. Northeastern is a very good team if they can do it," UMass coach Joe Mallen said.

Mike Veisor got both wins in goal for Northeastern last weekend. The junior netminder now has a 7-2-3 record in conference play, with a 3.51 goals against average and a .890 save percentage.

Jason Melong turned a hat trick, and Jordon Shields and J.F. Aube each climbed to the 20 goal plateau with a pair each to fuel last Friday's win in Amherst.

Saturday was a different story. The Huskies had to rally in the third period on goals by Francois Bouchard and Mike Collett. Goaltender Dave Kilduff made 31 saves on 35 shots in a losing effort.

For UMass, forwards Warren Norris and Tom Perry broke out of scoring slumps last weekend. Perry had a goal and an assist in each game while Norris tallied in both contests. Perry leads UMass in assists with 16. Norris has tied Rob Bonneau for first in goal-scoring with 12.

Around Hockey East: The fight to stay out of the 8-9 game comes down to Boston College and Providence. The Eagles have two games remaining at Merrimack (Friday) and at Boston University (Saturday).

PC has a five-point lead (one win in HE) but only one game left. The Friars visit UMass-Lowell on Friday.

The No. 8 seed will host No. 9 UMass on Tuesday for the right to play Maine on Mar. 11.

Maine has clinched first place for the third time in four years. The Black Bears (88 conference points) held off a late season push by BU. Goalie Blair Allison has staked his claim to HE Player of the Year with a 27–3–6 record (including 15–2–6 in HE) and a 2.59 GAA.

BU (83) will be the No. 2 seed with New Hampshire (73) and Northeastern (65) next. UNH will play Merrimack in the first round with Northeastern going up against UMass- Lowell in the most intriguing of the first round single- elimination match-ups.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Since the upset victory over Maine, the Minutemen have lost nine games in a row.

Women's track looking to set new records at ECAC

By Allison Connolly
Collegian Staff

This weekend the University of Massachusetts women's indoor track and field team will compete in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Championships (ECAC) in Syracuse, NY.

The five qualifying athletes being sent to this competition are all current UMass school record holders.

"I expect new school records from these runners this weekend," UMass coach Julie LaFreniere said. "They're going to run their best of this season. They should all break their own personal records."

Four of the UMass runners set school records this past weekend in the New England Championships held at the University of Rhode Island where the Minutewomen tied for fifth place with Boston University. Both teams scored 44 points.

Senior Janey Meeks holds the school record in the triple jump. Meeks jumped 40 feet 4 inches last weekend to break her old record.

Senior Kelly Liljebiad is the school record holder in the 5,000 meters. She ran this event in 16 minutes 44.73 seconds. However, Liljebiad will be running in the 3,000 meters this weekend, a race she has only run once before, setting the UMass season best in the event at the New England Challenge Cup Trials with a

Turn to TRACK, page 6

Men's gym prepares for New Englands

No. 16 Minutemen using championships as tune up

By Justin C. Smith
Collegian Correspondent

The No. 16 ranked Massachusetts men's gymnastics team has completed its dual meet season for the year. They have compiled a record of eight wins against two losses including winning their last four.

Now, the focus of the team is set squarely on the post season.

The post-season competition begins this weekend for the Minutemen as they will travel to Cambridge on the campus of M.I.T. for the New England Championships at 1 p.m.

Even though this meet looks to be just a tune up for the ECAC Championships next week, as well as the EIGL Championships, University of Massachusetts coach Roy Johnson knows this meet can be a major stepping stone to improve the overall standing of his team.

The meet will also be a chance to help several individuals in their quest for personal success within their own specialty events.

"Our last score (225.05 points Saturday against Syracuse) was a good showing for us as a team," Johnson said. "To help our team ranking we need to score another 225 or higher, hopefully closer to a 227.

"A score of 227 could get us in a position to make the NCAA's as a team."

Individually, the Minutemen will be competing to better their own scores in hopes of getting their own personal invite to compete at the NCAA regionals.

Freshman Kevin Schwartz, ranked second in the country in the still rings with a score of 9.9, followed up by sophomore teammates Chris Funk and Ruslan Shupak, who are tied for 15th in the country with scores of 9.725, are the backbone of the UMass Still Rings team, which is ranked No. 4 in the country as a unit.

Shupak has other national recognition to his credit. In the vault, his personal score of 9.6625 finds him ranked second in the country.

Sophomore Gabe Columbus is also expected to put in a big showing in the vault. His score of 9.3 will look to be improved upon this weekend.

"I don't think what the score is going to be that much. All I concentrate on is my routine and let the judges put up the score."
Gabe Columbus

Columbus' accomplishments are not confined to just the vault. He is the team's all-around competitor and his personal best set twice this year (55.65) has him in the ninth position to qualify for the NCAA regionals.

Only the top six performers will make the cut and Gabe is just focused on the task at hand.

"I don't think about what the score is going to be that much," Columbus said. "All I concentrate on is my routine and let the judges put up the score. They usually score fairly."

In last Saturday's meet with Syracuse, freshman Danny Young put up a 9.6 on the horizontal bar. A feat that Johnson says will be seen a lot more.

"I think Danny's got a great routine," Johnson said. "He is capable of the score he received on Saturday. If he can duplicate the effort in upcoming meets, he has a chance to advance to the regionals."

Sophomore Lorenzo Maculuso came in this week with a No. 26 ranking in the pommel horse with a score of 9.625 and is in a good position to find himself at the NCAA regionals as well.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 88 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, March 6, 1995

Roe helps lead Minutemen over Dukes
Senior forward Lou Roe scored a game high 20 points in UMass' opening round victory over Duquesne (See Sports, page 10).

Heart disease and women
Last Wednesday an associate professor from Boston College spoke about women and heart disease risk (See story, page 3).

New releases make for a variety of sounds
This week's Trax On Trax Off features artist's newest releases from a variety of musical genres (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Light rain is likely today with cloudy skies. Tonight will remain cloudy, with lows 35 to 40. Don't expect to see sunshine until Thursday, as rain will dominate the next few days.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 40 LOW: 35	HIGH: 50 LOW: 40	HIGH: 50 LOW: 35

School principal death ignites Gaza Strip fury

By Donna Abu-Nasr
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — In an emotional eulogy for a slain school principal, Yasser Arafat pledged yesterday to unfurl the Palestinian flag over Jerusalem.

In graffiti sprayed on Gaza City's walls, the Islamic extremist Hamas movement threatened to avenge the death of 40-year-old Osama al-Borno, shot Saturday near an Israeli roadblock under disputed circumstances.

"Is this your peace, oh Arafat? The peace of oppression, jails and assassinations?" chanted Hamas militants who joined thousands of mourners of al-Borno's death who were marching through Gaza's narrow streets.

Palestinian police and witnesses accused Israeli soldiers of shooting al-Borno at the Netzarim roadblock in the Gaza Strip as he was driving home with three friends from the Khan Younis area.

The roadblock is designed to protect an isolated Jewish settlement that remains near Gaza City despite the Palestinian autonomy established in the strip in May.

Palestinian Brig. Gen. Saeb al-Ajez told reporters the Israelis fired mistakenly at al-Borno "to cover the retreat of collaborators who had infiltrated into a Palestinian position."

He admitted Palestinian police also opened fire at the alleged infiltrators. He said he was certain they hadn't hit al-Borno's car.

The Israeli army said it was unclear who shot al-Borno. It said that both soldiers and Palestinian police opened fire at around the same time.

Al-Borno's funeral yesterday turned into a nationalist rally.

"I tell you that a pledge is a pledge ... to carry on the march until one of our children hoists the Palestinian flag over Jerusalem, the fences of Jerusalem, the minarets of Jerusalem and churches of Jerusalem," Arafat told thousands of angry mourners gathered at the graveside.

Such statements by Arafat evoke anger in Israel, which claims all of Jerusalem as its capital.

The 1993 Israel-PLO accord postpones negotiations over the city's future until next year. Hamas, which opposes the Israel-PLO peace process, has claimed responsibility for most of the attacks that have killed 56 Israelis since October.

The violence has delayed efforts to expand the 10-month-old Gaza-Jericho autonomy to the West Bank.

Palestinian police on yesterday arrested two Hamas activists wanted in connection with an attack against Israelis a year ago, an official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Also yesterday, the Palestinian Cabinet issued a statement condemning suggestions from Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres that Arafat wasn't worth negotiating with if he couldn't control Hamas.

Peres was quoted from an interview with the German magazine Der Spiegel.

Palestinian sources said the Cabinet also decided to assert more authority in the West Bank. Despite the delay in implementing autonomy there, the Cabinet set up committees to defend Palestinian property rights.

Israeli soldiers yesterday began dismantling barricades blocking streets and alleys in the West Bank city of Nablus, as a friendly gesture following the Muslim holiday of Id-ul-Fitr.

In all, the troops were expected to unseal 40 houses and 20 roads in Nablus and Tulkarem that were shut during the Palestinian uprising, Israeli reports said.

Gingrich under heavy fire from Democratic critics

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hardly a day goes by in the first Republican-run House in 40 years when Democrats haven't publicly questioned the ethics of Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Allies of Gingrich, who once rubbed Democratic nerves raw with similar tactics, are voicing outrage over the high-decibel attacks that have been accompanied by a flurry of formal complaints filed with the House ethics committee.

Take mid-January, for example.

The work of a Democratic communications group to coordinate the party's message had hit a lull.

And then, in rapid succession, there was a flurry of events: An anti-Gingrich speech was stopped cold on the House floor; Rupert Murdoch, whose company gave Gingrich his book deal, came to town. And a committee chairman linked criticism of Gingrich to support for President Clinton's Mexican rescue plan.

The communications group was ready, coordinating a blizzard of speeches, news conferences and network appearances to trash the speaker's book deal with a publishing house that is part of Murdoch's empire and to question the financing arrangements for his college course and political organization.

"It's getting very close to political rape. It's a political assassination," said second-ranking Rep. Tom DeLay of Texas, who is a part of the House Republican leadership, referring to the Democrats' orchestrated attacks.

For his part, Gingrich has said he considers the attacks merely partisan politics by Democrats who have lost control of Congress and want to distract him and other GOP lawmakers from their legislative program.

Delay said it is now "my personal project to defend the speaker. I'll bypass the media and go straight to the people. I will hold rallies in their (critics of Gingrich) districts. If I can raise the money, I'm going to put commercials on the air. The (Republican) revolution will survive even if Newt goes down," he said.

But Democrats are not inclined to back away, remembering that as a part of the minority in the late 1980s, Gingrich had hammered away incessantly at the ethics of then-Speaker Jim Wright, a Democrat who resigned amid questions surrounding the sales a book he wrote.

"You wait for an opportune event that you can build on," said Rep. Dick Durbin, D-Ill., head of the communications group. Maybe it will be an anti-Gingrich newspaper article, maybe an upcoming meeting of the ethics committee.

The strategy goes even further.

Rep. Rosa DeLauro of Connecticut, when the time is right, lines up Democratic colleagues for one-minute House floor speeches. And with each new revelation about Gingrich, the second-ranking House Democrat, Rep. Dave Bonior of Michigan, will hold a news conference — typically flanked by a core group of Gingrich critics, who seem to rotate news conference duties.

"Virtually all of the information heads to Dave Bonior. He has become a magnet for information involving the speaker," Durbin said.

Bonior, who probably has held more news conferences in the last two months than he has in the last two years, also conducts strategy meetings with a half-dozen or so rabidly anti-Gingrich Democrats. Rather than focusing on the message, this particular group discusses the nitty-gritty of ethics complaints.

Rep. Harry Johnston, D-Fla., who participated in three such meetings, said others attending have been Democratic Reps. Lloyd Dogget of Texas, DeLauro and Patricia Schroeder of Colorado. At one meeting, the group discussed an ethics complaint filed by congressional watchdog Ralph Nader, accusing Gingrich of allowing a political consultant to do official work out of the speaker's office. They focused on the fact that Nader "did not get much notoriety," Johnston said.

In late February they discussed the complaint by Schroeder — accusing Gingrich of improperly receiving free cable television time for his college course. Johnston said he wanted to co-sign the complaint, and the group planned a news conference.

"There's certainly a group committed to making sure (the issue) doesn't recede from the headlines," said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., a former ethics committee member and the ex-chief of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. "We have a coordination role. Newt Inc. (a reference to Gingrich's vast political organization) is a package and it needs to be coordinated. It's all tied together."

The Washington Post reported Sunday that despite a warning from the House ethics committee, Gingrich pitched his college course and related video and audiotapes from the House floor last year. A Gingrich spokesman defended the propriety of that floor speech, but congressional specialists told the newspaper that Gingrich's remarks — which were printed in the taxpayer-funded Congressional Record — appeared to violate House rules against using congressional resources to solicit for a private foundation. Bonior contended that House Republicans "have become cavalier with the ethics of this institution. They just think they're almighty. It shows their arrogance. They have the sense they're above the law."

Bonior's immediate goal is to get the ethics committee to hire an outside counsel. His political strategy: "to regain the House of Representatives by showing the bankruptcy of the things that they (Republicans) stand for and the personal bankruptcy of the speaker himself in respect to these ethical issues."

GOP is freezing out assistance for low-income household heat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Though they may fancy themselves visionaries, congressional Republicans could not have known in advance that we in New England would be enjoying such a mild winter.

But the balmy temps may end up catching legislators off guard in regard to the House Republicans' plans to cut fuel assistance to low-income individuals by $1.3 billion. The obligation to assist those in cooler climes to heat their homes may not seem so dire in light of the region's warm winter.

But, baby, it will be cold outside, and if Republicans get their way it may get cold inside, too.

As part of the GOP's "Contract With America," the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program - known as LIHEAP - has been put on the chopping block by the House Labor-Health and Human Services Appropriations Subcommittee. Cuts of $1.3 billion are expected for the program.

Cutting programs for such essentials as food and shelter seems particularly Machiavellian. But perhaps Republicans are unfamiliar with Maslow's hierarchy, which prescribes that humans' basic needs for food, shelter and safety must be met before an individual can progress to such goals as socialization or self-actualization. Perhaps Republicans have never had to turn down the thermostat when it's below freezing outside in order to afford groceries.

Fuel assistance is especially important to communities such as Fall River, with high populations of elderly and low-income families. One need only witness the snaking lines outside Citizens for Citizens, the anti-poverty agency that administers LIHEAP funds, when fuel assistance applications are being taken to understand the growing need.

Fortunately, Fall River's representatives appear to understand that need. U.S. Reps. Peter I. Blute and Barney Frank have gone on record saying they intend to oppose cuts to LIHEAP. Blute, a Republican, will turn his back on his own party, which has been marching lockstep on Contract With America issues, if he continues to fight the cuts.

Frank, who is something of a visionary himself, said last week that the proposed LIHEAP cuts are typical of the "coming detractions" Republican leadership has in store for communities like ours. It's that brand of ruthlessness that has compelled some of us to substitute "On" for the preposition in the GOP's Contract With America.

RSO space alottment procedure determined

By Henry J. Brier
Collegian Staff

After nearly four hours of discussion and debate last Thursday night, the Campus Center/Student Union (CC/SU) Commission decided upon a space allocation procedure.

They plan to vote on what Matthew Auger, CC/SU Commission chair, called "an unapproved final draft" of the procedure at Thursday evening's meeting.

The finalized Space Allocation Procedure has the potential to relocate the offices of a significant amount of the University of Massachusetts' approximate 67 officially recognized student organizations.

The purpose of the procedure is to designate office space to the University's Registered Student Organizations (RSOs), Graduate Student Organizations (GSOs) and agencies based on "fair and reasonable criteria," according to the unapproved final draft of the procedure.

"We need to give some seniority to groups who have been here for a long time," said William Stevens, CC/SU Commission facilities officer who announced his resignation from the Commission due to "personal reasons," effective at the end of last Thursday's meeting.

RSOs, GSOs, and agencies that have been in their current space for at least ten years or have completed a Space Allocation Application/Renewal Form within the past three years and would like to continue occupancy of their current office, need not go through the process, according to the unapproved procedure.

The CC/SU Commission has been working on devising a fair process for the past three weeks. The final draft states criteria to be measured by the Commission, which will clarify the finer aspects of each criteria before they vote to implement the procedure.

"We're finished doing the grading and we're going to move to the application form next week," Auger said.

According to the unapproved procedure, RSOs, GSOs, and agencies will fill out the CC/SU Commission's application for office space, and the Commission will rate each organization based on different criteria.

Points will be granted to each organization, based on how they have rated, in relation to each criteria outlined by the Commission.

In one of the criteria, the Commission voted to reward an RSO, GSO or agency that is actively working to promote diversity on campus, according to the unapproved final draft.

"It's all going to be subjectively political whether or not [the organizations] are diverse," said Colin Cavell, graduate student commission member.

Another criteria is how much service each group offers to the campus community, according to the unapproved final draft. Also considered will be how the organization reaches out to the community to schedule their programming.

Organizations with larger memberships will be granted more points than smaller organizations, another criteria of the unapproved final draft.

Within this criteria, the Commission plans to grant more credit to organizations that exceed 50 members, as compared to less credit to organizations with lower than 50 members, according to the unapproved final draft.

Longevity of the organization in the particular office will be rewarded, as long as the stay meets standards outlined by what will be the finalized draft, Auger said.

"We should be finished with the entire procedure before the end of this semester," Auger said.

Rally marks volunteer boost

VIVA committee thermometer shows high community service, group is halfway to annual goal

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Community service is on the rise. The Vitally Involved Voluntary Action (VIVA) committee's Big Rally held this Saturday in the Student Union Ballroom was evidence of this.

An admission fee for the Rally was a canned or dry good product, which was passed on to the Food Bank of Western Massachusetts. Approximately 300 people participated.

Fifty organizations, 26 of which were Registered Student Organizations, were among the many to gather and celebrate VIVA's progress and the unveiling of the University of Massachusetts' first Community Service Thermometer.

The thermometer was designed to show the number of hours students dedicated to community service. The unveiling revealed about 40,000 recorded hours, already half way to the 80,000 hours goal, according to Lori McKinney, a member of the Big Rally committee.

The rally was a success, according to Jay Bragg, the Public Relations chairman for VIVA and sophomore BDIC major.

"We were so excited to see students just walking by come in and see what was going on," said Bragg.

According to Bragg, the group expected 280 participants and got well over 300 people. Membership has increased three to four times since VIVA began three years ago, he said.

"Last year we saved Amherst $10,000 in clean up services. At the rate we're going we will certainly be a campus that serves," said Bragg.

The food donated at the Big Rally will go back to the

Turn to RALLY, page 3

STEVE PEDULLA / COLLEGIAN

The D.C. Acapella Doo-Wop quintet performed Saturday as part of the Big Rally sponsored by the VIVA committee.

Strike goes on, talks fall apart as tensions rise

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Get ready for replacement players on opening day.

After a week of flickering optimism, baseball talks broke down once again yesterday, exactly four weeks before the regular season is scheduled to start April 2.

"Without a miracle," Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris said, "major league players will not be on the field opening day."

Both sides had agreed this weekend was critical if players were to end their 6 1/2-month strike in time to return for the season's start. The 900 unsigned players need a week to negotiate contracts and all players need three weeks of practice to be ready.

"There's a pretty clear indication to me the owners have already decided to blow off the beginning of the season," union head Donald Fehr said.

Players and owners were angered by the proposals each made on Saturday. For now, there wasn't much for them to talk to each other about.

"We have to find a way to get back to the table and get back to work," acting commissioner Bud Selig said from his home in Milwaukee.

Owners began exhibition games last week with replacement players and minor leaguers willing to play and say they're prepared to open the season with them, even if attendance is cut substantially. "The game's going to go on," said McMorris, who took over as the owners' lead negotiator after Selig left Thursday night. "The only question is, 'Which players are going to be on the field?' We can't let this paralyze the whole industry and the whole country as far as baseball."

Turn to STRIKE, page 3

International Women's Day celebrated by EWC speaker

The Women of Color Program of the Everywoman's Center will host a free breakfast in commemoration of International Women's Day, Wednesday, March 8.

From 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Bangs Community Center on Boltwood Walk in Amherst, the breakfast will feature speaker Patricia Edmisten. Her topic will be "Women in Development in Central America."

Besides the breakfast lecture, Edmisten will speak in three classes on Wednesday and Thursday.

Wednesday afternoon, Edmisten will speak in Professor Alexandrina Deschamps's Women of Color in Activism class in 201 Bartlett Hall at 4 p.m.

Thursday, Edmisten will speak in Professor Arturo Escobar's Anthology of Development class at 9:30 in 22 Machmer Hall. At 11 a.m. she will speak in Sally Habana-Hefner's Cultural Perspectives class in Hills South.

Edmisten teaches in the Department of Educational Foundations at the University of West Florida. She recently retired from her position there as the Director of International Education Programs. In addition to teaching her retirement allows Edmisten more time to write.

She has just completed translating a book entitled Maria Elena Moyano: In Search of a Hope.

Edmisten recently worked as a United Nations consultant in Brazil and Peru for two women's networks serving women from all walks of life.

— Lisa Greenfield

Collegian Classifieds
They work!

STUDENT FARES

LONDON	$250
AMSTERDAM	$430
PARIS	$438
FRANKFURT	$458
MADRID	$498
BRUSSELS	$430
MOSCOW	$518
ZURICH	$478
PRAGUE	$458
EURAIL FROM	$255

FARES BASED ON RT FROM BOSTON. TAXES NOT INCLUDED. STUDENT ID MAY BE REQUIRED. DEPARTURES THRU 3/31. FARES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.

Council Travel
79 S. PLEASANT ST. 2ND FL
AMHERST, MA 01002
413-256-1261

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, March 6

Music — Student recital includes vocal, string, percussion, saxophone, jazz, woodwind and brass ensembles. Bezanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

Reception — Opening of the Navtuz exposition by Selime Okuyan. Augusta Savage Gallery, 7 p.m.

Film — Screening of Union Pacific and Komsomolsk. Shown in conjunction with a lecture by Russian film historian Maya Turovskaya, "A New Look at Old Movies: Socialist Realism in American and Soviet Cinema." Amherst College, Merrill III, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Phillip Richards, University of North Carolina will speak on "The Institutional World of Early African American Literature." Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 8 p.m.

Talk — "Negotiating power: Indian Women's Fold Songs as counter narratives," by Sangeeta Tyagi. Mount Holyoke College, Dickinson House, 4:30 p.m.

Tuesday, March 7

Meeting — Hands Club. For information contact Shana Reiss at 546-0908. Campus Center, Room 905-909, 7 p.m.

Film — The War in Chiapas. A rare documentary film by an independent Mexican film studio on the Zapatista uprising. Includes interviews with peasant and indigenous leaders and members of the Zapatista Army. Campus Center, Room 168C, 7:30 p.m.

Blood Drive — The goal is to collect 65 units of blood. Campus Center, first floor, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Intermarriage: the challenges of living with differences between Christians and Jews." Susan Weidman Schneider, founder and editor of Lilith. Amherst College, Campus Center Frontroom, 4:15 p.m.

Employment — Camp representatives from the Northeast area will be recruiting students. Student Union Ballroom, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Lecture — Helen Lefkowitz will speak on "The Retirement of Uncommon Women." Mount Holyoke College, Gamble Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Jewish Women in America and Israel: similarities and differences," by Susan Weidman Schneider. Smith College, Neilson Library Browsing Room, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Professor Susan T. Fiske will speak on "Why the powerful deal in stereotypes," as part of the Distinguished Faculty Series. Memorial Hall, 4 p.m.

Wednesday, March 8

Lecture — "Beyond Apartheid: the struggle for democracy in South Africa," by Karl Klare, Northeastern University. Smith College, McConnell 103, 7:30 p.m.

Training — Five College Habitat for Humanity will be holding a general interest meeting. Newman Center, classroom 1, 4:30 p.m.

Forum — "What (and who) do you need to know to help students in stress?" Campus Center, Room 803, 12 p.m.

Literature — Poetry reading by Cheryl Savageau. Augusta Savage Gallery, 7 p.m.

GLB Lecture — "Bisexual Methodologies," by Claire Hemmings. Sponsored by the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns. Campus Center, Room 917, 12 p.m.

Theatre — The Birds. Two men leave Athens in search of the "Good Life" in this comic masterpiece. Rand Theatre, 8 p.m.

Community — Lenten Lecture Series present Professor Paul Mariani will speak on "Proffesing our faith" Newman Center, Sunken Lounge, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Filmic Memorial and Colonial Blues: Indochina and French cinema," by Panivong Norindr. Smith College, Seelye Hall 101, 8 p.m.

Notices

Fundraising — WFCR 88.5 F.M. seeks volunteers to assist the station with spring fundraising. More info call Karin Obermeier at 545-0100.

Community Service — The Viva Community Service Council needs groups to submit total number of community service hours completed since the beginning of the academic year. Contact Lori McKinney at 545-3368 with questions.

Training — Amherst Leisure Services offering updated Lifeguard Training to strong swimmers at least 15 years of age. Course provides opportunity to work with children in swiming programs. More information, all 256-4065.

Finals — The Spring final examination schedule will be available beginning March 16.

Donations — Donate your pennies and spare change to the Western Massachusetts Food Bank. Collections taken at the UMass Nutrition Table at the Campus Center Concourse until March 8.

Teaching — The Secondary Teaching Education Program Advising office provides information on how to become a teacher. Located in room 125A Furcolo Hall, for more info call 545-4397.

STAFF MEETING

There will be a staff meeting tonight at 6 p.m. in the Collegian office. We will be discussing and voting on the structure of the specialty pages.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR
&
AUTO BODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center

- Imports and other unibody vehicles are our speciality.
- Users of Sikkens paint products.
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass repair.

Remember
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg # RS1212

SPRING BREAK
CANCUN'S BEST BUY BEACHFRONT HOTEL

$459
PER PERSON / QUAD OCC.

CLUB CANCUN PLAZA
Air Only $100 + $45 Taxes
Plaza 4 * Property
Quad Rate $219 + $45 Taxes Beach Front

Complete Package Includes:
✓ Round Trip Non-Stop Airfare
✓ 7 Nights Beachfront Hotel
✓ Airport Transfers
✓ Spring Break's #1 'VIP' Party Package - save over $150!

COLLEGE TOURS 800-959-4786
First-Sail Weekend Departures. Tour Operator # FunQuest Vacations. All terms and conditions as per Op Part Agreement.

CAMPUS CENTER FOOD SERVICE — MARCH 1995

SUNDAY	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SATURDAY
MARCH SPECIALS HATCH: Take a "Wok on the Wild Side" 4pm-7pm & Take 50¢ off any Stir Fry Order! TOC: Have 'Lunch in the Lounge' and have a cup of soup ½ price with any sandwich purchase, M-F 11am-1:30pm			1 TOC LUNCH EXCHANGE CONTINUES FOR UMASS STUDENTS on the 10, 14, or 19 Meal Plan	2	3 MARCH MADNESS AT THE TOC Sports Bar & Lounge 10¢ Wings 4pm-7pm DRINK SPECIALS POS. ID REQ.	4 Join Us For The Coach Mullen Show Noon-1:00 w/Ted Baker & Brock Hines (WHMP)
5 Go Umass A-10 Tournament TOC Opens at 6:00 Pos. ID Req.	6	7 Go Umass Hockey East Tournament	8 $3 Off Any Lunch Order With Your UMASS ID 11:30-1:30 Wednesday In March	9 A-10 Championship Night At The TOC POS. ID REQ.	10	11 CHANCE FOR PRIZES! 3 Hot Dogs $2 99¢ Nachos Under 21 okay!
12	13 BLUEWALL Coffee Mugs Filled With Your Favorite 12 oz. Coffee... Only $1.95...12 oz. Refills 80¢! And From 4pm-close save on the Featured Gourmet Coffee through March.	14	15	16 PRE-ST. PATRICK'S DAY Lunch Specials at the BLUEWALL 11:30 am-1:30 pm	17 Hatch & Bluewall Coffeehouse Close at 3pm TOC Lounge closes at 6pm	18
19 HAVE A GREAT SPRING BREAK!	20 Campus Center Food Service Hours During Spring Break Coffee Shop: 7am-7pm Hatch: Closed TOC: Sports Bar & Lounge: Closed TOC: Lunch in the Lounge: Closed TOC: Restaurant: Closed Bluewall Cafeteria: 11:30am-1:30pm Bluewall Coffee House: 8am-2pm	21	22	23	24	25
26	27 Breakfast... Available Everyday, All Day... Only At The Coffee Shop!	28	29 Everyday's a Good Day For T-Mex	30	31 10¢ Wings Return to the TOC Sports Bar & Lounge 4pm-7pm Pos. ID Req.

Community service boom

RALLY, continued from page 1

warehouses and distributed to more than 365 charities in Western Massachusetts, D'Amato said. Anywhere between 3 million and 3.5 million pounds of food are delivered every year, totalling over $7 million, she said.

Speaking out

The Big Rally consisted of a light buffet lunch, entertainment by the D.C. Acapella Doo-Wop quintet, four guest speakers, a Volunteer Fair on the Campus Center Concourse and several workshops on community service. After a short break, another session of workshops and ended with a slide show and evaluations.

Guest speakers for the event included Chancellor David K. Scott, Catherine D'Amato from the Food Bank of Western Mass., U.S. Representative John Olver (D-Massachusetts) and Ester M. Wallace, the keynote speaker and former University swim coach.

Wallace brought a personal note to the rally by talking about her simple effort to make UMass and the community a better place.

Wallace said she has the pool in Totman named in her honor with a simple plaque reading "For service to community and school."

According to Wallace, four years ago she donated her house to the Faculty Residence Program, and has a life insurance policy that names the W.E.B. Du Bois library her beneficiary. She also set up an endowment scholarship to be made available to the children of Salvation Army volunteers, she said.

"If you get it, give it back," Wallace said. "Give of yourself and in the same time you will grow."

She stressed the need for community service and the need to follow through with the commitment.

"It's great to know you are born with certain talents usually more than one," said Wallace. "This talent resource is [one with] which you build others up and serve others with no matter what it is — this is VIVA."

Volunteer information

After the speeches students were encouraged to peruse the tables of the Volunteer Fair. Organizations such as the Peace Corps, March of Dimes and the Grove Street Inn all had literature and sign up sheets for people looking to get involved.

Services included First Aid sessions for UMass and the community, exercise classes for children with asthma, and swimming lessons and visits to the V. A. Hospital in Northampton.

Student organizations used UMass students as their spokespeople, making the opportunities seem even more tangible for other students.

Laurie Fyfe, a sophomore history and education major volunteers for the Boltwood Project, Young at Heart.

"I go to Northampton and work with elderly people once a week for two hours. We play bingo and talk. It's a great way to make a connection between generations," said Fyfe.

Limari Rivera, a senior Sociology major, is a VIVA leader and a site coordinator for four Tutoring Enrichment and Assistance Models with Schools (TEAMS). She works with the Crooker Farms Elementary School.

"I work with groups to build community projects with VIVA. I also put together tutors with TEAMS," said Rivera.

One of these tutors is Shakira Franco, a senior Biology major who teaches English to bi-lingual students.

"I work six hours per week and I have to attend TEAM seminars each week as well," Franco said.

Applauding and praise

Scott, whose office funds VIVA, spoke first praising student's efforts and devotion to community service.

"I believe that community service and volunteerism are, in a way, the soul of that effort within a land grant university," said Scott.

John Olver, a former UMass chemistry professor, applauded student's efforts to make a difference through VIVA despite the overall "greediness" of society.

"Too often we are hearing people who are merely saying, 'give me mine' and all too rarely we hear people asking how they can be helpful and how can they be helping these other people whose needs are greater than theirs," Olver said.

strike

continued from page 1

The focus of the talks probably will shift to the National Labor Relations Board, which this week is expected to rule on the union's unfair labor practice charges. If the NLRB issues a complaint against owners, which is expected, the agency probably would seek an injunction restoring all the old work rules — including salary arbitration.

Players say they would end the strike if a federal judge issues the injunction.

"I think the most constructive thing the NLRB can do in any collective bargaining is to stay out of it," management lawyer Chuck O'Connor said.

Both sides kept lower-level delegations at the talks, but Fehr and McMorris left town. McMorris said he expected little bargaining until after this week's owners' meeting, a three-day session that starts Tuesday in Palm Beach, Fla.

"I'm disappointed for all of us that we were not able to make more progress than we did," McMorris said, "but I would say that at our glacier pace we did make some progress."

Heart disease risk for women discussed

Rankin emphasizes education to help determine different disease causes

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Correspondent

Dr. Sally H. Rankin, an associate professor at Boston College School of Nursing, spoke in the Campus Center last Wednesday night about the need for women to become more educated about heart disease.

In a lecture entitled "Women and Heart Disease," Rankin argued not all of the differences concerning women and heart disease are due to health reasons alone.

Rankin said heart disease is the number one killer of American women. "We think that everyone is the same," said Rankin, but not everyone including women, are aware of the differences that cause this disease.

She has done extensive research on coronary heart disease and its links with women. In her studies she has found several factors that cause heart disease and, more specifically, why women are more prone to this disease than men.

Rankin opened her lecture by telling a story about a woman who went to a nearby university hospital complaining of chest pains. The women was examined and asked if she was pregnant or a drug user.

Ten hours later, after being left unattended, the women had heart failure. Finally, after being re-examined, physicians found she had died of a heart attack.

Some of the non-modifiable factors that put both men and women at risk are age, ethnicity and family history. Modifiable factors are obesity, hypertension, and smoking. In relation to these factors there are also special factors relating only to women such as menopause and socio- economic status.

Rankin found that women in situations with little or no power are more at risk than women in positions with power.

According to Rankin, women in positions of power may feel more in control of themselves, including their health, while the women with little or no power might have greater stress worrying about how they will obtain control; the added stress possibly contributing to poor health.

There are also significant differences between men and women in the rate of recovery. In her study Rankin said she found men are more likely to recover because men feel the need to beat the disease while women are not as competitive.

According to Rankin heart disease is viewed as a "male disease" and she feels "we see things so much through a male bias."

There are no rehabilitation centers available for women, but Rankin says "people are thinking about it."

Rankin continued to stress the differences between men and women, but more importantly she wanted women to become more educated and aware of the disease.

ICC Camp Kingswood
A PROGRAM SERVICE OF THE JEWISH COMMUNITY CENTERS OF GREATER BOSTON
Bridgton, Maine
STAFF POSITIONS AVAILABLE

Applications for the 1995 season are now being accepted for the following positions:

KEY STAFF: Unit Head for Younger Boys Unit

DEPARTMENT HEADS: Jewish Resources, Waterfront, Athletics, CIT, Theatre, Arts and Crafts, Photo/Yearbook

COUNSELORS: Swimming (WSI), Waterskiing, Sailing, Tennis, Archery, Ceramics, Soccer, Basketball, Photo/Video, Theatre, Dance

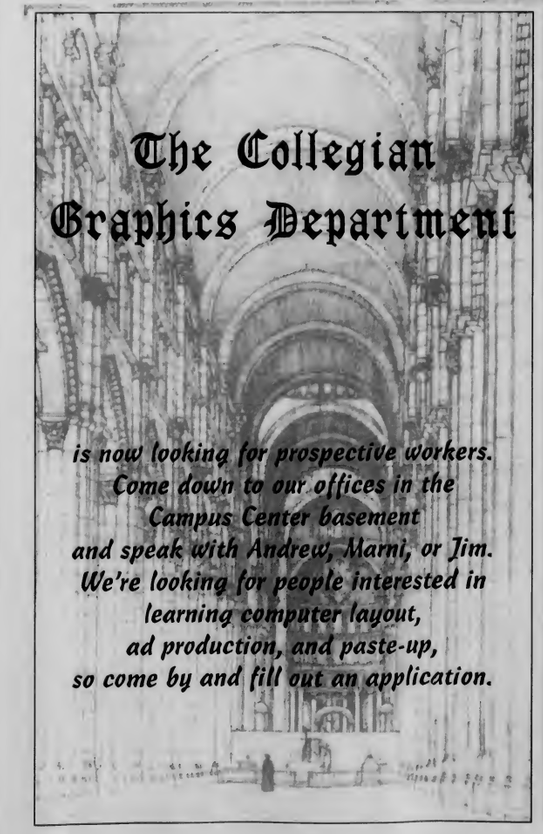
ALSO: Office, Nurse, and Kitchen Staff

For more information contact Ed Pletman, Director, (617) 244-5124
333 NEWTON STREET, NEWTON CENTRE, MA 02159

CAMP DAY 1995
Tuesday, March 7th • 10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom

Summer Employment Opportunities
Many Camps from the Northeast Area
For Further Information Contact:
Financial Aid/Student Employment Office
243 Whitmore Administration Building

The director of the camp will be on campus on Tuesday, March 7, from 10-4 p.m. for the Camp Day in the Student Union Ballroom. To arrange an interview in advance please call the camp office.



The Collegian
Graphics Department
is now looking for prospective workers.
Come down to our offices in the Campus Center basement
and speak with Andrew, Marni, or Jim.
We're looking for people interested in learning computer layout,
ad production, and paste-up,
so come by and fill out an application.

CORPORATE COMPUTER

COMPUTER HARDWARE AND SOFTWARE CLEARANCE SALE
TOP SAVINGS : BEST PRICES IN THE US
PRICES BEAT ALL LOCALLY ADVERTISED PRICES - A CCS GUARANTEE

CCS CLEARANCE SALE FOR TOP BRAND ITEMS IS GOING ON NATIONWIDE.
AT YOUR LOCAL BRANCH , WE ARE OFFERING YOU TOP BRANDS AT UNBELIEVABLE PRICES - ALL PART OF OUR CLEARANCE SALE ! CALL YOUR LOCAL SALES DEPARTMENT TOLL FREE :
1-800-4499-CCS

➢ IBM CLEARANCE SALE IBMDESKTOPS 486SLC2-50MHZ/4MB RAM/340MBHD/14"SVGA MONITOR/MORE...with HPDESKJET 320 $1199.00 AND MORE.....CALL NOW!!!
IBM NOTEBOOKS ALL THINKPADS AT DRASTICALLY REDUCED PRICES !!!
IBM MULTIMEDIA APTIVAS (with voice recognition) STARTING AT AN UNBELIEVABLE $1799.00

➢ MACINTOSH AND COMPAQ CLEARANCE SALE ALL DESKTOPS AND NOTE/POWER BOOKS AT LOW-LOW PRICES - CALL US NOW BEFORE YOU MAKE A PURCHASE!

➢ TOSHIBA NOTEBOOKS C-SALE CHECK OUT THESE PRICES T1950CT $1775.00 / T2400CS $1975 T2400CT $2349.00/T2450CT $3500.00/T4900CT $5299.00* / CALL US AND MORE.....

➢ TEXAS INSTRUMENTS / AST / NEC / ACER / HYUNDAI / EPSON / SAGER C-SALE ALL MODELS ON SALE ! CALL US NOW AND CART HOME THE SAVINGS !!SAGER NP3600 PENTIUM-60 with 10.3" DUAL SCAN and more .....$2575 CALL FOR OTHER MODELS FOR THESE LOW PRICES !

➢ PRINTER CLEARANCE SALE : HP/ EPSON/BROTHER/CANON/OKIDATA/PANASONIC - ALL MODELS ON SALE !! HP 520 $210/ HP540 $285/ HP IIIP $459 / HP560C $455 / HP4L $495/ AND MORE...../PANASONIC (LASER) KX-P5400 $499/OKIDATA OL400 $499.00/ AND MORE..... CALL NOW BEFORE SUPPLIES LAST!!

➢ CD-TITLES CLEARANCE SALE: ALL TOP-SELLERS AT LOW PRICES . DOOM II $43.81/UNDER A KILLING MOON . $53.43/ AND MORE...ANY CD-TITLE - YOU NAME IT , WE WILL GET IT FOR YOU - AT OUR USUAL LOW PRICES !!

➢ COMPUTER ACCESSORIES C-SALE: Scanners(for as low as $99)/ 14.4kModems(starting at $61)/Memory and Processor upgrades(4mb ram-$145)/CD-ROM (quad speed-$389)/Network cards and accessories(Netware 4.xx -100 users $1799.99)/ Data storage products (250MB tapebackups from $149.00) / SVGA Monitors (14" from $215) / floppy drives (3.5" from $30)/Hard Drives(1GB from $551) / Video and Controller cards (2MB PCI from $187) / Power protection devices(UPS from $99.00)/ Notebook cases(from $41.00) AND MORE.....

➢ CCS NEXT GENERATION DESKTOPS C-SALE: NG-P90PC comes with INTEL PENTIUM-90/16MB RAM/ 540MB HD/PCI LOCAL BUS GRAPHICS WITH 2MB RAM/4-SPEED CD-ROM/MULTIMEDIA KIT/FAX-MODEM/15"SVGA MONITOR/ SOFTARE BUNDLE/ THREE -YEAR WARRANTY AND LIFE-TIME TOLL-FREE TECHNICAL SUPPORT ..$2699.00 <upgrades available for customization >

➢ CCS NEXT GENERATION LAPTOPS/NOTEBOOKS C-SALE: NG-66NB comes with INTEL 486DX2-66MHZ/4MB RAM/340MB HD/9.5" DUAL SCAN COLOR/and more... $2155.00
CALL NOW FOR OUR LOW PRICES ON ALL OTHER MODELS !

* The Leader Guards The Price *

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Husley Editor-in-Chief Kelly Spang Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Lisa Greenfield Senior Diversity Editor

Matt Audette Arts & Living Editor Paul Bilodeau Photography Editor
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Matt Wurtzel Business Editor Jeff Wilson Staff Artist
Juan Jose Chacon Quiros Developing Nations Editor Lisa Greenfield, Colleen Shanahan Women's Issues Editors
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Wendy Darling Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Ahenaim Distribution Manager
Hernan Rozemberg Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Jessica Taverna News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The spirituality of sneezing

Nathan Crick

"Bless you," a voice called.

I removed my face from my jacket and, wiping my nose, looked back to see a woman about 20 feet behind me, who was in the process of walking in the opposite direction, smile and then turn away.

"Thank you," I grinned happily. The world seemed suddenly to be a very nice place. Somebody cares! I sneezed and somebody cares! With a spring in my step I kept walking, content with the capacity of love within the human spirit.

A few seconds later I realized the full impact of what it meant to find pleasure in a completely irrational exchange. I had just shot spit and mucous out of my mouth at a rapid velocity into the lapel of my jacket, and this woman had found it necessary to bless me for this. And that in fact, people bless me for this all the time.

That in essence is not even the most bizarre part. The most interesting factor in this process is that I actually do feel thankful for their efforts. It is like I have been re-affirmed as part of the human family, and that someone has reached out their hand and patted me on the head and said "Hey, it's okay. We still love you just for being you."

The tradition, I believe, came from an old superstition that when you sneezed you blew your good spirits all over your arm and let in all the bad spirits on the next inhale. Then, of course, all the good spirits got washed off in the river during the next wash and flowed into the sea, which made the dolphins the happy creatures that they are. Hence, to prevent losing all of your soul through your nose, people would bless you.

Now, the really interesting part of this whole tradition is that most of us do not even realize what the devil we are saying when we bestow our blessings with reckless abandon to everyone with a nasal problem. The only thing we know is that we are given the opportunity to be polite as well as getting a chance to interact with complete strangers who may seem like nice people.

I think it is oddly liberating to perform this little ritual. This woman who I have never seen and may never see again was able, for a few seconds, to exchange a happy smile and a few polite words with me for no logical reason other than this old religious tradition. Taken to the extreme, sneezing and being blessed for it could lead to the formation of very satisfying relationships. I often wonder why I do not sneeze more often.

It would seem such a more positive world if, in fact, we had dozens of these types of traditions. We would have unlimited capacity to enter into conversations with complete strangers, simply because we may be constipated or have the hiccups. Maybe every time someone belched, we would go up to them and pat them on the back. If they yawned, we would hum a happy tune or maybe whistle. And if they farted, well, that person would say "excuse me" and everyone would just laugh and make jokes. It would be a regular party. Now all we do is look suspiciously at one another and pretend we have to be somewhere else. Hardly a way to make friends.

As it is, we seem to only have the opportunities to do this by holding open doors, telling someone they dropped something, or by knocking someone over and then apologizing for it. Smokers I have always envied, however, because they have the added advantage of being able to ask people for a cigarette, or more often a light. What freedom!

Then again, maybe it is good that we haven't grown to rely on these things. Maybe then it would give us even more of a crutch to lean on when it comes to being original, and everyone would get to the point of smiling and then find they have nothing else to say. Then we'd be a culture of people whose main source of conversation would revolve around worn out and pointless topics.

"Hot enough for ya?"

"Hey baby, wanna beer?"

"I consider myself a very liberal person."

Well.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Campus suffers from a drug problem

Robert Laramee

I've lived on three different floors on campus at UMass. Among other things, each floor shared something in common. They all had a drug problem. What do I mean by a drug problem? I mean a situation, introduced by a drug, which presents difficulty and perplexity. More specifically, the presence and employment of a drug which causes students to fight, spend their last dime, and inflict injurious physical and psychological effects upon its users and their peers.

The drug I speak of is marijuana and the problem culminated beyond my tolerance last semester. I entered a room just in time to see a group of floor residents assembled to smoke pot via a bong. And smoke they did, in ample doses. After that, acute, bitter coughing ensued, so much that it left one resident curled up on the floor in the fetal position, engaged in a coughing fit. Unfamiliar and discolored bile-like fluids were also produced by more than one participant as a result.

Later on that evening there was a knock at my door. It was the Resident Assistant. She asked me to monitor a floor resident while she ran an errand. The resident was in her bed and she asked me to look after him because he was very ill. He was only half-conscious, sweating excessively, shivering, panting worriedly and heavily, tossing from side to side, moaning, and crying. I presumed he was suffering the after affects of a healthy dose of marijuana since it was he who spear-headed the congregation earlier on. My suspicions were later confirmed by accounts in the Encyclopedia Britannica on-line.

It was an unsettling experience aggravated beyond acceptability by the fact that nothing would be done to rectify the situation. No one was notified. There was no further communication whatsoever. Ritual gatherings and their consequences continued as it nothing had ever happened and my R.A. simply turned her head.

I know the marijuana issue is one of hypersensitivity at UMass and I've heard a myriad of arguments supporting its use. But this debate doesn't stand up to what I've experienced first-hand. You can tell me how much worse alcohol is and you can throw numbers at me until I'm cross-eyed. However, what I've seen will never change. The multitude of fights and shaken friendships resulting from arguments over pot distribution, roommates of pot users who fear being associated with the activity, the countless dollars smoked away — amounts that rival the cost of a 14 to 19 meal plan — and the physical and mental harm the drug does directly.

I acknowledge that this is a problem with no simple solution. I don't know where the money required for resolution would come from. I do know, however, that the solution starts with identification and communication of the problem. Many students would provide pertinent information if provided with incentive, especially if privacy of their identity was assured.

When I started college I knew I was going to encounter more drug use than to which I was accustomed. "I'll just get used to it," I told myself. It's three years later and I still haven't adapted.

Robert Laramee is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

I DON'T CARE IF IT IS THE TRIAL OF THE MILLENNIUM — THIS SEQUESTRATION THING IS TOTALLY UNREASONABLE!
IT'S LIKE SENSORY DEPRIVATION! I FEEL COMPLETELY CUT OFF FROM EVERYTHING THAT DEFINES ME AS A PERSON!
I MEAN, A WOMAN'S GOT URGES! I'VE GONE WITHOUT FOR THE WHOLE WINTER!
WHAT'RE YOU TALKING ABOUT? WE DID IT LAST MONTH.
NOT THAT, B.D. SHOPPING! IT'S BEEN 63 DAYS!

Opinion/Editorial

RUSH, TELL THOSE GUYS A CAPITAL GAINS TAX CUT WOULD BE GOOD FOR THEM.
WINK WINK
SMART AND SMARTER
TAKES ALL KINDS
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.

Right to complain must be earned

Tara Ruelle

I have gotten criticized for just about everything I have written thus far for this page. I know I'm not alone, though, because the paper in general gets a good bashing daily. One recent criticism made me sit down and think about the page I work for and what it means, or should mean to people.

A couple of women in my classes made it known the other day that some of the articles on the Editorial page were far too trivial and silly for that forum. I took offense generally because I'm a contributor and specifically because these women were criticizing without any intention of voicing their opinion to the newspaper page they loathe so much. It seems to me that the very page they degraded was the perfect forum in which to express their concerns.

This page in the newspaper should be particularly important to the students on this campus. It gives everyone the open door policy to sound-off on any issue they choose. It is an important tool that many students ignore rather than utilize. Instead, some of us would rather complain and bitch about the content of the page, while sitting back and doing nothing to change it.

Responding to an editorial by writing a letter to the editor is all fine and well, but real guts would require you to write an editorial of your own. I am only willing to listen to someone whine if they plan on improving on what they find at fault. It's too easy to find error with someone else's opinions, and far too difficult to express your own. If you are willing to expose your beliefs and ideas to all of the students on this campus you've earned your bitching rights. Otherwise be careful what you say.

Empty words of disdain and weak statements such as "it's so retarded" really don't say a lot for a person's ability to express themselves. Those sentiments tell me that a person doesn't have a strong personal opinion and chooses to succumb to popular, accepted ideals. Writing an editorial gives evidence that you can express your own ideas, ride solo to stand up for what you believe in. Rather than extracting lines from a column you don't like, think about one that you could scribble down.

Essentially, people who find time in their busy days to whither away at others' thoughts should definitely have enough time to compile their own for review. Say what you must about the content of the editorials but don't dare criticize those people for having the guts to put them out there for you to read. In plain English, don't expect me to feel sympathy for you because your particular ideas aren't expressed on this page: represent them yourself. It's much more constructive than saying "this sucks."

The problem is people talk a lot more than they act, but that would mean having to face up to yourself.

Tara Ruelle is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Lawyer responds to accusations

To the editor:

I write as a proud alumnus of UMass Amherst, class of 1960, in reference to the Feb. 13 piece "UMass under siege from all side" written by Juan Chacon Quiros de Quetzacoatl. I am the "Jewish lawyer" who wrote to the Chancellor for information on the circumstances of the Tony Martin speech at UMass on Dec. 6.

Let me begin by correcting Mr. Quiros de Quetzacoatl. I did not ask for membership lists of any groups nor did I ask for information on the background of students who were involved — nor would I have.

Every account I have received from students who attended Martin's UMass speech suggests that the atmosphere in the hall was one of intimidation and fear. Martin, whose videotaped speech I have watched, attacked the Jewish community using gross distortions of history and falsehoods to engage in his anti-Semitic diatribe. Martin's speech was similar to his recent presentation at the Nation of Islam mosque in Springfield, which I personally attended.

As someone who is keenly aware of events of the thirties and the forties, Martin's presentations remind me of the tactics used by Hitler and his cronies in the 1930s, using Jews as scapegoats. Martin's presentation reminds me, as well, of Hitler's propaganda principle that the bigger the lie, the more believable it becomes. Martin's major source of information is a book published by the Nation of Islam, whose anti-Semitism, racism, sexism and homophobia is well documented.

Henry Louis Gates Jr., the W.E.B. Du Bois professor of the humanities at Harvard called the Nation of Islam book "one of the most sophisticated instances of hate literature yet compiled," and that the "book massively misrepresents the historical record."

This is not solely an issue of concern to African- Americans or Jews. Prior to Mr. Martin's Worcester State speech earlier this month, a coalition of African-Americans, Jewish, Protestant and Catholic clergy issued a joint statement condemning Martin's "record of divisiveness as demonstrated by his public comments and writings."

Despite Mr. Quiros de Quetzacoatl's apparent desire that Jews just keep quiet, as a Jewish-American neither I nor other members of the Jewish community intend to stand idly by while a demagogue preaches bigotry weaved out of falsehoods, fabrications and fallacies. Silence has never served the cause of fighting prejudice — a fact that Jews have learned the hard way after centuries of bigotry and discrimination and in some cases, near annihilation.

We would not expect the African-American community to stand idly by in the face of attacks on them, or have the gall to tell the Asian, Hispanic, gay and lesbian communities to be silent when they are being singled out by a bigot.

As an American and Jew, I intend to continue to exercise my constitutional rights to challenge bigotry and to denounce anti-Semitism, particularly when I see it happening at my alma mater, UMass Amherst. I will also continue to pursue my rights as a taxpayer in Massachusetts to determine where the funds come from to pay for a bigot and anti-Semite like Tony Martin to speak on the campus. This is not a Black-Jewish issue; this is an issue for the whole community and for every person who cares about fighting prejudice.

Richard M Gaberman
Springfield

Resident assistant disgusted with job

To the editor:

Last spring I accepted an RA position for the 1994/95 school year. I was originally interested in becoming an RA because of the benefits from the job. What could be better than a free single, a body-shop membership, and $25 a week? However, if you have any brains at all and just a little self-respect, you won't even consider becoming an RA. You will be overworked, underpaid and crapped on by residents and housing administration. You'll have no free time, be forced to work on useless programs that nobody attends, and put up bulletin boards that will be ripped down within hours. As for helping out residents and being a friend and resource, don't bother. It will be obvious by their actions that they don't want you or need you there. No matter how cool, reasonable, or respectful you seem to be, you'll have to put up with their annoying and often destructive actions.

"Can't you just look the other way when I'm accosting a woman in the bathroom, defecating on the walls and in the showers, and urinating in the hall? Don't you understand that I'm drunk and my friends think it's cool to step over vomit to get the stalls? Don't you understand that even if I'm caught and have to meet with the RD and Housing officials I'll only get a slap on the wrist?"

"Don't you understand that I don't give a damn about your programs or even see your bulletin boards? Don't you understand that I know nothing about you but I hate you because of your title? By the way, if I feel like it, I'll deface your door, threaten your safety, or even try to get you fired and replace you with another clown with the same title and responsibilities."

This is not an over-dramatization. This stuff happens every day. And don't expect any help from the bouning administration. When I approached the assistant dean of students, director of housing, and the area director to work out solutions to these problems, it was all thrown right back into my face. Those overpaid bigshots in Whitmore brushed off my requests, and told me to be "tougher and create a better community."

Perhaps if they were a little tougher, grew some balls and kicked some of these pathetic idiots out of the dorms, maybe things would be a little easier. But now you're supposed to be a parent, a policeman and 24-hour watchdog on top of a leader, organizer, friend, "world-shaper," and a resource.

Twenty five bucks a week and constant harassment in your "free" room is definitely not worth the hassle of being an RA. I quit the job a semester early because of the ridiculous living conditions and job responsibilities I had to endure. If you have the opportunity, and you're a responsible and mature adult, move off campus and don't waste your time having to deal with obnoxious and drunk imbeciles.

Jay Ferguson
Amherst

Arts & Living

Quicksand's latest displays increased maturity

MANIC COMPRESSION
Quicksand
Island

COURTESY MICHELE TAYLOR

Quicksand's newest release Manic Compression launches them into accessibility.

What some call maturing, others call selling out. With the release of their sophomore effort, Quicksand show that they've actually done some of each.

Manic Compression is blessed with variety and plagued by inconsistency. Unlike their virtually seamless 1993 debut LP Slip, Quicksand's latest seems more like just a collection of songs than a cohesive album.

Part of the inconsistency is certainly owing to the presence of two very different producers on the album. Most of Manic Compression's best tracks were produced by Slip veteran Don Fury, and they maintain that album's sound.

Wharton Tiers, on the other hand, has evidently been listening to way too much Soundgarden, and songs like "East 3rd St." and "Blister" pay the price. Luckily, the hyperactive five show staple "Supergenius" proves to be strong enough to overcome Tiers' glitzy production.

The greater degree of variety on Manic Compression illustrates Quicksand's growth as songwriters. Many songs shy away from the band's usual head-on barrage in place of a more subtle approach (if you can consider a juggernaut like "Delusional" subtle). Songs like "Simpleton" and "Skinny (It's Overflowing)" creep up slowly before pummelling you with their thunderous grooves.

"Landmine Spring" is by far the most radio-friendly song Quicksand have ever done, but, to their credit, the band infuse it with enough power and genuine emotion to overshadow its verse-chorus-verse predictability.

Although somewhat of a disappointment compared to their previous efforts, Manic Compression proves that Quicksand has the ability to bring their earnest brand of hardcore/metal fusion into a commercially accessible context with their integrity intact. B+ (Matthew Justin Faerber)

SKA — THE THIRD WAVE
Various Artists
Continuum Records

Ska could be considered one of the most popular forms of music never to be fully accepted into the American mainstream. From the '60s, with bands such as the Skatalites, to the '80s, with such acts as Madness and English Beat, ska music has enjoyed a continued and strong popularity up through the '90s.

If someone were to ask you what ska is, you could go on and on about its influences and history, but the way you could most accurately describe the state of ska today would be by just popping in an album and showing them. Ska — The Third Wave is probably the perfect way to go about this — just hit play and let the skanking commence.

Featuring such acts as The Skofflaws, The Pietasters and Mephiskapheles (the world's only Satanic ska outfit), The Third Wave (referring to the third generation of ska enthusiasts) covers all the bases. From the reggae influenced "Hi-Ball" by Skavoovie and The Epitones to the funk influenced bass on the remix of "Dub 56" by the Toasters and the furiously paced "Doomsday" by Mephiskapheles, virtually all incarnations of ska music can be found here.

The Skofflaws offer up a very humorous "William Shatner" with such lyrics as "He's got a fine tan shirt with an emblem on the chest / the interstellar girls all like him the best." The Dance Hall Crashers deliver "Othello," as a jumping little tune that will have those who loved the Mighty Mighty Bosstones' pre-Mercury catalogue jumping on their bed.

Ska may well be the longest kept secret of the music world. And hidden away from the rest of the mainstream is where most of its fans probably would like it to remain. A- (Mike MacLean)

SITTING ON SNAPS
Mecca Normal
Matador Records

No bass. No drums. This has been Mecca Normal's formula for success for many years — unfortunately their novelty has worn off. With David Lester on guitar and Jean Smith on vocals, the band is yet another low-fi band, hailing from the Northwest, who owe Beat Happening an arm and a leg for inspiration.

At times the music is so simple that it is outright boring. In the past Mecca Normal has had a few standout tracks such as "Strong White Male," which remains one of the best songs to come out of the Northwest. But the new album contains no such tracks of importance.

The opening track, "Vacant Night Sky" shows glimpses of beauty largely due to the piano playing of Peter Jeffries, a musical legend from New Zealand. Although a Bob Dylan influence is slightly touched upon, this album is largely uninspired both in songwriting and performances.

Possibly the only improvement that Mecca Normal has made since their last release is Smith's vocals. In the past she was notorious for her ferocious, screeching squeals, but no more. On Sitting On Snaps Smith actually sings all the time and avoids any screaming — maybe her throat just can't take it anymore.

While other duos like Kicking Giant and the Spinanes are breaking new ground musically, Mecca Normal is treading the same water it has been for years. C- (Mike Burke)

COURTESY K RECORDS

Mecca Normal's release is just about average.

HAMFISTED
Local H
Island

Aptly titled Hamfisted, this is a clumsy pilfering of the "alternative" scene. Kurt Cobain should be turning over in his grave as Local H desecrate his memory with this effort.

Having missed the grunge bandwagon by about five light- years, Island's chancers are thankfully exposed to a music climate that should know better. Who knows though, with a couple of videos on heavy rotation and a crack habit, Joe Daniels and Scott Lucas could trade in their designer slack for Gaultier suits and retire to St. Lucia.

Lucas sounds exactly like Cobain; exactly. He even looks like Cobain, if Kurt had taken vitamin pills instead of amphetamines and married Gloria Estefan instead of Courtney Love. Yet, no one can label Local H slackers; while Lucas was occupied getting all those Bleach, Nevermind and Batmotorfinger riffs down, Daniels was obviously getting every Dave Grohl drum-roll wired.

The opener "Feed," sets the agenda — practically ripping the scissors from "Floyd the Barber"'s hands. Things gradually get worse. "Mayonnaise and Malaise"(oh, the irony!), sounds like a bad Weezer B-side and is positively cringe-some.

Local H indulge in more pillaging than a Viking convention. Whether it's Cobain-esque, cracked vocals and guitar style, the "evocative" one-word song titles a la Vedder, or the fast-slow-fast rhythm of Nevermind, Local H show no discrimination. This really is the most turgid stuff, void of all meaning, passion or integrity.

While the ghost of Cobain lies heavy on some of the better releases since his death, such as Neil Young's Sleeps With Angels and Pearl Jam's Vitalogy, his memory and influence are only degraded by soulless cash-in bands like Local H. Island Records had better resolve the Bob Marley royalties argument soon, because they'll have another court- case on their hands if they continue to support the blatant thievery of Local H. F (Gareth Curtis)

The Birds mixes satire and wit to dazzle audience

By Steve Martin
Collegian Correspondent

THE BIRDS
The Rand Theater
March 2

If biting satire and theater of the absurd are your ideas of entertainment, you will definitely want to flock to The Birds, the latest production to be staged by the UMass Theater Department. The opening night of the Aristophanes' comic masterpiece, which was held at the Rand Theater on March 2, left the audience both smiling as well a engrossed in thought.

Aristophanes' sophisticated wit and complex use of the language often leaves a reader, not to mention a live audience, breathless. However, this cast adeptly maintained an impressive energy level throughout and had a sound command of the often difficult material.

This comic fantasy follows the surreal escapades of Hopeful and Trusting, earnestly played by Brandon Whitehead and Bryn A. Manion, as they leave ancient Greece and become friendly with the birds. Through artful persuasion, they convince their feathered friends to create a new world which they call "Cloudcuckooland."

They concoct this clever scheme in hopes of escaping their hellish world of bureaucrats, bill collectors, lawyers, and salesmen. They would also, more importantly, be free of both the demands and restrictions of the imposing Gods of Mount Olympus.

Nothing escapes the satiric wrath of Aristophanes. Everyone and everything that makes society a society is skewered in the play. It all plays like a grandiose essay on arrogance and greed.

The production was rich in many ways, including the incorporation of masks. They were designed by Mount Holyoke Professor K.C. Kuzminski, who also did the garish costume design. Both the masks and the costumes frightened and enchanted at the same time.

The cast was uniformly excellent under the sure-footed direction of Davur Diklich, an M.F.A. candidate whose thesis project was this adaptation of The Birds. He incorporated the use of modern slang in the text and the timing was perfect, never straying from the true spirit of Aristophanes.

The Birds was a rich theatrical experience, in both terms of the text and the staging. It will no doubt be enjoyed by audiences who have a taste for the dark and the absurd.

Write for the Valley's best source of entertainment news and views!
ARTS & LIVING
Call 545-1361 for information

2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS® OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA

If enjoying the outdoors sounds good to you and you are living in the area this summer, stop by the SPRINGFIELD J.C.C. DAY CAMP
booth at Camp Day and pick up an application.

WMUA 91.1 FM
105 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003-1230
phone 413 545-2876
fax 413 545-4751
Hear not one but both Atlantic 10 Tournament Semifinal games, live from Philadelphia.
From 7 till midnight, we'll have complete coverage only on WMUA 91.1 FM.
Listen as UMass tries again to bring the A-10 title game home, and also catch the game to decide who their opponent will be.
Between games, it's the UMass Hoop call-in show, so don't miss any of the action
MONDAY, MARCH 6

CHOUSTER
Chinese Restaurant
Anniversary for the Month of March
ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET
Lunch $3.99 • Dinner $4.99 Daily
$4.99 Saturday & Sunday All Day
Dinner Special Including
Pork Fried Rice w/ Choice of Egg Roll or Chicken Wings and Ice Cream Dessert
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
253-4068 • 253-7449

Eating Disorder Programs • 1995
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For Individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single sessions for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays 4:30 - 6 pm, (except holidays) at the Campus Center. Confidentiality Assured.
Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phone line for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. Call 549-2671, ext. 168.

THE TOP DOG
63 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst
256-4100
"Home of the $1.25 Hot Dog & Soda"
COUPON SPECIAL
50¢ OFF
EX. 3/10/95 COLL
Hot Dogs • Super Sausages
Baked Potatoes • Salads & More
OPEN EVERY DAY
11:30 am to 2:30 am

Swing music heats FAC crowd

DIVA and Marlena Shaw combine talents for a stellar show

By Seema Gangatirkar
Collegian Correspondent

DIVA, NO MAN'S BAND WITH MARLENA SHAW
Fine Arts Center
March 2

DIVA, No Man's Band, brought their combination of swing music style and jazz vocalist Marlena Shaw's powerful voice to the Fine Arts Center on March 2, giving a rousing performance that brought the audience to its feet in appreciation.

DIVA, an all-female band, opened the performance with an up-tempo piece called "You Step Out" featuring a superb solo by trumpeter Ingrid Jensen. Another notable moment in the concert was a wonderful jazz version of "My Favorite Things." The sax solo which was originally featured in the Rogers & Hammersmith classic was played by alto saxophonist Sue Terry.

A dramatic switch in energy came when tenor saxophonist Virginia Mayhew soloed on the seductive and mellow "Once In A While." One of the highlights of the evening came when DIVA played their Carnegie Hall debut piece, "Ding Dong, The Witch Is Dead"— the popular song from The Wizard of Oz.

Fantastic solos were played by Elaine Burt, Laura Dreyer, Sherrie Marricle, while alto saxophonist Carol Chaikin poured her soul into the romantic, "If I Should Lose You." drummer/band leader Marricle wowed the crowd with an awe-inspiring solo in Duke Ellington's Caravan — a piece that also featured Jensen and Dreyer.

After the break, acclaimed vocalist Marlena Shaw joined the band. She quickly won over the audience with her warm sense of humor and opened with a rich rendition of "The Song Is You." That song was followed by "Until I Met You" and the classic "The Lady Is A Tramp." Her abilities as a performer reached their peak, when Shaw combined her intense emotion with her incredible stage presence in the song "Go Away Little Boy."

The concert ended with the audience joining in on the chorus of the song "This Little Light of Mine."

The band and Shaw were both impressive. Because it is all too rare to see an all-women big band, the combination of Shaw and DIVA was a treat.

New sitcom marks Asner's return to TV

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Ed Asner lumbers along a bit slower than in his "Lou Grant" days. Don't be deceived.

In a heartbeat, he hits you with a sly look; the actor who gave us that orncry newsroom imp is doing fine. Asner's taken some punches, but he's still fighting the fight politically and in the TV trenches.

After a hiatus, his "Thunder Alley" returns to ABC this week at a new time, 8:30 p.m. EST Tuesday. Asner plays retired stock car driver Gil Jones, a garage owner who's opened his Detroit home to his daughter and her brood.

The sitcom had uneven ratings in earlier outings, but the network is giving it another shot in the friendlier time period preceding top-rated "Home Improvement."

Robin Riker co-stars as Bobbi Turner; the kids are played by Lindsay Felton, Haley Joel Osment and Kelly Vint.

"We're all tight and solid," says Asner. "I think the shows are better than they've ever been and, with our lovely time slot, I have great hopes."

With a couple of TV's best programs under his moderately expansive belt — "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "Lou Grant" — what drew Asner to this particular bit of fluff?

"The rapscallion aspect," he says. "It looked like it (the Gil Jones character) could contain the seeds of being a little devil. A middle-aged, old-aged, whatever you want to call it, devil. And I could have fun with it."

Asner, it turns out, likes to have fun. His TV persona is that of the gruff Grant, with a big heart neatly obscured by peel-and-stick layers of cynicism. His personal image is liberal activist, serious man of the people.

But he's also a delightful storyteller, sharing memories of a checkered job history that nearly included becoming "the man who held the franchise for Dean's Prophylactics" — in Catholic Latin America.

He's a cautious sort, he says, who tends to pursue what he terms "safe adventures." And the 65-year-old Asner confesses to a dreamy-eyed naivete.

"I'm always surprised when my side is defeated." So he's an optimist? "No, I'm a romanticist. I don't even qualify to be an optimist. I'm beyond help."

At another point, he describes his attitude this way: "I've always just been so 'There must be a pony in that tent SOMEWHERE.' "

Then, to illustrate, he calls on his actor's bag of tricks — arranging eyes, brows and jaw into a blissfully-idiot look that provokes his lunch companions to laughter.

As he spoons into turkey lasagna at a small, un-chic Los Angeles restaurant, Asner ticks off the current list of trends and people that threaten to undermine his hardy liberal idealism.

They include, in no particular order, America's "rush into a two-tier society"; media he says underrepresent leftist views; weak Democratic presidents; Republican House leaders Newt Gingrich and Dick Armey.

Asner is unabashed about speaking out, despite a collision between career and activism that marred his "Lou Grant" experience and tenure as president of the Screen Actors Guild.

In 1982, when Asner supported the cause of leftist rebels in El Salvador, "Lou Grant" was canceled by CBS. The network cited declining ratings; Asner and other critics accused it of bowing to political pressure.

He still mourns the loss of the show, which took his character from the comedy of "Mary Tyler Moore" into drama. "Lou Grant" tackled serious issues thoughtfully and carefully, he says.

But Asner had more than his series to worry about then; he was also clashing with colleagues.

Charlton Heston and other conservative guild members led an effort to replace Asner as SAG president, complaining he had politicized the office with his El Salvador comments.

Asner remained in charge, but was wounded by what he called rumormongering.

"A lot of actors I respected bought the party line and accused me of all kinds of things. ... Actors whom you've loved," he added, stopping there.

It was a bleak period. Despite his multiple Emmys for "Mary Tyler Moore" and "Lou Grant," job offers dried up.

Flash forward to 1995: He's still a liberal big mouth, conservatives are back in power, and he's back on television. Why enter the lion's den again?

"To quote Joe Kennedy, that wonderful humanitarian, 'Don't get mad, get even.'"

Then he corrects himself. "I'm not out to get even."

And then, he corrects himself again. "I'm out to get even, but not that way. To be on network television is to be working."

What about backing off politics, just to be on the safe side? Nope. "The important thing in life is to fight the battles that count for you as an individual," Asner says.

And this makes for a safe adventure?

"And then some," he says, a rapscallion grin lighting his face.

Poverty summit to discuss solutions

By Thomas Ginsberg
Associated Press

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — With rich nations cutting foreign aid and shaken by financial upheavals, the biggest poverty summit ever opens today with the task of telling the needy to do more with less.

The message was loud and clear on the eve of the week-long U.N. World Summit for Social Development: the aid burden will increasingly fall on private groups and individual governments. "Success at the summit will not be seen in what governments do, but in the further development of this (grassroots) thought," said Keith Best, chairman of the New York-based World Federalist Movement, which works to integrate countries politically.

The U.N. summit will gather some 13,000 delegates for meetings on ways to alleviate poverty, redirect foreign aid, fight unemployment and improve public health and education.

It will culminate March 12 when leaders from more than 110 countries — including Vice President Al Gore, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of Germany and Chinese Premier Li Peng — sign a document stating goals for eliminating poverty, unemployment and social inequalities.

But they'll make few hard promises. The summit, conceived three years ago amid talk of a post-Cold War "peace dividend," faces the fact that little of the $935 billion in reduced military spending since 1987 has gone to improving the plight of the disadvantaged.

One in five people in the world lives on just $1 a day, and 47 children are born into poverty every minute. The income gap between the richest and poorest people in the world has nearly doubled since 1960.

At the same time, major industrialized countries cut foreign aid by almost 10 percent in 1992-1993. The slashing likely will continue, according to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

Delegates are expected to swap information on social programs, hoping this will give local groups more power to press for action from the leaders who sign the document.

But nearly all calls for concerted, concrete action have been thwarted because of disagreements among countries, rich and poor alike.

"The North-South divide is more and more artificial," said Inge Kaul of the U.N. Development Program.

One hope for more action from governments is to coordinate efforts with activists and campaigners from non-governmental organizations, or NGOs, who have gathered for the NGO Forum '95 tandem conference.

Bursting in a rainbow of colors, dress, languages and outlooks, the NGOs meeting across town have gained more importance since staging their sideshow at the first U.N. summit on the environment in 1992.

Collegian Open House
Friday March 10, 1995

Coming Soon!

The Collegian will be rolling out the red carpet for all students interested in any of the three departments — business, graphics and news in an open house.

We are always looking for new and exciting staff members. No prior experience needed. Come down and see how we work.

